The Countess Steinlein, a Bavarian lady, was arrested in the Colosseum on Friday, the 6th of February. She had been in the morning of that day served with a summons to attend the Court of Assizes, and went to the Colosseum to pray before the place where the Stations of the Cross had been. A great many ladies and gentlemen, both Roman and foreigners, have been in the habit of praying before those Stations, and as no notice prohibiting the practice was issued by the authorities, they conceived they were justified in meeting together for that purpose. So far back as the Tuesday, the 30th of January, some self-disposed persons were rude enough to stare at and ridicule the worshippers at the Colosseum. On Friday, the 6th, a gendarme came on board to say: "Those old splasters, who have failed to get married in this world, will be sent to establish it in the next." The workmen employed in taking down the Stations were generally civil, but their employers were disconsolate and wished to give annoyance. On Friday last the Marchese Gerlanti and her son; the Baroness Cavalletti, and the Princess Anielle Mastel, with many other members of the Roman aristocracy, went to the Colosseum and were warned by the police against not to pray before the Stations. The Countess Steinlein was accosted by a delegate of the Questura, who was in plain clothes, but proclaimed his character of police by showing his warrant. The Countess Steinlein was probably signaled out for arrest because in the latter case the duelist was tried for murder before a court of assize and if he wounded, the affair is tried before the correctional police, and the parties fined and imprisoned. The Court of Melun, however, has distorted this illusion, but it is a pity that Greeks and Roumanians should be the first victims of this Draconian code. It is only about a year ago that one Prescott man stepped another's face in a profession for a trivial slight: a duel followed, the gendarme who was struck was shot dead, and the other parties were acquitted. When Canon Moufang and the Catholics of Mainz from the President of the German Catholic Union, Mainz; from Professor Fr. Hirsch President of the Concordia Society, Aix-la-Chapelle; from Count Aroo Noberg and the Catholics of Munich; from the Catholic Association, Leeds; from the Catholic Union, Florence; from the Prince of Campagnano and the whole Italian Central Committee at Rome.—London Tablet, February 14.

Difficulty With Switzerland.

Something very like a small difficulty is likely to arise with the Federal Government in consequence of the execution, and among others one entitled an "Appeal to the Powers in Reference to the Treaty of Vienna, 1815," was addressed to Abbé Collet, who is a colleague of Mr. Harold Urquhart, the well-known and learned editor of the Diplomatic Review. The parcel was intercepted by the police, and the action taken thereon was roundly the arrest of the Abbé Collet, but of Mr. Urquhart also. The latter was liberated by the intercession of the British Minister, but was well further offended by the strange affair. We believe it is no secret that Mr. Urquhart is a warm sympathiser with the Carlists, and has been privy to Bismarckism.—Weekly Register, February 14.

GERMANY.

The Archbishop of Posen.

The manner in which the arrest of the Archbishop of Posen was effected indicates the brutal character of his persecutors. Belked in their foolish expectation that his Grace would run away on being apprised of the determination to incarcerate him for the non-payment of the enormous fine imposed upon him for merely doing his duty as a Bishop in the same way that he had performed it for many years, the cognizant and appropriate agents of the oppressor, who had been arrested by his serene authorities in connection with their prosecution of Mgr. Marmilled, Mgr. Tacftat and the rest of their Catholic fellow-citizens—A parcel containing pamphlets on the subject of the execution, and among others one entitled an "Appeal to the Powers in Reference to the Treaty of Vienna, 1815," was addressed to Abbé Collet, who is a colleague of Mr. Harold Urquhart, the well-known and learned editor of the Diplomatic Review. The parcel was intercepted by the police, and the action taken thereon was roundly the arrest of the Abbé Collet, but of Fr. Ur. Urquhart also. The latter was liberated by the intercession of the British Minister, but was well further offended by the strange affair. We believe it is no secret that Mr. Urquhart is a warm sympathiser with the Carlists, and has been privy to Bismarckism.—Weekly Register, February 14.

FRANCE.

Death of Michelet.

PARIS, February 11.—One of the most highly gifted of the writers of the century has passed away. M. Michelet died at Hyeres of this month at Hyeres. He belonged to that class of writers who were the apologists of the worst men of the Revolution—Robespierre, Marat, &c.—and who, although they kept aloof from politics and revolutions, were, by their writings, the most dangerous enemies of society, and helped, by their praise of the worst men, to produce the antagonistic tendencies of the Republic, Farrue, etc.—in the Commune. Michelet, who remained during the siege of the Commune the disease which shortened his life, was one of the most brilliant writers of his time, and might have been one of the most useful had he not allowed himself to be carried away by his hatred of the ministers of religion and to every principle of justice and order. His "History of France and of the French Revolution" contains brilliant pages, and the style and manner in which they are written are only equaled by the false views of men and things which they contain. With much admirable talents and great eloquence he could have rendered the most important service to his country, and have written her history in undying pages. As it is, he will be admired for his great powers, but his memory will be tarnished by the sad recollection that they were devoted to such vile purposes, and not to serve humanity, as they might have been. Some few months years ago, he was lecturing on the good and pious Vicente Pallotti, a member of the French Academy, and wrote to him to obtain an audience, but received for answer that he (Michelet) would not be allowed see him if he came without his clerical dress, because he could receive none but those robes noires in his house. He (Père Gratry) died in great poverty, and poor Michelet will probably have a civil interment, unless on his dying bed, which was not long, a reconciliation was effected with his anti-religious doctrines. Edgard Quinet was the only one of the extreme men that he confided to see, professing to make an attempt or abhorrence for the very men who were perhaps found in his employ, a sneering and encouragement to carry out their anti-religious and anti-social doctrines. He was not a member of the French Academy, and does not appear to have sought any kind of honor during his life, except that of his literary productions extend to some fifty or sixty volumes. Dublin Freeman.

The Recent Duel in France—Trial of the Parties.

The Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette writes: Another trial, but which took place at Melun, attracted a good deal of attention. This was the affair of the recent duel at Fontainebleau, in which Prince Sulkowski killed Count Chotka. The latter was the President of the Court, Councilor Try, interrogated the Prince, and it appeared that the duel arose through the Ghikas having prevented Prince Soutzo, who is engaged to one of their daughters, carrying off his child and escaping with him to Roumania; also, because Nicholas Ghika said something disparaging of the Princess, who, meeting him in the street, struck him. Hence the duel. Prince Michel Sturdza acted as Ghika's friend, and fought a duel before at Bucharest, and had wounded his adversary in the Sagor. The Prince Sulkowski will pass for one who wounded him in the finger. That time you aimed too high, Prince. Why were you separated from your wife?

Accused—She would not follow her husband and listened to the advice of her sisters.

President—And your son, where was he?

Accused—He remained with his mother.

President (with severity)—And you decided to carry off the child from its mother?

Accused (solemnly)—Yes.

Prince Soutzo was then called upon to relate the circumstances of the duel, which he did in a very natural way. The President indignantly termed him a rogue, and through the rest of the trial addressed the Prince as "the cousin of his child." "Your wife must have been mad to leave you," he said. "Even that did not stop you."

The duel appears to have been conducted fairly enough. The seconds put a double charge of powder in the pistols to spoil their accuracy, but nevertheless Ghika fell mortally wounded. Prince Soutzo and the seconds fled the country, but returned to stand their trial, which is generally a formality. To the astonishment of Paris, however, the Prince has been sentenced to four years' imprisonment, his seconds to three years, and those of Nicholas Ghika to two years. The jury refused to find the Prince guilty of homicide, but merely of cutting and wounding! It used to be held that it was wrong to wound than to kill a man, because in the latter case the duelist was tried for murder before a court of assize and if he wounded, the affair is tried before the correctional police, and the parties fined and imprisoned. The Court of Melun, however, has distorted this illusion, but it is a pity that Greeks and Roumanians should be the first victims of this Draconian code. It is only about a year ago that one Prescott man stepped another's face in a profession for a trivial slight: a duel followed, the

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE,
SANTA CLARA,.....CALIFORNIA.
Under the management of the Fathers of the Society of Jesus.

THE SANTA CLARA COLLEGE WAS FOUNDED in 1851, and in 1855 was incorporated, with full powers of a literary institution, by the Legislature of the State of California. Its buildings are large and commodious, and its grounds are spacious, embracing a play-ground, with the customary gymnasium, a swimming pond, etc., affords every facility for healthful exercise.

The College possesses a very complete philosophical apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has also, practical schools of Navigation, Surveying and Surveying. Also, a Normative course is taught in a thoroughly Normal elementary.

The Scholastic Year, which is divided into two sessions of five months each, commences in August, and terminates on the 31st of July.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually, in advance)

Matriculation fee, to be paid but once.....$ 10 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition, Washing, Mending of Linen, School Stationery, Medical Attendance and Medicine, Baths, Fuel, Lights per year.....$300 00

Modern Languages, Drawing and Music form extra charges. Use of Clothing, Books, Pocket-money and the like, no advances made by the Institution. For further particulars apply to

REV. A. VARSI, S. J., President.

CONVENT OF THE
IMMACULATE HEART OF MARY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
GILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.,
Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS:

Board, tuition, washing and mending, per session.....$150 00
Entrance fee, to be paid but once.....10 00
Bed and bedding.....10 00
Physician's fee.....10 00

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Painting and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

TERMS FOR DAY SCHOLARS:

Primary course, per month.....$ 2 00
Elementary and Senior, per month.....3 00
Music, per month.....4 00
French.....4 00
Painting.....4 00

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Fine and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

TERMS PER DOZEN.

Washing.....$ 1 00
Washing remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged $20.
Lessons in Painting and Music form extra charges. There is no extra charge for the French or Spanish language. Use of Piano, $5 per month.
All correspondence of the young ladies will be submitted to the inspection of the Superioress.
Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the

MOTHER SUPERIOR.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.
YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORATED under the laws of the State and enjoys the Literary and Scientific privileges of the Territorial Normal School, will open on MONDAY, the 4th of August, 1873, under the auspices and the direction of a thoroughly Scholastic corps of Teachers.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once.....$ 10
Board and Tuition, per quarter.....$ 50
Washing, per quarter.....$ 15
Bed and bedding (pupils will be preferred to provide their own) per quarter.....$ 10
Physician's fee, to be paid but once.....$ 10
No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Work, Painting, Drawing, Use of Piano, and use of instrument, per month, $2 50.
The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 15th, and terminates on the 31st of May.
For further particulars apply to

SISTER IN CHARGE.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,
SANTA BARBARA,.....CALIFORNIA.

THE SEVENTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION will open on the first Monday in August, 1873, and will continue forty weeks.

The buildings are large and commodious, and the grounds are spacious, embracing a play-ground, with the customary gymnasium, a swimming pond, etc., affords every facility for healthful exercise.

TERMS:

Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....$ 10 00
Tuition, Board and Washing, per session, of ten months.....$150 00
Bed, Bedding, and Mending of Linen.....$ 20 00
Physician's fee, to be paid but once.....$ 10 00
Payments must be made semi-annually in advance.
No pupil will be received for a shorter period than one session.
Money will be advanced by the College; for the purchase of necessary articles, a sufficient sum will be deposited.
For further particulars apply to

REV. J. J. CRESPE, O. S. F.

NOTRE DAME ACADEMY,
MISSION DOLORES, SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS ACADEMY IS A BRANCH OF THE Notre Dame College in San José. The course of instruction, which extends to seven years, is the Elementary and higher departments of education, comprising all the branches of a solid and ornamental taught in the best Catholic institutions.

TERMS:

The first term of the Eighth Annual Session will commence on Monday, August 4th, 1873.
Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the session.
School commences on the 1st of each month.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
BENICIA.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED BY THE Sisters of the Order of St. Dominic. It is in healthful and accessible town of Benicia. The plan of education embraces the various branches usually taught in the most approved institutions. Particular attention is paid to the moral training of pupils to cultivate, too, for the sake of authenticity, all are required to be present at the regular religious exercises of the house.

The scholastic year, comprising ten months, opens on the 15th of August, and closes on the 15th of June. No deduction will be made if the pupil is withdrawn before the session. No pupil is taken out. Pupils will be received at any time, the fee to commence from date of admission.

TERMS:

Per annum (payable half-yearly in advance):
Board and Tuition.....$ 250 00
Washing.....10 00
Washing remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged $20.
Lessons in Painting and Music form extra charges. There is no extra charge for the French or Spanish language. Use of Piano, $5 per month.
All correspondence of the young ladies will be submitted to the inspection of the Superioress.
Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the

MOTHER SUPERIOR.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.
YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORATED under the laws of the State and enjoys the Literary and Scientific privileges of the Territorial Normal School, will open on MONDAY, the 4th of August, 1873, under the auspices and the direction of a thoroughly Scholastic corps of Teachers.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once.....$ 10
Board and Tuition, per quarter.....$ 50
Washing, per quarter.....$ 15
Bed and bedding (pupils will be preferred to provide their own) per quarter.....$ 10
Physician's fee, to be paid but once.....$ 10
No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Work, Painting, Drawing, Use of Piano, and use of instrument, per month, $2 50.
The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 15th, and terminates on the 31st of May.
For further particulars apply to

SISTER IN CHARGE.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Brothers
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B. (the Scholastic, A. B.) the Secretarial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a knowledge of business in a short time and practically.

While proper care is bestowed on every boy entrusted to the College, our aim is to impart a special education. The daily exercises of the Academy, Lectures and Debates on the Evidences of Religion, Composition, Elocution, etc., are conducted and corrected in the class-rooms.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half-yearly in advance):
Board, Tuition and Washing.....$ 250 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Stationery Fee and Medicine.....10 00
Vacation at College.....50 00
Day Students.....40 00
Modern languages, Music and Drawing (extra charges).....
Studies will be resumed on the 11th of August.

REV. B. JUSTIN, Prest.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Brothers
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B. (the Scholastic, A. B.) the Secretarial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a knowledge of business in a short time and practically.

While proper care is bestowed on every boy entrusted to the College, our aim is to impart a special education. The daily exercises of the Academy, Lectures and Debates on the Evidences of Religion, Composition, Elocution, etc., are conducted and corrected in the class-rooms.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half-yearly in advance):
Board, Tuition and Washing.....$ 250 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Stationery Fee and Medicine.....10 00
Vacation at College.....50 00
Day Students.....40 00
Modern languages, Music and Drawing (extra charges).....
Studies will be resumed on the 11th of August.

REV. B. JUSTIN, Prest.

An Amusing Election Incident.

In a southern borough in Ireland no occurrence took place on the day of a very keenly contested struggle for Parliamentary honors that may be used as a strong argument by those who are advocating the extension of the franchise to the gentler sex. A certain gentleman, who had been a pure Milesian type, determined that he would espouse the cause of the popular candidate despite the earnest entreaties of his wife and daughter, whose politics were of a decided Conservative stage, and were resolutely determined to thwart the patriotic intentions of their lord and master. A short time previous to the day of polling a ladies' field high council and decided on a woman's only way so" had failed to convince their obstinate protector of the error of his ways, they should endeavor by force to prevent him from recording his vote for the candidate of his choice. After a number of plans had been suggested for both ladies, no idea occurred to either one that would indeed be worthy of Mollie. Her eyes glistened with delight as she exclaimed, "Mamma, I have it; the very thing!" There was no need for a moment; and she began to tell her mother how she would be down to the top of the hot-head and will get page attention for him. On the day of the election, Mollie left home early, so that she will have to second the ladder to get up to the window, and he will be up as well as he can. Mollie was delighted at the success of her plan, and felling that the hour for the shooting of poll was approaching, she began to array herself in her best attire. At last the hour arrived, and Mollie, who had been watching from the window, saw her father coming down the street, accompanied by a number of his friends, who were cheering him on his way to the poll. Mollie, who was standing behind the window curtain, could see that her father was somewhat astonished when the gentleman requested him to break open the hall door, but they soon put him in the way of doing it. Following this with the usual predicament he was in. The door was smashed in at last, and Mollie appeared by the servant. The master of the house was then rescued, and had barely time to proceed to the polling place and record his vote, amidst the plaudits of the less attentive, which did not tend his relative to be influenced him to change his opinions.

Rumors of War.

The London correspondent of the Scotsman writes as follows: "Startling rumors are in circulation to-night concerning confidential affairs. The Emperor William, to begin with, is going to Italy for some weeks or months, not to make a friendly visit, as while if possible his health, and in his absence the Crown Prince is to act as Regent. Next, the purport of a circular letter sent by Prince Hamarck to the German Embassador at the European capitals, but for communication to the Governments to which they are accredited, but for their own information will guide all who wish to have leaked out. The plain English of the note is said to be this: Intimates that Germany is not disposed to wait for the recuperation of France before she enters upon the second war, which she is now fully prepared to wage; any circumstances, but is determined to engage in this one first and by any means which may suit her convenience. I do not vouch for the truth of either of those reports, but they are said to be believed in quarters which are generally well informed.

A SENSIBLE WOMAN.—Mrs. Guthrie, of Philadel

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The poor-box in the Church of the Mother of Sorrows in Philadelphia was robbed a few weeks ago.

Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati, unites with his Grace of New York in favoring the American Catholic pilgrimage.

Rev. G. L. Willard, of Fon du Lac, Wisconsin, is spoken of in connection with the vacant Bishopric of Green Bay, Wisconsin.

We see by the Catholic Telegraph that an American chapel is proposed to be erected at Paray le Monial in honor of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

The proposed cost of the shrine which will be built on the summit of Montmartre, Paris, in honor of the Sacred Heart, is a million and a half dollars.

Cardinal Barnabo has acknowledged the receipt of 9,575 francs from Bishop Dwenger, of Fort Wayne, Ind., and presented it to the Holy Father on the 5th of January last.

The Jesuit missionaries in Madagascar have now seventy-four places of worship in the central provinces, with forty-four priests, Sisters of Mercy and other teachers.

The Passionist Fathers of Cincinnati have received a large quantity of the miraculous water of Lourdes, which they will gladly distribute to all who apply for it.

The Portland Catholic Sentinel says that Sisters of Charity are building a hospital at Deer Lodge, Montana, and that it will be completed by the middle of next month.

Father Ryan, the "priest-poet of the South," is "up with a bang" at a meeting in Troy, New York, and is unable to fulfill his lecture engagements.

R. P. McGlynn, late editor of the Erie Gazette, will commence the issue of a Catholic paper at Erie, Pa., to be called the Lake Shore Visitor. It will be the organ of Bishop Mullen.

The Catholic Telegraph has strong hopes, based on personal appearances, that Archbishop Purcell will fill up, without interruption, the half century of his episcopate.

The Board of Immigration of the Irish Catholic Benevolent Union for the United States will meet in city of Washington for the transaction of important business on the 18th of March.

M. Veuillot is engaged in writing a pamphlet on the present condition of Europe, and also an account of his recent visit to Rome, as editorials for the Univers on its reappearance on the 23d inst.

The Rev. Bernard Marz, of the church of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, a native of Baltimore, died after a protracted affection in the Providence Hospital at Washington, on February 28th.

The Dublin Nation's Journal very truthfully says: "If the Catholic journalist has any well-defined duty to perform, it is to educate persons which may reflect due honour on the Catholic name and be a source of comfort and success to every true Catholic heart."

Among many valuable suggestions offered by an American Catholic priest on the American pilgrimage to the Vatican prince, is that one of the seven ecclesiastical provinces into which the United States is divided should be represented by a Bishop.

Garfield has written a letter to the young men of a school at Chiari in Lombardy, in which he says: "Cherish young friends, the young men of Italy, take the priests and their teachings as your friends, with all your heart, as Garibaldi, Chiari, December 30, 1873.

The Paulist Fathers Elliot and Deshon gave a very successful mission last month at Father Quirk's church in Greenville, Pa. Many are both converts, as all, we believe, of the Paulist Fathers are. Father Deshon graduated in the class with President Grant at the West Point Military Academy, and was for some years an instructor in that institution.

There is a charity ball to be held in Paris for the poor of Auteuil, and the leading ladies of all political parties are to lead the ballroom, carpenter, blacksmith and wheelwright shops, all in active operation. Were inspected, as was also with the girls' department. Among the many compliments paid to Brother Teller, Dr. Harris said, "I have visited every prison, jail and lock-up in the State, and hardly ever have found in any of them a graduate of the Catholic Protectory." And again, "It is impossible for children trained as these are to become anything but good citizens and worthy men."

The Rev. J. P. Thompson, who, as we have before stated, made the speech in favor of the Prussian Government at "Little" Earl Russell's "No-Popery" meeting in London, was invited by Bismarck to repeat it in Berlin, and who is nominated by President Grant as Inspector of Consulates, with his wife as Secretary, is denounced by all the liberal English and American papers, for having "very absurdly misrepresented the sober public sentiment and intelligent public opinion of the American people."

It looked like the days of primitive Christianity in the gray gold of the morning Feast of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin, at the Church of St. Alphonsus in St. Louis, when the members of the Holy Family Society, numbering four hundred, all alumnæ of the sodality, approached the table of the Lord and received Holy Communion. This Society is composed of three branches, one for single ladies, one for married ladies and one for men.

The late election in England shows that in almost every instance where the issue of religious against secular education was clearly made, the secularists were gloriously beaten. The Catholics, as a rule, made their influence felt by voting for the candidates pledged to support denominational education, and the Irish schools, and it happened that the Conservative candidates were generally the most outspoken and clear in their replies on that question.

The London correspondent of the Catholic Review says: "There is no doubt here that Bismarck has managed to demonstrate with the English Government, as he recently did with that of the Emperor of Russia, the powerful means of opposition, on account of the freedom with which Catholic journals have expressed their sentiments and their denunciations of the Church, and neither is there and doubt that he is preparing for another war in the line of 1870."

M. Veuillot is engaged in writing a pamphlet on the present condition of Europe, and also an account of his recent visit to Rome, as editorials for the Univers on its reappearance on the 23d inst.

The Rev. Bernard Marz, of the church of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, a native of Baltimore, died after a protracted affection in the Providence Hospital at Washington, on February 28th.

The Dublin Nation's Journal very truthfully says: "If the Catholic journalist has any well-defined duty to perform, it is to educate persons which may reflect due honour on the Catholic name and be a source of comfort and success to every true Catholic heart."

Among many valuable suggestions offered by an American Catholic priest on the American pilgrimage to the Vatican prince, is that one of the seven ecclesiastical provinces into which the United States is divided should be represented by a Bishop.

Garfield has written a letter to the young men of a school at Chiari in Lombardy, in which he says: "Cherish young friends, the young men of Italy, take the priests and their teachings as your friends, with all your heart, as Garibaldi, Chiari, December 30, 1873.

The Paulist Fathers Elliot and Deshon gave a very successful mission last month at Father Quirk's church in Greenville, Pa. Many are both converts, as all, we believe, of the Paulist Fathers are. Father Deshon graduated in the class with President Grant at the West Point Military Academy, and was for some years an instructor in that institution.

There is a charity ball to be held in Paris for the poor of Auteuil, and the leading ladies of all political parties are to lead the historian, carpenter, blacksmith and wheelwright shops, all in active operation. Were inspected, as was also with the girls' department. Among the many compliments paid to Brother Teller, Dr. Harris said, "I have visited every prison, jail and lock-up in the State, and hardly ever have found in any of them a graduate of the Catholic Protectory." And again, "It is impossible for children trained as these are to become anything but good citizens and worthy men."

The Rev. J. P. Thompson, who, as we have before stated, made the speech in favor of the Prussian Government at "Little" Earl Russell's "No-Popery" meeting in London, was invited by Bismarck to repeat it in Berlin, and who is nominated by President Grant as Inspector of Consulates, with his wife as Secretary, is denounced by all the liberal English and American papers, for having "very absurdly misrepresented the sober public sentiment and intelligent public opinion of the American people."

It looked like the days of primitive Christianity in the gray gold of the morning Feast of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin, at the Church of St. Alphonsus in St. Louis, when the members of the Holy Family Society, numbering four hundred, all alumnæ of the sodality, approached the table of the Lord and received Holy Communion. This Society is composed of three branches, one for single ladies, one for married ladies and one for men.

The late election in England shows that in almost every instance where the issue of religious against secular education was clearly made, the secularists were gloriously beaten. The Catholics, as a rule, made their influence felt by voting for the candidates pledged to support denominational education, and the Irish schools, and it happened that the Conservative candidates were generally the most outspoken and clear in their replies on that question.

The London correspondent of the Catholic Review says: "There is no doubt here that Bismarck has managed to demonstrate with the English Government, as he recently did with that of the Emperor of Russia, the powerful means of opposition, on account of the freedom with which Catholic journals have expressed their sentiments and their denunciations of the Church, and neither is there and doubt that he is preparing for another war in the line of 1870."

A German correspondent of the Baltimore Mirror sends the translation of a letter written lately by a German priest from the Province of the Rhine, Prussia, to one of his relatives in Cincinnati, showing that the Catholic laity of Germany are united with their priests and the priests with their bishops, in the defence of Holy Mother Church and the precious inheritance of faith, and that bishops, priests and laity are ready to shed their blood, like the martyrs of old, for the sake of Christ.

Read the following from the Boston Pilot of February 28th: "There are now in the city of Boston twenty-seven Catholic Churches and about a dozen chapels. Six congregations are building new churches, which, when they are opened by any Catholic population in the Union. There are also in Boston and vicinity about six Catholic colleges and scholastic institutions, with a half a dozen more in prospect. In the dioceses there are now represented all religious orders of men, and eight of women." And then the following from the Herald of the neighborhood: State Senate of Massachusetts a Catholic prisoner or a Catholic pauper forced to attend Protestant worship, and Catholics are not allowed inside the gate in Protestant Boston.

The London Spectator says: "The meetings to sympathize with the King of Prussia in his battle with the Pope were held on Tuesday at St. James' Hall and Exeter Hall, Sir John Murray being in the chair on both occasions. The speaking was rather ignorant and very vague; but as Sir Robert Peel, Sir Thomas Chambers and a few clerical gentlemen were the principal speakers, the result was pitiful." The Spectator further says that "many throats were thrown out of dealing with Popery in England in the manner as in Germany should occasion occur," and adds, "Why not, therefore, put the Roman Catholic religion under State management at once! As much reason for it occurs here every day in the year as ever it did in Prussia."

The Catholic pilgrimage to leave New York for Rome in May next is to be composed exclusively of men. Many ladies are indignant at the slight put upon them, but the Catholic Review says: "It was felt more judicious, in view of the inconveniences likely to arise from the hurry of traveling so great a distance in so short a time, not to encourage the idea that ladies could be taken on the first pilgrimage, when the difficulties will be greater and the experiences less than on any other of those that follow it. It was consideration for the ladies likely to go, not neglect of them or their services to the Church, which induced the committee to adopt the suggestion of limiting the pilgrimage to Catholic men."

An Outgrowth of Other Disease.

Catarrh sometimes exists alone, but is more frequently a symptom of other constitutional disease. The following letter explains it:

DELLEVUE, O., Cranberry St., W. Y., January 31, 1871.—Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.—Dear Sir: At the age of twenty-one I was taken with a severe pain in my shoulder, which continued to grow worse for many years. I am now in my seventh-fourth year, and universally of fine constitution. Within the last few years, from over-exercise, I have been afflicted with a complication of diseases—chronic nasal catarrh in its first stage, Cancer, to a degree that (as me) it seemed then if I remained as it then was, it would run out in external skin, Bronchitis; in which, at no time, could I speak above a whisper, and at times not that much. Also a severe pain in the head and shoulders and bleeding of the lower lungs, which left me in a very prostrated state. I took your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" and used your Catarrh Remedy and Inhaler. I am now in my seventy-fourth year, and feel as well as I ever did in my life. I feel the service of your medicines to me, and I am willing you should use my name for such purposes as you may desire. I speak out of strength and truth of fact rendered me that I could not have done without your medicines. I am sure I think you have something almost out of sight, and feel bound in my position and honored amongst men of rank, and recommend it to my friends, as many already have, long after this I saw your advertisement, prepared to be immediately used. Yours truly and respectfully, Rev. Minister of Evangelical Lutheran Church. Sold by druggists.

Try It—Prove It Yourself.

MARTIN, Craddock & Co., 1093 Race street, Philadelphia, Penn.—Gentlemen: Please send me seventy bottles of Cannabis Indica, one pack of Pile and Ointment, for a friend of mine who is not expected to live; and as your agent here I have sold one of Cannabis some three years ago. I want him to try them. I gained three pounds while selling the first three bottles, and I know he has got the thing for him. Respectfully yours, J. V. HITE. LAWRENCEBURG, KY., Feb. 10, 1873.

Subscriptions Received.

| | |
|---|---|
| Kentucky Ranch—James Larkin | $ 4 00 |
| Redwoods, New Zealand—John Harvey | 4 00 |
| Red Bluff—Ed. C. Daly | 2 00 |
| Gilroy—Rev. Father Hoskins | 2 00 |
| Gilroy—Rev. Father Hoskins | 2 00 |
| Ed. McCrory | 2 00 |
| San Andreas—By same | 12 00 |
| Livermore—Timothy Hayes | 2 00 |

To have the money needlessly spent every year would give substantial comfort to almost every person. To have the money saved by buying SILVER TIPPED boots and shoes would buy each person every year a new pair of shoes.

New Advertisements.

GRAND

OPENING

—OF—

NEW

SPRING

GOODS!

J. J. O'BRIEN

Has pleasure in announcing to his numerous patrons and the public in general that he has received

Forty Cases

—OF—

NEW

SPRING

GOODS,

All Styles and Prices, and Beautiful Designs and Shades.

These Goods are now open for inspection, and all are cordially invited to come and judge for themselves of the Beauty, Utility and Moderate Prices of the Goods offered for sale.

COME TO-DAY,

COME TO-MORROW,

—TO—

J. J. O'BRIEN'S

606 MARKET STREET,

NEAR MONTGOMERY.....SAN FRANCISCO.

During the Summer months the Store will be opened at 7:30 A. M. and closed at 7 P. M.

Samples sent free on application.

IMPORTATION DIRECT.

M. SHORT,

PIONEER TAILOR,

COMMERCIAL STREET, - - - Corner of Leidesdorff

THE FINEST GOODS ever imported into this market, including

MELTONS, CAMBRIDGE.
CHEVIOTS, NAPIER.
OXFORD, WITNEYS.
RAGLANS, WEST TWILLS,
&c.....&c.....&c.

...ALSO...

A Large Assortment of Genuine Irish Frieze.

Being the NEWEST FASHIONS, both in material and colors, which he now offers at price which

Cannot be touched by any other house in the city.

An inspection of THIS SPLENDID STOCK Is respectfully invited. A perfect fit guaranteed.

Remember, my Prices to Order are—

| | |
|---|---|
| Pants | $ 5 |
| Business Suits | 18 |
| Beaver Suits | 20 |
| Finest French Beaver Suits | 25 |

M. SHORT,

527 Commercial Street,

SAN FRANCISCO.

NEW YORK STORE

110 SECOND STREET, SAN FRANCISCO,

THE CHEAPEST PLACE IN THE CITY TO BUY

HAIR GOODS,

STATIONERY, ZEPHYR WOOL, HOSIERY, RIBBONS, ETC.

| | |
|---|---|
| Human Hair Switches, short stems.....All prices | Top Braids, Long Braids, Chignons and Rolls of Pure Hair. |
| Human Hair Switches, long stems | Curls, per lock |
| Human Hair Side Curls, double, one inch set | Hair Nets, per pack |
| Mohair Switches, very fine | Hair, per bottle, 1 ounce; Marticage, per bottle, 10 ounces |
| Mohair Switches, extra length | Bonnet or Cradle Cotton, 4 spools |

Importer and Manufacturer of Human and Imitation Hair Goods.

My Human Hair Goods are made of the best French Hair. Nearly all Hair dealers mix Chinese Japanese hair in their goods without the buyer's knowledge, but it is a great detriment to the hair, and is the leading cause in the decay of the hair. My goods are not so colors. Agent for HAIR SILK GOODS, made of pure SILK. N. B.—The NEW YORK STORE has been established for years, and is the leading one in the city. No connection with any other. Goods sent C. O. D.

A. B. SAMPSON,

fe21 110 Second Street, between Mission and Minna, San Francisco.

GREAT BARGAINS

IN

BOOTS AND SHOES,

AT THE

RED HOUSE,

848 MARKET STREET, (OPPOSITE FOURTH).

REDUCED FULLY FROM 25 TO 75 PER CENT.

The most complete assortment of BOOTS AND SHOES ever offered to the public is now at the RED HOUSE, and for sale at from 25 to 75 per cent. less than usually in the city. Read my List of Prices:

Twenty-five cases Children's Pants' Shoes, with spring heels.....$1 and upward
Ladies' Kid Seamless (hand) Gaiters.....$1 75
Ladies' Kid Seamless (hand) Button Gaiters.....2 00
Ladies' Kid Seamless (plain) Gaiters.....1 50
Children's Buttoned, Double-soled, Seamless.....1 00
Children's Extra quality, Seamless.....1 25

In fact every article and every pattern to be found in a first-class Boot and Shoe Store.

Now or Never will you have such Bargains. Goods will be Sold for the Next 30 Days.

HEALY'S RED HOUSE,

848 Market Street.

DAY GOODS, ETC. MISCELLANEOUS.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

WE HAVE NOW A FULL AND COMPLETE assortment of Spring and Summer

DRESS GOODS

Which we offer the public at very

LOW PRICES,

Consisting, in part, of Black and Fancy

SILKS,

IRISH POPLINS, SHAWLS,

And a full supply of

Fancy Goods.

We invite special attention to our supply of

BLACK GOODS.

Table Linens & Housekeeping Goods

To Hotels and Boarding-houses at Wholesale Prices.

RIBBONS

A specialty, bought for CASH.

BRADFORD SERGES, in Black and White, manufactured expressly for sale at the Sisters and Fathers of the Coast.

IRISH TATTING sold in the trade at a fifth, and discount.

Orders from the country promptly attended to at lowest prices.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

706 MARKET STREET,

OPPOSITE THIRD.....SAN FRANCISCO.

KENNEDY,

O'NEILL &

BRENNAN,

...DIRECT IMPORTERS OF...

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRY GOODS,

116 and 118 Third Street,

Corner of Minna.....SAN FRANCISCO.

ONE PRICE ONLY.

GRAND OPENING

—OF—

SPRING GOODS!

MISS KENNEDY,

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY,

62 Third Street, Near Mission.

INFORMS HER FRIENDS AND the public in general that she has received per steamer ALAMEDA all the NOVELTIES and LATEST STYLES in

Ladies', Misses' and Children's

HATS AND BONNETS,

And always keeps on hand as good an assortment of

Millinery Goods, Flowers, Feathers, etc

As can be found at any store in the city.

Ladies cannot do better than patronize this establishment, where they can get everything they need in the Millinery line, without having to pay fabric prices for them. nl5-6m

EDWARD CASEY,

Merchant Tailor,

79 Fourth Street, near Mission,

SAN FRANCISCO.

HAVING HAD A LARGE AND LONG EXPERIENCE in the Eastern cities in the manufacture of garments, and a thorough knowledge of the general branch of the business, would respectfully ask a trial from the Catholic clergymen, confident that it would give them general satisfaction. All kinds of cloth made to order in the neatest manner. All garments guaranteed to give entire satisfaction. A large assortment of pants and vest patterns. Give me a call. 1y6

IRISH FLAGS

FOR SALE.

THREE GENUINE IRISH NATIONAL FLAGS for sale—one silk and two Bunting. The Silk Flag is gotten up in the most massive and full style, and the emblems—harp, sunburst and wreath of shamrocks—are beautifully worked with gold cord. The Bunting Flags are also gotten up on the same principle, and are in best respects of the kind. Apply immediately, personally or by letter, to

NATHAN JOSEPH & CO.,

313 Market street, San Francisco.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

PATRONIC BADGES FOR ST. PATRICK'S Day—can be readied at TEN CENTS EACH. Just received from Ireland, and sold there in millions, a fine assortment of ST. PATRICK'S BADGES, ROBERT EMMET, in color and gold, mounted in a gold frame attached to a green silk ribbon—used to procession on St. Patrick's Day, as a means of identification. All who have seen it pronounce it a work of art. Wholesale only by

NATHAN JOSEPH & CO.,

313 Clay street, San Francisco.

Agents for the Pacific Coast.

Country orders supplied. fe14-4t

CASH TEA STORE

GEO. T. HANLY & CO.,

DEALERS IN

TEAS

COFFEES AND SPICES,

928 MARKET STREET,

Between Stockton and Powell.....SAN FRANCISCO.

de26

PRINTING

Paper Ruling and Book Binding.

Neatly, Promptly, Cheaply

PERFORMED BY

Bacon & Company

Corner Clay and Sansome Sts.

Country Orders will receive equal consideration as those from our city patrons.

MENEELY'S BELL FOUNDRY

WEST TROY, NEW YORK.

Established in 1826.

CHURCH, ACADEMY, FACTORY AND other Bells, made of copper and tin, warranted of finest quality, and mounted with our New Patent Rotating Yoke—the most recent and desirable Bell Hanging. For prices and catalogues apply to

A. & E. G. MENEELY,

oct15-1y-new West Troy, New Y.

INFORMATION WANTED—OF THOS. A. DEALY, who left Chicago for San Francisco February 10, 1873. Any person who may know anything about him will confer a favor by addressing a letter to St. Vincent's College, Los Angeles.

THE MONITOR:

The Only Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

LYONS & BARRY, - - - - Publishers.

DENIS LYONS. JOHN T. BARRY.

RICHARD O'SULLIVAN.....EDITOR.
DENIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—642 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 1, 2 and 3, up-stairs.)

All communications should be addressed to LYONS & BARRY.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):

Served by Carriers, per week.....10c
Mail subscribers, per year.....$ 4 00
" six months.....2 00
The Monitor and Catholic Standard, per year.....5 00
" " Godey's Lady's Book.....6 00
" " Demorest's Fashion Magazine.....5 00
" " Peterson's Ladies' Magazine.....5 00

ADVERTISING RATES:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 square, 1 time | $ 1 00 | 1 square, 6 months | $10 00 |
| " 1 month | 4 00 | " 9 months | 13 00 |
| " 2 months | 7 00 | " 6 months | 16 00 |
| " 3 months | 9 00 | " 1 year | 25 00 |

The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

SAINT PATRICK'S DAY.

Written for THE MONITOR.

O morn of grace and beauty,
We fondly bid thee hail,
With the welcome true and hearty
Of a love which ne'er can fail.

For shrined within our inmost souls,
Clear-lived ever-sacred heart,
Lives the love for Erin's Patron
Which will ever thereto impart

Love ardent as the glowing sun,
Who through years of weary toil
Spent his boyhood a meek captive
To a proud lord of the soil.

And heaven's love and pity blending
Grew within him day by day,
As he pictured the sad people
Through the pagan darkness stray;

As he wept the shadowing gloom,
With no future hope to cheer;
And he prayed that God would send them
Faith's pure light so bright and clear.

And light came—the lowly captive,
From his native land set free,
Sought once more his native country,
O'er the blue waves of the sea;

But the memory of green Erin
On his heart's core lingered fast,
And in dreams he heard the wailing,
As her bosom he pressed at last.

Till he burst in boundless pleading
At the Sovereign Pontiff's throne,
Begging that to Ireland's children
He might send his own.

With the blessing of Christ's Vicar
To the western isle he came,
And no persecution's harsh fury
Now such pure zeal lasting fame.

Kings and princes, peers and peasants,
All with equal love impassioned call,
And with spirits meek and docile
Owned the Saviour Lord of all.

And he left to us, the children
Of that land where'er we stray,
Faith's pure light to guide and cheer on
With his mercy and strengthen ray.

So with hearts of grateful devotion
And deep gratitude we claim
Graces for our sorrowing country,
Through Saint Patrick's blessed name.

And we join the world-wide chorus
That to-day thrills through each clime—
May Hierarchy's throne ne'er totter,
Unpain John Mullen.
William Barron.
J. J. O'Brien.
Daniel Ulfen.
Alfred Toole.
P. N. Lennon.
F. J. Lacey.
T. Hayes.
John Kelleher.
Jesse Barry.
D. M. O'Sullivan.
R. Lewellyn.
James Barry.
W. H. Kelly.

In regular succession the various military and civic organizations assumed their allotted positions, and with banners gayly waving in the sunlight, and the sweet strains of many bands, the procession moved in the following order:

The First Division.

Consisted of the military, commanded by Colonel A. Wason, Lieutenant-Colonel M. C. Bateman and Major J. J. Conlin occupying their respective positions in line. The following commissioned and non-commissioned staff-officers were present in the discharge of their various duties: Adjutant F. J. Taulan; Quartermaster R. P. Carey, Paymaster J. D. Cushnon, Commissary, James Barrett, Surgeon Thomas Green; Chaplain, Rev. Father Larkin. Non-Commissioned Staff: Sergeant Major Cornelius Donahoe, Quartermaster Sergeant E. P. Burright.

The Jackson Dragoons, Capt. M. Greany, led the advance. This company numbered about 60 rank and file, whose military bearing and the ease with which they handled their horses, showed careful drilling. Major P. R. O'Brien and staff rode in front of the Dragoons. After them came the San Francisco Cadets—Capt. C. E. S. McDonald—about 40 strong. The Montgomery Guard—Capt. Charles Quinn and Lieutenants McCully and Hosterler, by virtue of seniority, led the right of the Third Regiment, and their martial appearance was a subject of constant remark. They mustered 80 strong. The Wolfe Tone Guard numbered 40 men, and was commanded by Captain John Leddy. The Meagher Guard, Captain John Magan, made an excellent turnout in their new uniform, and, as usual, made a fine appearance. The Lafayette Guard, Captain Perrier, numbered 40 men. The MacMahon Guard, Captain J. H. McMenomy, about seventy. The Shield Guard, Captain M. Fitzgerald, turned out about 50 strong, and, like the Meagher Guard, looking exceedingly neat in their new uniform. The Emmet Guard, Captain Robert Cleary, commanding, being second in rank, brought up the left of the line, and presented a most imposing appearance in their green uniform. This, like all the other divisions was preceded by a band, and the standards of Ireland and America. The regular tread and lofty bearing of the men, were something to be proud of, and elicited warm commendations from the spectators. Colonel Wason commanded.

The Second Division.

This division consisted of carriages, containing the President of its Day, M. C. Hassett; R. M. Clarken, Orator; Robert Tobin, Poet; John H. Gilmore, Secretary; M. Kane, Vice-President; James O'Hanlon, Treasurer; and the reverend clergy and invited guests, to the number of about thirty-five. It was marshaled by Robert Sullivan, J. F. Sullivan and Thomas H. J. Griffin.

Third Division.

Comprised the Sons of the Emerald Isle Benevolent Association, to the number of one hundred and fifty, wearing rosettes and badges. It was preceded by a band, and the standards of Ireland and America. The regular tread and lofty bearing of the men, were something to be proud of, and elicited warm commendations from the spectators. Colonel Wason commanded.

Fourth Division.

St. Joseph's Benevolent Society, of San Francisco, accompanied by its Gaskell nameoake, composed the Fourth Division, and numbered about 200 men. It was marshaled by Major P. W. Black, J. T. O'Brien and P. R. Kennedy. James R. Keilly, President of the Society, and T. J. Welsh, Secretary. The turn-out was exceedingly creditable, and with the usual American and Irish banners and the society flags displayed, the division compared well with the others.

The Fifth Division

Comprised the Irish-American Benevolent Society, escorted by the Hibernia Rifles, Captain T. Desmond. The division was marshaled by John H. Dougherty, John Grant and Chas. McVicker. The Rifles numbered about forty men, and made a most creditable appearance in their green coats and red pantaloons. The Irish-Americans turned out nearly 300 men, each wearing a green rosette. This is one of the best organizations in San Francisco and is a just pride to its members. Hon. Wm. O'Connell is President of the Society, and James O'Donnell, Secretary.

The Laborers' Protective and Benevolent Association was the main feature of this division. They turned out 120 strong, headed by the President, Mathew Keenan. Next came John Alpers' Band, and a banroche containing officers of the St. Mary's Temperance and Benevolent Society, numbering 75 members. The banner of this Society, bearing a gold embroidered cross, with the legend, "In Hoc Signo Vinces" was the subject of much deserved admiration as an artistic piece of work. The officers of the Society are as follows: President, Peter Rafferty; Chaplain, Rev. Father Slattery; Secretary, Thomas Finn; and Marshal, P. McFaddeu. The division was marshaled by Matthew Nunan, aided by Denis Daly and Michael Heffernan.

The Seventh Division

Consisted of six divisions of the Ancient Order of Hibernians—No. 1 of San Francisco, No. 1 of Napa, No. 1 of Vallejo, No. 1 of San Rafael and 1 and 2 of Oakland. It was preceded by a band and a massive green silk banner, bearing appropriate devices. In front of the banner marched the general officers of the Order—M. J. Wrin, County Delegate; John P. Meagher, General President; John T. Barry, General Vice-President; Thomas Dready, General Secretary; Peter J. Carr, General Assistant Secretary; John Conway, General Treasurer. The seventh division was marshaled by M. Warde, State Delegate, aided by J. J. Donovan, State Secretary, B. Keenan, Michael Delgarde, Thomas Mullen and John O'Kane. Each division of the A. O. H. was headed by its officers and carried its description banner.

DIVISION NO. 1, OF SAN FRANCISCO, Numbered 250, as first men; and take it little more than half the actual membership of the division. The officers are: President, James Farrell; Vice-President, Daniel Dwyer; Recording Secretary, John B. Harrington; Financial Secretary, Martin Kelly, and Treasurer, Charles Dillon.

DIVISION NO. 1, OF NAPA,

A fine body of men, followed, numbering 56. P. Lyden and J. S. Hogan, Aids; P. Lynch, C. D.; President, Daniel McCarthy; Vice-President, T. McCullen; Recording Secretary, J. S. Hogan; Financial Secretary, J. Gallagher; Treasurer, P. McDonough. This Division was preceded by the Napa Band, and presented a fine appearance. Next came

DIVISION NO. 1, OF VALLEJO,

Numbering 200 members, and the Vallejo Band. The officers of this Association are E. McGettigan, P. Laine, M. J. Sweeney, Aids; D. Brosnahan, C. D.; J. F. McAuliffe, President; P. McCue, Vice-President; J. A. Kane, Recording Secretary; T. Kenney, Assistant Recording Secretary; J. Lennon noted as Marshal of this Division, and J. P. Lynett and Thomas Flinn acted as Aids.

The Tenth Division

Consisted of citizens in carriages to the number of possibly one hundred vehicles.

ALONG THE ROUTE.

The column moved up Fifth street to Howard, to Market, to Montgomery, to Jackson, to Kearny, to Market, to Ninth, countermarching to Kearny and Bush, where the banner of her old country was lowered by which to rejoice in the memory of her great statesmen, orators and poets—Sar Bushe, Sheridan, Emmet, Curran, Goldsmith, Moore and O'Connell—men whose writings and eloquence have made the name of liberty have given to the English tongue a grandeur of expression never known before, ing-named sailor of Napoleon's fame. Halting time to drop a floral tear to the memory of Father Mathew, Gerald Griffin and Emmet, and to pause awhile by their sacred dust that the tongue of eloquence was hushed, and the pen refused to write, while from the roof of Major Jack Swan's, at the junction of Montgomery and Market, floated the flags of all nations. The Cadets never forgot this day; for as often as you meet these glorious fellows, you hear in front of your procession

BEHOLD THE EMERALD OF SEAS!

Once more the column moved up Kearny to Bush, to Dupont, to Sacramento, to Kearny, to Market, to Fifth, to Howard, to Seventh, to Folsom, to Eighth, to Harrison, to Ninth, to Bryant, to Tenth

THE FRANC-TIREUR.

A Tale of the Franco-Prussian War.

CHAPTER LXII.

IN PRISON.

Railways are the triumphs of modern civilisation, but there are circumstances under which a journey by rail may become even more disagreeable than a tedious march on foot. Such was the case with the French prisoners taken at the fight of the Marne. From Soissons to the place of their final destination the journey was made on the railroad, but even in speed there was comparatively little gain, and in comfort none at all. The poor wretches were cast into horse boxes or cattle trucks without a seat and without covering of any sort. The December was more than usually cold, and they had the opportunity of enjoying it in all its bitterness. As they were dragged along past the houses and gardens and fields of a country that many of them knew well, their journey was interrupted many times. The franc-tireurs had been at work and had cut the railway in several places. In his deep despondency, Michel sometimes almost wished that they had some men peacefully on a chasm which would put an end to his miseries and the miserable freight of the train together.

"What is this?" cries one of the prisoners to another.

"A stoppage, no doubt, to serve as our hot soup," is the reply.

"The Saxon captain is hunting in his baggages for some choice cigars for us," remarked a third.

"You are all wrong," cries a fourth. "It is a telegraphic message from Count Bismarck to say the Prussian exchequer will be ruined, as Houdin over there got two ounces of black bread more than his share yesterday."

Meantime the Germans below examine the rails. There is much cursing, swearing and shouting. Then a bumping of heavy weights is heard, climbing of hammers, more shouting and some additional oaths, and the train moves on. Again there is a halt at a station. This time it is to receive more prisoners. The Frenchmen shut up in their trucks can see the uniform, and they know or guess that they are from the army of the Loire. This kind of stoppage elicits no joke from even these elastic spirits.

In this fashion, continually halting, and going slowly at the best, it reaches its final destination. Say days after leaving Soissons it rumbles slowly over the long bridge that crosses the Saône. Michel looks up with some interest at the great dome which has made Cologne an object of interest to the world, but his eye was comparatively uninstructed in architecture, and his thoughts were then forward and backward rather than concerned about the ancient Ostrogoth. He had abandoned time to think of his native village in the Vosges, of the boys he played with him in early youth; of his mother, whom he barely remembered, of the father whom he had so fondly cherished, and whose death had been a source of such bitterness of the, good-natured man, and the tears came into his eyes as he recalled in mind some trait of his great play they had together as children, which capricious memory held with a tenacity it denied to other things of graver moment. What, he wondered, had become of old "Old Nick?" Like a golden thread through the strands of a coat the thought of Agnès ran below all others, beautifying the present and brightening the future with hope. The prison he was to occupy would in any case have given him an object of speculation; but on the point he could not choose but think, as, all around him, especially as they neared the city, there was talk of nothing else.

"Wall, comrades," said a sour, discontented looking soldier, "you are a fine subject of your bragging—you are across the Rhine."

"For the first time, Père Mesonnier," said a young subaltern gayly. "Next time we shall have French drivers to our train."

"Hah!" was the contemptuous response.

"I wonder," said a simple-looking young fellow, "what sort of quarters we shall get?"

A comrade looked at him with great gravity, and said, "You have never been in a German prison before?"

"No."

"Oh, then let me, who have had some experience, give you a bit of advice."

"Merci."

"Be on any terms consent to accept less than a suite of three apartments."

"Eh?"

"And," said another, "you should inquire whether old Bismarck sent word to have the sheets for your bed properly aired."

The youngster reddened, and there was a roar of laughter at his expense, for the midst of which the train stopped. The prisoners were marched out of the station to their destination. When they reached it there seemed to be little inclination to examine the marines about, in odd fashion, had lit up their dreary journey. It was not that their prison had any of the terrible aspect of the dungeon. It was simply a camp, in which they were to all appearance no worse off than soldiers generally; nevertheless it is quite possible to know a great deal of misery under a common name or pretence. On nearing the entrance to that of which they were marched a prisoner walking near Michel remarked, "Ugh, it is not a fortress that does not look so badly."

"Pshaw!" said another, "if it looked badly it would be honest; as it doesn't you will find yourself deceived."

They were marched in detachments to the different huts. The moment they entered their little new barrack Michel got the best a tear as the small victim of glory was borne to the corner where the French prisoners were buried. Strange to say, several others had died before him, though they were not men of fairly strong constitution. They were for the most part mobiles from the country, accustomed to tolerably plentiful living, and the liberal place it took upon the miserable allowance of food made to them.

Food was brought to them but once a day. Sometimes it was black bread only, sometimes there was rice, sometimes dried vegetables were thrown in, and, when the official cook on the day happened to be in a good humor, a little bad lard was given as a seasoning. It was a sickening sight to see the scurf of these meals. The old soldiers took the matter easily enough; long habituated to rough times and occasionally to insufficient food, they disliked the thing, but bore it patiently. It was different, however, with the young mobiles. Disgust at the food would struggle in their faces with the cravings of hunger, and they seemed divided between a desire to fling the wretched food at their jailers and the cravings of a ravenous appetite.

A veteran named Bonnivet, who had ran through many of the Algerian campaigns was particularly disgusted at the waste of his young countrymen, and used to rail at them unmercifully.

"Sho," said the old mustache, "I would not mind your gluttony if you did it expose us."

"Gluttony! God help us!"

"Yes, gluttony. Has not the benificent German Government provided you with a daily allowance of food, and yet you re not content."

"Content! Who could be content with the rations of a baby?" cried a young mobille whose broad frame spoke of stalwart strength, but whose shrunken and withered skin showed that the flesh on his bone had wasted away.

"Hah! if you are not content yourself—if you cannot live on what you have got, don decently like a man, and do not belligerence ing the French army by begging as I saw you yesterday."

The young fellow reddened.

"I saw him and others with this," continued the veteran cruelly, "going from these fat rascals of Prussians with they were licking their chops might be able to recognise him, and so execute summary vengeance upon him as a traitor. Le Bon Bourgeois was simple and circumstantial. "It is agree," it is said, "to avoid rash condemnation, we have hesitated before adopting the suspicions of some of our contemporaries. We have, on the contrary, caused the most minute and careful inquiries to be made, and we are now in a position to place the result before our readers. That result, we are happy to say, is most satisfactory and bewildering nature. The famous Sergeant Bertaux is simply a myth. He is not, thank God, a Frenchman at all; he is a Bavarian and first lieutenant in a regiment of Chasseurs Prussiens. His name is Baumgarten, and after much fasting and prayer, made by all accounts in good faith, he began and wrote his gospel, the life of the Lord, about the end of the first century, relating many important subjects omitted by the other Evangelists, especially all the conversation in the sixth chapter, the long and important discussion of the Jews with the Jews, in which He tries to convert them like a wolf among sheep, and the bloody and real blood for food and drink; which promises to be fulfilled two years after at His last supper. And our learned author, later, as a daily reader of the Bible, knows perfectly well that this noble and sublime language he did it; and how the first and most solemn words he utters strike straight into the point, saying: 'All this happened' was the Word, and the Word was with God and the Word was God. All things were by Him; and without Him was made not even one thing that was made. And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we saw His glory, the glory as it were of the only begotten Son of the Father, full of grace and truth." By which words the beloved disciple solemnly and emphatically declares and establishes the eternity and stability of the second person of the august ministry of the most adorable Trinity. And now, as the utterance of the words, 'and the Word was God,' prove Christ to be God, and also does the omission or subtraction of the same import prove a denial of that great fundamental Christian truth. And lo! this is where the learned editor of the Charchman has done in the aforesaid article; for, in speaking of the "new-born King," Jesus Christ, instead of saying, "His was good," he says, "the wonderful work of His miracles have called us to acknowledge that God was with Him, and that He was true"—thereby entirely omitting the words proving His divinity, and using in their stead such as would only make Him a holy man like Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Moses; that "God was with Him" as He was with them, and no more. Now, can it be supposed that this has been done accidentally or antisentionally? No, it cannot; the learned minister, an assiduous reader of the Bible, must have known what he said and meant; and when he said, is it not the teaching of pure Unitarianism, and the denying of the eternal Godhead of God?

But why should any one be astonished at this? Has not that Episcopalian minister the privilege granted by the "glorious Reformation," of interpreting the Bible as all the rest, according to his own private judgment; and also the much right as Dr. Cummins to secede or join another denomination? And can he not follow him for Rome, since, in doing so, he walks in the footsteps of his spiritual fathers, the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, and others of the Committee in England, for the "Heresiem of the Authorized Version?" Who, knowingly and by choice, associated themselves with one who not only denies, but, in a recent publication, is also the open assailant of that open fundamental doctrine of faith, as well as the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures itself; and who, furthermore, "was perplighted by these high dignitaries to receive the holy sacrament, on that occasion, without reciting the Nicene Creed." (See the remonstrance of Rev. John W. Burgon, B. D., in a pamphlet, "An Unitarian Reviser of our Authorized Version Indicated," dated Friday, March 22, 1872.)

Besides these examples from abroad there is another one at home, of modern date, which is to be found in the declaration of the Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church in a memorial assembled in Baltimore, October 11, 1871, by which they pronounced that "regenerated" means "one born of water in the sacrament of baptism," and this contrary to the Scriptures and to the whole seventh article of their fundamental articles of faith, in which we read, "Baptism is also a sign of regeneration, or new birth, whereby, as by an instrument, they that receive baptism rightly are grafted into the Church; the promises of the forgiveness of sin, and of our adoption to be the sons of God by the Holy Ghost are visibly signed and sealed; faith is confirmed, and grace increased by virtue of prayer unto God. The baptism of young children is in any wise to be retained in the Church, as most agreeable with the institution of Christ."

Then was witnessed one of the grossest insults ever offered to the Holy Ghost, when that latter in open Court and its publication in the Monitor. The letter is printed in the synodal acts, but not in answer to a reference to the Pope, ex officio, (as they pretended him) to the Bishop of Rome, but said the reign of legislation that have kept it orderly and peaceable. Arcadia itself, if it were Irish and Catholic, would not please the school of politicians of which the Conservatives are the type and exponent. These keen-eyed 'gentlemen are not to be deceived by fair appearances. If we respect life and property, why, no thanks to us. Our fear and not our will consents. If disaffection has ceased to trouble the body of the State, it is simply "veiled hate." Our negative virtue's positive vice, and we ought not how to rely on the reality of our condition if it happened to be unaccustomingly good. However, we are able to congratulate ourselves on the fact that things slown by the Assize records of Drogheda, if we go no credit for such proof of popular and national morality, we must concede ourselves with the consciousness of it. This is all we can balance against the efforts of special correspondents who slander our reputation, and newspaper writers who explain it away.—Dublin Freeman, Feb. 17.

The Journal des Debats, devoted to the interests of the Robber-King, says, "The Romans are suffering very much from the absence of foreigners. The truth is, since Rome has lost its religious festivals, which afforded a great attraction to all classes of travelers, the number of strangers has become less and less every year, and without them it would be less attractive then any other European city."

THE APPORTIONMENT BILL.

Following is the substance of the Apportionment bill which has passed both branches of the Legislature, and is now a law. It will be observed that the Senate is reduced from 40 to 39, and the Assembly from 80 to 75 members. San Francisco's representation is increased from 4 Senators to 10, and one jointly with San Mateo; from 12 Assemblymen to 20. There is a great falling off in the representation of the mining counties, and comparatively little increase in the agricultural. We append the provisions of the bill:

The counties of San Diego and San Bernardino shall be the First Senatorial District, and shall elect one Senator; and each of said counties shall elect one member of the Assembly.

Los Angeles shall be the Second Senatorial District; one Senator and two members of Assembly.

Ventura, Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo shall be the Third Senatorial District; first one Senator; Ventura and Santa Barbara one member of the Assembly and San Luis Obispo one member of Assembly.

Tulare, Inyo, Fresno, Mono and Kern shall be the Fourth Senatorial District, one Senator; Fresno shall elect one member of the Assembly, and Inyo and Mono shall elect one member of the Assembly, and Tulare and Kern one member.

Mariposa, Merced and Stanislaus shall be the Fifth Senatorial District, one Senator; one member of the Assembly, and Stanislaus one member of the Assembly.

Santa Cruz and Monterey shall be the Sixth Senatorial District, one Senator; and each county one member.

Santa Clara and San Benito shall be the Seventh Senatorial District, and shall elect one Assemblyman; Santa Clara shall elect two Senators and four members of the Assembly.

San Francisco and San Mateo shall be the Eighth Senatorial District, one Senator; San Mateo one member of Assembly.

Contra Costa, Solano and Napa shall be the Ninth Senatorial District, one Senator; Napa and Lake each one member.

Sonoma shall be the Tenth Senatorial District; one Senator and three members.

Placer shall be the Twenty-second Senatorial District; one Senator and one member.

El Dorado and Alpine shall be the Twenty-third Senatorial District, one Senator; El Dorado and Alpine jointly one member.

Nevada and Sierra shall be the Twenty-fourth Senatorial District; Nevada one Senator and three members; Sierra one member of the Assembly and one Senator jointly with Placer.

Yuba and Sutter shall be the Twenty-fifth Senatorial District, one Senator; Yuba two members and Sutter one member.

Butte, Plumas and Lassen shall be the Twenty-sixth Senatorial District, one Senator; Butte two members and Plumas and Lassen jointly one member.

Shasta, Trinity and Shasta shall be the Twenty-eighth Senatorial District, and shall elect one Senator; Siskiyou one member; Trinity and Shasta jointly one member.

Colusa and Tehama shall be the Twenty-ninth Senatorial District, one Senator and one member.

All the general election to be held in the year 1875, and every four years thereafter, there shall be elected in the First, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, and Twenty-first Senatorial District, one Senator each, and in the Twelfth and Thirteenth districts two Senators each.

At the general election to be held in the year 1875, and every four years thereafter, there shall be elected in the Second, Third, Fourth, Seventh, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-second, Twenty-third, Twenty-fifth, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-eighth Districts one member each, and in the Eighth District three members.

At the general election to be held in the year 1875, and every four years thereafter, there shall be elected in the Second, Third, Fourth, Seventh, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-second, Twenty-third, Twenty-fifth, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-eighth Districts one Senator each, and in the Eighth District three Senators.

At the general election to be held in the year 1875, and every four years thereafter, there shall be elected in the Second, Third, Fourth, Seventh, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-second, Twenty-third, Twenty-fifth, Twenty-sixth and Twenty-eighth Districts one member each, and in the Eighth District three members.

The Senatorial Districts to make the peace of the following numbers, to wit: Commencing at a point where Placer, Nevada and Sierra counties join; thence easterly along said Placer and Nevada line; thence southerly along said Placer line; thence easterly along the line of the waters of said bay to the point of intersection with Market street; thence northerly along the line of Fourth street to the point of beginning, said to be the First Senatorial District; thence northerly along the line of Fourth street to the point of beginning, said to be the First Senatorial District; thence northerly along the line of Fourth street to the point of beginning, said to be the First Senatorial District; thence southerly along said Fourth street; thence easterly along said Market street to the point of intersection with Eighth street; thence southerly along said Eighth street to the point of intersection with Market street; thence easterly along said Market street to the point of intersection of Larkin street with said Market street; thence southerly along said Larkin street to the point of intersection with Hayes street; thence easterly along said Hayes street to the point of intersection with Gough street; thence southerly along said Gough street to the point of intersection with Fell street; thence easterly along said Fell street to the point of intersection with Webster street; thence southerly along said Webster street to the point of intersection with Oak street; thence easterly along said Oak street to the point of intersection with Pierce street; thence southerly along said Pierce street to the point of intersection with Grove street; thence easterly along said Grove street to the point of intersection with Scott street; thence southerly along said Scott street to the point of intersection with Fulton street; thence easterly along said Fulton street to the point of intersection with Webster street; thence southerly along said Webster street to the point of intersection with Hayes street; thence easterly along said Hayes street to the point of intersection with Fillmore street; thence southerly along said Fillmore street to the point of intersection with Market street; thence southeasterly along said Market street to the point of intersection with Eighth street; thence southerly along said Eighth street to the point of intersection with Channel street, northeasterly along said Channel to the point of its intersection with Third street; then southeasterly along said Third street to the point of its intersection with the Bay of San Francisco; thence southerly along the line of the Bay of said bay to the point of intersection with the boundary line between the city and county of San Francisco and the county of Marin with the waters of said bay; thence westerly along said boundary line to the point of its intersection with the Pacific Ocean; thence northerly along the line thereon to the point of beginning, said to be Thirteenth Senatorial District, and elect two Senators and four members of Assembly.

Said shall be the Fourteenth Senatorial District, and elect one Senator and three members of Assembly.

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The Catholic Union of the city of New York numbers over 15,000 members.

There are thirty Catholic churches open for religious services on Sunday.

The Rev. Louis Rosecrans, son of the General, has just delivered a very successful mission at Bellsboro', Vt.

Nine young ladies took the white veil in the Convent of the Sisters of Mercy at Harlem, N. Y., on about a fortnight ago.

The conversion to the Catholic faith is announced of a worthy Russian nobleman named Prince William Radziville.

The Archbishop of Cincinnati ordained four priests on the 20th February. Three were Franciscans and one associate.

The Benedictine Sisters of Nebraska City, of whom Mother Beatrice Blakely is Superior, are building a convent.

The Right Rev. Bishop Walsh of London, Canada, has commissioned Mr. Welby Pugin to prepare designs for a new Cathedral which will soon be commenced.

The Missionary Sisters from Peekskill, N. Y., have arrived in Philadelphia to take charge of the new parochial school-house of St. Mary Magdalene.

A fine new church and pastoral residence are to be commenced immediately on Lucas Place, St. Louis, Mo. A temporary church is now under way.

The Portland (Oregon) Sentinel says that a lot has been secured in that city upon which a Dominican Hall is to be erected; and that St. Michael's College is receiving a large accession of pupils.

Three thousand members of the Buffalo Catholic Union portion of Holy Communion at their second annual meeting on Sunday, February 22d. Over five thousand members were present at their business meeting after High Mass.

Father Schoonemakers, missionary to the foreign Indians since 1847, complains of the breaches of faith of the "Friendly" Indians, and recommends these wards of the nation be transferred to the War Department.

James W. O'Brien, of New York, Secretary of the National Total Abstinence Union, said recently, at a meeting in New Haven, Conn., that the Union had enrolled fifty thousand teetotalers in the past two years, and would have two millions within the next two years.

The Catholic Standard of Philadelphia, one of the best Catholic papers in the United States, was sold last month by Mark Wilcox & Co., to Hardy & Mahony of the Catholic (monthly) Record, by whom it will be published hereafter.

The Redemptorist Father Henry Gleeson gave a very successful mission in Victoria, Texas, where over five hundred persons received Holy Communion; among several converts made was the senior warden of the Episcopal Church.

The St. Vincent de Paul Society has eight parish conferences in Chicago, aggregating 260 members. They relieved during the past year 421 families and made 4,715 visits; 41 members are Sunday-school teachers. The receipts for the year were $9,765; expenditures, $6,460; balance in hand, $2,316.

Catholic priests, in many cities and towns of the Eastern States are uniting with the Protestant clergymen in advocacy of the temperance movement. At a meeting of clergymen of various denominations, held at Worcester, Mass., several Catholic priests were present, and made speeches in favor of bringing in the aid of religion where license and prohibitory laws have failed.

As Father Coghlan, S. J., of Chicago, was attending a sick call, his horse, which he was hitching, gave a sudden jerk and pulled the strap and clasp through his hands, tearing the flesh from the bone and causing a wound which will incapacitate him for service for months.

Mr. John L. Williams, a native of North Carolina, but an old resident of Cincinnati, and now in his 85th year, was received into the Catholic Church and baptized by Rev. Father O'Neil, of the Holy Angels' church in that city, on the 24th February. On the next day he received holy communion, confirmation and the scapular of the B. V. M.

A meeting of Baptist clergymen was held in Boston recently to discuss the question whether Church property should be taxed. When Professor Newton of the Theological Seminary contended that "if any exception be made it should be to impose a tax upon the Roman Catholic churches."

The Irish Catholics of Toledo, Ohio, are building up a building to be known as St. Patrick's Institute, and they have imported a large block of the Rock of Cashel to be placed on the top wall, as the pedestal on which the statue of St. Patrick is to stand. The Toledo Revico says that all the Catholics of that city number but from 19,000 to 13,000.

Five thousand confessions were heard by the Redemptorist Fathers at their recent mission in Holyoke, Mass. Applicants from neighboring villages were so numerous that it was found impossible to stand them, and another mission is contemplated at an early day.

Catholic Statistics.

The Province of New Orleans comprises the Archdiocese of New Orleans and the diocese of Galveston, Little Rock, Mobile, Natchitoches.

The Province of Baltimore, of New Orleans, of which the Most Rev. Napoleon B. Peraud is Archbishop, comprises the southern part of the State of Louisiana, and contains 97 churches, 27 chapels and stations, 170 priests, 12 ecclesiastical institutions, 40 classical students, 5 literary institutions for young men, 18 academies and free schools for boys, 56 female academies and parochial schools, 19,000 pupils in school, 16 hospitals and orphan asylums, 16 orphans, 1,500 orphans and 16 benevolent institutions. The Catholic population is 150,000.

The Diocese of Galveston, of which the Right Rev. C. M. Dubuis, D.D., is Bishop, embraces all the State of Texas, and comprises 85 churches and chapels, 8 ecclesiastical students, 2 academies for young ladies, 3 colleges, and a Catholic population of about 150,000. We announced in The Monitor some weeks ago that a number of priests and religious were on the way to Galveston to labor in this field.

The Diocese of Little Rock, of which Right Rev. Edward Fitzgerald, D. D., is Bishop, comprises the State of Arkansas and the Cherokee and Choctaw Nations, and contains 21 churches and 25 stations, 16 priests, 1 clerical student, 2 female religious institutions, 2 parochial schools, 1 literary institution for young men, 2 female academies, 2 parochial schools, 1,000 pupils in school, 1 hospital, 1 orphan asylum, 1 orphans and 1 benevolent institution. The Catholic population of about 10,000.

The Diocese of Natchitoches, of which Rt. Rev. August M. Martin, D.D., is Bishop, comprises the northern part of the State of Louisiana, and contains 24 priests, 2 clerical students, 26 churches and chapels, and 3 more building, 1 religious order of women and 2 of women, 3 institutions for girls, 10 schools and 2 schools for colored children, 1 house of religious women, and a Catholic population of about 12,000.

The Diocese of Natchitoches, of which Rt. Rev. August M. Martin, D.D., is Bishop, comprises the northern part of the State of Louisiana, and contains 24 priests, 2 clerical students, 26 churches and chapels, and 3 more building, 1 religious order of women and 2 of women, 3 institutions for girls, 10 schools and 2 schools for colored children, 1 house of religious women, and a Catholic population of about 12,000.

On tabulating the publication of Catholic statistics, as crudely given in Sadlier's Directory, it was our intention to tabulate the number of parochial schools from the diocesan reports, but the Irish World has anticipated us, and we take the following from that paper, which we believe to be correctness. That there are omissions there is no doubt, and several diocesan Ordinaries have made no reports:

| Where Located. | | |
|---|---|---|
| Archdiocese of Baltimore | 70 | 21,000 |
| Chestnut | 20 | 11,000 |
| New Orleans | 97 | 27,000 |
| Mobile | 71 | 14,000 |
| Natchez | 24 | 10,000 |
| Natchitoches | 26 | 12,000 |
| Diocese of Albany | 100 | 30,000 |
| Albany | 31 | 8,000 |
| Alton | 70 | 30,000 |
| Boston | 150 | 50,000 |
| Brooklyn | 80 | 30,000 |
| Buffalo | 100 | 40,000 |
| Chicago | 100 | 30,000 |
| Cincinnati | 150 | 50,000 |
| Columbus | 100 | 30,000 |
| Covington | 50 | 20,000 |
| Detroit | 80 | 30,000 |
| Erie | 50 | 20,000 |
| Fort Wayne | 50 | 20,000 |
| Green Bay | 50 | 20,000 |
| Grand Valley | 50 | 20,000 |
| Hartford | 50 | 20,000 |
| Indianapolis | 50 | 20,000 |
| La Crosse | 50 | 20,000 |
| Leavenworth | 50 | 20,000 |
| Louisville | 50 | 20,000 |
| Marquette and S. Ste. Marie | 50 | 20,000 |
| Milwaukee | 50 | 20,000 |
| Nashville | 50 | 20,000 |
| Newark | 50 | 20,000 |
| Natchitoches | 50 | 20,000 |
| Nesqually | 50 | 20,000 |
| Ogdensburg | 50 | 20,000 |
| Philadelphia | 50 | 20,000 |
| Pittsburg | 50 | 20,000 |
| Portland | 50 | 20,000 |
| Providence | 50 | 20,000 |
| Richmond | 50 | 20,000 |
| Rochester | 50 | 20,000 |
| Santa Fe | 50 | 20,000 |
| Savannah | 50 | 20,000 |
| Scranton | 50 | 20,000 |
| Springfield | 50 | 20,000 |
| Wheeling | 50 | 20,000 |
| Vicariate Apostolic of Arizona | 5 | 1,000 |
| Colorado | 5 | 1,000 |
| Idaho | 5 | 1,000 |
| Montana | 5 | 1,000 |
| Nevada | 5 | 1,000 |
| Utah | 5 | 1,000 |
| North Carolina | 5 | 1,000 |
| Total number of Catholic schools in the United States | 2,585 | 1,000,000 |
| Total number of children attending | 500,000 | |

BUSINESS CARDS.

JOHN M. BURNETT,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
623 Montgomery Street,
Between Washington and Merchant streets,
SAN FRANCISCO.

C. GREENWICH HOWARD,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Office—421 Montgomery street (west side),
San Calcinda and Sacramento sts., San Francisco.

M. COONEY,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law,
Office, Room No. 7, Court House,
826 CLAY and 623 MERCHANT STREET
SAN FRANCISCO.

F. J. BREARTY,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
La Porte, Plumas County, Cal.
Will practice in the Courts of the 10 and 16th Judicial Districts. Collections attended to. ap14

JOSEPH A. HARRINGTON,
ARTIST AND PORTRAIT PAINTER.
Pupil of the Academy of St. Luke, Rome.
STUDIO—Room No. 1 Mercantile Library Building, Bush street, between Montgomery and Sansome, SAN FRANCISCO.
Lessons given in Drawing, Painting, etc. ap7

REMOVAL.
McNALLY & HAWKINS,
HAVE REMOVED THEIR STOCK OF GAS FIXTURES
AND PLUMBING MATERIAL
TO
332 AND 334 PINE STREET,
BELOW MONTGOMERY.
Plumbing, Gas and Steam Fitting, Orders solicited. feb7-6m

THOMAS DOLAN,
CHAMPION SOAP FACTORY,
Cor. Tenth and Brannan Sts.,
Residence—No. 83 Fifteenth street, between Howard and Minna. San Francisco.
MANUFACTURER OF Extra O. O. Laundry & Family Soaps.
fe21

P. MORAN. D. M'BRIDE.
MORAN & M'BRIDE,
Produce Commission Merchants,
AND DEALERS IN
Grain, Flour, Beans, Onions, Ground Feed, etc.,
S. W. corner Commercial and Davis sts.,
fe21 SAN FRANCISCO.

CHARTER OAK
Livery, Boarding and Sale Stable,
Between Third and Fourth.....San Francisco

JOHN D. COLLINS & CO., PROPRIETORS.

DIXON BROTHERS,
Plumbers, Gas and Steam Fitters,
205 Montgomery street,
Opposite Wells, Fargo & Co.....SAN FRANCISCO
All work warranted. fe21 3m

JAMES O'CONNELL,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN
Wood and Coal,
LaRUE'S WHARF,
Near Market street Wharf.....SAN FRANCISCO
Hotels, Boarding-houses and Families supplied at the shortest notice and at the lowest market rates.
All orders promptly attended to. 3t

JOHN MOLLOY,
PRODUCE COMMISSION MERCHANT,
AND DEALER IN
GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS
66 Clay st., bet. Drumm and Kearl,
SAN FRANCISCO.

FRANCIS BUCKLEY,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Annie street (West of Powell),
Between Ellis and Eddy.....San Francisco
All kinds of Carpenter and Jobbing Work done at the shortest notice. fe28-6m

F. & P. J. CASSIN,
Importers and Wholesale Dealers in
WINES AND LIQUORS,
NO. 320 FRONT STREET,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Sole Agent for C. K. GOLDEN PLANTATION WHISKY. ap7

P. F. BRADY,
LA GRANDE EXCHANGE,
610 Market street and 11 Post street,
(Opposite Masonic Temple).....San Francisco.
The reputation the La Grande for the excellence of its Wines, Liquors and Cigars is always maintained. 2m

JOHN KENNY,
IMPORTER AND WHOLESALE DEALER IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC
WINES AND LIQUORS,
Has removed from 320 Market street to
NO. 312 FRONT STREET,
Between Washington and Jackson.....San Francisco.

WILLIAM B. DOLAN,
266 Third street.....San Francisco
Importer and Dealer (Wholesale and Retail) in French Wines and Brandies,
Irish Whiskey,
Imported direct from Ireland.

HE HAS ALSO ON HAND A LARGE AS-sortment of Clarets, Sauternes and Burgundies, which he offers at low rates. Orders from the country promptly attended to. 3m

JOHN McCULLY,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in
Fine Wines and Liquors, Ale & Porter,
S. W. corner Front and Second sts.,
fe28 SAN FRANCISCO.

N. B.—Oysters in Every Style. feb14m

JOHN T. KELLY'S
BAR AND BILLIARD ROOMS,
260 Market Street,
Opposite Fourth street.....SAN FRANCISCO.
Finest quality of Liquor, Cigars and Tobacco.

DUFFY BROS'. SALOON,
661 Merchant street, between Kearny and Dupont,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Cal. Beer, Wines, Liquors and Cigars. 3m

LYMAN, RAFFERTY & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND
WHOLESALE LIQUOR DEALERS,
Corner of Merchant.....San Francisco.

EAGLE EXCHANGE,
S. W. corner Montgomery and Second Sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
KILDAY & LACY.....Proprietors.
WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS
Of the best brands constantly on hand. Telephone Call. fe21

CHARLES LABOURDETTE'S
Saloon,
Northeast corner Folk and Jackson sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Only the best brands of Liquors and Cigars. 3m

J. H. DOUGHERTY & CO.,
Wines, Liquors and Cigars,
510 California Street,
Above Montgomery.....Next Californis Market.
J. H. DOUGHERTY. JOHN DEAN.

Kelly & Mullins,
Importers and Dealers in
FINE WINES AND LIQUORS,
No. 604 Battery street,
Near Jackson.....San Francisco.

H. Commings & Co.
(Successors to P. Riley & Co.),
WHOLESALE LIQUOR MERCHANTS,
and
WINE AND BRANDY VAULTS,
No. 202 FRONT STREET,
SAN FRANCISCO.

606 MARKET STREET,
NEAR MONTGOMERY.....SAN FRANCISCO.

During the Summer months the Store will be opened at 7:30 A. M. and closed at 7 P. M.

Samples sent free on application.

J. J. O'BRIEN

Has pleasure in announcing to his numerous patrons and the public in general that he has received

Forty Cases

—OF—

NEW SPRING GOODS,

All Styles and Prices, and Beautiful Designs and Shades.

These Goods are now open for inspection, and all are cordially invited to come and judge for themselves of the Beauty, Utility and Moderate Prices of the Goods offered for sale.

COME TO-DAY,

COME TO-MORROW,

—TO—

J. J. O'BRIEN'S

"SOLANO,"
WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS,
Dunbar Alley (City Hall), San Francisco.
G. H. HOPPER.....PROPRIETOR.

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQUORS
F. H. McGOVERN,
(Late of Murphy's Camp),
Cor. Twenty-third and Columbia Sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
GROCER,
AND GENERAL DEALER IN
Flour, Provisions, Hay, Grain, Wines, Liquors, etc.
fe21

IMPORTANT NEWS!
HOUSEKEEPERS CAN SAVE TWENTY PER cent. by purchasing their GROCERIES AND LIQUORS
AT STEVE McGILLAN'S,
844 FOURTH STREET.
He guarantees to sell to customers at WHOLESALE RATES, Goods delivering Goods free of charge. 13t

FAMILY TRADE WANTED.
T. P. WALL,
Cosmopolitan Sample Room,
96 THIRD STREET,
Between Howard and Minna.....San Francisco
HAS RECEIVED HIS SAMPLE ROOMS IN and will be pleased to call on the very finest brands of WINES AND LIQUORS. Families can be furnished regularly, monthly or quarterly, for family use, without the trouble of calling at the store. Goods delivered free. Family Wines, $5 to $8 per gallon, or 25 cents per bottle.
Fine Brandies, $3 per gallon, or 15 cents per bottle; superior, $4 to $5 per gallon, or 20 cents per bottle.
Wines of all kinds in proportionate rates.
A Catering for Balls, Parties and Weddings, Orders left at the Saloon, 96 Third street, or at my residence, 1 Minna street, between Second and Third, where all the daily and weekly papers can be found. fe28
T. P. WALL, 96 Third st.

"SOLANO,"
WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS,
Dunbar Alley (City Hall), San Francisco.
G. H. HOPPER.....PROPRIETOR.

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQUORS
F. H. McGOVERN,
(Late of Murphy's Camp),
Cor. Twenty-third and Columbia Sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
GROCER,
AND GENERAL DEALER IN
Flour, Provisions, Hay, Grain, Wines, Liquors, etc.
fe21

IMPORTANT NEWS!
HOUSEKEEPERS CAN SAVE TWENTY PER cent. by purchasing their GROCERIES AND LIQUORS
AT STEVE McGILLAN'S,
844 FOURTH STREET.
He guarantees to sell to customers at WHOLESALE RATES, Goods delivering Goods free of charge. 13t

FAMILY TRADE WANTED.
T. P. WALL,
Cosmopolitan Sample Room,
96 THIRD STREET,
Between Howard and Minna.....San Francisco
HAS RECEIVED HIS SAMPLE ROOMS IN and will be pleased to call on the very finest brands of WINES AND LIQUORS. Families can be furnished regularly, monthly or quarterly, for family use, without the trouble of calling at the store. Goods delivered free. Family Wines, $5 to $8 per gallon, or 25 cents per bottle.
Fine Brandies, $3 per gallon, or 15 cents per bottle; superior, $4 to $5 per gallon, or 20 cents per bottle.
Wines of all kinds in proportionate rates.
A Catering for Balls, Parties and Weddings, Orders left at the Saloon, 96 Third street, or at my residence, 1 Minna street, between Second and Third, where all the daily and weekly papers can be found. fe28
T. P. WALL, 96 Third st.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY CELEBRATION.

(Continued from First Page.)

the horrors of slavery, and the whole English press howled for the freedom of the negro; and when that terrible rebellion broke out which swept away in its mad career nearly a million of freemen—the best blood of the nation—and made desolate the homes and hearts of three to many more that planted a stone to the memory of a soldier in every graveyard from the Atlantic to the Pacific; that mortgaged, by taxation, every inch of our soil that was high enough to be cultivated, and that destroyed the great temple of our liberties and extinguished forever that day-star of hope to suffering nations; where, I ask, on which side of the contest was ever-treacherous England found? I need not to reply; you know the answer well. I for I have already spoken at too great length, and beyond my limit as Chairman of the Day, but I would add another word before introducing you to the Poet of the Day. Columbia has been watchful, and

IN THE CAUSE OF IRELAND

Never grow despondent. I believe, from the signs of the times, her redemption is not far distant. The history of the past century fully sustains me in this belief. You will remember that in 1774, just one hundred years ago, England, then in the zenith of her glory, was the most powerful nation in the world; two years after, she lost the American colonies, the first step in her downward career; in 1812 she received a severe drubbing from Jackson and McDonough, and has been going with the consumption ever since. You will also recollect that in 1873 the old granny was obliged to pay a neat little bill of $15,000,000 for her meddling propensities, which, by the way, I tell you in confidence, is not over well pleased with, for to spite those unruly boys across the Channel in Ireland. Now Ireland is just as much a unit as she was before the old lady makes her debut in 1776, just one hundred years from the date of her first sickness; and Dr. Bull, the Irish Guy Fawkes, her present attending physician, will perform that little operation by wounding off the magazine with his Home Rule match, and blow the remainder of the rotten hull in pieces.

Having thus long trespassed on your time and intelligence, I now take pleasure in introducing to you one upon whose broad shoulders has fallen the hereditary mantle of Shandasith, Moore and Davis—Mr. Robert Tobin, the Poet of the Day.

THE POEM.

Mr. Tobin was well received by the audience, who manifested their hearty appreciation of the sentiments of the poem by frequent applause;

Wherever a child of Erin roves by Calahay,
From every clime it will to shores of Par Calahay,
Erin, across the ocean, it will fly by the cerulean,
Because to her that claime him as her own.

Erin, mavourneen, though thy sun may roam,
For, for ever across Erin's Isle,
Its golden beads beside the sun-down sea,
Where Erin's fearless sound their last trophy sky,
Or where mid barriers of eternal ice,
The Frozen Zone beholds its Aurora Borealis,
As exile in the sister hemisphere,
Its wild and wayward fate to weep,
Erin, Erin, emerald of the deep.

Such wert thou, Erin, glorious, great and free,
When nations of the earth were slaves to thee,
Were proud and sparkling like old ocean's brine,
Thy sons and daughters, the noble and the wise,
And, Wondering, hailed them from the ocean's breast,
Gems of the sea—the Sunburst of the West.

And then, Mavourneen, when the Northmen came,
Then Tyrconnel's sprung fifth from the foam;
Then Brian Boru, with his sword and his lyre,
His sire-thrashed and reigns upon its sire;
Heaven lit with their battle-fires the midnight sky,
With rack and barrow through the sectors blaz;
Up rose the Danes from every battle-field,
When Death-Mantel had her soon in fields.

Yet, Isle of Saints! thy day was to be sad,
When rose the Prince Dermot, the king of crime—
When to thy shores the Saxon Strongbow came,
And with his sword the nation's sacred fame.
Then, Lawful Erin, thy sons were sold
Beneath into by discord, Saxon and the Dane,
Through former days, Sagger, virtuous and free,
Has been one spark extinguished in the flood;
Yet, Erin, through the darkness of the night of wrong,
The Cross still clings as the last ever clung.

Now rings the trump of strife throughout the land,
"To arms!" to arms! the Northmen is at hand!"
In the east is Erin they proudly sweep the seas,
And swift in fight they fiercely rush to victories;
Their battle-cry is freedom, their banner is the cross,
The Irish spirit, high Climax! the cry of joy
It was Britain drive the Northmen from the land!

And then the triumph of that glorious day!
Sounded and the war-cloud lifted from the fray,
Above the battle-ships the Danes in chains bound,
Here the Norman came, the canon in his train,
With cross in one hand bible and broad sword in the other
Yet he came not as his creed bore!
But where, with the sword and the unchaste guile,
The cross of Christ's coming and the traitor's wile!
He came to stay, to die—to sin and to spoil,
To corrupt and divide our nation, to—

Why further trace of Albion's shame the isle
Of Erin's woe and misery?
The shallow Albion proclaimed herself dead!
Now oft with deception affright the nation rose
To rule and to plunder, to—
Here closed the prophet fired with English zeal
Who saw and felt what his race had done
And—here! from their Saviour Sambert fled forever
Of Erin's woe!

What Erin? Erin lashed forever and forsaken?
Is Erin's Throne's throne! no
The Vow of Tara, Lord Edward died;
Ever sound the fated isle with fire and sword,
Stamped by hoof beat and by cannon ball?

By Saxon poison and by Saxon steel,
Our God, no! Erin's not dead!
Her soul, her spirit, the arts and men—
Her soul is not dead, for it lives in me
Her spirit is not dead, for it lives in you
Erin's nationhood reigns the Nation's nobility
Erin's soul and spirit is not dead!
And Wrathful hears the child's, the woman's dread.

As sensed the Cross Saint Cromwell knew them
Erin,
In shadow the youth in horror across the way,
Erin, Erin has passed away as a dream!
The bloodhound tracks the faithful priest,
A price upon his head like Jesus' of old!
And Here, freedom, honor, glory forever!
In short sorrow weep but sorrow dead.

Who dares not in the Almighty's right hand?
Vengeance is His—who sayeth He's not just?
Without most sure—for their every crime,
And yet for Albion comes the fated time;
And Erin's wrongs the action of her dead
Cry out to Him for vengeance on her head.

Remember still how fair our hearts that died
Were William around the fated Boyne's tide!
Remember, pray, the broken treaty made
For freedom and in France has bled where
When Erin's children feel across the ocean,
In land or Spanish soil in any fatal day,
In fact, in camp, in siege, or fatal day dead,
But can for her the mind of their heart's pride.

Where'er the fiery contest thickens most,
Where opposing charge and fields are shot and
Where hottest fall the screaming shot and
Where wildest rings the sandsword battle yell,
Where loudest gapes the cannon's fatal throat!
And the tempest of the changing fight—
Mid scorched horsemen's trend and surging smoke,
There, there like lions are the Irish brigades!
And oft it was'd red the battle-field with their blood,
And oft it was'd red the battle-field with their blood,
Down down in shame and fear before English red.
They drive the American through Fleurus!

Upon the beach of Rhine or of Neter,
Or by the sainted wave of German Rhine,
Beside the iron, the Irish lifeblood flows,
For ever on lands their Irish lifeblood flows,
In vain they the before Dunes and Arlo to aid;
While Erin pines under the kitchen exiles feet
That not for their, their own dear land, they fall.

And shall it ever be thus? Shall freedom smile
And all feel her own's heroic fatality?
Forbid it Heaven! that day shall Erin rise!
Where Irish steel shall give to its own wish joy,
Yes, that shall mailened day with FATHOM!
And Erin's sons shall their fathers day-star beam—
Beyond hath lost her, and shall yet redeem,
For hark! the voice of evil hath for ever fled,
The people's cry, "OUR COUNTRY SHALL BE FREE!"

True is this hope that Kennet fed with Pride,
For the day's dawn and Land Lord Edward died;
Yes, Erin's Wolfe Tone in dread prison cell;
For this Erin's Emmet and Sheridan fell,
His last words as the life-blood stained his hand;
"Will I not that the cause of Ireland's dead?"
For this the pioneers rose in misery-quiet
For this Erin's exiled pined in Spanish Cuba,
And in this thousand hope, through weal, through woe,
Were Meagher, Stephens and O'Donoghue!
For this hope lived and died Erin's noble dead!
For this would eager thousands gladly die!

Yes, Erin's hope and trust is in the wave
Whose every fall from Freedom's shore
Carries to its land-ward flight a message home,
Here the Norman came, the canon in his train,
With cross in one hand bible and broad sword
Here closed the prophet fired with English zeal
Who saw and felt what his race had done!
And—here! from their Saviour Sambert fled forever
Of Erin's woe!

What Erin? Erin lashed forever and forsaken?
Is Erin's Throne's throne! no
The Vow of Tara, Lord Edward died;
Ever sound the fated isle with fire and sword,
Stamped by hoof beat and by cannon ball?

By Saxon poison and by Saxon steel,
Our God, no! Erin's not dead!
Her soul, her spirit, the arts and men—
Her soul is not dead, for it lives in me
Her spirit is not dead, for it lives in you
Erin's nationhood reigns the Nation's nobility
Erin's soul and spirit is not dead!
And Wrathful hears the child's, the woman's

The Pope and the Little Children.

The Vatican was, a few weeks since, the scene of what, had the sacred place been other than the prison-house of the Holy Father, would have been a merry and a joyous meeting. On the occasion referred to several hundred little children—most of them accompanied by their parents, and all of them prettily clad—might be seen toddling and struggling up the great staircase leading to the Pope's apartments, and presenting eagerly onward, as if they thought they could never arrive in time. As each group had gained the summit they were led to the noble Consistorial Hall which before long was filled to its every nook and corner and limit, leaving still a vast number to be accommodated in the corridor. In the midst of the noisy, childish prattle Pius IX. made his long-for appearance at one of the doors and presently a marvelous shout of welcome went up from out the little throngs. They cheered and cheered, and clapped their hands and waved their handkerchiefs till long after his Holiness had taken his place upon the throne. He had with him a large number of his court, among whom were their Eminences Cardinals Caterini and Franchi. When, with some difficulty, the little ones were quieted and their parents had marshaled them into something like order, a pretty little girl, named Angelica Giorgia, came from out the front and recited to the Holy Father a simple bit of poetry, in which, in the name of all her companions, she bade the Holy Father a happy New Year, and wished him many years still of health and strength like that ever to the throne and light of the Pontiff's feet a gorgeous bouquet of flowers. All listened to the address of the little one with an equally tiny girl following, and at its conclusion the hundreds of little voices cried "God bless our Holy King," and begged him to address a few words to them. With a smile expressive of his joy at meeting his mild and benevolent face, but evidently deeply moved by the whole incident, the Holy Father spoke as follows:

"The great festivals which we have been celebrating for last few days have been joyful and are a source of holy joy for all true Christians, but especially for those for two or years like the present. The Divine Infant, under the appearance of a lovable child, clothes Himself in our nature, and even comes to dwell among us. Scarcely is He born when the simple shepherds come to adore Him, and the song of holy bells, soon follow to tell the name. 'He is living, there is a Savior-child, name to be saying.' Softer than the children to recognize in the little child an infant to be called to the great Kingdom. This is a virtue, my dear children, peculiarly, my dear children, which will always make you dear to Jesus—like Jesus it had been also. He was eager to go and learn in a pagan. This fact is related by many writers, and I do not undertake to guarantee to its accuracy; There existed among the ancient Romans, even in this very Rome of which I am Bishop by a law called Vestal, who professed to live a chaste life, and there, have, in fact, in the 6th place, that paganism believed it had done enough in having fashioned that law. This is a virtue, my dear children, peculiarly, my dear children, which will always make you dear to Jesus—like Jesus it had been also. He was eager to go and learn in a pagan. This fact is related by many writers, and I do not undertake to guarantee to its accuracy; There existed among the ancient Romans, even in this very Rome of which I am Bishop by a law called Vestal, who professed to live a chaste life, and there, have, in fact, in the 6th place, that paganism believed it had done enough in having fashioned that law. This is a virtue, my dear children, which will always make you dear to Jesus—like Jesus it had been also. He was eager to go and learn in a pagan. This fact is related by many writers, and I do not undertake to guarantee to its accuracy; There existed among the ancient Romans, even in this very Rome of which I am Bishop by a law called Vestal, who professed to live a chaste life, and there, have, in fact, in the 6th place, that paganism believed it had done enough in having fashioned that law. This is a virtue, my dear children, peculiarly

ST. PATRICK'S DAY CELEBRATION.

(Continued from Fifth Page.)

bids us to suppose that he was an idle spectator. It urges us, on the contrary, to think that he prayed again that the faith of the Irish race should endure, that they should continue to honor God in His saints, whether in the land of their nativity, or in that of their exile.

The Holy Sacrifice of the Mass, according to previous announcement, was celebrated at 10 o'clock. After the first gospel the panegyric of the Saint was preached, and during the Mass, the choir, composed principally of daughters of Erin, animated by devotion to our saint, and inspired by would also seem by that fiery patriotism which burned in the heart of Wolfe Tone, whose kindred blood circulates in the veins of one or its members, sang hymns of praise to God in honor of his saint, in (for every Irishman) soul-stirring air of "St. Patrick's Day."

AUSTIN, NEV.

St. Patrick's Day was celebrated in Austin by a parade of Irish societies, High Mass and an oration at the Catholic Church, the whole concluding with a grand ball.

THE EASTERN STATES.

NEW YORK, March 17.—St. Patrick's Day opened this morning with a dull, cold and chilling rain, but, notwithstanding this, the various lodges and societies were diligently engaged, from an early hour, in making preparations for the annual parade, in spite of the rain, which at times came down in torrents. The streets through which the procession was to pass were crowded with men, women and children in all morning, wearing emblems of the coming of the day. The procession started at 1:45 P. M., headed by a platoon of police, followed by the Irish 69th Regiment and a large number of Irish societies accompanied by bands of music, and followed by barouches containing gaily-known Irishmen. The procession passed the City Hall and was reviewed by Mayor Havemeyer and Common Council. After marching up Broadway and Fourth avenue to Cooper Institute, the procession was dismissed. About 35,000 men were in line. The night was occupied in passing the City Hall was two hours.

The procession in Brooklyn was also very imposing, and about 25,000 men were in line. The procession was reviewed by Hugh McCaffrey, Grand Marshal.

Banquets are being held to-night by several Irish societies in honor of St. Patrick's Day.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., March 17.—Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather here to-day, the procession in honor of St. Patrick was unusually large. Companies from surrounding towns were in the line. The rain seriously interfered with the programme.

TRENTON, N. J., March 17.—Notwithstanding the heavy rain storm which has prevailed, the Irish societies turned out and marched the principal streets in large numbers. It was considered the largest parade of the kind that ever took place in this city.

ST. LOUIS, March 17.—The Irish citizens celebrated St. Patrick's Day in great style. All the societies were together, with many from neighboring towns. The Irish temperance societies, being the largest movement, attracted considerable attention. Balls and banquets closed the day.

CHICAGO, March 17.—The celebration of St. Patrick's Day here was universal among Irishmen. The procession was one of the finest and largest ever formed in this city. Spectators thronged the streets and workmen took a holiday. No disturbance reported.

COLUMBUS, O., March 17.—St. Patrick's Day was observed to-day by a grand procession and evening banquet. Delegations are present from all the neighboring towns.

LAFAYETTE (Ind.), March 17.—St. Patrick's Day was celebrated here to-day in good style.

IN CANADA.

MONTREAL, March 17.—The wearers of the green turned out in large force this morning. After the procession was formed it marched through the principal streets, which were all gaily decorated with flags. The programme was followed by 6,000 people in line. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—St. Patrick's Day was celebrated by the largest turnout of Irish societies ever witnessed in this city. The display was unusually brilliant. The procession passed the White House. President and Cabinet at the White House.

NEW YORK, March 17.—St. Patrick's Day was honored here by a Pontifical Mass in the Cathedral and High Mass in most of the churches. The customary parade and public services took place, notwithstanding an inclement rain. The start was deferred until two o'clock. Brooklyn, Jersey City and neighboring towns had processions also, but the rain played sad havoc with the show. Dispatches from New Haleigh tell of processions and rain there.

Dispatches from the principal cities and towns of the Middle, Eastern and Southern States report that St. Patrick's Day was observed with more than ordinary enthusiasm. At Baltimore two colored societies formed a part of the procession. No disturbance is among kind, except the weather.

PITTSBURGH, March 17.—Nearly 5,000 men turned in the procession of St. Patrick's Day in this city to-day.

TOLEDO, March 17.—An imposing procession was formed to-day by the Irish societies, which, after marching all over the city, halted on top of St. Patrick's Institute with appropriate ceremonies.

---

THE extraordinary cures that are being constantly effected by Dr. Ayers are something to marvel at. The evidences are announced and vouched, and in each case attested by the affidavit of the person cured, or by the statement of a reliable physician. In another column we publish the affidavit of a prominent merchant, who was for his misfortunes cured effected in their own person.

THE superiority of Duryea's satin gloss starch is so well attested by experience that it seems almost superfluous to call the attention of families to it. The Messrs. Duryea pledge themselves to the public to give a perfect article, and from one fourth to one-third stronger than any other starch in the world, and to contain no mineral poison." Depot, Alley & Co. are sole agents for the Pacific Coast.

---

A. WALDTEUFEL, Music Hall, San José, has the finest selection of general and standard literature on the coast. He is at every variety of stationery, glassware and other conveniences. He is sole agent for Steinway & Sons' and Chickering's pianos, and Mason and Hamlin's organs. Prices lower than San Francisco.

---

BEST AND CHEAPEST FAMILY MEDICINE.—Hostetter's Liver Invigorator—a purely vegetable remedy and safe—for Dyspepsia, Constipation, Debility, Sick Headache, Bilious disease, and all derangements of Liver, Stomach and Bowels. Ask your druggist for it. Beware of imitations. mch8-1yeow

---

EVERY variety of muscle and the best pianos are always on sale at Gray's wholesale and retail music rooms, 933 and 935 Clay street.

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 21.

MARCH.
22—Sunday—Palm Sunday.
23—Monday—Feria.
24—Tuesday—Feria.
25—Wednesday—Annunciation of the B. V. M.
26—Thursday—Feria.
27—Friday—Seven Dolors of B. V. M.
28—Saturday—Feria.

THE MONITOR:

THE ONLY

Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....MARCH 21, 1874.

AN APOLOGY.

We must apologize to our readers for the absence of leading articles from our pages this week. Our anxiety to give the fullest and most complete account of the St. Patrick's Day Celebrations here, throughout the State and in the East, has induced us to forego the pleasure, for one issue of THE MONITOR, of addressing our friends. Next week we shall make amends.

---

THE NEW CATHOLIC CHURCH AT HOLLISTER.—Mass was said for the first time in the new Catholic church in Hollister last Sunday, by Rev. Father Eadie. It will be called the church of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, is the quickest time on record for a new town like Hollister, and speaks well for the liberality of the Catholics of that district. It is 36 by 72 feet in the clear, with a spire 90 feet high. A fine bell arrived on the 14th inst., and will soon be heard over the charming valley of Hollister, summoning the faithful to their religious duties. Mr. William Kelly and Mr. John Wright are deserving of special mention for their sterling liberality in subscribing the handsome those who were a little tardy in meeting their obligations.

---

THE CATHOLIC TOTAL ABSTINENCE UNION.—In this city on Sunday was formed a branch of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America. This organization is said to include throughout the Union a membership of two million, and its executive head is the Very Rev. Dean Byrne. The branch just formed in San Francisco bears the title of The Immaculate Conception Total Abstinence Benevolent Society of St. Mary's College. Quite a large roll of members accepted the pledge and rules of the central organization. Archbishop Alemany is patron, and the officers are: President, Peter Radkey; Vice-President, J. B. Gallagher; Secretary, Thomas Flinn; Treasurer, A. J. Griffith. The Chaplain is Rev. M. D. Slattery, to whose untiring energy and well-disciplined zeal the formation of the society is due.

---

There was a great crowd of French people at Chislehurst on Wednesday, to celebrate the 16th birthday of Prince Louis Napoleon. Six thousand sweets of admission, exclusively to French citizens, were issued in the morning. Mass and thanksgiving services were celebrated, when the Duke of Paiss addressed the Prince in the name of the party, and presented him with a magnificent bouquet. The Prince replied, thanking his countrymen for their faithful remembrance of the late Emperor. In conclusion, he said: "Despite the tragedy of which we are the victims, of MacMahon, the irresistible current of public opinion has pronounced in favor of a plebiscite. I am ready to accept its verdict." Great enthusiasm was manifested. The Duchess of Hosse was greatly moved. Among prominent Frenchmen present were Olivier, Rouher and the Duc de Persigny.

---

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING.—Stevenson, March 15.—Rev. Father Estrange, of Mission of San José, while on his way to-day to attend a sick call, came near losing his life in Alameda Creek, one mile south of Sunol station. When he came near to the creek he found a team stuck in the water, and while trying to pass it his horse stumbled and fell, both horse and rider going under the water at the same time. The horse got out all right, but the reverend gentleman was taken down the creek a considerable distance, and he saved his life by swimming ashore.

---

DEATH OF FATHER HANDY.—Rev. J. N. Handy, formerly of this city, and well-known to many of our citizens, died recently in Australia. Father Handy, like Father Hecker, was a convert, and spoken of in the highest terms by his brethren of the priesthood. He was 74 years of age.

---

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—Rev. Father Bermingham, on behalf of the Catholic Orphanage, San Rafael, desires to acknowledge the receipt, through Mr. N. Reynolds and Charles Delaney, the sum of five hundred dollars, being a bequest from the late D. D. McCarthy.

---

MORE REV. DR. CROKE.—Among the arrivals from Australia, per the steamer Mikado, was the Most Rev. Dr. Croke, Bishop of Auckland, New Zealand, brother of the celebrated Irish General. His Lordship looks extremely well and enjoys excellent health, although the labors in his distant diocese were arduous indeed.

---

A LARGE concourse of officers of the A. O. H. from different portions of California, met in this city on Thursday evening of this week, to elect State officers. The result was not known at the hour we go to press.

---

LONDON, March 15.—An immense public meeting was held to-day in Hyde Park, in favor of granting amnesty to Fenian prisoners. Speeches in support of the motion by the English Government were made, and hartily indorsed by those in attendance. Fully 20,000 persons took part in the demonstration.

---

Governor Booth has vetoed the Harbor Commissioner bill. The Senate will pass it over his veto, but the Assembly is doubtful. We hope, however, they will show independence enough to do so.

---

SOME Marysville merchants have purchased a small steamer to ply between there and this city during the harvest season, and transport the crops of that section —the railroad charges being oppressive.

---

INTERIOR subscribers will oblige by remitting the amount of their indebtedness to this office without delay.

Are Women Eligible, Etc.

To the Editor of The Monitor:—Relying on the great interest you have shown in regard to literary societies, especially Catholic, and also on your well-known kindness, we send the report of the meeting held on Wednesday evening at this week by the Justinian Literary Society. This is a society of four years' standing. By its constitution, all the members of the graduating class are entitled to membership. The subject for discussion at the meeting above mentioned was the oft-discussed question:

Resolved, That women are eligible to educational honors.

Mr. R. J. Mahoney, in the affirmative, opened the debate. As he possessed a fine delivery, he created a favorable impression on his auditors. Mr. P. J. Hussey, on the negative, then followed. After refuting the arguments of the previous gentleman, he dwelt on the labors required in the discharge of the duties pertaining to educational offices. He painted in glowing colors the illustrious deeds of women holding offices—namely, the neglect of home duties. This gentleman was followed by Mr. Corbett, on the affirmative. This was his first appearance, but, nevertheless, he produced many arguments. Mr. Thomas Cullen made a lengthy speech in favor of the negative, and dwelt principally on woman's sphere. Mr. Vidal was followed by Mr. M. Quinlan, who favored the affirmative in that dignified manner of which he is master. He dwelt on the intellectual equality of man and woman, proving by history, bringing forward many instances of woman's bravery, in every nation on the globe. Mr. J. M. Hill followed Mr. Quinlan in favor of the negative. Young Hill's effort was brief. Mr. Hill made it quite lengthy and eloquent. His various parts in the debate were wonderfully within the last year. We congratulate our young friend on his many successful efforts. Mr. Hartnett followed in favor of the negative, and many powerful arguments. The Rev. Director, Mr. Herman A. Brinker, made a few very short address, decided in favor of the negative.

P. J. B.

---

Card from the American Pilgrimage Committee.

As the impression seems to obtain that the time for the departure of the proposed pilgrimage of Catholics from the United States to Rome has not been definitely determined, the Committee deem it due to those who have already enrolled their intention of participating in the pilgrimage to state that with regard to the time, they will conform to the programme which has been published—which proposes that a pilgrim ship shall start from the port of New York not later than the middle of next May.

Since many ladies have expressed their willingness to incur all the inconveniences incident to such a pilgrimage, the Committee are pleased so far to modify the original programme as to invite such ladies, properly escorted, to participate in its exercises.

The name of the steamer, the day of sailing, and all other necessary information, will be communicated to those enrolled, as soon after the Captain of the steamer and Committee of Arrangements will have completed the contracts.

The Committee propose to secure the passenger room in a first-class steamer of one of the favorite lines from this port, and the point of landing in France may depend on the line selected.

Where there are so many lines entitled to and sharing the public favor equally, the Committee deem it proper to state that they have to encounter in their desire to harmonize the wishes of all; but they are encouraged to believe that they will be able to do their duty by the reflection that each pilgrim will be prepared to submit to any personal preferences for the successful accomplishment of the common object. But the Committee have determined to decide and it is not desired to impose any unnecessary hardship upon any one, but to accommodate all, if possible, in the matter of time and route.

The Committee will shortly publish the names of those who have enrolled, and the amount deposited to the credit of the Committee of Arrangements.

Mr. Francis Kelly, Banker, 45 Exchange Place, has kindly consented to act as Treasurer. Remittances may be made to his order.

JNO. D. KELLY, JR.,
F. H. CHURCHILL,
P. M. HANNIGAN,
CHAS. N. MORSE,
Committee.

---

THE LEADING CLOAK AND SHAWL HOUSE.—"THE MIDDLE" has described in the "EVE" some of the present fashions to be had at Frainger & Neill's, 10 Montgomery street: At Frainger & Neill's you will find the most varied assortment of mourning wraps, cloaks, suits and elaborate ornaments for trimmings. The fashionable wrap of the season is the Talma. It is made of drap d'été, and inserted and trimmed with deep jet lace and passementerie. It has no sleeve cover, but has armholes, and the hood and scarves are ecstasy. They are furnished with an elegant fringe of jet beads, and are lined with the most beautiful satin, and deep jet border—the effect is superb. Another style of Talma is composed of rows of insertion and drop d'ave. The price was $30. Another one was the Dolores Talma, with passementerie, which were more apparent than those of the others. It was elegantly trimmed with rows of insertion and heavy passementerie. This promises to be the leading style this summer. Another style is the Patent of drop d'été, with short back, and long front with only one dart. It is half-trimmed, and is double-breasted, with return of jet turning away. The sleeves are very wide, and are half-trimmed. It is a very stylish garment at $25. Another style is the Patent Talma, composed of ready-made trimming of satin de chene, combined with passementerie, ribbon and shades. They come in suits of drap, trimmed to match, or from new importations. The usual trimming is heavy ribbon and heavy worsted lace used in strips, with another of jet beading. The favorite overskirt is made in the Grecé style, which is looped high at the side with bow and bead, and hangs in straight, elastic folds at the other. This style is much admired. The new importations of Frainger & Neill's are a beautiful assortment of black silk mous, with trimmings of two plaits and a heavy fringe; heavy trimmings of velvet ribbon, with fringe to match; and heavy passementeries, are only $15 and $20. A stylish spring skirt is a bell-shirt, trimmed to a wider stripes. They come in silver grays, browns, brown, and the ever stylish black and white.

---

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is very strongly recommended by the Medical Faculty and is largely prescribed among their female patrons. It is worthy of all confidence, being entirely free from alcohol in any form.

ATLANTA, (Ga.), March 17, 1874.—Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.—Dear Sir: I have not words to express to you the benefit I have derived from your "Favorite Prescription." I was troubled with a female weakness for nearly two years, and had tried all the physicians of this city, and had spent hundreds of dollars with no benefit. Since I have used your "Favorite Prescription" I am entirely restored to health, and feel like a new woman. I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering females. Yours truly, MRS. THOS. MCFARLAND.

---

A PROBLEM SOLVED.

AT ELIAS JAHN.

Said Sarah Ann to Elias Jahn,
"Go tell me now, I pray,
Whence come those lovely bridal cake
That on your marriage day
So graced your board, and so pleased
The palate of each guest,
Combining which and sugar were
With our second supposed?"

Said Elias Jane, with great surprise,
"Why, have you never heard
That celebrated factory
For all things good renowned?
'Tis No. 3 on Stockton Street,
At WESTON'S, where you'll find
The cheapest bread and cakes and pies,
All of the choicest kind.

"And furthermore," said Elias Jane,
"Grand parties they supply,
Not only with the 'staff of life,'
And With the 'cake and pie,'
But with Ice Cream and Coffee, too,
The best that's made to be—
All proved the most delightful food
And home their guest retired.

So now good people, pick and point,
To Elias Jane give heed,
And the consequence that you
May never come to need—
You don't good will at WESTON'S find
In the STATION WHERE you'll find
The choicest bread and cakes and pies,
All of the choicest kind.

---

New Advertisements.

AUCTION LUNCH SALOON,
311 Washington Street.....SAN FRANCISCO.
COON & O'REILLY.....PROPRIETORS.
[mch7] F. J. O'REILLY.

C. A. MURDOCK & CO.,
BOOK AND JOB PRINTERS,
NO. 536 CLAY STREET,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Society Printing, Tickets, Etc.,
EXECUTED IN FIRST-CLASS STYLE.

P. S. MOLONY,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
316 BUSH STREET,
Mercantile Library Building.....San Francisco

MR. MOLONY begs leaves to inform the public that he is now prepared to cut and make up the most stylish suits at the most reasonable prices. He is on constant receipt of the Finest English and French Cloths,

From the best factories. Those in search of stylish cut garments will do well to give him a call. mch21

FRATINGER & NOLL
WILL EXHIBIT RARE NOVELTIES during the coming week in handsome

LINEN SUITS,
NEW STYLES.
Embroidered and Braided in all the new Shades and Designs.

NEW STYLE CLOAKS,
CONSISTING IN—
Drap d'Ete, English Walking Jackets, Dolman's Talmas, and Polonaise,
Trimmed and Inserted with YAK LACE and PASSEMENTERIE, both Plain and Beaded.

HOUSE WRAPPERS!
A Large Assortment, consisting in
French Calico, Cashmere and Silk.

STREET SUITS,
In all New and Desirable SPRING GOODS, made up stylish and handsomely trimmed in two colors or with silk.

SPRING SILKS
Can be found in all Shades and at all Prices.

PASSEMENTERIES!
PASSEMENTERIES!
The Largest and Best Assortment of
BEADED GIMPS,
ORNAMENTS,
BUCKLES,
SLIDES,
FRINGES
AND BUTTONS.

YAK LACE AND INSERTIONS,
Both Plain and Beaded, in large variety.

FRATINGER & NOLL,
Leading Cloak and Suit House of the City,
10 Montgomery Street.
mch21-tf

DURYEA'S
SATIN GLOSS STARCH,
—AND—
DURYEA'S
IMPROVED CORN STARCH,
ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD.
Use It Once and You Will Use no Other.

THE MESSRS. DURYEA HAVE RECEIVED the highest premium at nearly every Fair where exhibited. Their goods are of double strength and clearness, as compared with any other starch in the world. Each package is guaranteed to give more than double the quantity of any other starch. They pledge themselves to the public to give a perfect article, and from one fourth to one-third stronger than any other starch in the world, and to contain no mineral poison." Depot, Alley & Co. are sole agents for the Pacific Coast.

New Advertisements.

SAVE YOUR MONEY
DRY GOODS!
DRY GOODS
GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES AT
E. SUPPLE'S, 836 Market Street,
NEARLY OPPOSITE FOURTH.

FOLLOWING IS A LIST OF PRICES WE only compathise:
A lot of Striped Poplins, 50 cents, worth 87½.
12 pieces Foulard, 24 cents, actually 31.
110 pieces Poplin Empress, 37½ cents, worth 62½.
10 pieces Velvet Empress, 87½ cents, value 75.
Black Cashmere Cloth, 31½ cents, worth 62½.
Black Cashmere Cloth, 37½ cents, reduced from 62½.
50 pieces Satin de Lisse, 37½ cents, worth 75.
25 pieces "Grand Empress, 62½ cents, worth 87.
Black Alpaca at 25 cents and upwards.
Black Cashmere at 50 cents and upwards.
Black Cashmere at a great reduction.
10 pieces Japanese Poplin, 25 cents, worth 50.
5 pieces Japanese Silk, 37½ cents, originally 75.
French Poplins, at 75 cents; price all 75.
Very Fine Poplins, at 87½ cents; reduced from $2 50.
25 pieces Black Silk, $1 50, sold for $2.
25 pieces Black Silk, $1 75, sold for $2 50.
25 pieces Black Silk, $2, sold for $2 50.
1,384 yards from Pieces Satin at 75 cents, worth $1.
Striped Chambrays, worth $1 25.
Striped Shawls at $1 50, worth $2 50.

A Great Reduction in Black and Colored Shawls.
Broche Shawls, $15, worth $25.
Broche Shawls, $20, sold for $30.
Broche Shawls, $25, good value $40.
Broche Shawls, $30, and upwards.
All White Spreads, $1 50, value for $2.
All White Spreads, $2, value for $2 50.
White Spreads, $2 50, value for $3 50, worth $4.
White Rock Manila, 12 cents.
Lonsdale Cambric, 12½ cents.
Blackstone Muslin, 12 cents a yard.
Table Linen from 37½ cents upwards.
2,500 Corsets, from 50 cents upwards.
Corsets Trimming Goods at a discount of 40 per cent.
Corsets, Honeycomb, Coraline, Abdominal and Health.

E. SUPPLE,
836 Market street.....Nearly opposite Fourth.

GRAY'S
Music Stores and Music Publishing House,
933 and 935 Clay Street, San Francisco, and 121 First Street, Portland, O.
STEINWAY PIANOS AND ORGANS.
DITT ORGANS.
GROVE, CHURCH & CO. PIANOS.
AND SHONINGER ORGANS.
CARL RENNICH, KRANICH & BACH, PIANOS.
DARLEE, AND M. GRAY Square and Uprights.
The Largest Stock of Music on the Pacific Coast.
Pianos for Rent at from $3 to $6 per month.
GRAY'S MUSIC STORE.
mch7

MORE EXTRAORDINARY CURES.

EVIDENCES OF THE GREAT SUCCESS of the modern system of cure, as practiced by DR. ABORN, 211 Geary street, are so abundant that none need doubt the reliability of his statements, or remain unable to find a cure. If they will but call at his office, 211 Geary street, they will be convinced. Further evidence is daily coming in. Following is but one of the great number of cases treated by DR. ABORN since established. No case is undertaken unless the patient is satisfied that DR. ABORN has the remedy that will cure them. Those in search of a reliable physician will find in DR. ABORN a kind and considerate friend, whose every effort is to relieve the afflicted. Those who have been unfortunate enough to have had the services of the great army of pretenders, who are without a single qualification for the treatment of disease, will find in DR. ABORN a physician who has had a thorough education in the science of medicine, and who has had a large experience in the treatment of chronic diseases. Those who have been unfortunate enough to have had the services of the great army of pretenders, who are without a single qualification for the treatment of disease, will find in DR. ABORN a physician who has had a thorough education in the science of medicine, and who has had a large experience in the treatment of chronic diseases. Those who have been unfortunate enough to have had the services of the great army of pretenders, who are without a single qualification for the treatment of disease, will find in DR. ABORN a physician who has had a thorough education in the science of medicine, and who has had a large experience in the treatment of chronic diseases.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

THE MONITOR:

The Only Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

LYONS & BARRY, - - - - Publishers.
JOHN LYONS. JOHN V. BARRY.
RICHARD O'SULLIVAN.....EDITOR.
CHRIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—636 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 5, 7 and 9, up-stairs.)

☞ All communications should be addressed to THE MONITOR.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):
Served by Carriers, per week.....10c
Per annum, per year.....$4 00
Six Months.....2 25
The Monthly and Catholic World, one year.....7 75
" " " Godey's Lady's Book.....5 00
" " " Demorest's Fashion Magazine.....3 50
" " " Peterson's Ladies' Magazine.....3 50

ADVERTISING RATES:
1 square, 1 time.....$1 50 | 1 square, 6 months.....$18 50
" 1 month.....4 00 | " 9 months.....15 00
" 2 months.....7 00 | " 6 months.....13 00
" 3 months.....8 00 | " 1 year.....25 00
☞ The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

VOL. XVII. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, MARCH 28, 1874. NO. 13.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY, 1874.

IN THE INTERIOR.

VIRGINIA CITY, NEV.

Special Correspondence of THE MONITOR.

Over three months have been drowned in the Lethean silver sluice I had the pleasure of a little chat with THE MONITOR and its many kindly readers, on the occasion of the "Mechanics' Fair for the benefit of the Orphans," during which time nothing very important occurred, except that the dreary old Nevada fever has had the song fraid to take its ebbs within the limits of the northern part of our city of silver, with the snowwhite for his body-guard and Jack Frost as his Prime Minister. It must be acknowledged that the latter has been a host in himself, with his army of invincibles, armed with his icicle-spears and his snow-balls, and clothed in his garments of white adown the side of Mount Davidson, armed with lay swords, which they coolly hang up in glistening rows on our eaves—and when we endeavored to "Washoe zephyr" as his war trumpet, we felt that it behooved us to give way to his cold influence.

The sons of Erin, as everybody knows, are fight—a little; and as they have nobly stood to win many a hard-fought field in days—

Much of their glory remained on each crowd to put them to victory now!

ST. PATRICK'S DAY APPROACHED, and the Irish element thier resolved, if it was still hardened, to make it so by he his frigid majesty that he would bind to retreat, wagging, down the white lane of his mailing icicles. Accordingly they were engaged in preparing for the 16th; the ladies of the Divisional Hop at St. Mary's Hall, all with fair petitions for a fine day; and all the connected battle would, without doubt, be fought on the green of their respective hearts, but that they will wear the same in the form of the shamrock on the day all be used to join. The Gold Hill Division has a fine band, and the uniforms of the members are the same as on that of the Virginia Division—described in last year's letter—the Grand Marshal of the procession, Captain Crossing the Delaware," and on the other hand Chief Engineer Sullivan, who is also the musical temperament, a strong devotion to the cause of Ireland, from the fact that he was married by the shains of the Saxon in order; a burning zeal unquenchable desire to free their land from the fetters of oppression that now bind it, and also from the memory of the saints who first preached the doctrines of Christianity in Ireland—meet together once a year in all parts of the world. Accordingly on Monday holiday, the 17th of March has become a national holiday, and is now celebrated as a politico-religious anniversary; and with the wake of this one. In this order it marched to Gold Hill, where it was the joinder of the Hibernia Guard, and by a (phrase deadly) dramatic company called the Union Guard, composed of the Knights of St. Patrick, formed in Gold Hill, wearing red coats and blue caps. They were spry little marchers, and added much to the liveliness of the procession. The procession then returned, countermarching through C street, and halted down by the Opera House, where the literary exercises were held. The place was densely crowded by the fair of sex and fair, for whom a very appreciative audience. The poem by T. W. Hanley, of Carson, was frequently and heartily applauded, as was also the eloquent oration of Mr. John Welch. [The oration is unavoidably crowded out this week, but will appear in our next issue.—ED. MONITOR.]

THE EXERCISES CONCLUDED,

A detachment of the procession marched to "the Mary's School," where a poesie address, composed by one of the Sisters, was delivered by a little girl, which was also followed by a brief but appropriate address by the Rev. Father Manogue, on the part of the institution compensated the procession for their compliment by the muddy streets, and it also delighted the innocents of whom they have been trying ever since to imitate the military step of the Guards, etc., if ever wishing to be Captains and none soldiers. The retinue of St. Patrick then marched back to the Hall, and closed the day in the evening a very social ball was given in Odd Fellows' Hall for the benefit of the Mary's Church. The ladies provided the supper. The entertainment passed off in a most lively and quiet manner, and was also a success, viewed through a silvery light.

Spring is the only power that can ever overthrow winter, and St. Patrick seems to have stayed her to the coming of his writing, she has opened the campaign with the bright sun and the clear blue sky of Virginia, while the Guards re-victualed inside and frosty Jack are rapidly dissolving in the warmth of her genial approach. Now, if this fine weather continues, if "stocks" should second to an unheard of altitude, and vegetation down again for fear of "the bears," and if every body in Virginia would be good, why then we would have nothing left to wish for, except that THE MONITOR may live to write its anniversary notice, and that its many friends may rejoice annually to its advent with prompt and substantial offerings.

MANY A.

[We hope our gifted correspondent will often favor us with solicitations from her brilliant pen.—ED. MONITOR.]

SACRAMENTO.

Hon. James E. Murphy's Oration.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is with feelings of pride and gratification that I behold before me such a vast ocean of human faces, stalwart men and lovely women—Irishmen, who come here to celebrate the anniversary of their patron saint and renew once more their oaths of fealty to Irish independence and nationality; Americans who, by their encouraging presence on this occasion, desire to manifest their good-will and sympathy in our great cause; members of other nationalities whose hearts beat in consonance and unison with our own. Possessing this feeling of pride at this great gathering, I must confess that I feel myself incompetent to the task of speaking on subjects nearest and dearest to the Celtic heart. St. Patrick's Day is now, and has been for centuries, a national holiday with the Irish people. It matters not what part of the globe their lot may be cast; no matter whether they reside in the frozen latitudes of Alaska, the vicissitudes of the sunny South, among the valleys of the Orient, or where the star of empire takes its way to the golden shores of the Pacific; no matter whether the hand of plenty has showered riches in their lap or poverty has stalked like a grim spectre in their midst; no matter whether they are compelled to bow in acquiescence to the Crown of England or swore to support the Constitution and laws of our glorious Republic—still on the 17th of March Irishmen, irrespective of religion or politics, casting the cares of business aside, join together in celebrating by appropriate ceremonies and services a day destined to keep fresh and green in their hearts the unconquerable, unswerving faith of their forefathers in the cause of religion and their noble efforts in the cause of Irish independence. Rightly is it done.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land!
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned,
As home his footsteps he hath turned
From wandering on a foreign strand!

Craven must be the heart, unworthy the motives of the man who does not indorse these lines of

THE IMMORTAL BARD OF SCOTLAND—

Who does not feel a throb of joy in reading the bills or scaling the mountain tops of his native land; who does not, when on a foreign shore, experience a sensation of pleasurable excitement in meeting a fellow-countryman with his countrymen? who does not with his whole soul and with all the sympathetic temperament, a strong devotion to the cause of Ireland, from the fact that he was married by the shains of the Saxon in order; a burning zeal unquenchable desire to free their land from the fetters of oppression that now bind it, and also from the memory of the saints who first preached the doctrines of Christianity in Ireland—meet together once a year in all parts of the world. Accordingly on Monday holiday, the 17th of March has become a national holiday, and is now celebrated as a politico-religious anniversary; and with the wake of this one. In this order it marched to Gold Hill, where it was the joinder of the Hibernia Guard, and by a (phrase deadly) dramatic company called the Union Guard, composed of the Knights of St. Patrick, formed in Gold Hill, wearing red coats and blue caps. They were spry little marchers, and added much to the liveliness of the procession. The procession then returned, countermarching through C street, and halted down by the Opera House, where the literary exercises were held. The place was densely crowded by the fair of sex and fair, for whom a very appreciative audience. The poem by T. W. Hanley, of Carson, was frequently and heartily applauded, as was also the eloquent oration of Mr. John Welch. [The oration is unavoidably crowded out this week, but will appear in our next issue.—ED. MONITOR.]

THE EXERCISES CONCLUDED,

A detachment of the procession marched to "the Mary's School," where a poesie address, composed by one of the Sisters, was delivered by a little girl, which was also followed by a brief but appropriate address by the Rev. Father Manogue, on the part of the institution compensated the procession for their compliment by the muddy streets, and it also delighted the innocents of whom they have been trying ever since to imitate the military step of the Guards, etc., if ever wishing to be Captains and none soldiers. The retinue of St. Patrick then marched back to the Hall, and closed the day in the evening a very social ball was given in Odd Fellows' Hall for the benefit of the Mary's Church. The ladies provided the supper. The entertainment passed off in a most lively and quiet manner, and was also a success, viewed through a silvery light.

Spring is the only power that can ever overthrow winter, and St. Patrick seems to have stayed her to the coming of his writing, she has opened the campaign with the bright sun and the clear blue sky of Virginia, while the Guards re-victualed inside and frosty Jack are rapidly dissolving in the warmth of her genial approach. Now, if this fine weather continues, if "stocks" should second to an unheard of altitude, and vegetation down again for fear of "the bears," and if every body in Virginia would be good, why then we would have nothing left to wish for, except that THE MONITOR may live to write its anniversary notice, and that its many friends may rejoice annually to its advent with prompts and substantial offerings.

MANY A.

[We hope our gifted correspondent will often favor us with solicitations from her brilliant pen.—ED. MONITOR.]

SACRAMENTO.

Hon. James E. Murphy's Oration.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is with feelings of pride and gratification that I behold before me such a vast ocean of human faces, stalwart men and lovely women—Irishmen, who come here to celebrate the anniversary of their patron saint and renew once more their oaths of fealty to Irish independence and nationality; Americans who, by their encouraging presence on this occasion, desire to manifest their good-will and sympathy in our great cause; members of other nationalities whose hearts beat in consonance and unison with our own. Possessing this feeling of pride at this great gathering, I must confess that I feel myself incompetent to the task of speaking on subjects nearest and dearest to the Celtic heart. St. Patrick's Day is now, and has been for centuries, a national holiday with the Irish people. It matters not what part of the globe their lot may be cast; no matter whether they reside in the frozen latitudes of Alaska, the vicissitudes of the sunny South, among the valleys of the Orient, or where the star of empire takes its way to the golden shores of the Pacific; no matter whether the hand of plenty has showered riches in their lap or poverty has stalked like a grim spectre in their midst; no matter whether they are compelled to bow in acquiescence to the Crown of England or swore to support the Constitution and laws of our glorious Republic—still on the 17th of March Irishmen, irrespective of religion or politics, casting the cares of business aside, join together in celebrating by appropriate ceremonies and services a day destined to keep fresh and green in their hearts the unconquerable, unswerving faith of their forefathers in the cause of religion and their noble efforts in the cause of Irish independence. Rightly is it done.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land!
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned,
As home his footsteps he hath turned
From wandering on a foreign strand!

Craven must be the heart, unworthy the motives of the man who does not indorse these lines of

THE IMMORTAL BARD OF SCOTLAND—

Who does not feel a throb of joy in reading the bills or scaling the mountain tops of his native land; who does not, when on a foreign shore, experience a sensation of pleasurable excitement in meeting a fellow-countryman with his countrymen? who does not with his whole soul and with all the sympathetic temperament, a strong devotion to the cause of Ireland, from the fact that he was married by the shains of the Saxon in order; a burning zeal unquenchable desire to free their land from the fetters of oppression that now bind it, and also from the memory of the saints who first preached the doctrines of Christianity in Ireland—meet together once a year in all parts of the world. Accordingly on Monday holiday, the 17th of March has become a national holiday, and is now celebrated as a politico-religious anniversary; and with the wake of this one. In this order it marched to Gold Hill, where it was the joinder of the Hibernia Guard, and by a (phrase deadly) dramatic company called the Union Guard, composed of the Knights of St. Patrick, formed in Gold Hill, wearing red coats and blue caps. They were spry little marchers, and added much to the liveliness of the procession. The procession then returned, countermarching through C street, and halted down by the Opera House, where the literary exercises were held. The place was densely crowded by the fair of sex and fair, for whom a very appreciative audience. The poem by T. W. Hanley, of Carson, was frequently and heartily applauded, as was also the eloquent oration of Mr. John Welch. [The oration is unavoidably crowded out this week, but will appear in our next issue.—ED. MONITOR.]

THE EXERCISES CONCLUDED,

A detachment of the procession marched to "the Mary's School," where a poesie address, composed by one of the Sisters, was delivered by a little girl, which was also followed by a brief but appropriate address by the Rev. Father Manogue, on the part of the institution compensated the procession for their compliment by the muddy streets, and it also delighted the innocents of whom they have been trying ever since to imitate the military step of the Guards, etc., if ever wishing to be Captains and none soldiers. The retinue of St. Patrick then marched back to the Hall, and closed the day in the evening a very social ball was given in Odd Fellows' Hall for the benefit of the Mary's Church. The ladies provided the supper. The entertainment passed off in a most lively and quiet manner, and was also a success, viewed through a silvery light.

Spring is the only power that can ever overthr

THE FRANC-TIREUR.

A Tale of the Franco-Prussian War.

CHAPTER LXIV.

COARSE EXPEDIENTS.

From his first arrival at the camp Michel had found himself an object of more than ordinary attention among the Prussians, and he had the difficulty in arriving at the conclusion that his identity was suspected. On the day after he had heard the newspaper read with its fatal intelligence, he seemed to feel that the Prussians read it, too, and that he was regarded with yet more curious eyes than ever. His facility in speaking German had caused many of the Prussian to chat with him from time to time, but he did not encourage the practice much lest it should get him into trouble. There was one fine young fellow, a Hanoverian, between whom and Michel a considerable mutual regard had sprung up. He was tall, large-limbed and gay. Michel handed he perceived in him a semblance to his brother Gros Jean, and loved the youth for his sake. The Hanoverian in his walk, too, had accidentally struck upon a vein from which Michel's sympathy readily poured forth—he, also, was betrothed, and felt keenly the separation from his intended wife.

This morning, somewhat to Michel's astonishment, the Hanoverian, who formed one of the escort to the party of prisoners as the weeks, gave Michel but a cold greeting. Michel, in whom it had been a keen pleasure to find some evidence of friendly feeling, was thrown in the ranks of the prisoners, felt more mortification than he could express. After a while, however, he acted opportunity of saying in a low tone, "Why do you not speak to me?"

The Hanoverian toppled in a tone equally low, but with more significance, "Because it has been suggested to me to converse with you."

Michel needed but a moment's thought to comprehend his meaning.

"They read the newspapers here," continued the Hanoverian.

"Ah!" said Michel coolly, "how can that affect me? The journals do not concern themselves much about persons of my class."

"So much the better for you," said the Hanoverian, and the conversation ended.

As the day wore on the prisoners and the work they were engaged upon were inspected from time to time. There was nothing remarkable, therefore, in the fact that about mid-day several officers in a group approached. The one of the slightest rank was a major; next him was a lieutenant who, as Michel glanced carelessly at them, appeared to be engaged in making a very animated and earnest representation to him. The senior officer walked with his eyes bent on the ground, a fashion which gave a peculiar sternness to his face. His left arm was in a sling. As they came within earshot of Michel the tone of the representation changed, and he could not catch his purport. But the major halting abruptly said in a brief, dry tone to his companion, "Where?"

The lieutenant nodded his head in the direction of Michel.

The major stepped up close to him and looked covertly to his face. As he did so Michel instantly recognized the dark, thin lines and the strong square form; over the face of the major, something like an uncertain gleam of recognition passed.

"François," said he in his hard voice, "it was you the day of the armistice?"

"Where—when?" he stammered.

"Near the end of the armistice my poor comrade, since wounded, and I helped to raise him. Your officer's dead son from among a heap of corpses."

A spasm as if he were struck by a shot seemed to pass through Michel. "Ah!" said he, "it is true." Then he turned hastily to his companion. "That is a brave young soldier," he added; "it is impossible he can be the devil whom you suspect," and he hurried away. A distant portion of the work engaged without casting another glance at Michel. The officer who had been talking to the major, however, did not leave without casting a keen parting glance at the French sergeant. "It was gay with interest," the departing form of the major he had been last under such circumstances.

Had Michel's mind been free from woe he would have felt gladness at the mere recognition of a face he had met under other circumstances, if only as a break in the monotonous horror of his life; but the hints of the conversation had evident purport with which the major had been brought, as it always to put him on trial for his life, gave him but small concern. He was free. He could go to death in the battle-field without the quiver of a nerve, but to be hanged like a dog and the flies stood before him with loaded muskets, prepared to obey the last fatal order, his courage would probably have shown a shade more of pale-ness. But there was something that appeared to him quite horrible in the sipping of those hundred eyes. In his own conscience he knew he was free, nothing that he could see justify to himself; but he was aware also that the enemy would look upon even the most acute from a different point of view; and that, moreover, they had loaded the truth with innumerable exaggerations, so grossly and treachery. He was not a coward, of the temper to succumb. The more imminent the danger around him, the more determined he was to lose nothing through lack of courage or resolution. And as he thought over the matter, and the opinion of hitting the enemy entered his mind, his spirits rose.

He was not long without being put to the test. Michel had been assigned to the cooking for the party that occupied his shed. The function released him a couple of hours earlier than the other prisoners from the labor on the fortifications. He felt scarcely entitled to his task on the day of his meeting with the major than a French voice at the door of the hut called suddenly, "Sergeant Vose."

Michel started, turned a quantity of very thin soup from one saucepan to another.

"Sergeant, Sergeant Vose, I say," repeated the same friendly voice.

Michel poured the soup back again as if he were deaf.

Then he heard footsteps behind him, and a hand was lightly laid upon his shoulder. "You are the brave Sergeant Vose? Come, no shamming now."

Michel turned round with an air of the most utter astonishment, and saw the Lieutenant who had indicated him to Michel's former acquaintance, the Major. "Me! Sergeant Vose! here! lieutenant!" said he; "why, Vose, I heard, is from Lorraine; I am Suffolk—I am from near the Vosges. My father was a peasant."

"Come, come," said the Lieutenant, who had hoped by the sudden ease of the call to induce Michel to betray himself, "you need not deny your actions. Yes, your reputation is one to be proud of."

"Vose' reputation," said Michel stolidly, "is that of a damned fool who was always going out of his way for danger. For my part, I think it is more the duty of a soldier to stick to his ranks, and win with them if he can, or go to prison with them if he can't."

The Lieutenant looked puzzled at Michel then with a sneer said, "Clever as you are, my fine fellow, I will find you out." He had lost his temper.

It was the afternoon of the next day when Michel was rather surprised to find himself the recipient of a cigar from the hands of a grim-looking German sergeant. "You do not get too abundant a supply of wood here," remarked the latter as he seated himself on a bench near the stove, and by way of sign of comradeship, lit his own pipe with the big cobra bowl.

"No," said Michel, "we could put up with a little more, without being absolutely roasted."

"Ach, our lieutenant," cursing the officer who had been endeavoring to entrap Michel, "is a stingy beggar. Its all his doings."

Michel thought rapidly for a moment. "Ah, poor lieutenant cannot have much power over the prisoners. This is to make me confiding and indoce me to pour out my feelings. En garde." Then he observed aloud, "Stingy! He seems to me very good-natured. His is a man quite friendly to me, when he talked to me—only," added Michel with a laugh, "do you know for whom he took me?"

"No."

"A Sergeant Vose!"

"Pass!" exclaimed the Prussian sergeant. "Was Vose a good shot!" asked he suddenly.

"Parbleau, I should say, from what I heard, he was."

"Why we have many better shots among us, I am certain."

"I believe you Germans are very good shots."

"Are you yourself?"

Michel shook his head, with a frank, hearty laugh. "I don't know. When I first went into action I used to shut my eyes; but I have got over that long since. Now I have always the wish the word to fire is given. Then, as I am very lucky, I dare say they do as much execution as anybody else's."

"Sorely," thought the Prussian to himself, "if this observant fellow be would have more vanity about his skill as a marksman."

The remainder of the sergeant's conversation failed to elicit anything further, so he rose to depart with the courtesy of his manner considerably decreased. For that day the stampede upon Michel were at an end, but they did not cease. They took different shapes. Two days subsequently the prisoners were all in their huts dressed in line to receive letters. A non-commissioned officer called out the addresses. Of a sudden, in the middle of the list, the sing out "Le Sergeant Vose!" It was a sore trial to the stoutness not only of Michel, but of the companions. Some how, however, it stirred, and a letter was put back again into the bag. The Prussian remarking coolly, "Why, did they write, if Sergeant Vose was not here?"

Several of Michel's comrades were piled with questions—even with bribes—to declare that he was Vose, but they refused to betray him.

Once the big sheepdog accompanied the lieutenant, for the second time touched Michel lightly on the shoulder, "Follow me," said he.

Michel rose to directed and left the hut after the officer. On his issue he found on the door he saw a party of a dozen soldiers with steel bayonets standing before it. He was ordered to fall in, the guard was divided, four men in front, and four in rear, and the word was given to march. Michel thought at first, of asking what was the meaning of this, but he promptly concluded he would receive no satisfactory reply, and he desired self needless humiliation he kept silence. He had not long to wait before he saw at the end of the street the object. The march was in the direction of the city, whose towers were in the nearer and nearer to him. Then he entered the narrow streets, trod the ill-smelling bouldered pavement, encountered the looks of curiosity which were cast at him by passers-by, who were, however, too much accustomed to the sight of French prisoners to be much excited, and found himself at last at the entrance to the citadel. Here he was subjected to many passages into a cell. He looked at it. It was about ten feet by four—by day by dim light. Upon a bench on a lump of black bread and a cruet of water.

"Sergeant Vose," said the Lieutenant, "this is your hotel until you have laid aside your modesty, and openly claim credit for your magnificent exploits."

CHAPTER LXV.

SHORT COMMONS.

The snow was lying heavily on the ground when the Lieutenant with which Major Mahony and a number of other wounded entered the portal of Fort Nogent. Night had fallen, and the 4th of December was added to the bitter cold. A temporary halt was allowed and some little alleviation given to the wounded; but there was no room for hospital accommodation, and the convoy had to push on to the city. Miss Isabella sent few visits to the interior of the gay capital when his duties at the fortlead to this free, while he knew that it was slight. Several strangers he was, and passing in the side darkness, even as it would seem as if a change for the worse had come. For one thing, the sprshension of scarcely of foul air already named the supply of gas to be diminished, and but few of the public lamps were lit, while hardly a gleam came from the shops or public houses.

But there was no lack of animation. The convoy entered the city by the barriers, and then moved up in the direction of the Hotel de Ville. As it neared the more populous parts the numbers of the people in the streets became strikingly large, until at length it seemed as if all Paris was on the foot way. Amid the heavy rumble of the wagon Mike could hear the hum of in connection with this, but a wild, excited discourse accompanied by gestures of the most animated character. The families of the wounded joined in the excitement—fear of pain to allow him to direct a steady attention to what was going forward, but in a narrow street some casual obstacle compelled the wagon to halt and draw up close by the foot way. Then he had no difficulty in distinguishing voices and phrases.

"Eh, mon Dieu!" said a woman's accents, "une pauvre blessée."

"Ah, the heroes of the Marne!" cried a man's voice.

"How they must suffer," said another woman.

"Parbleu!" interjected a dirty-looking man, "they are no doubt the patriots of Belleville—glorious Belleville."

"Heroic will be earned!" growled a soldier of the line with a broken arm, who was sitting upright on a heap of straw, "your Belleville patriots run away, leaving their muskets to the Prussians."

"Blasphemer!" shouted the dirty man; "you are an aristocrat, I suppose, and want to belie the people."

"Aristocrat!" laughed the soldier; "it looks like it to see me here a pion-pion."

"Nevertheless, it may be," shouted the dirty man angrily, "your order have gone into the ranks with the view of throwing scorn on the people."

"Well, your Belleville lines thrown scorn on themselves by abandoning a post to the enemy. I got my wound through their cowardice."

The dirty man raised his voice to a shriek. "Ah, he cried, "a base lie-infame —a lee base pious!"

Absurd as the cry was under the circumstances, it was not without its shadow of danger. Some boys for sport took it up, some women for excitement, and it began to swell into a chorus. The officer of the escort, however, called out with a stern voice, "Fix bayonets; clear the way there," and the wagon was set in motion. The well-effected spectators set up a cheer which drowned the noise of the vanquished portion, and the dirty man was finally hustled out of the way. His ejected and vituperative. He denounced between his teeth les soldats—les bandits—les aristocrats, and then in a cracked voice he hallooed out some bars of the Marseillaise, and, followed by half a dozen ragged urchins and a couple of shatternly women, whom he called upon as the people, he plunged into the lanes leading towards Belleville.

The fragment moved on. Bitter as the cold caused by the snow was, the soft carpet it made upon the streets was a great boon to the wretched burden within, sparing them many a jolt, though at the same time it delayed progress and the obstacles of its own. The pain of Mike's hurt was intense, but it could not altogether repress the eager curiosity which was a leading characteristic of his mind, and he watched with growing interest the aspect of the street and the faces of the people among whom he passed. The great battle on the Marne was still the theme, as any chance of slaughter, though he failed to catch the precise statements. As the enforced inactivity of the besieged army increased, so, he gathered more of the conversation. Once the fourgon rested opposite a brilliantly lighted cafe. Within Mike could see two or three parties calmly playing dominoes, while the bulk of the company were wine, coffee or eau sucrée, were discussing in an eager and excited manner what he felt sure was the battle. Outside were a few shabby, pinched-looking persons, men, women and boys. One of the men observed in a rather rough, shrill Mike, however, was able to catch, "See those fellows, how they riot, while the people starve."

"Some are not drinking."

"No," replied the other bitterly, "but observe them at their games. Do you think it is with an empty stomach they sit down to amuse themselves with those toys there?"

No answer was made to the question, and the speakers shuffled slowly away. Presently Mike saw two of the players rise and approach the door. He could see them plainly. Both were rather advanced in life and had the air of gentlemen.

"Pate!" said the first, as he stood on the threshold buttoning his overcoat, "how it blows!"

"Aye," said his companion, "a gloomy time for our poor fellow-citizens within walls."

"And within, too," remarked the other with a faint laugh.

"It is true," was the reply, with a sort of a sigh.

"Come, don't be cast down. I have still a couple of slices of ham left, and thou, my old friend, art welcome to a share as long as they last."

"Ah, it would be a shame to trespass on thy generosity. Besides, I assure thee call to him by any means the objections which thou think. I had some yesterday, chez, Brion, and drew up with eminent relish thine thing is not so bad."

A shudder passed through the listener, yet he said, "No doubt one has prejudices very foolish, yet they are not easy to overcome. However, as I am going to dine shall have cast down the last barrier against the practical. Come, therefore, to morrow and help me to get rid of the food of prejudice."

"Do not ask me."

"I will. What signifies starving off starvation for a day—and could I feel happily on dainties and know thee to be in want?"

"I accept thy invitation then, dear friend. At what hour may I be expected?"

"Ah, let me see. It is late in the day before I can get bread. Say three o'clock."

"How art thou off for fuel? Our hearth must be cooked."

"Oh, I am all right. I have still some of my book shelves left. And if the worst come to the worst," added the host with a laugh, "I have the satisfaction to burn my poems. The critics often asserted that they lacked fire; it appears now the discovery of the evil time that I can give it to them—or they to it."

"If any then thy spirits."

"Ah, it is the sun, believe it."

The other shook his head. "If it were not for old Calenor being magnanimous enough to remember his customers and allowing them credit, which he knows they are not spending money, I think I should go mad."

"It is not think of it. The good time will yet come."

"Ah, I hope so," with a sigh.

"At all events, there is one comfort; our soldiers are fighting bravely outside, and the people are bearing their privations steadfastly within."

"Aye, there is some consolation in that. Well, au revoir."

"Au revoir."

And the two friends parted hungry and cold. "But," thought Mike to himself, "neither of them has a notion of giving up. Indeed," he added aloud, "I think there's as much courage in them two cold sleeps as in our famous white staff of the Presidence. As an Irishman bred and born, I'm naturally able to do without high feeding; but, by the memory of my father and my chance of standing shoulder to shoulder with misfortunes than have to dine off cat. I myself may be unable to express what I have sentiment, but I'll howl or do something of the kind, for I'm not partial to being starved through the legs; but I declare to the Lord, if I was either sitting that kind of a supper I'd mess it."

Mike's reflections were interrupted by a jerk of the wagon, which began to move forward, and the conversation of the pedestrians ceased. Mike's reflections were interrupted by a jerk of the wagon, which began to move forward, and the conversation of the pedestrians ceased. He was left to his soliloquy.

(To be Continued.)

SHOOTING MATCH.—A meeting of the Irish Rifle Association was held February 19th, in Dublin, the Lord Mayor presiding, at which Major Leech brought forward the proposed match between Ireland and America and the challenge which he had addressed to the Americans. In it he offers to bring over a team of Irish Riflemen armed with Rigby rifles to compete on their own ground with chosen shots of America, firing American-made rifles. He also read a letter which he had received from General Wingate, Secretary of the National Rifle Association of America, accepting the challenge on condition that the firing be at eight, nine and ten hundred yards, but declining the eleven hundred yards' range. After considerable discussion the American terms were accepted, and the match is to come off at Creedmoor, Long Island, during next summer.

AN EXILE'S DREAM.

I WILL go no more to Ireland,
The land of misty mist,
Where life pales of boyhood is leaping
In the meadows of dew,
Where the shadow of Mount Sopee
Falls o'er the valley of Slane.

Where the shadow of Mount Sopee
Falls o'er the valley of Slane,
And the wrinkles of the Boyne flowing
Are forever in the past.
Where the Liffey's waters glisten
Through the city of Dublin,
Through the city of Dublin,
Where the Liffey's waters glisten
And the Dodder flows to the sea.

I will go where the Dodder
Ate flating here and there,
With their haggard faces, like frosting
Of the moon on the dead sky;
And gather it up in the skirts
Of the mourning veil,
And commune with the incantations—
"The Almoners of God;"
I will bid in the marvellous song
Which is rising from the river,
Which flows, rousing in the ocean,
Forever and forever,
When the Star-spirit is come,
Where the year is fresh and young,
I will go in the house of Talbert—
The land of sword and song.

I will go where Kilmeny
Sings in peaceful rest,
Unmindful, when a falling leaf
Ripples its placid breast;
Where the branches of oak and arbutus
Are wanting a pleasant screen,
And the summer's sun is diamonds
Through its tracery of green;
Where the Star-spirit's voice speaketh,
Forever rise and fall,
And the harbor of Dublin Convention
Is spending the mountains tall.
Where the Star-spirit from the West
Across the deep and wide,
Is the land of the Gael,
Where I'll be—I'll be—I'll be—

I will go to beautiful Wicklow,
The hoisted pulsen's rest,
Which the sunbeams of Erin's sky
Is many a struggle prest;
Where the silvery graveyard,
Near the pleasant beds of Kildare,
Where the sunbeams of Erin's sky born,
Young Tara, who is sleeping there,
Is with my kindred and people,
Where gallant Robert Emmet,
Where Wolfe Tone, and Lord Edward,
Where "all the brave" lie side by side;
Where the breezes from the sea
Are cheerily wander forth
From the land of the North
To the bleak front of the North;
And in sunless hour of twilight
I will mount the tall silver-Rhoan,
And survey the land of my fathers,
Of the sparkling green-robed moors;
Of the sunbeams dark heather,
And gaze with a dim fondness
On the Sliabh-na-mon mountains,
The masters of the mind,
And the rivers that run to the west,
Young Carolan and Grattan,
The Sliabh-na-mon mountains,
I will hasten from their valleys,
With a maiden's love and pride,
To tarn my steps west,
And on the green sward,
Old Erin, my mother dear,
And never more will part
From the sunbeams of my people—
The land of the dying Bard.

[American Review, 1861. JOSEPH BRENNAN.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY AT GOLD HILL, NEV.

Special Correspondence of THE MONITOR.]

GOLD HILL (NEV.), March 20, 1874.

The celebration of St. Patrick's Day was this year a most successful and enjoyable one, and gave universal satisfaction to all lovers of Ireland's patron saint in this section of sagebrush and silver. The morning opened bright and clear, and promised a pleasant day for the celebration, which was so following.

The Hibernians, numbering some two hundred men, clad in their new and rich regalia, together with the Sarsfield Drum Corps, assembled at the Catholic church, and after being composed of scholars belonging to St. Patrick's school, and wearing a very neat and attractive uniform, marched from the Union Hall to St. Patrick's church, where Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Hapts, the choir being composed of young ladies belonging to the Sisters' school, Virginia City.

After the last gospel Rev. Father Clarke, the pastor, preached a very able panegyric of our glorious patron saint. The vast congregation, filling the spacious church to completion, were kept spell-bound for over one hour by the eloquent words of the learned Father; and in his rehearsal of the life and labors of the great saint he convinced his hearers that the memory of that great man deserved to be always fresh in the hearts of every true son of Ireland. At the close a collection was taken up for the orphans, and the liberality of the sons and daughters of St. Patrick was manifested in the generous sum of a hundred dollars.

After the services in the church were over, the military and civic bodies marched out to join the procession which had arrived from Virginia City, and the processions united under the leadership of Marshal Conroy, assisted by Messrs. Leslie on Sunday, Fitzgerald and Cassidy. Within Mike could see two or three parties calmly playing dominoes, while the bulk of the company were wine, coffee or eau sucrée, were discussing in an eager and excited manner what he felt sure was the battle. Outside were a few shabby, pinched-looking persons, men, women and boys. One of the men observed in a rather rough, shrill Mike, however, was able to catch, "See those fellows, how they riot, while the people starve."

"Some are not drinking."

"No," replied the other bitterly, "but observe them at their games. Do you think it is with an empty stomach they sit down to amuse themselves with those toys there?"

No answer was made to the question, and the speakers shuffled slowly away. Presently Mike saw two of the players rise and approach the door. He could see them plainly. Both were rather advanced in life and had the air of gentlemen.

"Pate!" said the first, as he stood on the threshold buttoning his overcoat, "how it blows!"

"Aye," said his companion, "a gloomy time for our poor fellow-countrymen within walls."

"And within, too," remarked the other with a faint laugh.

"It is true," was the reply, with a sort of a sigh.

"Come, don't be cast down. I have still a couple of slices of ham left, and thou, my old friend, art welcome to a share as long as they last."

"Ah, it would be a shame to trespass on thy generosity. Besides, I assure thee call to him by any means the objections which thou think. I had some yesterday, chez, Brion, and drew up with eminent relish thine thing is not so bad."

A shudder passed through the listener, yet he said, "No doubt one has prejudices very foolish, yet they are not easy to overcome. However, as I am going to dine shall have cast down the last barrier against the practical. Come, therefore, to morrow and help me to get rid of the food of prejudice."

"Do not ask me."

"I will. What signifies starving off starvation for a day—and could I feel happily on dainties and know thee to be in want?"

"I accept thy invitation then, dear friend. At what hour may I be expected?"

"Ah, let me see. It is late in the day before I can get bread. Say three o'clock."

"How art thou off for fuel? Our hearth must be cooked."

"Oh, I am all right. I have still some of my book shelves left. And if the worst come to the worst," added the host with a laugh, "I have the satisfaction to burn my poems. The critics often asserted that they lacked fire; it appears now the discovery of the evil time that I can give it to them—or they to it."

"If any then thy spirits."

"Ah, it is the ham, believe it."

The other shook his head. "If it were not for old Calenor being magnanimous enough to remember his customers and allowing them credit, which he knows they are not spending money, I think I should go mad."

"It is not think of it. The good time will yet come."

"Ah, I hope so," with a sigh.

"At all events, there is one comfort; our soldiers are fighting bravely outside, and the people are bearing their privations steadfastly within."

"Aye, there is some consolation in that. Well, au revoir."

"Au revoir."

And the two friends parted hungry and cold. "But," thought Mike to himself, "neither of them has a notion of giving up. Indeed," he added aloud, "I think there's as much courage in them two cold sleeps as in our famous white staff of the Presidence. As an Irishman bred and born, I'm naturally able to do without high feeding; but, by the memory of my father and my chance of standing shoulder to shoulder with misfortunes than have to dine off cat. I myself may be unable to express what I have sentiment, but I'll howl or do something of the kind, for I'm not partial to being starved through the legs; but I declare to the Lord, if I was either sitting that kind of a supper I'd mess it."

Mike's reflections were interrupted by a jerk of the wagon, which began to move forward, and the conversation of the pedestrians ceased. He was left to his soliloquy.

(To be Continued.)

SHOOTING MATCH.—A meeting of the Irish Rifle Association was held February 19th, in Dublin, the Lord Mayor presiding, at which Major Leech brought forward the proposed match between Ireland and America and the challenge which he had addressed to the Americans. In it he offers to bring over a team of Irish Riflemen armed with Rigby rifles to compete on their own ground with chosen shots of America, firing American-made rifles. He also read a letter which he had received from General Wingate, Secretary of the National Rifle Association of America, accepting the challenge on condition that the firing be at eight, nine and ten hundred yards, but declining the eleven hundred yards' range. After considerable discussion the American terms were accepted, and the match is to come off at Creedmoor, Long Island, during next summer.

ADDRESS OF CAPTAIN PATRICK J. FIELD.

Mr. Chairman: It is a most gratifying sight for every lover of the dear old land to see the good feeling and unity existing between Irishmen on this great natal day, in which they are the proud people of the Republic. Not only in Nevada, or on the Pacific Coast, but wherever we may cast our eyes, we find Irishmen assembled to do honor to the memory of our patron saint, and also to congratulate each other upon the bright prospects looming up in the dim horizon for their poor down-trodden country beyond the sea. We are young in years, and strangers to the land of our sires; but the fact that love which so sways the hearts of our parents has found its way into the veins of their children is proved by our meeting to-day to celebrate, in their own simple manner, a day held in reverence by every one who has a drop of pure Irish blood in their veins. Here we find ourselves far out in the Western world, almost beyond the pale of civilization, and still due reverence for old Ireland exists in our hearts; and when the 17th of March comes around it finds us up and ready, with our armor buckled on, to march forth and prove to the world at large that Christianity, the same which good St. Patrick preached from the hills of Tara, does not slumber amid the deserted mountains of Nevada. To-day, my friends, in every portion of the globe where are gathered together the sons and daughters of Ireland, to honor the memory of her illustrious patron saint, and to give words of encouragement bespeaks the opening of a glorious epoch in the future history of Ireland. Let us look over the pages of history, the great men now engaged in the grandest movements have all been those ever undertaken. And, my friends, think you that England, with all her fame and all her control over the world, will ever alter her opinion now being brought against her, headed by the very first man of the age? I say emphatically, No. England's power in Ireland is fast waning away; the grip she has held on the people for centuries past is not far distant when Ireland will take her proper rank among the nations of the earth.

My friends, I do not intend to occupy your time with a recital of the many and great sufferings of our race for the last six or seven centuries; it is known too well to each and all of you to require it. But the many instances of reliable history a few brief sketches of what our race suffered in contending for those rights to which they are by the Sazon usurpers. No power on the face of the earth could have subdued the spirit and stinacy to the power of their oppressors than Ireland; and with that indomitable spirit they have struggled, and will yet possess they will achieve yet, with the help of God, that great object so dear to every Irish heart—namely, the liberation of their country from the tyrannical yoke of England. My friends, you may ask, perhaps, that such as assertion is of no avail, unless I give some proof that such a glorious work is really going on. My friends, let us for a moment glance over the columns of our Irish papers, and will not one glance convince us that a glorious movement is on foot, with most at the wheel to direct the course they bore for land. "there is no such word as fail," might well be applied. Yes, my friends, every Irish which reaches us from that dear old isle brings fresh proof that a power is arising in the land which shall speedily put to produce far poor Erin the happiest and most glorious results.

The watchword is now through the land,
We'll have our own again;
And every day we're gaining our band,
To get back our own again.
The rich, the poor, the young, the old,
Are flocking into some band among;
We're marching on to Victory,
All to get our own again.

In every county in Ireland the prelates and the people are moving heart and hand in the cause of oppressed Ireland, and the thing is not so bad."

A shudder passed through the listener, yet he said, "No doubt one has prejudices very foolish, yet they are not easy to overcome. However, as I am going to dine shall have cast down the last barrier against the practical. Come, therefore, to morrow and help me to get rid of the food of prejudice."

"Do not ask me."

"I will. What signifies starving off starvation for a day—and could I feel happily on dainties and know thee to be in want?"

"I accept thy invitation then, dear friend. At what hour may I be expected?"

"Ah, let me see. It is late in the day before I can get bread. Say three o'clock."

"How art thou off for fuel? Our hearth must be cooked."

"Oh, I am all right. I have still some of my book shelves left. And if the worst come to the worst," added the host with a laugh, "I have the satisfaction to burn my poems. The critics often asserted that they lacked fire; it appears now the discovery of the evil time that I can give it to them—or they to it."

"If any then thy spirits."

"Ah, it is the ham, believe it."

The other shook his head. "If it were not for old Calenor being magnanimous enough to remember his customers and allowing them credit, which he knows they are not spending money, I think I should go mad."

"It is not think of it. The good time will yet come."

"Ah, I hope so," with a sigh.

"At all events, there is one comfort; our soldiers are fighting bravely outside, and the people are bearing their privations steadfastly within."

"Aye, there is some consolation in that. Well, au revoir."

"Au revoir."

And the two friends parted hungry and cold. "But," thought Mike to himself, "neither of them has a notion of giving up. Indeed," he added aloud, "I think there's as much courage in them two cold sleeps as in our famous white staff of the Presidence. As an Irishman bred and born, I'm naturally able to do without high feeding; but, by the memory of my father and my chance of standing shoulder to shoulder with misfortunes than have to dine off cat. I myself may be unable to express what I have sentiment, but I'll howl or do something of the kind, for I'm not partial to being starved through the legs; but I declare to the Lord, if I was either sitting that kind of a supper I'd mess it."

Mike's reflections were interrupted by a jerk of the wagon, which began to move forward, and the conversation of the pedestrians ceased. He was left to his soliloquy.

(To be Continued.)

SHOOTING MATCH.—A meeting of the Irish Rifle Association was held February 19th, in Dublin, the Lord Mayor presiding, at which Major Leech brought forward the proposed match between Ireland and America and the challenge which he had addressed to the Americans. In it he offers to bring over a team of Irish Riflemen armed with Rigby rifles to compete on their own ground with chosen shots of America, firing American-made rifles. He also read a letter which he had received from General Wingate, Secretary of the National Rifle Association of America, accepting the challenge on condition that the firing be at eight, nine and ten hundred yards, but declining the eleven hundred yards' range. After considerable discussion the American terms were accepted, and the match is to come off at Creedmoor, Long Island, during next summer.

been pressed were Very Rev. Dr. Russell, President; the Very Rev. Drs. Whitehead and McCarthy; Vice-Presidents; the Very Rev. James Quinn, Hammond, Hughes and Carr; the Rev. Dr. Farrelly, Bursar; Very Rev. President Barres, Crowley, Mooney, Walsh, Gargan, Lennon, Haskett, Mooney, O'Brien, O'Rourke, Tully, Very Rev. P. Walsh, S. J.; Very Rev. Father O'Reilly, S. J.; Very Rev. Father Carbery, S. J., Secretary; Professors Collegiate; Very Rev. Father Murray, S. J., Milltown Park; the Very Rev. P. Doff, O. M. I. Rev. P. Gowan, C. M., Rev. P. Mullin, Rev. J. M. Rev. F. Cribbin, C. M.; Rev. F. Brady, C. M.; Rev. B. McNamee, H. P. Church; Rev. James O'Kane, Moville; Rev. J. O'Rorke, P.P., Maynooth; Rev. J. Dunbar, P.P., Celbridge; Rev. F. Grennan, P. P. Dunboyne; Rev. Turner, P.P., Clara; Rev. T. O'Reilly, C.C., Castlebar; Rev. Mr. Baker, C.C., Dundrum; Rev. R. Downing, C.C., Lusk; Rev. Mr. Gough, C.C., Maynooth; Very Rev. Professor Murphy, Clerical College; Rev. Mr. Farrelly, C.C., Kilcloney; Rev. Mr. Nolan, C.C., Clane; Rev. J. Hand, C.C., Leixlip; Rev. Mr. Thomas, Rev. C.C., St. Mullins.

The roundabout are pointed to a catafalque in the centre of the choir, surrounded by choral unblanched wax lights. The coffin, which was plain and elegant, bore the following inscription: "Orate pro anima R. Jacobi O'Kane, sacerdotis Derriensis, qui ob. D. 1695. Requiescat in pace. Amen." The clergy and students having taken their places, Office for the Dead commenced, at which the Lord Bishop of Derry presided. The sacred music was given by the choir of Students, assisted by a number of students. At the conclusion of the Office, High Mass for the repose of the soul of which the Very Rev. Dr. Russell, President of Maynooth College, was celebrant, assisted by Deacon and Sub-Deacon, Rev. Dr. Dunboyne scholar. During his Dunboyne course he was appointed lecturer in moral theology and on the occasions he conducted for several months. Some time subsequent he was appointed professor, and acquired the title of Professor of Moral Philosophy, during the illness of the late eminent Professor, the Rev. Dr. Callan. In 1852 he was elected Junior Dean, and in June, 1856, he succeeded Very Rev. R. Lee, at an unusually early age, in the most responsible post of Senior Dean.

For fifteen years he discharged the duties of this office with a tact and judgment, a dignity and devotedness beyond all praise, and he had the rare good fortune to secure the confidence and respect alike of the most reverend trustees, of his colleagues in office, and of the students of every degree. Earnest, pious, upright, single-minded, unselfish — a model, in truth, in his own life, of all the priestly virtues which it was his duty to inculcate, he was able to appeal as none to one set of his words to the heart; and his instructions were not more effective by the simple eloquence, the fervor, the great facility learning and the profound knowledge of spiritual life which characterized his lectures, than by the influence of unquestioned virtue and high personal worth which he enforced them from his own example. His attainments in every department of ecclesiastical knowledge were most varied and extensive, and the instructions on sacred ceremonies which it was his duty to deliver to the students used to which he might, be so obscure, have contented himself with imparting the mere practical details of the subject, became in his hands a repository of the archæology, the history and the theology of the Liturgy. The importance of these lectures he appears to have himself been heartily conscious, and he has left behind him, at the instance of some friends, he arranged for publication, a work on the "Ceremonies of the Roman Ritual"—which appeared in 1867. Of this volume it is hardly necessary to say that it received the high and unequivocal approval of the Sacred Congregation of Rites; and it is known to have been highly prized throughout the English-speaking world. Three large Editions have been exhausted, and a French translation, although far from accurate, has passed almost a similar success.

He continued his ritualistic studies unstintingly to the last, and had accumulated materials for a commentary on the Roman Martyrology, which, if completed, would have been a most valuable contribution to the literature of the subject, and would have placed him in the front rank of writers on this branch of ecclesiastical science. The Sovereign Pontiff, the Most Rev. Dr. Kelly, Lord Bishop of Derry, and the clergy, who preceded them into the chapel. And

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

At a meeting of clergymen of Boston, recently, $76,000 was pledged for a Bishop's residence.

The new statue of Joan of Arc was placed upon its pedestal in the Place des Pyramides, in Paris, on the 6th of February.

Mary O'Connor is the recording secretary of the Bishop Wood Mutt Beneficial Society of Philadelphia.

The Rev. Joseph McPhillips, one of the most learned theologians in the State of Ohio, died at his pastoral residence in Paris were on the 23d of February.

A new church, dedicated to the Good Shepherd, has just been founded at Lyons, France. It will be very large, and will contain a chapel dedicated to our Lady of Lourdes.

Mr. Urquehart, a Protestant and an ex-English M. P., who lives at Montreux, on the Lake of Geneva, has appealed to foreign powers on behalf of the Catholics of Switzerland.

The Savannah (Ga.) News says that the Right Rev. Bishop Arnaud received six young ladies, from Montreal and different cities of the North, into the order of the Sisterhood of Mercy on the 3d inst.

Thirty-seven priests were ordained on Sunday 8th May. Yerrelies, in the church of Madame Estrageres, Paris Twelve of these belong to the Lazarist Congregation, but not less confounding to the ceremony for Odion.

The Baltimore Mirror says: "Intelligence from Mexico announces that many of the Jesuits community, who have been exiled from thence, have found an asylum in Texas."

Bismarck's order to the Belgian Cabinet to suppress the Catholic papers, was immediately followed by the appearance of a new Ultramontane journal (Le Croix) at Brussels.

Hon. Judge Daniels, who for the last seven years was Chief Justice of the Orphan Court of Baltimore, died suddenly of heart disease on Sunday, the 15th inst. He was a native of Baltimore, the son of a Commodore of that name, and a devoted Catholic.

A Unitarian meeting was lately held in Boston for the purpose of their fellow-members in Hungary, at which a Rev. Edward Everett Hale said that "there was no place on earth so good as Hungary for planting a blow fairly in the face of the Church of Rome."

Last year a publishing firm in Paris issued a slanderous pamphlet against the Christian Brothers. The Principal of the Brotherhood brought to suit against the firm, and they were condemned to pay 4000 francs damages and to suffer two years imprisonment for their rascality.

Mgr. Mermillod, the exiled Bishop of Geneva, is preaching in Paris. The churches are frequently too small to contain the multitudes assembled to hear him. The Figaro says, "Paris is grateful to Switzerland for the exile of the brilliant orator, scholar and Catholic."

Mr. McCarthy has proved the successful candidate for the honors of the mayoralty of Pittsburgh, Pa. He was elected by a majority of 1,700 votes—a majority of 2,000 over all other evidence of the rapid progress of the Irish people and their descendants in that prosperous city.

According to the Newspaper Press Directory, there are 1,296 Catholic papers issued in England and 149 in Scotland, in London alone there are 314.

On St. Patrick's Day the Benevolent Society of St. Patrick were to hold an anniversary festival in Willis' Rooms, in London. The Marquis of Londonderry was to preside on the occasion.

The following gentlemen have been appointed to the Commission of the Peace: County Cork—John Millar, of Labura; County Down—John Arthur, Farrell of Moynalty, Kells.

A movement has been initiated in Limerick with a view of presenting Mr. Justice Mitt, M. P., with a national testimonial, in recognition of his eminent services to the country, as a committee of gentlemen for that purpose is about being formed, and an appeal will be made to Irishmen at home and abroad.

The Dublin Freeman's Journal says that on the evening of February 11th at the Westland Row Club rooms, 14 York street and 13 Middle Gardiner street, of which Mr. A. M. Sullivan is the President, he was brilliantly illuminated. In front of the central window in each house was a scroll bearing the words—A. M. Sullivan, our Vice-President, Member for Louth." Large crowds were attracted, and cheers were given for Louth and its senior member.

The three men, Michael Ryan, Thomas Ryan and Patrick Hanrahan, who are now being been concerned in the murder of the man Welsh at Askeaton, were brought up on Saturday, the 7th of February, at Askeaton, before Messrs. De Gerson, R. M., Nash, Hewson and Morgan. Mr. John Ryan, solicitor, Limerick, appeared for the prisoners. Corporals Swiede applied for further remand of eight days on the ground that he expected information which would connect the prisoners with the murder. Mr. O'Connor objected, and

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING APRIL 4.
March 29—Sunday—Palm Sunday.
30—Monday—Feria.
31—Tuesday—Feria.
April 1—Wednesday—Feria.
2—Thursday—Holy Thursday.
3—Friday—Good Friday.
4—Saturday—Holy Saturday.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....MARCH 28, 1874.

CATHOLIC HALL AND LIBRARY.

The announcement by Mr. HAMMITT in the California Theatre on St. PATRICK'S Day that a grand ball and free library were about to be established in this city, must be gratifying to every Catholic on the Pacific coast. Indeed, we know of no more means for the preservation of our holy faith and the perpetuation of the memory of our forefathers.

The proposition to erect a grand building containing a library filled with works that tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth—works that tell us what we are, what our faith is, and the place of the Irish Catholic in the history of the world, is a project that cannot possibly be overcontested, and calls loudly not merely for the sympathy, but for the active co-operation of every Catholic man and woman.

The movement, we are glad to say, is in the hands of gentlemen with whom nothing halts that public spirit, patriotism and liberality can inaugurate a success.

Mr. HAMMITT, as President of the SAINT PATRICK'S Day celebration, did himself infinite credit by the way in which he spoke on this subject. His words were to the point when he informed the large house that literary exercises of next St. Patrick's Day would be held in a Catholic Library Hall. And he gave a strong earnest to his hopes when he made a subscription representing our various Catholic organizations had the matter under consideration. His sentiments must have received a hearty response when he urged the co-operation of all in having the good work.

This is a subject in which every Catholic, and especially every man with true Celtic blood in his veins, must feel profoundly interested. The persecuted and calumniated Catholic Celts, have proved our bravery and heroism on the world's battlefields. We could fight in foreign lands, but we could not write. English authors were down on us, English literature smiled to us, unless we sold our birthright for a mess of pottage. Thank God, not man, that day is passed. Now, it is our duty to vindicate the truth and the glorious deeds of our heroes of ireland their blood in our veins."

We see from sixty to eighty thousand in this city, and possess ample means. Shall we not, then, in this one day erect a magnificent Catholic Library which will be a distinction? The beneficial results to be derived are incalculable. It would place in the hands of all the treasured knowledge of centuries—the knowledge of the profoundest thinkers on religion, law and politics. It would be the most precious legacy that we could bequeath our children. It would be the best means to transmit to posterity a due veneration of the memory of our ancestors, so distinguished in war, art, science, literature and religion. If we neglect it, how can we preserve our youth, now inundated with Saxon-American literature, filling visitors to the false principles, contagious errors and foul misrepresentations that the Protestant publications? How can we blame them if they disgrace the mother that loves them, and make our nationality and religion a by-word with our enemies. In a word, it we fail to furnish our young people with salutary reading, we expose them to the poison that lurks in almost all the non-Catholic literature of the day.

The project has already been criticised by at least one of our daily papers. The criticism published writer belongs to the ad-opened school; he has probably outlived his associations, and confounds it with Christianity. A good library would do it a signal service to enlarge its views. We will return to this subject at some future day. In the meantime we would say to all, be ready to co-operate when heartily when the committee name their report, which, we observe not, will be worthy of our race and religion.

Confirmation.

Last Sunday at half past eight o'clock Mass, Most Rev. Archbishop Alemany administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to about seventy children in St. Peter's Church. This also was occasion of the first Communion. The church was crowded by persons who not only came to witness the ceremonies, but also as a tribute of respect to their venerated Archbishop. The children were clad in their usual attire, especially the girls, who were white veils crowned with white wreaths. Their deportment was remarkably good, showing that they keenly felt the importance of the greater day that was to receive. At the Mass the Archbishop delivered a very interesting sermon, the text of which was: "Which of you shall convince me of sin."

In the afternoon, at two o'clock, there was a public examination of the Sunday School, at which his Grace presided, and wherein he expressed himself much pleased at the rapid advancement of the children in Christian Doctrine and Sacred History. His opinion was concurred in by the large assemblage of parents and friends, and also by strangers, who unqualifiedly said it was the best examination of the kind they had ever witnessed—one fact of which Rev. Father Shuey and O'Connor and their staff of teachers ought to feel proud.

For an account of the celebration of Patrick's Day at Gold Hill, Nev., see second page.

THE BRAUNSBERG GYMNASIUM.

The necessity of devoting all our available space to a report of the St. Patrick's Day celebration prevented us last week from noticing the Chronicle's rejoinder to our article of the 14th instant on Emperor WILLIAM'S letter to Earl RUSSELL. Our readers will, no doubt, remember that in that article we cited the refusal of the Prussian Minister of Public Instruction to remove Messrs. WOLLASTON and TRUBEL, of the Braunsberg Seminary, after they had been convicted of holding anti-Catholic doctrine, as an instance of the injustice with which our co-religionists are treated in the newly-founded Empire. We stated that the Seminary in question was a Catholic one; that the gentlemen referred to had been hired to teach Catholic theology, and that, forgetful of their duty, they had rejected the doctrine of Papal infallibility as defined by the Ecumenical Council of the Vatican. We showed that the Bishop who demanded their removal only asked for what was right and just under the circumstances. He certainly could not be expected to stand idly by while children who were supposed to be learning Catholic theology were being poisoned with heretical ideas. No minister of any Christian denomination would remain passive in such a case.

The Chronicle charges us with misrepresenting the facts, and declares that Braunsberg Seminary was a State and not a Catholic institution—the innuendo, to use the word in its legal signification, being that the Bishop was guilty of presumption and unwarrantable impertinence in demanding a dismissal of the professors. Our contemporary evidently believes it was none of the prelate's business what kind of theology was taught at Braunsberg. Now, the seminary, although founded by the State, was established and maintained as a Catholic institution, and it had a legally recognized character as such. Prussia has Catholic professors in her Protestant universities, and in that in question was one of the former. The refusal of the Minister of Public Instruction to displace Messrs. WOLLASTON and TRUBEL was not based on the ground that they were not a Catholic theology; but on the ground that, in his opinion, it was not necessary for a Catholic theologian to believe or teach the doctrine of Papal infallibility. This does not in any one case constitute, tantamount to an assumption that he—a Government officer, and a Protestant at that—was competent to decide what was and what was not necessary for a Catholic to believe and teach. If he had replied to the Bishop by saying that Braunsberg had ceased to be an exclusively Catholic seminary; that the authorities had changed its character, and that the professors were not the bound to inculcate Catholic doctrine, the prelate could not have a word further to say in the matter. But for the Prussian Government to say to the Bishop that a Catholic institution; these are professors of Catholic theology," and at the same time permit to be taught within its walls a theology which no Catholic professor would accept, is an anomaly, a deceit and an injustice.

If Braunsberg were in this free republic the Courts would compel the Government to dismiss the professors, on the grounds that the civil power, from its very nature, was incompetent to decide what was and what was not Catholic doctrine; and that where a man was appointed to a position as a Catholic, and had to perform duties peculiar to Catholics, he should be a Catholic in the sense and to the full extent of the word, as understood by the body of his co-religionists. Issues somewhat similar have already been decided in the way we indicate by American Courts. The idea of having a Catholic college in which anti-Catholic doctrines could be taught, at the option of a professor who was elected because he was a Catholic, could only be entertained or countenanced by German Imperialism.

Death of a Journalist.

NEW YORK, March 16.—William James Deegan, editor of the New York Tribune, died suddenly.

The foregoing dispatch reached this city on the morning of St. Patrick's Day, and we could not add one word to the published obituary of the Tablet for the loss of an editor whose talents reflected on the columns of that paper the credit of being the most learned and logical of any Catholic publication in the United States. The failure of the deceased was one of the first persons to whom the writer of the notice was introduced on arriving from Ireland at New York in 1850, and both continued to be attached friends and correspondents for more than thirty years. William Deegan, the father, was an Englishman with an Irish heart, and in early life was associated with ANDREW, the author of the "Review of Pope's Book of Martyrs," in the editorial management of the London Truth Teller, a bound volume of which we had the pleasure of reading. On the suspension of that journal the junior editor came to New York and established the New York Truth Teller, in 1822. It was then, and for many years thereafter, with the single exception of Bishop England's Charleston Miscellany, the only Catholic paper in the United States, and although small for this day, it was a great and a good paper in the days when Catholic Emancipation was under discussion in England and Ireland. It was under the tuition of such a father that our deceased friend was brought up, and he could not fail in being a good man and a good Catholic. May God be merciful to his soul!

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.—We have quite a number of books, magazines and other publications awaiting notice. Pressure on our space, which we could not give d. prevents us from dealing with them this week. We shall, however, do them justice at an early day.

INTERIOR subscribers will oblige by requesting the agents of their individuals in the office without delay.

PERSECUTION OF CATHOLICS IN RUSSIAN POLAND.

The latest news from the eastern part of Russian Poland brings us sad intelligence of a fearful persecution of the (so called) Uniats (Greek Catholics in union with Rome) of the diocese of Chelm, who, after having providentially escaped the fate of the millions of their co-religionists in Lithuania, Volhynia, Podolia and Ukraine in 1836 and 1839, are now, under the magnetic-lacus and liberal ALEXANDER II., forced into schism in a most brutal and barbarous manner. Here are a few of the many facts communicated to the Cracow Czas:

Towards the end of 1873 the Russian Government, through the instrumentality of a certain renegade priest, POPIEL, the Administrator of the Uniatic diocese of Chelm, issued a circular to all the pastors with the purpose of doing away with all the Catholic ceremonies and prayers said for the Pope at Mass, substituting for the first time the name of the Czar. The majority of the Uniatic clergy, as might be expected, refused to comply; therefore they were immediately driven out of their parishes, and their places given to young priests lately imported from Galicia (Austrian Poland), zealous partisans of the Czar and his religion. The people being deprived of their spiritual directors, and refusing to accept the newly-arrived, in tears and despair availed the consequence thought about by this movement, in the meantime resolving to abstain from attending the churches.

In some localities, as in the village of Drelow, as the new priests commenced to officiate according to the new changes, the people unceremoniously led them out of the church, shut it, and took possession of the keys. Such resistance the Russian Government could not allow, and accordingly a flying column of troops, headed by a colonel and the chief of the county, started from Siedlec on their missionary expedition, accompanied by the county judge and police. At the approach of the column, the inhabitants of this parish peacefully assembled in the churchyard. The chief of the county (Mr. KOTANIN) ordered them to give up the keys of the church and accept the new order of things. The indomitable and courageous people decidedly refused, after which an order was given to the Cossacks to whip the men into submission. After some resistance, they were ordered to use sabres; but when even this severe means proved unsuccessful, the Cossacks standing aside, the troops gave a forward and fired three times into the unarmed mass, killing five on the spot and wounding severely twenty-eight. The slightly wounded and the balance of the crowd ran in different directions, the Cossacks still pursuing them, and in this the unfortunate people were driven to the fields covered with snow. There the soldiers surrounded them, and by means of the lash tried to force them on separately, one by one, to kiss the cross. This they refused to do, when seventy-five men, and seven children did not escape. One woman got a hundred lashes for her steadfastness, but she was not to have the opportunity of reconciling themselves with the Church, and do not pass into eternity without the Sacrament of Penance.

DEATH OF JOHN HILLSEN HANDY.

The death of this gentleman, who has been the Pére Hyacinthe of America and the Augustine for some years past, occurred on Saturday morning, January 14th, in his new home, Brighton. The late Mr. HANDY was one of the members for Brisbane in the late Parliament, and shortly before the dissolution of the Colonial Ministry was made Crown Prosecutor for the northern districts. He has been in failing health for the last year. He became entirely prostrate about three months ago, and never rallied again. The history of his life is as well known in Victoria and New South Wales as it is in Queensland, therefore a few words suffice to the days he spent in mckoinh and sabea will suffice.

When the news became of his recovery was any longer entertained, he expressed a wish to see Dr. Quinn, Catholic Bishop of Brisbane, wishing to be reconciled to the Catholic Church, from whose communion he fell away many years ago. His lordship, on his arrived at Mr. Handy's bedside he found him in the full enjoyment of his faculties, but sinking fast. The dying man's face beamed with delight on seeing his Lordship. In the bitterness of his sorrow he poured forth his heart at that time (and for the first time, too, for many years), and begged to be forgiven for the scandal he had incurred. He suppliantly besought that it should be made known everywhere he went and wrote and spoke in favor of the Catholic Church, and that he always inwardly believed in her doctrines only although he was many years a minister professing Protestant.

The Bishop and the Rev. James Horan were now him frequently during the last days of that painful illness which was borne as a consolation to his life. On the occasion of each succeeding visit his sorrow was greater than before. Those who saw him on his sick bed (one only to the prayer for) saw a penitent earnestly showing repentance for the manifold sins he had been guilty of, and the fervent desire he had to receive the Sacrament of Penance. Let us hope that his atonement was greater than his fall.

After being strengthened by the Sacraments and prayers of the Church he directed the Bishop's attention to a small letter-bag containing the sacred vestments he used in happier days, observing that the key of it was in the pocket. The Bishop not of reach years ago, lost any one should be induced, through curiosity, to unlock it if his key were at hand.

His Lordship, accompanied by Father HORAN, visited him for the last time on Friday evening, when he said: "My sorrow and my life will be variously interpreted, perhaps by the very same persons who, intensibly, many will excuse my last change; but I don't care what the person may say, or what that person may say about me. Praise and blame are the same in me now. The worst act I ever did was to leave the Catholic Church; my best, to return to her communion. I was well aware at the time that I was doing wrong. I am heartily sorry for my manifold crimes. My failings are now over. My misdeeds are at an end. I grasped at riches; nevertheless, I die poor. I have little to bequeath to any one. My will is little more than a request that your Lordship will give publicity to my reconciliation, and ask the people, when I am gone, to pray for my soul and not to blame me for my wickedness. If I have mislead others, I trust they will forgive and be forgiven. If I could only live this life again, how good, how true, how faithful a soldier would I not be of Jesus Christ! If I feel any trace of sorrow for anything else but for having abandoned my merciful God, it is for not being able to write an apology for my life and sign it 'John Killeen Handy.'"

He died next morning at two o'clock.

The Sisters of Mercy from All Hallows Convent were frequently with him during the last few days. They closed his eyes when he expired. Around his neck they found an old worn out rosary beads, which tale through what channel he received the grace of repentance after his fall. Deceased's brother, who was with him for some years before his death, says that he never parted with this little chaplet, which hung so modestly about his neck. The last suicide he missed was the medallion, in a solemn voice, of the Our Father, Hail Mary, Creed, and an Act of Contrition. He died in the peace of life, being only a shade over forty years. May he rest in peace.

BRISBANE, January 30, 1874.

A. C. H.

The State Convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, for the election of State officers and the transaction of other important business, was held last Thursday evening, at Hibernia Hall. Delegates were present from Sacramento, San José, San Rafael, Napa, Petaluma, Vallejo, Oakland, Marysville, and other interior towns, representing (San Francisco included), twenty-two divisions in all, about five thousand strong.

Mr. Wards was, for the third time, the successful candidate for State Delegate, a compliment not lightly to be appreciated, considering, as the Convention did, of the representative men of the Hibernians, supposed to represent the intelligence of the Order. On the same occasion J. H. Gilmore (for the past year the efficient Vice-President of the State), was elected Secretary; Charles Dillon, State Treasurer; and James F. Meagher (who for the past two years has occupied the position of Secretary to the Board of Directors), was elected County Secretary.

On Monday evening, Mr. C. Hassett (attorney-at-law) was elected General President; John T. Barry (of THE MONITOR) Vice-President; Edward Kelly, Recording Secretary; Richard Harrington, General Secretary; D. J. Delay, General Assistant Secretary; and Daniel Harney, General Treasurer.

On Tuesday evening, Division No. 3 (elected Humphrey Gallagher, President; Thomas M. Connolly, Vice-President; James O'Hanlon, Recording Secretary; Edward Herrick, Financial Secretary (re-elected); and Charles Farrelly, Treasurer (re-elected).

Division No. 4, on Wednesday evening, reelected James Butler, President; Patrick Connolly, Vice-President; P. C. McNulty, Recording Secretary (reelected for the fourth consecutive term); T. Flanagan, Financial Secretary (reelected); Thomas Kennedy, Treasurer (reelected).

Division No. 5, also on Wednesday evening, elected John McGrath, President; J. J. Kelly, Vice-President; P. C. McNulty, Recording Secretary; Patrick Harrington, Financial Secretary (reelected); Wm. Garvey, Treasurer (reelected).

Division No. 6—President, W. Gilleran (reelected); Vice-President, J. B. Hogan (reelected); Recording Secretary, Thomas Flynn (reelected); Financial Secretary, H. McCloskey (reelected); Treasurer, Thomas Keogh (reelected).

D. J. McCallion was elected County Delegate of Sacramento on last Monday evening.

The Legislature.

The bill dividing Solano county has become law.

The Freemen farce and freights bill has been talked to the Senate.

The Senate failed by two votes to pass the Harbor Commissioner bill over the Governor's veto.

The Legislature will adjourn at 12 o'clock on the night of March 31st (Tuesday next), the 120 days allowed by law having then expired.

The bill abolishing the City Hall Commissioners, and giving the management of the structure to the Board of Supervisors, has passed the Assembly. It is believed it will be defeated in the Senate.

A bill to widen Dupont street has passed the Senate, and a bill authorizing the Supervisors to pay $113,000 to the property-holders injured by the Second-street cut.

A bill removing all disabilities from Harry Meiggs has passed both Houses, and will doubtless be signed by the Governor. This is said to be one of the chief desires of Meiggs' life, for he wishes to return to the early field of his triumphs and defeat. May he soon return, and infuse some of his energy into our California merchants.

THE CHURCH OF NOTRE DAME DES VICTOIRES.—We direct the attention of our readers to an announcement of the celebration of Holy Week, in the French Church of our Lady of Victories, which appears in another column. It will be seen that the choir will be reinforced by the most distinguished musical talent at present in the city. The ceremonies, therefore, always so solemn and imposing, will be rendered doubly so by the magnificent vocal powers of those ladies and gentlemen. It is only right and proper that the most precious and rarest gifts of mankind should be availed of for the praise and glory of Almighty God.

THE Supreme Court has decided that the State Board of Equalization is an unconstitutional body, and that the taxes of 1872-3 were, therefore, illegally levied. Those who failed to pay are, consequently, all but rights those who purchased delinquents are out and injured.

The average depth of the ocean from a point fifty miles from San Diego to a point within fifty miles of the Sandwich Islands, is two miles and three-quarters.

THE CURSE OF DRINK.

Now that public attention is directed to the great evils of intemperance, and measures for lessening them are being devised, it may not be out of place for us to say before our readers the following extracts, which will serve to correct any misapprehensions in which Irishmen so closely concerned. All our friends are aware that English writers, and others of a certain class, have misrepresented the Irish character as a race particularly addicted to intemperance. The "Irish Irishman" has been a thousand times ridiculed in prose and verse, and put upon stage as a national character. And, strange to say, it was long before our people could muster spirit and self-respect enough raise anything like a general protest against this atrocious slander. Now, however, truth is making itself manifest, and character of the Irish people is being speedily vindicated, by the revelations of our statistics. The most temperate communities are one of the most cultivated races, and that they are, beyond comparison the most effectual laborers the cause of temperance that can be found anywhere. The following extracts which will show very plainly, indeed, that neither Englishmen nor Americans are in a position to fling the reproach of drunkenness against the Irish:

It is estimated by Professor Levi that $118,000,000 are invested in the brewing and distilling trades throughout the country. The number of public houses in England and Wales is 150,000. The number of drinking saloons in the United States in the trade is about 500,000. The amount of money spent for alcoholic drinks every year exceeds the whole public revenue more than $30,000,000. The Government derives about $60,000,000 a year from duties on intoxicating drink. With these facts before us, it is difficult to understand how great is the political and social influence of such enormous capital, and what an obstruction to the moral progress of society, town and village throughout the country. Neither is it a matter of wonder that the Government of the country should be compelled to take into their hands the control of the traffic, by the judges, magistrates and chaplains of jails to bevies of drunkards. It is estimated that in Great Britain 80 persons are sent to jail every hour for drunkenness. A chaplain of a jail, after thirty years' experience, declared that the majority of criminals traced their own immoral life to drunkenness either in themselves or those of parents. It is stated that the annual cost of twenty-seven men convicted of murder, by the only fossil one in the year, would be had half a million number. The ravages of reformatory schools traceable to drunkenness. Of 1,000 children in the Aberdeenshire of fathers and mothers. There is more sensible progress in the increase of savings banks, houses and boss shops to be found in Ireland than in any other part of the United Kingdom in 1873-4; but into this part of subject we would not now willingly enter. A strong feeling against the vice of intemperance has been created in this country within the last few years, and we are beginning to realize that whilst fortunes are made by brewers and capitalists, people of Ireland are literally poisoned by drunken. The judicial statistics for England and Wales, in connection with the crime and drunk and disorderly persons, are opening man's eyes, because they prove that in the year 1872 the number of drunk and disorderly persons has been greatly increased. That year they were 111,655, and they have been increasing ever since, till in 1873 they were 181,670. In England, at the present moment, there is one house for the sale of drink to every 200 persons, or to every 15 years of age, and one out of every houses is a public house.—London Tablet.

Rev. Father Burke, the Irish Dominican, in his full swing at College Green, Dublin, and Mr. Froude—in "The Spirit in Ireland," page 593—has described the Irish:

"Other more ordinary work, too, was forgotten. Roads were made which led to the sea-coast, but they led to no towns; no quays were dredged; a few of the largest houses was built, with both the and stable, but the rest of the land was in the same building could be entered as a dwelling. The only sign of life was the gaunt squalor sprang up in the life, which, if without beauty, shows in its stability, within and without, that the art of doing good work had been lost, and not as yet met aside. Glimpses show that selves at times, in the transactions of the country, of high spirited aims. As late 1771 the Commons made an attack on the Irish absentees, and declared that if they went to preach and teach that faith which they had received from their glorious apostle. Its continued by saying that the whole spirit of St. Patrick, which had become passive in the Irish character, was playing. At the conclusion of the dinner the choir joined in a hymn of praise to the glorious champion of the faith in the Emerald Isle. Leaving the chapel, they went in procession around the Asylum grounds, the Irish and American flags waving over them. It was a grand and imposing spectacle to behold that immense throng of young patriots beneath the flags of their kindred nations, keeping time to the soul-stirring strains of "St. Patrick's Day," "Wearing of the Green," etc., with as much precision as the best drilled militia of New York or Brooklyn. The day was indeed one for the children, they returned and repaired to the spacious study hall of the Asylum, where the literary and musical entertainment took place. Rev. Father Beraldi, Rev. Father Quinn, Mr. John Mullany, the principal of the school, the assistant teachers, and several friends were present. After some excellent music by the Asylum Band, Rev. Father Caraher spoke in a very impressive manner for a few moments. We felt the effect of his words. They awalled our young hearts with patriotic fervor. We felt proud of the glorious liberties of Ireland, that once happy isle. His words were in the hall, but his thoughts were across the continent, far to the land of his birth—

He thought the isle that gave him birth
The sweetest, happiest land on earth.

Mr. John Norton, the Orator of the Day, next ascended the rostrum, and, with an exuberance of strength and splendor of diction which would have done credit to an alumnus of a more pretentious institution, spoke of the present situation of Ireland, and inquired if the blood of Sarsfield, Wolfe Tone and Lord Edward was dead in vain? "No!" said he, in accents that betokened great earnestness, "on, before the strife between Ireland and England is ended, the Irish green will proudly wave above the British red." At the close of the oration, which lasted forty minutes, there was a pause, as if the audience were retiring from the effects of his overpowering eloquence. "The Rising of the Moon" and the "Shade Van Vaught" were then sung, followed by a speech from the Rev. Mr. Burlingame, who spoke of the condition of Ireland before the arrival of St. Patrick; of the strenuous efforts of the saint to diffuse the light of Christianity on the island, and of the lasting benefits he conferred on his people.

"If success could speak, then Patrick's praise would resound.

Who raised the Irish and their country from the ground.

Alluding to America, he said the American people were not an ungrateful people, and that if the Irish were to struggle again for their liberty, the Americans would march, sword in hand, to the aid of that country whose life blood had been so copiously shed to establish and perpetuate this glorious Republic. The clock having struck twelve, the boys marched, to the music of "Home, Sweet Home," to the refectory, where they did ample justice to a sumptuous repast which awaited them. In the afternoon, General Rosecrans, Colonel O'Byrne, Mr. Mahon and a few ladies visited the Asylum, and were kindly received by Rev. Father Burlingame, and serenaded by the band. The passed the day, a day which it held its grateful remembrance by every boy in the Asylum, no matter on what part of this earth the fickle gale of fortune may waft them; a day, too, which afforded much pleasure to the orphan boys of San Rafael, for I am certain no one enjoyed it more than they. FORTNY KEOU, O. B.

SANTA BARBARA.

[Special Correspondence of THE MONITOR.]

Nothing is more gratifying than to witness honor upon the Irish race with all times and room in the columns of THE MONITOR. I need you a short account of how St. Patrick's Day was celebrated by the students of St. Vincent's College. Morning dawned, and it was such a morning as Southern California only can exhibit. The sun arose once more to course his cloudless path, the air was cool and warm, the birds sang and the rich green verdure; and add to these, it was St. Patrick's Day, a day that brings back the glories of the past, and arouses the fires of patriotism in every Irish heart.

The students, true to the memories of their forefathers, resolved to celebrate the anniversary of our national saint, and did so in a manner worthy of respect and praise from all beholders. At dawn of day they arose and resolving to lay down their miseries to Heaven and Virgil for the space of one day, they, at seven o'clock, they attended Mass after, which they breakfasted and passed into the three divisions, each division commanded as follows: First Division, Captain A. Sharp; Second Division, Captain J. Duff; Third Division, Captain P. Covert. The battalion was formed as Grand Marshal and Mr. Dominic Maguire as orator of the day.

Music was furnished by the well-trained College Band, headed by Brother John Kirby, and Professor Wells. All divisions, divided in splendid uniforms, having in its front the green flag, and headed by its Captain, marched by in good order to the great corridor in front of the College. Here they were met by the officers of the institution, and, after a short review, took possession of a number of carriages provided for the occasion by the committee. After the carriages were drawn into line and the flags unfurled, the band struck up "Patrick's Day," to the accompaniment of which the carriages rolled rapidly away. The procession passed through Santa Barbara, over the great stage way, the music playing at regular intervals. After a delightful drive of several miles the carriages disgorged their loads. The parties were cordially received by Mr. McCaffrey, who ushered them into the large apartment which he has recently built for such occasions. Tables were then spread and covered with sparkling wines and many hands. Everything being now prepared, all sat down to the table. Glasses were filled, toasts were drank, and with the utmost enthusiasm and good feeling higher than the wine in the goblets.

The dinner was dispatched the bell was cleared of the tables, and the music once more broke forth to cheer the youthful hearts around it. Many, many were the toasts drank, Maguire, the orator of the day, was called forth. His speech was brief, but to the point, telling forth in epigrams, and displaying much in a few simple words. When he had concluded the party resumed the other diversions of the day. Songs were sung, foot-races were run, and all the glorious privileges that the holy season of Lent would permit were enjoyed.

Night coming on, the party, after a day of pleasure and enjoyment, prepared for their return to Santa Barbara's halls. The students kindly thanked their whole-souled host, Mr. McCaffrey, for his generosity, and proceeded to the carriages in which to pass the day, and the kindness he had shown them in other ways toward all present. Then the carriages were again brought forth, the different divisions took their respective places on the road, the word to advance was given, and to the lively strains of "Garryowen" the party hurried back to their homes. Thus ended the day, long to be remembered by all present, and every partaker was filled with contentment.

SPECTATOR.

LOS ANGELES.

[From the Daily Star of March 17.]

No 17th of March ever was more lively than yesterday. The day was auspicious throughout, and the sons of Erin in Los Angeles generally participated in their always welcome anniversary feast more hours a great deal than from early dawn to dusky eve. The celebration commenced by the members of the St. Patrick's Benevolent Society and the Irish-American citizens assembling at the Cathedral at about 9 o'clock A. M., when High Mass was celebrated by the Reverend Father O'Brien. After the ceremony the whole party formed, marched to their hall, and under the direction of Chief Marshal Thomas Duff; Third Division, Captain P. Covert. Platoon of Police under command as Grand Marshal, and Mr. Dominic Maguire as orator of the day.

Music was furnished by the well-trained College Band, headed by Brother John Kirby, and Professor Wells. All divisions, divided in splendid uniforms, having in its front the green flag, and headed by its Captain, marched by in good order to the great corridor in front of the College. Here they were met by the officers of the institution, and, after a short review, took possession of a number of carriages provided for the occasion by the committee. After the carriages were drawn into line and the flags unfurled, the band struck up "Patrick's Day," to the accompaniment of which the carriages rolled rapidly away. The procession passed through Santa Barbara, over the great stage way, the music playing at regular intervals. After a delightful drive of several miles the carriages disgorged their loads. The parties were cordially received by Mr. McCaffrey, who ushered them into the large apartment which he has recently built for such occasions. Tables were then spread and covered with sparkling wines and many hands. Everything being now prepared, all sat down to the table. Glasses were filled, toasts were drank, and with the utmost enthusiasm and good feeling higher than the wine in the goblets.

The dinner was dispatched the bell was cleared of the tables, and the music once more broke forth to cheer the youthful hearts around it. Many, many were the toasts drank, Maguire, the orator of the day, was called forth. His speech was brief, but to the point, telling forth in epigrams, and displaying much in a few simple words. When he had concluded the party resumed the other diversions of the day. Songs were sung, foot-races were run, and all the glorious privileges that the holy season of Lent would permit were enjoyed.

Night coming on, the party, after a day of pleasure and enjoyment, prepared for their return to Santa Barbara's halls. The students kindly thanked their whole-souled host, Mr. McCaffrey, for his generosity, and proceeded to the carriages in which to pass the day, and the kindness he had shown them in other ways toward all present. Then the carriages were again brought forth, the different divisions took their respective places on the road, the word to advance was given, and to the lively strains of "Garryowen" the party hurried back to their homes. Thus ended the day, long to be remembered by all present, and every partaker was filled with contentment.

SPECTATOR.

LOS ANGELES.

[From the Daily Star of March 17.]

No 17th of March ever was more lively than yesterday. The day was auspicious throughout, and the sons of Erin in Los Angeles generally participated in their always welcome anniversary feast more hours a great deal than from early dawn to dusky eve. The celebration commenced by the members of the St. Patrick's Benevolent Society and the Irish-American citizens assembling at the Cathedral at about 9 o'clock A. M., when High Mass was celebrated by the Reverend Father O'Brien. After the ceremony the whole party formed, marched to their hall, and under the direction of Chief Marshal Thomas Duff; Third Division, Captain P. Covert. Platoon of Police under command as Grand Marshal, and Mr. Dominic Maguire as orator of the day.

Music was furnished by the well-trained College Band, headed by Brother John Kirby, and Professor Wells. All divisions, divided in splendid uniforms, having in its front the green flag, and headed by its Captain, marched by in good order to the great corridor in front of the College. Here they were met by the officers of the institution, and, after a short review, took possession of a number of carriages provided for the occasion by the committee. After the carriages were drawn into line and the flags unfurled, the band struck up "Patrick's Day," to the accompaniment of which the carriages rolled rapidly away. The procession passed through Santa Barbara, over the great stage way, the music playing at regular intervals. After a delightful drive of several miles the carriages disgorged their loads. The parties were cordially received by Mr. McCaffrey, who ushered them into the large apartment which he has recently built for such occasions. Tables were then spread and covered with sparkling wines and many hands. Everything being now prepared, all sat down to the table. Glasses were filled, toasts were drank, and with the utmost enthusiasm and good feeling higher than the wine in the goblets.

The dinner was dispatched the bell was cleared of the tables, and the music once more broke forth to cheer the youthful hearts around it. Many, many were the toasts drank, Maguire, the orator of the day, was called forth. His speech was brief, but to the point, telling forth in epigrams, and displaying much in a few simple words. When he had concluded the party resumed the other diversions of the day. Songs were sung, foot-races were run, and all the glorious privileges that the holy season of Lent would permit were enjoyed.

Night coming on, the party, after a day of pleasure and enjoyment, prepared for their return to Santa Barbara's halls. The students kindly thanked their whole-souled host, Mr. McCaffrey, for his generosity, and proceeded to the carriages in which to pass the day, and the kindness he had shown them in other ways toward all present. Then the carriages were again brought forth, the different divisions took their respective places on the road, the word to advance was given, and to the lively strains of "Garryowen" the party hurried back to their homes. Thus ended the day, long to be remembered by all present, and every partaker was filled with contentment.

SPECTATOR.

SAINT PATRICK'S DAY CELEBRATIONS IN THE INTERIOR.

(Continued from First Page.)

who were to take part in the public exercises were on the move. The appearance of the

ENMET GUARD

Was the novelty of the day. The glistening of cold steel, and the flashing of the sun's rays from bright bayonets, constituted a rare spectacle for Santa Crusans. The company numbered about twenty-five, and was neatly equipped and uniformed in blue. They were under command of Captain Daniel Williams, and were a credit to their skilled commandant. Though only a few weeks organized, they exhibited wonderful proficiency in carrying their arms, and marched like veterans. Everybody united in commending the Enmet Guard. They were the complement feature of the procession.

At 10 o'clock they assembled at the Skating Rink, together with the band and a large number of citizens, and proceeded to the residence of the pastor, Rev. Father Adam, to complement him on the zeal he had manifested towards the proper observance of the day, as well as to show that they appreciated his efforts in administering to their spiritual wants. After the band played an appropriate air the company were received in a most hospitable manner by the Rev. Fathers Adam and Lynch, both of whom addressed the company in a few well-timed remarks. The company then left the residence of the church, which was decorated in a manner worthy of the day. Over the high altar a beautiful engraving of St. Patrick was placed, encircled on the top by an arch on which was inscribed, in large letters, "Erin go bragh." Below, "Hail to thee, Patron of Erin! Bright Star of the West." And in various parts of the church, on pedestals and other emblems of the dear old isle. The decorations were the work of the severalful Sisters of Holy Cross. They did well as in many other ways helped materially to add to the enjoyment of the day, for which the Catholics of Santa Cruz are a debt of gratitude, and which I hope still be paid on future occasions.

GRAND HIGH MASS

Was celebrated by Rev. Father Lynch, to which the people responded in numbers as we are included in a great measure for the entire celebration, and who, since the short time he has been stationed here, has made himself to the whole community—proving himself worthy of the position he occupies as such a happy and successful translation.

THE ORATION.

Mr. Stephen J. White, the orator of the day, was next introduced. His oration agreeably surprised even his most intimate friends. It was an able, eloquent and polished defense of the Irish people. Mr. White has an excellent delivery, is a good elocutionist, and exhibits no nervousness in his speech. He discoursed with much vigor of expression the charge that the Irish were the enemies of progress, and fearlessly eulogized the persecuted of his countrymen. His oration occupied about half an hour. He was listened to with the most earnest attention, and was frequently interrupted with the most enthusiastic applause.

At the conclusion of the address Miss Fitzgibbon sang the "Bells of Shannon," and the band played a medley of national airs.

This closed the interesting exercises in the Rink. The procession was then reformed and marched up to the Plaza. While passing the building known as the School of the Holy Cross, conducted by the Sisters of Charity, the children assembled which will long be remembered with joy and admiration by all who witnessed it. All the little children attending the school appeared on the balcony draped in white, with green sashes, and as the procession passed by and immediately the sagacity choir of voices commenced to sing the songs of praise and veneration appropriate to the day. The band then played a national air, after which the whole assembly, in a body, accompanied the children in their exile, and with sing to them forever. The greatest of these is charity, which is a prominent trait in the Irish character.

The members of the Society were complimented for the manner in which they conducted the affair, and were exhorted to continue in the same course, for generosity and benefits are and have always been national characteristics. To be a warfarer or a stranger her ever been held sufficient to entitle one to the best of treatment.

ST. PATRICK AND HIS COMPANIONS.

And their successors were never molested in the work of spreading the Christian faith. From the sixth to the tenth century Ireland was the school of Europe. During that time the votaries of science and religion, driven from continental Europe, found refuge and protection there. The same benign spirit still animates the children of Ireland. At the conclusion of the remarks the band briefly continued, the orator proceeded to speak of

IRELAND'S WRONGS.

He pronounced as a misdemeanor of the British Government by the Irish race, before the bar of human and of divine Justice," a parody of which was in touch the same language as the Declaration of American Independence, and a recapitulation of the acts of tyranny which render English rule intolerable, and urged Ireland's people to continued efforts to cast off the galling yoke and resume their original rights of self-government. Every country has a natural right to such a government as shall best best adapted to secure to people all the rights to which they are entitled. The rights of

INVASION AND CONQUEST

Among nations are no impediments as the rights of robbery or burglary among individuals. On the principle of natural right Ireland bases her claims to self-government. Originally Ireland was alone, and no Government claimed jurisdiction over her. She had a right to be let alone; but her soil was invaded and her Government subverted by British usurpation, prompted by the lust for empire. No casus belli was or could be found, and Justice frowned upon the

DESPICABLE PRETEXT FOR DOMINION.

Under pretenses of friendship, and aided by treachery, they obtained a foothold, landing the people to believe that their object was to remedy the evils of a disordered country. After centuries of war, in which bravery, intrigue, rapine and the devouring flames played important parts, they obtained a mastership over a betrayed, impoverished and ruined people.

Treaty are the sources from which is derived England's right to rule Ireland. A title is anything so acquired is null and void in the estimation of all honorable men. But even if Ireland never had been an independent nation and England as one time had rightfully acquired jurisdiction over the country, her rule has been

SO ORIENT AND TYRANNICAL

As to justify public rebellion and a desperate struggle for independence. Here are some condensed details of British tyranny: Her rulers have wantonly butchered large numbers of Irish people; imprisoned and exiled many others; confiscated their lands; decided their social equality, equal rights before the law, and the free exercise of their

TARA'S HARP.

The harp that once through Tara's halls
The soul of music shed,
Now hangs as mute on Tara's walls
As though that soul were dead;
So sings the prince of former days—
So glory's thrill is o'er;
And music that once bore us high
For Erin's pride can soar.

No more for chiefs and ladies bright
The harp of Tara swells;
The chord alone that breaks at night
Its tale of ruin tells.
Thus freedom now so seldom wakes—
The only minds she dives
In whom some high, indignant breaks,
To show that still she lives.

The minstrel-boy in Tara's charm
To blind fate MAY'st thou
Remember not the harm-ams,
And open her to her foes!
And like that harp may he look down—
That lost of all the line—
Who never, never, with a frown,
Or cloudy, gloomy smile,
Be made, poor boy—perhaps again
The chords may yet be strung,
Whose every chord and bar reign
And flash resin our Wrong!
Thus may again thy chords awake
The deafening ears of poor,
And Freedom from her fetters break,
And Erin smile once more.

Respectfully dedicated to that noble and eloquent-prelate, Right Rev. J. F. McHenry, with kind regards of his friend and admirer, W. C. Goodwin.

ADDRESS

Delivered in Stockton on St. Patrick's Day, under the auspices of St. Mary's Catholic Free School, by Hon. Eugene Montgomery.

Mr. President, Rev. Fathers, Ladies and Gentlemen—After listening as we did this morning to the brilliantly eloquent eulogy pronounced by your able and beloved pastor on the life of St. Patrick, I fear that for me to attempt to interest you by anything that I can say on the same subject must be very much like an attempt to relume the fire that has extinguished. However, it is not my fault that you have elected to take the worst wine first and the sour after. The choice is yours, and you must abide by the consequences.

In the course of my remarks I shall not say one word on the subject of Ireland's political misery, and the deep and bitter wrongs which at the hands of her oppressors, then might to come soon appropriate on the last day of St. Patrick, the people of that country shall offer for the searching there will be to remind you of the fact that he is the friend of no party, and not simply of a political that we are here to celebrate. St. Patrick's mission to Ireland was to teach religion, and not politics, to the people; and he accomplished gradually he did more to promote the cause of good government in, Ireland than any other one did, this was mainly by one of the incidental results following in the train of the principle of the religion he taught. I am persuaded that to preach the temporal benefits flowing from religion was not the object of the mission of St. Patrick; whether the religious effect of that mission was the first object or not, simply matters of conjecture that we need not be troubled about.

A. M. D. G.

Hymn for Our Holy Father Pius IX.

Rome is fallen, shrines are trampled,
Heart of Love, there's no hope!
Poor our Father, guard our People,
Save, oh! save our sinking Pope!

Men may rival demons' fury,
Vent their words of truth treason!
"If" will bide what "can" deceive—
Hell shall spend its shafts in vain "
Shake your heads, the dawn is coming,
Heart of Love, in Thee we hope!
Storm be rising, blows our Pascal,
Save, oh! save our sinking Pope!

Nations bend, to-day plucked the purest
From our glorious Pontiff's head!
Thief hath risen and wrought pollution
On the spot where martyrs bled.
Spare nothing, cleanse her waters,
Heart of Love, in Thee we hope!
Guard her pinions, bless her Father,
Save, oh! save our suffering Pope!

From his throne our head was stricken,
Fuller radiance to impart;
Now at height the martyr's ruby
Glistens on his breast-plate bright.
Calm, O brother, look! the victor's helmet,
Heart of Love, in Thee we hope!
Wait, O sister, for the victor's laurel,
Save, oh! save our suffering Pope!

Will my heart of blood, or if it,
Wife, domains—all lordly hall!
Dreams! frail dreams! a child of Pius
In the noblest heart of all.
Would my veins could bleed to right him!
Heart of Love, in Thee we hope!
Roots in resolve. Thou art mighty!
Shine on me in breathless hope!

Whatsoever doubts ye, faith-hearted!
Whatsoever ye ask praise the power!
Whatsoever needed yours be hurried her—
Thine ye Him! Trust never!
Sooner or never, the Lord is faithful,
Heart of Love, in Thee we hope!
He's our Pope, light the darkness,
Save, oh! save our suffering Pope!

Let the storm-fiends rage around her,
Peter's bark shall brave the foam;
Still we sing, and still we hope!
From the sacred hills of Rome.
Apostolical the voice we hear,
Apostolical the hand we grasp,
Sweet the strength, guard our Pontiff,
Save, oh! save our suffering Pope!

Youth and maiden, sire and children,
To the saint's feet repair!
Gather round the throne of Jesus,
Ask your sympathy of prayer!
Unite your hearts in one great longing,
Unite your voices in one cry,
Crowned once more our Pontiff King.

—Heroine of the Sacred Heart, Toronto.

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

A Catholic hall will soon be erected in Liverpool, England. It will cost $150,000, and, when done, it is said, will be easily procured.

The Sisters of the Iwo convents of Mercy in Omaha, St. Aloysius Academy, and St. Patrick's, and all the poor people who apply at them institutions.

Mr. John O'Brien, the well-known and popular friend of Catholic emigrants at St. Paul, Min., is now editor of the North-western Chronicle of that city.

The Catholics of Rock Springs, Mo., have arranged for the purchase of five acres of ground on which to erect a church, school-house and pastoral residence.

St. Peter's school, New York, obtained 14,000 votes, and Public School No. 35, brick and stationery prizes, with eighteen teachers, at an expense of $12,000 per annum. The fund is judged by a school society at 100 cents a vote.

The priests who died of yellow fever in Memphis are to have a fine monument erected over their remains. Five of them lie side by side in Calvary Cemetery, with nothing yet to show when or how they died.

A Michigan paper, the Tyrolleni Sentinel, is candid enough to acknowledge that none, and no original design of those schools, is to be found in connection with the Catholic Church, except a reference to the general benevolence of the Church.

The Rev. Father Keane, of Washington City, lectured for the benefit of St. Ann's Infant Asylum, of that city. His subject was, "A God's poor, the Devil's poor, and poor devils."

The Rev. Father Cellist of St. Paul, Min., announced from the pulpit that he had made arrangements to have the Christian Brothers take charge of the parochial school of that city next fall.

The German Catholics of Washington City are preparing to erect a fine hall, three stories high, on a lot 45 feet by 100, lately purchased. They have issued 600 shares of stock, at $25 each, to commence with. The rent of the shares were taken on the 25th of February.

When the first Pope was in Rome, in daily danger of imprisonment, he wrote, "Christ, therefore, having suffered in the flesh, he you armed also with the same thought, for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin." Herein do Catholics find means to rejoice in their sufferings under Protestant as under pagan persecution.

The National Baptist has just found out what Catholics have known for the last three years. It says: "The Catholic Church has no dissatisfaction relating to the Pope prove to be, as suspected, a myth. Of all the priests of the clergy in existence to authenticate them."

The "Jew of Kenmare" has become a newspaper editor. The Kerry Argus says in a late announcement to that periodical that he says, "Those who have ability and inclination for literary work have never found hindrance in it in a cloistered life." "Even canonized saints have taken a position as editors of papers."

The Right Rev. Bishop of Pittsburg, Pa., has ordered a Mass to be said every Saturday for the repose of the soul of any one who gives one dollar or more to help the congregation of St. James' Church, Pittsburg, Pa., to pay the debt of their church, which was blown down by a storm in 1870.

The New York Freeman's Journal comes to us in mail mourning for the death on the field of battle, of Chevalier Hugh Murray, a native of County Cavan, aged 30 years. He served in the Papal Zouaves in the Pope's army, and was killed in battle fighting in the service of Don Carlos in Spain.

Mr. T. J. Waters, an Irishman, has been appointed by the Governments of Tyrone and Fermanagh Justice of the Peace of Japan. So says the Baltimore Mirror, which adds: "Probably he will be entitled to a pension from the Arctic Circle to Turtle del Fuego."

Mr. Joseph Kreuzer, of the German Catholic congregation of the Sacred Heart Brothers, Ninth street, Baltimore, died on the 4th inst. The firm, in 1866, established the German Catholic Gazette, the issue of a quarterly circulated German Catholic paper in the United States.

The Chicago Catholic Vindicator says: "There is no power on earth that can weaken the vice of intemperance, but there is one that can turn most of the destroying tide from its door, and that power is the Catholic Church. Her unity, power, strength, and the influence of her hierarchy, vest her with a power peculiar to her alone."

Three agencies operate to make a good Catholic—home, the church and the school. Any conflict of authority between these three moulding influences will militate against the youthful mind. The home should be the nursery of emotions; the church and the school the guide of morals and the preceptor of the intellect.

Mr. John Martin made some remarks at the meeting of the Home Rule League on the occasion of his signing the National Roll which alarmed the Irish Times out of the observant attitude it friendly neutrality which it has so long maintained towards the Home Rule movement. Mr. Martin's words were to the effect that he, and those who would sign the roll, desired a friendly settlement of Ireland's quarrel with England, but that, at the same time, should their nation demand it, he and they were ready to maintain Ireland's rights upon the battlefield. This, the Irish Times asserted, was something not far removed from treason, and was calculated to deter loyal Irishmen from joining the movement. Mr. Martin replied by denying that his words could possibly have such an effect, and to make his meaning more clear said, that while wishing to see his country and England reconciled, he was yet willing to stand on the battlefield on Ireland's just cause, if Ireland think fit to make war in vindication of her just right." And, furthermore, he could not see why any Englishman or Irishman would not favor Home Rule because he "regarded the right of his nation as worth fighting for." Mr. Martin thus not only did not retract anything which he said, but put his sentiments in stronger and more plain language, and yet the Irish Times is satisfied. We also are satisfied, and wish much that every Home Ruler in the country were of Mr. Martin's way of thinking.—Dublin Irishman.

The Mouth's Memory of the late lamented Bishop of Cloyne was celebrated in February, 26, with great pomp. There was an extraordinarily large gathering of the clergy for the object of the day and also neighboring dioceses, and no less than nine of the Bishops of Ireland—viz., the Archbishop of Cashel, the Bishops of Limerick, Ross, Waterford, Down and Connor, Dublin, Clonfert, Cork and Kilkenny, and Killaloe. The Bishop of Ross presided at the Requiem High Mass, and an eloquent panegyric on the life and character of the illustrious priest was preached by the archbishop of Cashel. The latter made a passing allusion to the persecution of the Catholic Bishops in Germany, and expressed his firm conviction that, with God's help, they would overcome the high handed opposition that had been offered to the union of the priest and the people of Ireland had enabled them to overcome similar persecution, and to have their rights and liberties obtained their existing liberties, and by that union, and not without it, they would conquer their remaining liberties. He prayed that that union might never be repealed.

The French Assembly has confirmed the election of M. Keiney, a French citizen of Irish extraction, who represents the department of Finisterre in the Republican interest in that body. The Comte de Blois complained, however, that handbills had been circulated during the election representing that the monarchical candidate was an advocate for the restoration of tithes, and all sneaks of that sort, but they only accounted M. Keiney himself from all connection with the circulation of the handbills. A correspondent says the only thing worthy of note that was said during the discussion on the election was that M. Keiney had one thing in common with Marshal MacMahon—he came originally from Ireland." Indeed, it appears that the family went to France at the same time as the MacMahons. This observation was provoked by a curious passage in the report of the Committee to reference to M. Keiney's name, which is no doubt Celtic, having a French termination, but, like its original, it has a Celtic appearance, and is probably enough of Irish origin, he was thoroughly French.

The Home Rule Question.—The English papers are devoting a very considerable share of attention just now to the probable policy of the Home Rulers in the coming session. The Pall Mall Gazette predicts that the result of the deliberations at the forthcoming Conference will be to range the party of the Irish members that follow Mr. Butt as a division of the Liberal opposition. It appears to that paper Mr. Butt's present idea is that as there is no probability of gaining anything from the Conservatives, it might be as well to make the party's stand with the Liberals. This it follows calculate on receiving some measure of help from the latter party, for the Pall Mall says they will have to give assurances of well-disciplined obedience that will satisfy the Liberal whip. But that journal warns the English Liberals of such an alliance in the following words: "English Liberalism has already been damaged by an inconsiderate alliance with Irish Ultramontanism. The mischief is not undone, and its leaders must take care to avoid even the appearance of a yet more damaging association with Irish hostility to the integrity of the Empire."

Roman Catholicism and Freemasonry. The following letter has been addressed to the editor of the Mail, Stornoway, by Rev. Michael Coffe, Catholic Chaplain to her Majesty's forces, Chatham: "Sir,—I have been rather severely criticised in a journal of late condemnation to that effect which you say, 'Those who have ability and inclination for literary work have never found hindrance in it in a cloistered life.' "Even canonized saints have taken a position as editors of papers."

The Right Rev. Bishop of Pittsburg, Pa., has ordered a Mass to be said every Saturday for the repose of the soul of any one who gives one dollar or more to help the congregation of St. James' Church, Pittsburg, Pa., to pay the debt of their church, which was blown down by a storm in 1870.

The New York Freeman's Journal comes to us in mail mourning for the death on the field of battle, of Chevalier Hugh Murray, a native of County Cavan, aged 30 years. He served in the Papal Zouaves in the Pope's army, and was killed in battle fighting in the service of Don Carlos in Spain.

Mr. T. J. Waters, an Irishman, has been appointed by the Governments of Tyrone and Fermanagh Justice of the Peace of Japan. So says the Baltimore Mirror, which adds: "Probably he will be entitled to a pension from the Arctic Circle to Turtle del Fuego."

Mr. Joseph Kreuzer, of the German Catholic congregation of the Sacred Heart Brothers, Ninth street, Baltimore, died on the 4th inst. The firm, in 1866, established the German Catholic Gazette, the issue of a quarterly circulated German Catholic paper in the United States.

The Chicago Catholic Vindicator says: "There is no power on earth that can weaken the vice of intemperance, but there is one that can turn most of the destroying tide from its door, and that power is the Catholic Church. Her unity, power, strength, and the influence of her hierarchy, vest her with a power peculiar to her alone."

Three agencies operate to make a good Catholic—home, the church and the school. Any conflict of authority between these three moulding influences will militate against the youthful mind. The home should be the nursery of emotions; the church and the school the guide of morals and the preceptor of the intellect.

Mr. John Martin made some remarks at the meeting of the Home Rule League on the occasion of his signing the National Roll which alarmed the Irish Times out of the observant attitude of friendly neutrality which it has so long maintained towards the Home Rule movement. Mr. Martin's words were to the effect that he, and those who would sign the roll, desired a friendly settlement of Ireland's quarrel with England, but that, at the same time, should their nation demand it, he and they were ready to maintain Ireland's rights upon the battlefield. This, the Irish Times asserted, was something not far removed from treason, and was calculated to deter loyal Irishmen from joining the movement. Mr. Martin replied by denying that his words could possibly have such an effect, and to make his meaning more clear said, that while wishing to see his country and England reconciled, he was yet willing to stand on the battlefield on Ireland's just cause, if Ireland think fit to make war in vindication of her just right." And, furthermore, he could not see why any Englishman or Irishman would not favor Home Rule because he "regarded the right of his nation as worth fighting for." Mr. Martin thus not only did not retract anything which he said, but put his sentiments in stronger and more plain language, and yet the Irish Times is satisfied. We also are satisfied, and wish much that every Home Ruler in the country were of Mr. Martin's way of thinking.—Dublin Irishman.

The Mouth's Memory of the late lamented Bishop of Cloyne was celebrated in February, 26, with great pomp. There was an extraordinarily large gathering of the clergy for the object of the day and also neighboring dioceses, and no less than nine of the Bishops of Ireland—viz., the Archbishop of Cashel, the Bishops of Limerick, Ross, Waterford, Down and Connor, Dublin, Clonfert, Cork and Kilkenny, and Killaloe. The Bishop of Ross presided at the Requiem High Mass, and an eloquent panegyric on the life and character of the illustrious priest was preached by the archbishop of Cashel. The latter made a passing allusion to the persecution of the Catholic Bishops in Germany, and expressed his firm conviction that, with God's help, they would overcome the high handed opposition that had been offered to the union of the priest and the people of Ireland had enabled them to overcome similar persecution, and to have their rights and liberties obtained their existing liberties, and by that union, and not without it, they would conquer their remaining liberties. He prayed that that union might never be repealed.

The French Assembly has confirmed the election of M. Keiney, a French citizen of Irish extraction, who represents the department of Finisterre in the Republican interest in that body. The Comte de Blois complained, however, that handbills had been circulated during the election representing that the monarchical candidate was an advocate for the restoration of tithes, and all sneaks of that sort, but they only accounted M. Keiney himself from all connection with the circulation of the handbills. A correspondent says the only thing worthy of note that was said during the discussion on the election was that M. Keiney had one thing in common with Marshal MacMahon—he came originally from Ireland." Indeed, it appears that the family went to France at the same time as the MacMahons. This observation was provoked by a curious passage in the report of the Committee to reference to M. Keiney's name, which is no doubt Celtic, having a French termination, but, like its original, it has a Celtic appearance, and is probably enough of Irish origin, he was thoroughly French.

The Home Rule Question.—The English papers are devoting a very considerable share of attention just now to the probable policy of the Home Rulers in the coming session. The Pall Mall Gazette predicts that the result of the deliberations at the forthcoming Conference will be to range the party of the Irish members that follow Mr. Butt as a division of the Liberal opposition. It appears to that paper Mr. Butt's present idea is that as there is no probability of gaining anything from the Conservatives, it might be as well to make the party's stand with the Liberals. This it follows calculate on receiving some measure of help from the latter party, for the Pall Mall says they will have to give assurances of well-disciplined obedience that will satisfy the Liberal whip. But that journal warns the English Liberals of such an alliance in the following words: "English Liberalism has already been damaged by an inconsiderate alliance with Irish Ultramontanism. The mischief is not undone, and its leaders must take care to avoid even the appearance of a yet more damaging association with Irish hostility to the integrity of the Empire."

Roman Catholicism and Freemasonry. The following letter has been addressed to the editor of the Mail, Stornoway, by Rev. Michael Coffe, Catholic Chaplain to her Majesty's forces, Chatham: "Sir,—I have been rather severely criticised in a journal of late for having lately declined to attend a Freemason's funeral. Will you kindly allow me to explain myself in the columns of your paper? The Catholic Church does not allow her clergy to read the burial service over the bodies of those who die out of her communion. On this account I was obliged to decline attending the funeral of the late Armor Sergeant Johnstone, who died on the 25th inst. The fact of the deceased being a Freemason is a Catholic. No Catholic can be a Freemason. The moment he becomes a Freemason he ceases to be a Catholic. I have already given this explanation to the military authorities of the Chatham garrison on my declining to attend the funeral of the late Sergeant Johnstone, and I believe it had been accepted as satisfactory."

A Sacramento letter to the Alta says that Pragmentaries are being made to visit Governor Booth's liquor establishment under his private residence in Oakland by the Temperance Band of Hope." The same correspondent says that "The Governor has refused to attend the funeral of the Legislature, and that the decision of the Supreme Court declaring the Board of Supervisors unconstitutional has caused considerable excitement here, and there are very queer rumors concerning the way in which, if true, are rather remarkable, to say the least, and are said to involve private character."

A meeting of the Bishops of the Province of St. Louis was held at the archiepiscopal residence in that city on the 11th and 12th inst. The principal objects of the delegates were to propose candidates for vacant sees and vicariates and to create new ones. Among the new sees are likely to be Peoria, Ill., Davenport, Iowa, and Kansas City, Mo. Chicago is likely also to be raised to an Archiepiscopal See.

Professor Swinton is at Sacramento, and it is said that the character of the Regents of the University are nothing the better of it. It is to much to expect that Regents of the University should be purer than other State or Federal officials.

Fever and Ague, Chill Fever, etc.

A few months after having commenced the manufacture of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the proprietor began to receive letters from all parts of the Western and Southern States, thanking him for the wonderful praise that it for having promptly cured the writers or their friends of Fever and Ague, or other forms of intermittent or malarious disease. He was repeatedly urged to make known the wonderful virtues of this Discovery in the cure of Ague and kindred diseases. He always replied that it was not intended to "cure all," and should be recommended it to people as a remedy for so many different forms of chronic disease, he feared these who had only Ague would not believe that it was also a sure remedy for the bitterest dregs of the drug. This matter was subsequently so con; they argued that the whole country was full of people who had taken quinine and calomel, at his indifference in the subject. He set and heard from all times open to the call of suffering humanity, by the 40 last, after having received testimonials from hundreds who have been speedily cured, and many of them after quinine and all the usual means had failed, consented to make the matter known.

Newman, Jefferson Co. Kan., Jan. 8, 1873.—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy have done me more good for Chills and Fever, I verily believe, than all the doctors. Please give me your price for a half dozen bottles of each.—Yours truly, M. Short.

The Great Antagonist of Disease.

What is the natural antagonist of disease? It is the vital principle. From the moment that disease is developed in the system, this champion fights the intruder single handed, and unassisted overcomes it. Whilst sole should medicinal science espouse its cause and crush invader? Should it depress and oppose the physical energies of the patient, instead of aiding the disorder, or should it reinforce the vitality of the patient, and thereby assist in ejecting the malcontent? Of course the proper answer to this question must be obvious to every one above the grade of a fool. Then why is it that physicians will do the latter, and broken down invalid who chooses to dose himself with depleting drugs, instead of tonics, invigorants and vitalizers is carried home with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, must be either feeble-minded or deliberately suicidal? Surely nothing short of these could be could induce a person laboring under bodily weakness to resort to anything in the way of drugs. The powerful cause of some drastic purgative in the shape of a cathartic compound, and that is the last thing any sensible preparations of this character should be used. Nothing but a vitalizer, and all who are subject to intermittents, or other diseases originating in the miasmatic districts should at once try this remedy, will do well to strengthen their nerves, and thus ward off the attacks of disease. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a vitalizer, and is recommended by physicians as an invigorant and as a tonic. It is the best of its kind, and is the only vegetable tonic that is considered a most efficient remedy for complaints of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and for debility and nervousness. This fact is conceded by eminent physicians of every school. The testimony to that effect is published in Hostetter's Almanac for 1874.

Representative Luttrell has called a meeting of the California delegation to consult on the results of the tax on whisky already. We wish they would show equal energy in regard to the removal of Collectors from our midst and the prevention of others from coming.

To have the money needlessly spent every year would give substantial comfort to almost every person. To have the money saved by buying HILLINGS' TIPPED boots and shoes would buy each person every year a new pair of shoes.

Subscriptions Received.

Austin (Nev.)—Daniel Murphy ..... $6 00
Eureka (Al.)—James Brennan ..... 6 00
P. Mytherrigan ..... 2 00
Peter Norris ..... 2 00
John Burke ..... 2 00
Mayfield—John Burke ..... 2 00
Holtsville—John Burke ..... 2 00
Arthur Hughes ..... 2 00
Ben Bethel—Mrs. Smith ..... 2 00
Mountain View—D. Murphy ..... 2 00
Pleasanton—John Forster ..... 2 00
Timothy Lyons ..... 2 00
Thomas O'Connor ..... 2 00
Folsom—Thomas Upton ..... 2 00
Sacramento—P. Mahoney ..... 2 00
Mrs. Mary Ann Sun—Thomas Phelan ..... 2 00
Mrs. Mary Ann Sun ..... 2 00
Cheltenham—Mrs. Smith ..... 2 00
Cooper's Ogle—John Cooper ..... 12 00
Cooper's Ogle—Mrs. Mary Ann Parker Deville ..... 2 00
Carmichael (Gibbs—Rev. P. V. Wiegand ..... 4 00
Westervillle—M. Smith ..... 2 00
Pleasant (Ireland)—Mrs. Mary Slattery ..... 2 00
Mrs. Mary Ann Sun—Rev. Father Crowley ..... 2 00
Chip—P. Walsh ..... 2 00
Portland (Oregon)—Mrs. Thomas Meighan ..... 2 00
San Pablo—Thomas Young ..... 2 00
Mrs. Mary Ann Sun—Rev. Father Spellman ..... 2 00
Oakland—Mrs. Mary Ann Sun—Rev. Father Spellman ..... 2 00
San Jose—Rev. Father Spellman ..... 4 00
Mrs. Mary Ann Sun—Rev. Father Spellman ..... 2 00
Chip—P. Walsh ..... 2 00
Downieville—Mrs. Theresa McAleer ..... 2 00
Gilroy—Rev. Father Spellman ..... 4 00
Belmont (Nev.—A. Bradley ..... 2 00
Mrs. Mary Ann Sun—Rev. Father Crowley ..... 2 00
Marysville—D. Slattery ..... 2 00
San Jose—Rev. Father Spellman ..... 4 00
Wadsworth—John McDonald ..... 1 25
Wadsworth—Joseph Meagher ..... 1 25
Wheatland—T. Nugent ..... 2 00

Wholesale Market Report.

Monitor Office, San Francisco,
Thursday, March 26, 1874.

FLOUR—The demand for the past week has continued fair, while for export the buyers has been limited. We quote—Extra at page 12¾, and superfine at page 3, in sks @ 10c bbl.

WHEAT—The market has ruled dull and 1c lower than the past week. At the close the market is quotable at $1 78@1 80 for shipping, and $1 85 for milling @ 100 lbs.

BARLEY—The demand has been very good at better rates. We quote the range for ordinary feed and choice brewing at $1 10@$1 15 @ 100 lbs.

OATS—There was a fair demand, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Quotable at the close at $1 30@$1 75 @ 100 lbs.

RYE—The receipts have been light during the past week, with a good demand. Quotable at the close at $1@$1 07 for ordinary to choice @ 100 lbs.

CORN—Quotable at $1 15@$1 17½ @ 100 lbs.

CORN MEAL—Quotable at $2 75@$3 @ 100 lbs.

BEANS—The following are the jobbing rates: Bayos, $3 25@$3 50; Pinks, $3 75@$4; Blacks, $3 75@$4; Whites, $3; Red large Beans, $3 @ 100 lbs.

POTATOES—Quotable at 75c@$1 @ 100 lbs.

VEGETABLES—Cabbage, $1 @ $2 @ 100 lbs; Onions, from 3 @ 4c @ lb; Turnips, 2c @ lb; Beets, $1 @ 100 lbs; Carrots, $1@$2 @ 100; Mushrooms, 25 @ 35c; Asparagus, 12½@20c @ lb; Rhubarb, 10@12½c; Green Peas, 25c @ lb.

BUTTER—Quotable at 30@32½c @ lb.

POTATOES—The receipts have been free, with a fair demand. We quote at 50c@$1 @ 100 lbs.

EGGS—Quotable at 20c @ box from ranch.

CHEESE—We quote at 15@16c and 14@15c @ lb for new and old.

HAY—Quotable at $17@$20 @ 100 lbs.

STRAW—Quotable at 50c@$1 @ bale.

HONEY—Quotable at 12½@15c @ lb.

HOPS—Are dull at 10@12½c @ lb.

POTATOES—The receipts have been free, with a fair demand. We quote at 50c@$1 @ 100 lbs.

BEANS—Quotable at $2

THE FRANC-TIREUR.

A Tale of the Franco-Prussian War.

CHAPTER LXVI.

A FRIEND IN NEED.

The progress of the Bergen continued to be slow, the wheels getting clogged in the snow, and the obstacles increasing in number as they approached the quarter of the Hotel de Ville. Mike's curiosity had, therefore, abundant subjects of interest, and it never slept.

"Why do we delay now?" asked a faint voice from among the wounded.

"I cannot tell," said Mike, 'what there seems some disturbance." As he spoke the crowd opened, and there emerged from it an officer, evidently of rank, followed by two others of a lower grade. As he observed the indistinct commotion of the cart, he stopped and inquired hastily where he found room for the wounded.

"From Port Negan!" was the reply.

"Are there many cowards of wounded?"

"I should think so. I am one of the dead, but I have no doubt there are many behind."

"What hospital are you bound for?"

The lieutenant mentioned the name.

"I fear," observed the General, "you will find them almost if not quite full. Many wounded have already come in from Asnerrilliers and St. Denis. However, you can only try."

As he spoke there emerged from amid the crowd he had left several figures in the uniform of the National Guard. A moment's glance showed that they were drunk. They came swaying and shouting in the direction of the wagon, evidently quite regardless of the presence of the General.

"Hurrah for Belleville!" said one.

"A bas all accoucheurs who would destroy the children before they are born!" shouted another.

One of them rested up, stuck his arms akimbo, and with a voice he vainly endeavored to render steady he called out, "General Clement Thomas, you have insulted the heroes of Belleville—you, one of the accursed aristocrats who have betrayed France. The glorious revolution is at hand. We shall begin by sweeping out the Prussians. Then—then, Gen. Clement Thomas, the nation will be d. leisure to execute its holy vengeance on such as you."

"Oh!" half groaned the General to one of his companions, "among all the misfortunes of the country these drunken brutes are one of the worst."

"Do you hear, Citizen Clement Thomas?"

"Yes, I hear. You are a pack of scoundrels without discipline and without courage. Your cowardice has been a traitor to the defense of Paris, and one of the first acts of which I shall take attention is to have you out of the army to which you are a disgrace."

A howl rose from among the National Guards. "He has insulted the majesty of the people; he has outraged the heroes of Belleville; down with him!" Fortunately for the General, he was at hand, otherwise the General might have had to answer to regret his unmeasured impudent speech. The Lieutenant interposed, and with the aid of his companions, called his men together and interposed them between the lieutenant and the crowd.

"Now, sir," said the officer, "I am sorry to say, Your poor wounded are of a different kind. Deserving all the help they can get. As for these creatures the only way they can do is to devour each other, as they probably will. By saying, with a rapid step he turned on his heel and disappeared, accompanied by the two men-at-arms. At that, half a dozen contending themselves in the unending anger which no other has.

Much little time elapsed before the crowd had cleared and the Bergen was at liberty to proceed. When they did move it was found that the journey was of some continuance. On arriving at the hospital at which they were destined a crowd of sorts, similar to the one they had left behind, had risen, lined the streets. The officer called a halt and went to the door of the hospital. Full half an hour had elapsed before he returned. Then he said that they must leave on, the hospital was full.

As the announcement was made a faint cry escaped from the lips of a soldier near Mike. Turning, the latter saw a poor wretch whom he had tried to cheer during the journey. Before he saw the faint hope which seemed to keep a semblance of flush in his countenance disappear from his face, leaving it of a deeper livid. "Come, it I had only rest," he moaned.

"Courage, my hearty," said Mike, good naturedly. "Keep up it won't be long."

"No," said the other feebly, "it won't be long," and he let his head fall back in the stupor of insensibility.

"Hello!" cried Mike.

But before the wagon was moving forward, and the noise it made, even with the shuffling efforts of the crowd, drowned his voice. The wagon, however, stopped up again.

"Is there," he called out, "a good Christian who would give a drink of wine or beverage to a dying soldier?"

"Why not a dying man?" said Dr. Friend with each capital lungs," said a cooering voice.

"If you take wine or brandy it will spoil your remarkably fine voice," said another.

"Devotion to the Lord I was never half so sorry for my broken leg as I am now. Dying Christian, on the other kicking yo, I'll sit-ated beans."

"Where will we put him?" said one who began to show that he minded.

"Put him in mine. I'm not just a bother that they're taking to the guard for being drunk, and would be very kinnetl by a bit of fresh air."

Turning to look at the ghastly companion, Mike, with a cry of recoil discouragement, once more scowled.

"Ah, you wicked, cowardly thief by a quarter!"

"It's for yourself!"

"No, no. Look, can't you see that poor fellow?"

"To the groom it was not easy to distinguish objects, and the white face of the blood so distorted by pain as to be a difficulty in seeing the reality of the need. "What then?"

"Here," and the sad voice, "I will trust you with this. Be honest with it, for it is property. And a lover's, too, and it is enveloped in a black sleeve, here presented to Mike's eyes, bruised, broken, and pierced, "and then if there's only for the sake of those who can't go send anxiously."

"I'll do it here, sure, for the love of God!" said Mike, after accepting it from the dying hand. In saying himself upon his knees in the blood-red, the kissing boy, Mike's coat, leg, got a scratch, which produced some pain. Unheeding, he did not make him aware of a moment. "Hoot, my poor lad, I be sad, very sad," and he continued the kissing, meanwhile the liquid and then forced some drops through the half closed teeth. After a little the effects of the stimulant began to be evident, and the lad opened his eyes. "He," he said, "I thought I was dead, but I am in fast better."

"Of course, you are," said Mike, cheerily. "And here's what cured you, mon jeune ami. Try a drink more." A second application of the flask added new life to the aspect of the young patient.

"Where did that come from?" he asked.

"Why, then, if angels dressed in black, I'd say it was one of them. At all events he is from a young lady that's standing there; and now that you're home I'm going to return the title of beauty to her."

"Soldier, I heard your groan," said the sick nurse, "are you badly hurt?"

"Oh, ye-es, indeed-ie-ie, only a broken leg or so."

"A broken leg! Oh, you need refreshment yourself. Take a little. It is for the wounded."

"No, miss; out of the question."

"You had better—it is quite right you should do so! I am accustomed to attending the wounded."

"Accustomed to attending the wounded! Why, then, God knows your pretty face—for pretty it must be if it is like your manners. But I couldn't drink a drop from that little bottle."

"Why so?"

"Well, miss, you see a couple of fellows passing by began to sneer at me, as if when I called for a drink for this poor creature I wanted it for myself. I didn't, miss, I don't say I mightn't like a roll enough, but I wasn't thinking of it, and I wouldn't give it to any one—man, woman or child—to say that I had the idea of taking a sup myself. Please, miss, I'd rather starve outside of my countrymen."

"Your countrymen! You are not a Frenchman?"

"A Frenchman! What put that into your head?"

"Your accent. You are—"

"An Irishman, as sure as you are not."

"That is Irlandais!"

"Why, then, never was exactly right."

"Oh, heavens! I shall faint; you are—you are Monsieur Mahony—Miss Mahony—Mademoiselle, have Miss Mahony's blood, here the soft voice was choked with passionate sobbing.

"And you—oh, the thundering, thick headed fool that I am—and you—why else should you be but a Saxon Brunus! Well, that I shouldn't know you—I declare after that if my own mother didn't know me it is not to be wondered at."

"Oh, Monsieur Mahony—oh, Mike, I am so sorry to find you wounded."

"Don't think twice about that, my dear; there's worse news, or as bad, at all events here."

"Mabel——"

"Well, is not really bad, after all, you know."

"Tell me, tell me what has happened."

"That is a question—no more."

A deep sigh broke from the girl, but there was a touch of relief in it as well as pain.

"He is wounded, perhaps, besides?"

"Oh, no, not much. I was about that moment on him. He laid aside his gun and stooped to rise me when I fell, and then he was helpless. He was wounded in the feeling hurt."

"Ah, thank God! Where is he now?"

Mike's answer would have added to the anguish of the listener, as he spoke, by a voice from behind called "In arrest," the driver ceased his whip, and the fourgon moved forward.

CHAPTER LXVII.

AN ARISTOCRAT.

Nothing whatever now met which cuts the wounded stopped, the officer in charge having left the cart to make some enquiries of the gate. A porter looked through the grating and opened it.

The officer said with some embarrassment, "Is this the Hotel de Mirecourt?"

"Yes," was the reply.

The officer paused for a moment. "I have been directed hither—" then with a jerk he continued, "is it possible this mansion has been converted into an ambulance?"

"It is true."

"Ah!" said the officer with a sigh of relief, "it is really the case. Then I hope you are not full."

"We have a good many, I understand, but I will inquire." And he rang a bell which communicated with the interior.

While this conversation was going on, some of the loungers gathered around the officer and the wounded, the contrast between their gaiety and the sufferings of the latter was too striking. Some of the more compassionate lingered upon the proceeding, though enough of the assembled to keep the crowd in passage by any very thrilling sensation for her.

"Oh! take care," she said, "do you not see how the poor limb hangs down?" as moved by the groan of a soldier she raised in her hands the bandaged leg which hung helplessly over the arms of one of the bearers. Instantly the arms of the bearers, showing him at the same time how to dispose of it with least pain to the sufferer.

"Miss Annette," called the voice of the patient, "only for that wings I'd try to say something nice to you, but it has taken my breath away."

"I am so glad to see you again, Monsieur Mahony. I hope to have an opportunity of visiting you."

The servant in attendance motioned Annette to follow him. They passed through a wide double hall, the ceiling of which was supported by pillars, and as well as Annette could observe, was of the richest kind. Then through a long passage, paneled in a style of gloomy grandeur, to the first floor they stopped at a door which the servant opened. "Enter," he said, and Annette walked in.

The apartment was one of vast size and great height. Among the few articles of ornament, but could not have believed in its existence in a mere dwelling house. Its furnishing had a sort of antique grandeur which impressed Annette's mind considerably; but, even if she had been in the humor to investigate details, there was not much light to do so. In the fireplace were a few logs which had been burned down to low as almost to emit no heat. On the table near it was a solitary candle, which let the room almost in darkness, but threw a light which marked it out strongly upon the figure of a lady who stood by the side of it. She was dressed in a material of neutral tint almost verging on black. It was neither satin nor silk—fashion is essentially plain, with no ornament whatever. It did not need any to assure one at a glance that the wearer was a lady. She seemed to have almost reached sixty years, and her gray hair behind was gathered up under a small lace cap. Her figure was slight like that of a young girl, and being perfectly erect gave her an appearance of height, though in reality she was not tall. Annette was aware that she had entered a storehouse, one of those noble ladies who data their descent from the crusaders, and who, as adherents of the legitimate monarch, had withdrawn in proud retirement from the service of a country in which mad republicans, citizen kings, and play-acting emperors seemed to pass before them like the phantasmagoria of an evil dream. She had, therefore, expected to find a countenance whose haughty lineaments would strike her with awe. On the contrary, the expression that struck her most was sweetness. The light of the candle revealed the traits of the marquise with startling distinctness, and Annette fancied she could see in the large, dark eyes—which, though they had seen much, were less wasted, less traits of one who had suffered with resignation. She was not alone, as Annette had expected to find her. A lady stood before her, his kept in his hand, the lieutenant who had charge of the escort.

"I am obliged to you, sir," she said, in continuation of a conversation of which Annette had not heard the beginning, "for having helped us in our task by bringing those poor wounded men here to-day."

"But Madame la Marquise—" said the lieutenant, with an embarrassed air.

"Pish it!"

"Pish it my duty to inform you of one thing."

"What is that?"

"These men I have brought hither to-day—" and he paused.

"Well, sir?"

"They are all private soldiers."

The marquise observed him with some astonishment.

"Why do you tell me that? What does it matter?"

The lieutenant looked at her with an air partly of relief, partly of astonishment. "Well, Madame la Marquise, I am a republican myself. I had heard you were an aristocrat, a legitimist, and I thought—I thought you would consider mere soldiers canaille—that you would not care to have them under your roof."

"Ah, sir, I am sorry you gentlemen of the republic think that of us. If we were to be republicans enough to think any man's services, or food, or tendance of ours too good for the brave men who fight for France, or should hesitate to seem to have met with."

"Pardon, madame."

"And, sir," she went on, the large short-sighted eyes seeming to kindle as she spoke, "do you know, sir, that I consider any only one—my only child—" and a sob seemed to choke her utterance—"for those canaille whom you think I would despise. He is a simple soldier, bearing a sword in the cause of—"

"Madame, I am humiliated."

"No, sir, I pray do not think yourself so," said the Marquise, her stature passing away, "your are only misinformed."

With a low bow the officer, whose embarrassment was increasing, was about to depart, when the Marquise said, "Let us not part ill friends," and she stretched out her hand. He vehemently kissed it and went out.

"Come hither, child, you have a message for me?" said she to Annette, when she had ended a stream of the discussion, acknowledging whether it be sense or ratine. The lieutenant, the ladies seated herself on her.

"It is a letter from Madame la Superieure to Madame la Marquise."

"Ah, good Sour Victoire, she has been so kind in her help to my poor attempts at an ambulance here. You are one of the nurses at the Convent Hospital?"

"Yes, Madame la Marquise."

"Some further instructions she sends me. She will soon make me as expert as herself. But I cannot read this letter, child. My poor eyes have for a long time been very dull, and lately—oh, lately, petite—why should I be ashamed to say it?—they have grown dimmer with weeping. Ah, little one, is there anybody you love at the war?"

Annette could not forbear a blush, but she answered frankly, "My betrothed, Madame la Marquise."

"God send him safe, child. I—I," and here a psychosis—p, she tried vainly to suppress, interrupted her—"I, lonely woman that I am, have my husband and son in the midst of the terrible conflict. But come, child, this will not do. We must forget ourselves in our task. Come, let us hear what the good Sour Victoire has to say. You will read it for me, n'est ce pas?"

Quickly, Madame."

And Annette opened the letter. As she glanced a little before proceeding something like a cry escaped her lips. The Marquise suddenly caught her hand and looked eagerly into her eyes. "What is it?" Who is he—tell me. It is not bad news. Oh, God have mercy on me! Read, child, read I say," and with a gross she sank upon her knees, with her head upon a chair. "I see word," she cried, lifting her head again, "tell me, is it my husband—my son—which?"

Annette's voice trembled. "Madame, I have hardly read, but I fear it is—I fear it is your son."

"Wfhad—wounded—dead—ah!" she cried with something like a gleam of joy—"a prisoner?"

Annette could not repress a sob. "Madame, he is dead."

A shriek, wild and piercing, rang through the apartment, and the mother sank down on the chair before which she was kneeling. While a shudder passed through her frame, "Oh, merciful God!" she gasped, "why dost Thou not take me away, too?"

(To be Continued.)

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

The following poem is not new, and it may have been read by some of our readers; but on account of its beauty and the fact that it is a favorite with ourselves, we give it a place in our columns:

If any be distressed, and fain would gather
Some precious balm to heal the wounded heart,
Let him repair
To where
Our Father dwells.
There whosoever knows and loves the name,
With humble heart and lips that do not shame
What is in heaven.
Then whosoever knows and loves the name,
With humble heart and lips that do not shame
What is in heaven.
Then whosoever knows and loves the name,
Whose praises Thou, singing
Preadmitting,

The sparrowest was one of vast size and great height. Annette had been shown into a storehouse, one of those noble ladies who data their descent from the crusaders, and who, as adherents of the legitimate monarch, had withdrawn in proud retirement from the service of a country in which mad republicans, citizen kings, and play-acting emperors seemed to pass before them like the phantasmagoria of an evil dream. She had, therefore, expected to find a countenance whose haughty lineaments would strike her with awe. On the contrary, the expression that struck her most was sweetness. The light of the candle revealed the traits of the marquise with startling distinctness, and Annette fancied she could see in the large, dark eyes—which, though they had seen much, were less wasted, less traits of one who had suffered with resignation. She was not alone, as Annette had expected to find her. A lady stood before her, his kept in his hand, the lieutenant who had charge of the escort.

"I am obliged to you, sir," she said, in continuation of a conversation of which Annette had not heard the beginning, "for having helped us in our task by bringing those poor wounded men here to-day."

"But Madame la Marquise—" said the lieutenant, with an embarrassed air.

"Pish it!"

"Pish it my duty to inform you of one thing."

"What is that?"

"These men I have brought hither to-day—" and he paused.

"Well, sir?"

"They are all private soldiers."

The marquise observed him with some astonishment.

"Why do you tell me that? What does it matter?"

The lieutenant looked at her with an air partly of relief, partly of astonishment. "Well, Madame la Marquise, I am a republican myself. I had heard you were an aristocrat, a legitimist, and I thought—I thought you would consider mere soldiers canaille—that you would not care to have them under your roof."

"Ah, sir, I am sorry you gentlemen of the republic think that of us. If we were to be republicans enough to think any man's services, or food, or tendance of ours too good for the brave men who fight for France, we should deserve the hatred we seem to have met with."

"Pardon, madame."

"And, sir," she went on, the large short-sighted eyes seeming to kindle as she spoke, "do you know, sir, that I consider any only one—my only child—" and a sob seemed to choke her utterance—"for those canaille whom you think I would despise. He is a simple soldier, bearing a sword in the cause of—"

"Madame, I am humiliated."

"No, sir, I pray do not think yourself so," said the Marquise, her stature passing away, "your are only misinformed."

With a low bow the officer, whose embarrassment was increasing, was about to depart, when the Marquise said, "Let us not part ill friends," and she stretched out her hand. He vehemently kissed it and went out.

"Come hither, child, you have a message for me?" said she to Annette, when she had ended a stream of the discussion, acknowledging whether it be sense or ratine. The lieutenant, the ladies seated herself on her.

"It is a letter from Madame la Superieure to Madame la Marquise."

"Ah, good Sour Victoire, she has been so kind in her help to my poor attempts at an ambulance here. You are one of the nurses at the Convent Hospital?"

"Yes, Madame la Marquise."

"Some further instructions she sends me. She will soon make me as expert as herself. But I cannot read this letter, child. My poor eyes have for a long time been very dull, and lately—oh, lately, petite—why should I be ashamed to say it?—they have grown dimmer with weeping. Ah, little one, is there anybody you love at the war?"

Annette could not forbear a blush, but she answered frankly, "My betrothed, Madame la Marquise."

"God send him safe, child. I—I," and here a psychosis—p, she tried vainly to suppress, interrupted her—"I, lonely woman that I am, have my husband and son in the midst of the terrible conflict. But come, child, this will not do. We must forget ourselves in our task. Come, let us

ADDRESS

Delivered in Virginia City, Nev., on St. Patrick's Day, by Mr. John Welch.

Mr. President, Fellow countrymen, Ladies and Gentlemen—Time, in its annual revolutions, brings around again this day of festive occasion, this day of all days particularly to Ireland—St. Patrick's Day. What food memories, what pleasant associations does the name awaken! How strong, how lasting is the love of home and fatherland! Irishmen and Irishwomen. Wherever on [illegible] from the plains of Tofu in the East to the land of liberty in the West, from the far Australia to the golden shores of the Pacific, from the torrid to the frigid zone—the exiled sons and daughters of beautiful but unhappy Erin turn their thoughts and direct their gaze to that dear old land whose patron saint we have met here to-day to commemorate.

In fond memory we revisit the scenes of childhood, gambol in the daisy-clad meadows, recall the playmates of our youth, think dreaming that its life's close would be separated, by a strange destiny, thousands of miles from the land that gave us birth. We celebrate this day for a two-fold reason that we may prove to the world at large from the darkness and superstitions of paganism to the glorious light and truths of Christianity, and because we have in these latter years added to the glory of the nationality of Ireland—the hope and aspiration of her sons.

Ireland, long before the birth of Christianity, according to our historians, boasted of a high civilization, though a pagan one, and had attained indeed to a degree of fame. Her stout arms and bright swords of her sons, her love of country, her [illegible] of her system of jurisprudence; for even in those days a code of written laws was enacted for the government of the people by the monarch by which kings and princes paid deference and obedience.

The Druidism laws, which prevailed among the Irish people down to as late a period as the 15th century, are a clear proof of the intellectual development and the sense of equity which, even at that remote time, governed the minds of the nations toward one another. Then also, as now, we were a combative race, for Irish and other historians inform us that they not only preserved the independence of their own country, but carried war into the country of their conquerors.—Imperial Rome, in the plenitude of her power and glory, never once attempted the conquest of Ireland.

It is not my purpose to enter at length into the history of Ireland before the Christian era. I thus glance at it to show that the Irish people had in those days a country that they could call their own, and a high state of civilization, long before the ancestors of our present haughty Anglo-Saxon conquerors existed. Then, they became the bought at pleasure by their Roman conquerors, but on of their own sons and by concories having been in a condition of slavery themselves, accounts for the heroism with which they struggled so fatal to recover them by in latter years obtain control. Our ancestors too, I believe, possessed many less than Britain, and, imitating the example of the Romans, made slaves of their conquered foes. This, perhaps, accounts for the kind and humane treatment meted out to us to-day by the descendants of the people who suffered so much at the hands of their Roman and Irish neighbors. It does my Irish ear good to hear that at some of the English suffered at their hands, though for centuries the suffering has been all on the other side. I will here state that this reference, and any future ones which I make towards the English people, is not intended so much for them as for the English Government. We war not against the English people, but against the English Government, which has robbed and plundered our country and murdered our people.

Saint Patrick, according to the best of authority, was born in France, and, during one of the numerous incursions of the Irish kings to the continent, was taken prisoner and brought to Ireland as a slave. For seven years he patiently but hopefully tended to his master's flocks on the hillsides, praying (as he himself informs us) to the Almighty for the salvation of a speedy return to his native country. From this ignoble condition he effected his escape and made his way to the shores of the King of Youre. By the advice of the bishop he entered college and studied for the priesthood. On the death of Palladius, who preceded him as a MISSIONARY TEACHER TO THE IRISH PEOPLE.

Saint Patrick was appointed by Pope Celestine to succeed him. He was peculiarly fitted for the holy position by the fact of his previous residence in Ireland and his knowledge of the language and customs of the people. Arriving in Ireland in the year 433, he immediately entered on his divine mission, preaching to all classes of the people, from the king to the peasant. Druid priests and warriors beheld with astonishment this stranger in their midst, preaching to them a new and strange doctrine. They gathered around him and listened with surprise and wonder to this divinely inspired man tell them they were worshiping false gods, and that he preached to them the living truth, the word of the true God, the Christian doctrine of salvation. Thousands daily became converts to the Christian faith, and in a short space of time after his advent to the shores of Ireland, the whole population, as a nation, were Christians. Soon the false gods, which the people had been taught to worship and had feared, their temples were leveled to the ground, and on their ruins were erected churches and monasteries to the living God. The rapid conversion of a people from paganism, a people, too, of no ordinary mental capacities, and already proud of their customs and usages, we perceive the hand of an Almighty overruling.

Saint Patrick was but the humble human instrument in His hands to work out His designs and His purposes. He succeeded well, and a grateful Irish people on this and all similar occasions, in the succeeding years after his death, most together to commemorate his memory. After having established numerous monasteries for the spread of the Gospel and the establishing of schools and colleges of learning throughout the country, he died on the 17th of March, A.D. 493, retaining to a venerable age, and having governed the Church which he founded for a period of sixty-one years.

From this period up to the invasion of the Danes, science and learning flourished in the schools of Ireland. Students from all parts of the continent and the British Islands flocked to the universities and professorships which were denied them at home. From her colleges and seminaries went forth her men to all parts of Europe to teach and preach the doctrine of Christianity. But this happy condition of affairs was not to be undisturbed by the pirate Danish vessels. For two hundred years the Danes ravaged our country, and [illegible] the people from all parts of the continent and the British Islands, seeking that freedom and refinement

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK BEGINS APRIL 11.
Sunday—Low Sunday.
1—Monday—Easter Monday.
2—Tuesday—Easter Tuesday.
3—Wednesday—Of the Octave.
4—Thursday—Of the Octave.
5—Friday—Of the Octave.
6—Saturday—Of the Octave.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....APRIL 4, 1874.

FALSE SCIENCE.

San Francisco has quite recently been honored with the presence of a "Professor" who is kind enough to communicate a portion of his vast store of knowledge to the public in lectures which may be attended for the small fee of a dime. This erudite gentleman's name is DENTON, and—with profound humility we confess it—we were not even aware of his existence until we enjoyed the novel sensation of reading a condensed report of one of his discourses. That it was "condensed" is a mercy for which we feel truly thankful, inasmuch as we cannot imagine any literary penance more dreary or repulsive than having to peruse the whole amount of matter which was uttered practically at one time by one who fancies himself a beautiful writer and who is not even content with the character and extent of every force which has acted upon the physical world since this globe of ours was shot off from its "parent sun." If Mr. DENTON were asked how he can establish that the changes, even allowing them to be such, which he professes to understand of years to accomplish, were not brought about in so many hundreds, all the answer he could give is that similar alterations of the earth's surface going on now are progressing at a rate according to which the forces must have occupied that period. This is no answer at all for one who believes in the creative omnipotence of God, who, if it so pleased Him, could make worlds, finished and perfect at once, as they are now; and, as Mr. DENTON and his fellow-laborers in the field of infidelity are newly-arisen assailants of an old creed, it is their duty to prove the old not, if they cannot do it this, it is supreme arrogance on their part to ask mankind to abandon revealed religion for the sake of deductions from a gratuitous assumption which they take up as the foundation of their philosophy.

Yet, after all, the mere question of the antiquity of man—that is, the length of time he has inhabited the earth—is of secondary importance, and whatever way it may be decided, cannot affect the credibility of sacred History. The seeming antagonism between science and revelation on this point has been produced by the self-confident assertions on the other side who seek to establish a chronology of their own for Biblical events, and are just as arrogant in assumption as their irreligious adversaries. The Catholic Church, the mother and protector of true knowledge, condemns both sets of theorists. It is, however, in his version of the origin of man that Mr. DENTON displays his ignorance of the subject of his lectures, and makes statements not borne out by facts; and to these we shall, perhaps, revert at some other time, if our space be not devoted to more important matter.

THE MITCHEL TESTIMONIAL.

It is now some months since we acknowledged in these columns the receipt of one hundred and twenty-five dollars for the JOHN MITCHEL Testimonial Fund, the Committee of which is located in Dublin, Ireland. We then made an appeal for further subscriptions, making some allusions to the many claims which the veteran patriot had upon the sympathies of all true nationalists; but, we regret extremely to be compelled to state the fact, we have since that time received no response whatever. The money in our possession was contributed by two gentlemen whose love for Ireland and devotion to her cause are something more substantial than mere words. Dr. J. P. GRADY, whose purse is always opened at the call of any benevolent or patriotic undertaking, gave one hundred dollars, and the remaining twenty-five were handed to us by a shrinking Irish publican who was heart is bigger than his purse happens to be at the present moment, and whose only real sin so far concealing his name in his consciousness that the amount is not large as he would wish it to be. We would have forwarded the money immediately but that we expected it would be considerably increased. We were imagined that these two gentlemen were the only individuals in San Francisco, or in California, who were willing and able to give practical demonstration of their appreciation of the unflinching and self-sacrificing patriotism of honest JOHN MITCHEL. We are perfectly well aware that there are many, indeed very many, Irishmen in this country who profess the same political sentiments as Mr. MITCHEL, and who are found in protestations of admiration for his unswerving fidelity; and we thought we were not too sanguine in hoping that at least some among them would come forward and contribute according to their means. It is true that Irishmen, Catholic Irishmen especially, have many claims to flout—the maintenance of the institutions necessary for the preservation and propagation of their faith alone imposing a heavy tax upon them—and for our part we should be very sorry to add to their burden. But, we have said, they often expend money for purely national purposes, a portion at least of which might creditably be devoted to a testimonial in the man who has labored so long and so well for the cause of Irish nationality. Although we feel that we have committed an error of judgment in desiring the money to our possession so long, we shall continue the subscription a little longer. We shall certainly forward it on Monday, April 20th, and the Irish, many if any there be, who wish to participate in the good and patriotic object of the fund, will please communicate with us before that date. Whatever we shall have on hand at that time, be it little or much, must be sent on to the Central Committee. We have considerable repugnance to parading before the public the delinquencies of Irish nationalists in this connection before the public, and we are not sure that an apology is not owing to him for so doing; but even greater is our unwillingness that it become a matter of record that San Francisco's quota of the MITCHEL Testimonial Fund was comprised in the contributions of two persons.

THE CITY HALL.

The City Hall Commission has been abolished by the Legislature, more in compliance with an outcry raised by a few capricious faultfinders than with any requirement of justice. But such is very often the way in which what is sarcastically called reform legislation.

We beg leave to direct our readers' attention to the fact, which can be attested by reference to our columns, that we strongly opposed the acceptance of MR. LAVEN's plan for the City Hall at the time when our contemporaries, almost without an exception, were going into raptures over it and expatiating upon its many beauties in a strain of the most fervid eloquence. We deserted distinctly and emphatically that MR. LAVEN's design could not be carried out for under the allotted million and a half, for double that amount, no matter how severe the economy practiced. The folly and illegality of selecting a plan which was certain to cost at least twice as much as the sum voted by the Legislature were repeatedly pointed out by us. But the distinguished architect, who was so anxious to build our City Hall, had put a very nice picture in a prominent store window, and the citizens of San Francisco were captured, or, at least, they were represented by our extremely independent city press as being captured, and that, practically, amounted to the same thing. Whether the splendid illustrations and admiring criticisms with which the daily papers teemed were paid for in gold coin of the United States is a question altogether too delicate to be discussed just at present; but we may remark that MR. LAVEN could very well afford to pay for them as a matter of business speculation.

This costly and extravagant design was accepted with general approval, to all appearance, although there were not half a dozen men in California in the least acquainted with building who would not have declared that it could be produced in brick and mortar for a million and a half of dollars. For this blunder there was not the smallest imaginable excuse, because choice could have been made of a plan fulfilling all the requirements which would not cost more than that amount. The selection was made, however, and the construction of the building was proceeded with. There can be no doubt whatever that the Commissioners did their business carefully and conscientiously. It has not been charged against them that they acted unjustly towards the city in any way, and no imputation has been cast upon their honesty. But they could not perform impossibilities; they could not put up a four-million building for a million and a half. The inevitable thing must be was committed long ago; it was conducted by the public, thanks to the misrepresentations of an Aboard press, and it is now rather late in the day to censure them. Meantime, while the citizens of San Francisco, who have to pay for this magnificent blundering, can amuse themselves by endeavoring to solve the conundrum—What shall we do with our City Hall?

HARD FIGHTING IN SPAIN.

The past week has been rendered noteworthy in Spain by the occurrence of unusually severe fighting around Bilbao. That city, after Madrid, is the most important in the country, has been for some weeks energetically besieged by the Carlists. News of its fall was telegraphed some days ago, but the announcement was at least premature, for the SERRANO flag—we cannot call it anything else—still floats over the fortifications. To save it from the hands of the monarchists all the available troops in Spain were hurried up, and nearly seventy thousand were massed in the vicinity. MORIONES, who declared with much bombast he would raise the siege of the city and disperse the Carlists in the course of a fortnight, got "sick," and was permitted to resign. Marshal SERRANO, President of the "sham republic," then took command, and immediately began a series of fierce assaults upon the Carlist positions. According to the official telegrams forwarded from Madrid, he has beaten his enemies every day with great slaughter; but, strange to say, Bilbao has not been relieved, and the monarchists are bombarding it as actively as ever. The Carlists allege that they have maintained their ground, and have repulsed every attack of their assailants, thereby giving the lie direct to SERRANO's proclamations of victories.

From facts which have transpired it is quite evident that the unadulterated details published in Madrid are not to be relied upon. The Madrid officials themselves acknowledge that Bilbao has not been relieved; that Santander is literally in the hands of the Carlists, and that the republican army that SERRANO has forbidden the publication of say but Government news from the seat of war, and that he has degraded a number of journalists who dared to print news not favorable to his cause. No doubt, it is but a passing spectacle of unusual splendor, turned to for a moment with delight, but in another moment almost forgotten in the rush of more exciting events, but a contest of such magnitude and determination on both sides by any engagement during the Prussian war. Spanish bravery, at all events, has not declined, though Spanish power and Spanish prestige undoubtedly have. The cause of the Carlists is certainly deplorable civil warfare all along been such as to prove that the people have no confidence in the present Government and would much prefer a monarchy. If Carlism is not represented by the will of the people, then, beyond controversy, the cause of DON CARLOS is the cause of freedom in Spain, and inspires a hope that the time may be near when the Irish flag may display the same sympathies with twelve men and eight rifles; now he has an army of not less than seventy thousand men, horse, foot and artillery, all admirably armed and well equipped. This wonderful progress has been entered without any draft or forced levies, or anything other than the spontaneous rising of the peasantry in his behalf.

Men will not voluntarily absent on their homes, risk their lives and shed their blood for a tyrant, or for a Government which would oppress them; and, therefore, it is only fair and reasonable to conclude that the Spaniards would rather have a monarchy with DON CARLOS than a republicanism with SERRANO, or even with the Alfonso over-rated CASTELAR. We, here in America, may not approve of their choice; but, strange to say, we must admit that they are in a better position to judge of the merits of the rival Governments than we are, and that they ought to understand their own interests far more clearly than we can. The contest is one of great magnitude, and the American papers upon the progress of this war in Spain have, we are sorry to say, been prompted more by party prejudice than by consideration for truth. Every rumor that comes from Madrid, or from a republican source, is eagerly caught up and published as veracious, whilst even well-authenticated facts emanating from Carlist authority are denounced without foundation. This is not the proper way to deal with their readers, who, if they feel any interest whatever in Spanish affairs, only want to know the truth.

ST. BRIDGET'S CHURCH FAIR.—A Fair in aid of St. Bridget's Church will be held at Central Hall, corner of Bush and Polk streets, commencing on Thursday next, April 9th, and ending on Monday 20th, ten days in all. Many valuable presents have been made to the Fair—all the tables will be elegantly stocked, and no pains will be spared to make a visit the source of much pleasure. It is to be hoped that the Fair will be well patronized, and that a handsome sum will be noted for the church.

MUSIC RECEIVED.—"The lips that touch liquor shall never touch mine;" temperance song and chorus; words by Sam Booth, music by George T. Evans; M. Gray, publisher. "Parted Forever!" to Miss T. Shirley; poetry by Rev. E. Hopper; music by W. F. Baker; Sherman & Hyde, publishers.

LOS ANGELES is selling ripe strawberries.

STILL ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

The celebration of the national anniversary was taken up this year so enthusiastically, and at so many different points around us, that it has been a matter of no small difficulty for us to do anything like justice to all concerned, or to adequately record our appreciation of the fervent outpourings of faith and nationality which have on one occasion done such honor to the people of the Irish race. Our readers are aware that week before last the editorial page of THE MONITOR was turned over to the service of the celebration; but even to those, much interesting matter was unavoidably excluded. Some of this, such as the Hon. Zach. Montgomery's telling oration in Stockton, and that of Hon. James E. Murphy, at Sacramento, we published last week; and that of Mr. John Welch, at Virginia City, appears in our present issue. The solid conclusions that come from the calm study of the past, the wreaths of song that brighten the eye and stir the heart, the evidence of Christian faith that is pure, and the exhibition of national hope that is undying, are, like the shamrocks, always fresh and always green. Hence, as a matter of having to make an apology, we expect to receive commendation for devoting so much space to this year's celebration of the "Seventeenth of Ireland."

THE IMPOSING PAGEANT

Of a grand national procession has its meaning as well as its attractions. Rightly understood, it is a solemn protest against the wrongs inflicted on our fathers by the British Government, and a pledge to labor manfully for the rights of the Irish nation—a significant expression of pride in Ireland's past and of hope in Ireland's future. The tens of thousands of our countrymen who took in Saturday's columns proudly march through the streets of our cities on St. Patrick's Day, make public profession of their allegiance to the old Faith and their devotion to the old Fatherland. Under this head has not been relieved, and the monarchists are bombarding it as actively as ever. The Carlists allege that they have maintained their ground, and have repulsed every attack of their assailants, thereby giving the lie direct to SERRANO's proclamations of victories.

From facts which have transpired it is quite evident that the unadulterated details published in Madrid are not to be relied upon. The Madrid officials themselves acknowledge that Bilbao has not been relieved; that Santander is literally in the hands of the Carlists, and that the republican army that SERRANO has forbidden the publication of say but Government news from the seat of war, and that he has degraded a number of journalists who dared to print news not favorable to his cause. No doubt, it is but a passing spectacle of unusual splendor, turned to for a moment with delight, but in another moment almost forgotten in the rush of more exciting events, but a contest of such magnitude and determination on both sides by any engagement during the Prussian war. Spanish bravery, at all events, has not declined, though Spanish power and Spanish prestige undoubtedly have. The cause of the Carlists is certainly deplorable civil warfare all along been such as to prove that the people have no confidence in the present Government and would much prefer a monarchy. If Carlism is not represented by the will of the people, then, beyond controversy, the cause of DON CARLOS is the cause of freedom in Spain, and inspires a hope that the time may be near when the Irish flag may display the same sympathies with twelve men and eight rifles; now he has an army of not less than seventy thousand men, horse, foot and artillery, all admirably armed and well equipped. This wonderful progress has been entered without any draft or forced levies, or anything other than the spontaneous rising of the peasantry in his behalf.

Men will not voluntarily absent on their homes, risk their lives and shed their blood for a tyrant, or for a Government which would oppress them; and, therefore, it is only fair and reasonable to conclude that the Spaniards would rather have a monarchy with DON CARLOS than a republicanism with SERRANO, or even with the Alfonso over-rated CASTELAR. We, here in America, may not approve of their choice; but, strange to say, we must admit that they are in a better position to judge of the merits of the rival Governments than we are, and that they ought to understand their own interests far more clearly than we can. The contest is one of great magnitude, and the American papers upon the progress of this war in Spain have, we are sorry to say, been prompted more by party prejudice than by consideration for truth. Every rumor that comes from Madrid, or from a republican source, is eagerly caught up and published as veracious, whilst even well-authenticated facts emanating from Carlist authority are denounced without foundation. This is not the proper way to deal with their readers, who, if they feel any interest whatever in Spanish affairs, only want to know the truth.

ST. BRIDGET'S CHURCH FAIR.—A Fair in aid of St. Bridget's Church will be held at Central Hall, corner of Bush and Polk streets, commencing on Thursday next, April 9th, and ending on Monday 20th, ten days in all. Many valuable presents have been made to the Fair—all the tables will be elegantly stocked, and no pains will be spared to make a visit the source of much pleasure. It is to be hoped that the Fair will be well patronized, and that a handsome sum will be noted for the church.

MUSIC RECEIVED.—"The lips that touch liquor shall never touch mine;" temperance song and chorus; words by Sam Booth, music by George T. Evans; M. Gray, publisher. "Parted Forever!" to Miss T. Shirley; poetry by Rev. E. Hopper; music by W. F. Baker; Sherman & Hyde, publishers.

LOS ANGELES is selling ripe strawberries.

THE CELEBRATION IN VIRGINIA CITY.

Their religious duties as if they had been born in sight of the Celtic Cross. This is a proof that their education has not been neglected. No child of the race ever learned to know Ireland well that did not also learn to venerate her name and prize her for her wealth of faith and her love of freedom. We think, then, that every Irish father whose heart glowed as he participated in the national festival should see that his sons got something of the Irish spirit of their education. It will help to make him a truer man and a better American if he clearly comprehend the dignity which is his as one of a race whose birthright is valor, honor and virtue. To this subject we will return, doing no more for the present than illustrating how elevating is the effect which a real, and not a sham, education is calculated to produce. It has often been our pleasing duty to mark the steady onward march of the students of ST. MARY'S COLLEGE.

We were prepared to find that at any time they could make a satisfactory exhibit of the subjects dealt with in the classroom; but that, in the midst of academic business and without neglecting their studies, they could successfully organize a collegiate celebration in honor of Ireland's Patron Saint, and make that celebration such as the most critical audience would delight to applaud, is, we confess, more than we expected. The honor belongs to the Collegian Literary Society of St. Mary's, and though not all of the members are of Irish origin, all of them lent their best efforts to make the affair a success. And a decided success it was. College hall was agreeably transformed: evergreens assumed all sorts of shapes, a large cross surmounting the flag of the Legion of St. Patrick being the most prominent object. Shamrock, the motto which spanned the platform, was worked in flowers. Enough of Irish and American flags were hung out to satisfy a brigade. Some belong to the College, others were borrowed from the Irish military organizations. The animated faces of the students and their friends who filled the hall completed the pleasing picture. The band struck up, and as the Rev. M. J. T. McCall, took his seat. He explained, in a straightforward fashion, what they were assembled for, and hoped, as he himself was never a public speaker, that his remarks would overlook his shortcomings. The audience evidently regarded him as a business-like and effective chairman, and refused to see any shortcomings in him.

The celebration was, of course, a purely literary one, but was not on that account the least enthusiastic in the city. It consisted of a poem, an oration and a number of essays, all specially dedicated by patriotic declamation, music and song. In the poem, by O'Connell Fitzsch, there was a touch of tenderness and beauty and a vein of humor that rendered the production one of unusual excellence. Mr. Harriett, although only 16 years of age, was an old resident of the city, and highly esteemed by his acquaintances. He filled the position of Supervisor of the Tenth Ward from December, 1871, to December, 1873, where he made himself a record for strict probity. He held positions at various times in our Irish civic and military organizations, and at the time of his death was President of Division No. 1, A. O. H. A solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated for the repose of his soul on St. Patrick's Day morning, and on Monday Wednesday morning, and at half-past 2 o'clock the same afternoon his remains were carried to Lone Mountain Cemetery, followed by the largest funeral procession that has occurred to that city of the dead for many a year. In front of the hearse (which was drawn by four black, pall-draped horses) marched the Shields Guard, with full ranks and reversed arms; on each side marched escorts of hall-bearers, draped in mourning; in rear of the hearse marched the commissioned officers of the Tuird Regiment, their arms and colors draped in mourning, and with the band of the A. O. H. playing a dead march, and after the band marched the Ancient Order of Hibernians to the number of probably five hundred, represented in different parts of the city, and a delegation from Oakland, all in full regalia. Carriages and buggies, containing friends of the deceased, to the number of several hundred, brought up the rear. Much sympathy with the death of Mr. Harriett, was the arrival of his brother from the East, on the delayed steamer Colima, the morning after the decease. May his soul rest in peace.

A. O. H.

Division No. 1 of San Francisco, on Friday evening of last week elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, P. J. Kain; Vice-President, James Hanna; Recording Secretary, T. W. O'Brien; Financial Secretary, Martin Kelly; Treasurer, William McCarthy.

Division No. 2, on Thursday evening elected—For President, W. Simpson, (re-elected); Vice-President, B. McDermott; Recording Secretary, J. Reed; Financial Secretary, J. Killgaliff; Treasurer, M. McMenomy (re-elected).

Division No. 6—For President, H. Monaghan; Vice-President, M. Hogan; Recording Secretary, J. J. Donovan; Financial Secretary, P. Rush; Treasurer, T. Donnelly (re-elected).

Division No. 7—For President, W. Higgins (re-elected); Vice-President, P. Sullivan; Recording Secretary, R. W. McCarthy; Financial Secretary, J. Gillan; Treasurer, J. Callaghan (re-elected).

We gave the names of the officers of the other divisions in our last issue.

The Santa Clara County Divisions of the A. O. H. have re-elected F. H. Murphy County Delegate; and Santa Clara division No. 1, on 23d March, elected John Cotter President; James Walsh, Vice-President; James F. Fitzpatrick, Recording Secretary; James A. Carberry, Financial Secretary; John C. Flynn, Treasurer.

THE CONVENTION.

Grain is looking well at Livermore.

Merced county promises to make a splendid showing this coming harvest.

The crop news from all parts of Yolo county is cheering.

Grain in the vicinity of Antioch, Contra Costa county, shows evidences of the giant growth.

During no past year has the general appearance of the young grain crop, in the vicinity of Stockton, been more encouraging than at the present time.

The Colusa Sun states that the grain now sown will measure without more rain; but a good rain in April will make the largest crop ever seen in the county.

A tremendous land-slide occurred near Woolsey's Flat, Nevada county, a few days ago, when carried away the road leading to Omega, and the whole side of the mountain for nearly a quarter of a mile.

Efforts are making in Santa Barbara for the rebuilding of St. Vincent's College and Orphan Asylum, recently destroyed by fire in that town. Subscriptions have already been received to the amount of $3,370 50, without going outside of the county.

A strict mill is talked of at San Andreas; wherein the Calaveras Citizen grows hopeful, and says a good mill for custom work will produce a wonderful change in old Calaveras. Agriculture is receiving increased attention there, since the good old mining days are waning.

The California Insane Asylum at Stockton is filling up with frightful rapidity. Already during the present month, forty-six patients have been added to the insane list, seven of whom were sent from San Francisco.

The people of Yuba and Sutter counties are unanimously in favor of the speedy construction of the Marysville and Knight's Landing Railroad, and it is expected that a company will soon incorporate, temporarily organize, solicit subscriptions and prepare to inaugurate the enterprise.

There are not more than two years in ten when cattle need protection from cold winter rains in this State, but the past winter was one of them. It is doubtful if a million of dollars will cover the losses of the county in sheep, cattle and sheep, if we include those of California who have cattle interests in Nevada.

Salmon fishing is becoming quite an extensive business at the mouth of Kouge river. There were about 1,600 barrels of salmon shipped from that place last Fall, and great preparations are now being made to catch the Spring run of salmon. F. N. Noroon & Co., of San Francisco, are now employed in putting up a large seining ground; and will employ about fifty men, during the Spring, in catching salmon. Mr. Noroon, of the firm, has been long established a fishery, and will employ many men in fishing.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS.

By a bill which passed the Legislature Rincon Hill property owners are to get damages for the Second-street cut.

The Examiner office was now in the Western Union Telegraph office in the city awaiting the business.

The street railroad is to be opened from Twenty-sixth street to the Ocean House road near the Industrial School.

A number of special officers are to have arrived here on secret service connected with the Revenue Department.

Booth & Co., of this city, have added two new locomotives, weighing thirty tons each, to the rolling stock of the North Pacific Railroad Company.

The Commissioners of Lunacy condemned to the Insane Asylum during the month of March the extraordinary number of twenty-eight persons.

The city jail is overcrowded; 375 persons, including 45 women, were confined there; 213 of the prisoners are under sentence and the remainder are awaiting trial.

The steamer Petaluma, now undergoing extensive repairs, will soon be placed on the route between Sacramento and San Francisco, she is expected to make the trips inside of twenty minutes.

The Gold Hill News says that about three minutes' walk from the main street of that town the ground recently sank, and left a chasm about 100 feet in depth, a mile, whether from an earthquake or some other cause is not known. The ground has been settled and is now a favorite resort.

A compulsory education bill, introduced into the Legislature by Mr. Swift, and supported by Feusey, the Joint Senator from San Mateo and San Francisco, was defeated at an early stage of the session, but was reconsidered and is now a law of the State.

A young artist named William Frederickson, a native of Denmark, committed suicide on the corner of Bush and Battery streets, on Tuesday last, by inhaling chloroform. He was employed in the lithographic establishment of John Martin at Tyler, when he left Monday morning last. He left no note explanatory. There was no more having the cause of his death, and no subject had had an earnest and able advocate in him. The universal esteem and affection in which he was held were amply testified by the unprecedentedly large and respectable cortège that accompanied the remains to the family burial ground. Genial, generous, gentle, it is long indeed ere we will see his like again.—Dublin Nation.

Eighty-nine persons died in this city last week, of whom fifty-two were males and thirty-seven females.

New Advertisements.

OUR LADY OF VICTORIES.

The Office of Holy Week will be celebrated in the Church of Our Lady of Victories, Church of Notre Dame des Victoires, Bush street. The following distinguished members of the choir will assist: Mesdames Bonnet, Bonnet, Bonnet, Bonnet and Mademoiselle Bonnet, Signor Pietro Bon. Mrs. Bonnet will preside at the organ.

IMPORTATION WANTED—OF DAHLIA roots, Gladiolus bulbs, roots of Caladium, Japanese Lilies, Tuberoses, Amaryllis, Tigridias, &c. Also, a large assortment of Seeds, in papers of 5 cents and from 5 to 10 cents each. Also, a large assortment of Flowering Plants, in pots, from 10 cents to 25 cents each. Also, a large assortment of Bedding Plants, in boxes, from 25 cents to 50 cents each. Also, a large assortment of Rose Bushes, from 25 cents to $1 each. Also, a large assortment of Fruit Trees, from 25 cents to $1 each. Also, a large assortment of Grape Vines, from 25 cents to $1 each. Also, a large assortment of Shade Trees, from 25 cents to $1 each. Also, a large assortment of Ornamental Trees, from 25 cents to $1 each. Also, a large assortment of Evergreens, from 25 cents to $1 each. Also, a large assortment of Shrubbery, from 25 cents to $1 each. Also, a large assortment of Vines, from 25 cents to $1 each. Also, a large assortment of Bulbs, from 25 cents to $1 each. Also, a large assortment of Plants, from 25 cents to $1 each. Also, a large assortment of Trees, from 25 cents to $1 each. Also, a large assortment of Shrubs

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

IRELAND.

A German View of Irish Revolutionism.

The leading Catholic and anti-Bismarckian paper of Germany, the Germania, in each of its last issues, reviews the results of the elections to the British Parliament at some length, and expresses its unqualified satisfaction at the secession of the Conservative party to power, after enduring to the obstreperous Whig by Mr. Disraeli, in his Aylesbury speech, on the anomaly of the maintenance of coercion in the ministers retained and on the return of Home Rulers on record, the Germania goes on to say:

In all that Mr. Disraeli has to say with respect to martial-law in Ireland we fully concur; but when he proceeds to designate the Home Rulers as revolutionists and rebels he lays himself open to flat contradiction. The Irish are very little given to revolutionism—less so, in fact, than any other human being; decidedly less than the English. Let us but cite one fact in support of the proposition. Although unhappy Ireland has been oppressed by the English conquerors these seven hundred years, her very life-blood has been sucked out and her self made into an abode of misery; although, owing to the tyrannical laws and administrative measures of an alien government which has no understanding for the faith and the nationality of the people as well as the grossest egotism of the ruling race, unscrupulously seeking its own advantage in all, the impoverishment of the conquered, millions of the fulfilled have been driven away from their beloved home, while those who remain (Rev. Mr. O'Dwyer) mean it, in conclusion the severest censure, when they state in a lecture, all devotional works should be introduced only on the responsibility of the clergy. Mr. Butt, the leader of the Home Rulers, Mr. Mason, Protestant Chaplain, admitted, but at the same time gives the work to Quinn, to understand that he was convinced of the reason, as he had read it for the past twenty years, did that he had told Quinn quite at the back end of his hands. The meeting adopted a resolution embodying the suggestion of Rev. Mr. O'Dwyer, and strongly deprecating the introduction into any discussion of the hateful topic which the Catholic Chaplain had properly characterized as offensive to Catholic feelings and calculated to do serious injuries to the Catholic priesthood.

The Very Irish Government.

The Times are going to do something for Ireland, says the London correspondent of the Dundee Advertiser, which they hope will have a much more beneficial effect on the country than all the home measures of the last Parliament, and which they further hope will cause Ireland to vote Tory at the next election. They intend to get rid of the Coercive Act, against which Mr. Butt and other Home Rulers have been thundering for the last three years. A number of those Americans who fled from Ireland to escape the penalties which they could not be inducted, and who resolved to live in safety at Paris, Ireland will be permitted to return to their homes. The Home Rulers have mainly built their case upon the fact that the freedom enjoyed by Englishmen and Scotchmen is not granted to Irishmen. Mr. Disraeli is to admit the fact—is to make it out that Irishmen have been exceptionally oppressed by Liberal Governments, and especially by the Government just dead; and, by placing Irishmen on the same footing as their fellow-subjects on this side of the Channel, is to dish both Liberals and Home Rulers at the same time. The contemplated stroke, it will be admitted, is skillful enough. Of course it will make no difference that Mr. Disraeli in striking a mean game plays in the teeth of his own professions and those of his party to the past. To be told one week that Ireland is in a state of chronic rebellion, debauched of conscience, and too much petted, and the next that she is merely the innocent victim of Liberal coercion, might sound strange from an ordinary person, but from our present Prime Minister it comes all right enough.

The Irish Elections.

The London Examiner devotes a lengthy article to the result of the Irish elections. It observes that during the late general election Ireland was stirred to the very center, and that it would be idle to deny that she has emphatically asserted the reality of the Home Rule movement. After the overwhelming vote in favor of the movement, it continues, it will be impossible for the Tories to try any longer to gull its readers into the belief that Home Rule is for the present raised from the dead; nor for ever a nation gave forth a clear, unmistakable and deliberate verdict as to the policy that is desired in the future, it was in the Irish ballot vote of February, 1874. In the opinion of the Examiner, the feeling of the Irish people is so strong on this subject that the member who proves untrue to the pledges he has made to the movement will be irretrievably disgraced. The Examiner would wish to see the Home Rulers acting at present on the principle of Lucknow, on the subject of representative power and the disenfranchisement of the English Church.

Causes of Irish Emigration.

Another installment of the census has appeared in the shape of the return for the county of Limerick. The population of Limerick (county) declined, in 1841, to 330,992; in 1851, to 262,122; in 1861, to 217,377; and in 1871, to 191,926. The population of the city has fallen from 55,000, in 1803, to 49,000 in 1871. These figures tell a melancholy story of decay. Out male and one female residing in the county are said to be ambidextrous. The matrimonial table further informs us that a January of 50 is wedded to a May of 25. Of the 78,000 persons in the county whose occupations have been described, upwards of 14,000 are classed as belonging to the "agricultural" and "domestic" classes. In the county of Limerick there are 147,442 Catholics, 4,729 Episcopalian Protestants, 118 Presbyterians, 349 Methodists, and 31 persons of all other denominations. In the city there are 34,858 Catholics, 8,627 Protestant Episcopalians, 316 Presbyterians, 207 Methodists, and 507 of all other denominations. There are only 8 Quakers residing in the whole county, while the House of Jacob is represented in the city by two Jews.

ENGLAND.

Validity of a Bequest to a Convent.

In the Rolls Court, London, on February 24th, before Sir George Jessel, Master of the Rolls, the case of Goldney v. Farland was heard. This was a bill by a trustee to ascertain the validity of a deed by which property had been made over to a convent in Ireland by a young lady who had become a nun. The plaintiff was a gentleman, described as of Warnford Court, in the city of London, one of the trustees of a Mr. Fairland, of Stockwell, deceased, who left his property, including various stocks and foreign securities, to his wife for life, and then to his children, the first defendant, Ellen Fairland, who has executed the deed in question, being his only daughter. Upon the death of her mother in 1866, Miss Fairland became entitled to upward of $1,000, and in January, 1869, she attained the age of twenty-one, and in 1872 she entered the St. Mary's Dominican Convent at Stone, Staffordshire, where she now is, and a deed was executed between her and the two last-named defendants, Mother Patrick Dorrian, D. D., Roman Catholic Bishop of Down and Connor, and two ladies belonging the convent, on the other, as the trustees for the society of religious persons known as St. Mary's Dominican Convent in Belfast, being a community or society associated for the instruction of females, and for the relief of the poor and other charitable purposes; by which deed the property was assigned to a nun and provided for during her life, she made over her interest under her father's will to the trustees, to hold the same in trust for its charitable purposes." The plaintiff, however, thought he might be held responsible for the trust funds, and he now brought a suit praying that the deed might be declared void upon the usual grounds, and sundry charges against Catholicism, from the Pope to the confessional, from the Inquisition to auricular confession, from the Pope to the Catholic ecclesiastics, from the Pope to the Jesuits, and from the Jesuits to the Fenians, were brought forward in support of the allegations with reference to the employment of money for superstitious uses—the "charitable purposes" of the convent including, for instance, offering of Masses for the dead—filled a bill for his own protection, to which the Attorney General was made a defendant. The other trustees of the will were not made parties, nor being a genuine suit was described as of St. Luke's, Middlesex, the other as officer in the Twenty-first Hussars, at present stationed at Lucknow, neither of whom was seconding.

His Honor, during the course of the argument, remarked that the gift was to a society avowedly established for charitable purposes, and surely a person might be religious in England without offending against the law. Father, if it were the conclusion of the plaintiff that trustees were bound to take care of a young woman of twenty-one, he (the bill was intangible, but then was rather a new version of the rights of women." In giving judgment, his Honor said the filing of the bill was simply gather a most unwarrantable proceeding on the part of the plaintiff. He had nothing to do in the matter but to obey the wishes of the lady, who might order her share to be sold out and shared with her, and if she pleased; but, as the plaintiff had chosen to institute a suit which ought never to have been commenced, the bill must be dismissed with costs.

FRANCE.

Candidature of an old Republican—M. Ledru-Rollin.

M. Rouher will do nothing to disturb the public peace. I cannot say so much for a former gladiator of democracy who, despite the eager influence of his wife, is once again going to rush into the political arena. Of late years we many in Ireland who will recollect Ledru-Rollin. I believe in poor Smith O'Brien's time a deputation of Irish patriots was even sent over to interview this French patriot, who, after the French Revolution of 1848, swamped the ethos of Minister of the Interior. Shortly after Ledru-Rollin, coquetting over much with the Socialists and seas of blood, had to fly from France, and during the reign of Napoleon he lived in retirement and in luxury in London; and is said to have been very sparing in his hatred to the warriors of the large retenues which he enjoyed from house property in Paris, which some of the new rulers of the Emperor had rendered exceedingly valuable. For the last two or three years the old agitator has been living between London and Paris, and thirsting for the influence of his wife had prevented him from engaging anew in politics. But this week the Republican committee of Vaucluse has solicited him to become candidate for the vacant seat in the Assembly of that Department, and the busy man has accepted the offer. He, therefore, becomes their guide for the pas of friend and foe, and we best a great deal of him. I should mention that the Paris Radicals receive him with a certain distrust. He is too rich, and epicurean, and selfish for their tastes. M. Ledru-Rollin—I think in Ireland 1847 they used to call him Leather-Rollin—was born in 1805, and has, therefore, nearly attained the Scriptural end of life. His inhabits a luxurious villa at Fontenay-aux-Roses, outside the walls of Paris, which came to him from his grandfather, Nicholas Ledru, a celebrated conjuror of his time, better known under the name of "Comus." Louis XV. made a man of him by his patronage. M. Ledru-Rollin was a handsome man, and even in college born the sobriquet of Bon Apôtre. Lots of good sheer has encouraged those lines of handsome. When the wise and good King Louis Philippe was foolishly banished by the insane Palisses, Ledru-Rollin accepted the Ministry of the Interior, from which M. Duclatel was banished. The first thing encountered by the new occupant—then as advocate—was dinner for himself and his companion. The cook was brought to the table, but declared that no meat was in the house, and that he should have money to provide it. Ledru searched his pockets, but much money was not then going among the aristocrats. "Why, this is the treasury of the secret service money!" said he. "Fled." "And the accountant!" "Also in flight." He then bethought him of the 100 francs he were he recollected seeing shortly before a sum of same pounds and a greenhouse where place were being forced. "Here is dinner ready provided," he exclaimed. "Cook, give me up pheasants and a brace of gammons"—a dish since become famous. He was but 375 days a Minister of the Interior, long enough to drain Duclatel's cellar of 1,226 bottles of splendid wine.—Correspondent of the Irish Times.

Workingmen's Associations.

The Paris Patrie reports a somewhat curious interview as having taken place recently between Mr. Mundella, M. P., and the Archbishop of Paris, Mgr. Guibert. Mr. Mundella, on being presented to the Archbishop, made the following statement: "On the 15th of February last the representatives of the English Workmen's Association for France, Germany, Switzerland and other countries, met the English workingmen to consider the best means of organizing labor. The English workingmen do not interfere as democracy in the same manner as it is regarded in other countries, and if they seek to establish an organization of labor it is always with regard to the law, to religion and to property. The representatives of the French, German and Swiss workmen have submitted a programme in which their action will be found to be clearly stated. The English refused to accept it because the foreigners, basing their action on no compromising for themselves, requested the Englishmen, as an act of politeness, not to reject their plan of association without a decided and unanimous refusal was again given. What is the reason of this repugnance? asked the distinguished Socialists. The leader of the English party, speaking in the name of all his comrades, answered that they feared to compromise their cause by such a step." If a war now to give the slightest indication of assent, he might possibly be that we should to-morrow be your companion in a fresh assassination of an Archbishop and hostages." Such language and such sentiments," observed the Cardinal Archbishop, "do honor to the English workingmen." The statement of Mr. Mundella had a special significance in the fact that in the room in which it was made there were the marble busts of three Archbishops who had fallen victims of assassination.

A Royal Claimant

This week has witnessed the collapse of another claimant. Of the round dozen or score of pretenders to the character of the dauphin, otherwise Louis XVII., one of the most prominent was a boy reputed to be a Silesian clockmaker known as Naundorff. Having made an attempt to gain admission under the reign of Louis Philippe, Naundorff, or, as he called himself, the Duc de Normandie, was at length put off. Fairhead, and eventually settled at Delft in Holland, where his son subsequently proved a thorn in the side of the army. This gentleman, who styles himself Adalbert de Bourbon, has with his sister brought an action in the French Courts against the Comte de Chambord, nominally to recover the private property of the Royal family, but really to advance his claims as a descendant of Louis XVI. It was understood that the object of the suit was rather to obtain recognition than to put forward any serious pretensions to the Royal dignity, and M. Jules Favre, curiously enough, was the advocate employed by the plaintiffs, and would, no doubt, have felt a singular pleasure in unseating the Legitimist Royalty of Comte de Chambord. But into the details of the fantastic story which he told the Court declined to enter, and accepted itself with opposing to it the positive evidence of the dauphin's death furnished by such respectable witnesses as Lasne and Gomin; ridiculing to establish a lofty barrier between the dignity of the Crown and the impostors who seek to appropriate it." The Prince Naundorff" were accordingly cast in their suit and condemned to pay the costs of the trial, but they have had the consolation subsequently to write to the Comte de Chambord proposing a secret compromise—to be made in public only when the latter shall second the throne—according to which the Comte de Chambord was to acknowledge the Prince Adalbert" and the Princess Amélie" as the legitimate children of the Duc de Normandie (Louis XVII.), they ceding to him all the rights to the Crown. One does not exactly see what rights to subscribe; but, as the plaintiff had chosen to institute a suit which ought never to have been commenced, the bill must be dismissed with costs.

GERMANY.

Catholic Meeting.

Two thousand Catholics met on Thursday, February 19, at "Michael's Saloon," Berlin, to reciprocate the vote of sympathy passed by the four thousand Catholics who met at St. James' Hall a fortnight previously, as well as to refuse the statements made at the late gatherings of Protestant fanatics both in London and Berlin. The chair was occupied by Councillor von Kahler, and the meeting was addressed by several of the leading Catholics of Prussia, more particularly by Herrs Hirsel and Majunke, the proprietor and editor of the Germania, the following telegram was sent to Cardinal Antonelli for communication to the Holy Father:—"Grex Catholici Berolinensis Multitudo congregati Sancto Patri reverentiam et obedientiam ac intimam cordibus vovent." (Two thousand Catholic citizens of Berlin, meeting this day, vow reverence and obedience to the Holy Father.) The resolutions, or so-called declarations, adopted by the meeting were as follows:

First.—The Catholics of Germany consider as an unwarrantable presumption the endeavors made by their antagonists to establish a German nation without them.

Second.—Our faithful and irreproachable allegiance to the tenets and teachings of the Catholic Church forms the best guarantee of our persistent loyalty to the emperor and the empire.

Third.—The distinction made by our enemies, either in good or in bad faith, between Catholics and "members of the Ultramontane party," is destitute of foundation, inasmuch as the Catholic Church knows but such members as look upon and revere the Pope as the visible head of the Church, by whom all questions of faith and morals are decided with infallibility.

Fourth.—The endeavors of our antagonists to excite the sympathies of foreign countries against the so-called Ultramontane party is tantamount to unrolling confederates against their own fellow-citizens, which, so far from deserving the gratitude of a patriotic veil, is worthy but of the most determined opposition on the part of every upright-minded German.

Fifth.—Whatever these resolutions were carried unanimously with shouts of "Long live the apostle Hyphæ, and Hoppeher the great Catholic meeting parted with a signal success.—London Universe, February 21.

The Government of Alsace.

I have just attended the sitting of the Parliament, where the deputies of Alsace-Lorraine have brought their motion, in order to obtain the repeal of the martial law, which submits the land to the exceptional measures of the state of siege. As I mentioned in my last letter, the motion, by virtue of that law, sentenced: 1st, to imprison the private houses in the night-time as well as day-time; 2d, to expel the convicts or people who have not satisfied residence in the provinces; 3d, to forbid all publications or meetings which they think likely to raise or keep up disorders. The first speaker who delivered a long and able speech in favor of the motion, was Abbé Joseph Guerber, a short-sighted and rather old man, with thin face and white hair, who studied divinity in Rome, and was superior of the episcopal seminary in Gillisheim, removed from that post by the Bishop in compliance with the express orders of the German Government, and presently chaplain in Hagenau. He supported the motion with very numerous facts, substantiating the deplorable assertion that Alsace-Lorraine is a prey to the most arbitrary and abusive exercise of power. He recalled to the public and unjustifiable action of the General-Vicar, Rapp; the systematical opposition and suppression of Catholic schools and Catholic papers; the compulsory oath to been that the sympathies for Germany had been extinguished in the hearts of the Alsatians by the German Government with to awaken the foreigners, being met with this refusal, so compromising for themselves, requested the Englishmen, as an act of politeness, not to reject their plan of association without a decided and unanimous refusal was again given. What is the reason of this repugnance? asked the distinguished Socialists. The leader of the English party, speaking in the name of all his comrades, answered that they feared to compromise their cause by such a step." If a war now to give the slightest indication of assent, he might possibly be that we should to-morrow be your companion in a fresh assassination of an Archbishop and hostages." Such language and such sentiments," observed the Cardinal Archbishop, "do honor to the English workingmen." The statement of Mr. Mundella had a special significance in the fact that in the room in which it was made there were the marble busts of three Archbishops who had fallen victims of assassination.

A Royal Claimant

This week has witnessed the collapse of another claimant. Of the round dozen or score of pretenders to the character of the dauphin, otherwise Louis XVII., one of the most prominent was a boy reputed to be a Silesian clockmaker known as Naundorff. Having made an attempt to gain admission under the reign of Louis Philippe, Naundorff, or, as he called himself, the Duc de Normandie, was at length put off. Fairhead, and eventually settled at Delft in Holland, where his son subsequently proved a thorn in the side of the army. This gentleman, who styles himself Adalbert de Bourbon, has with his sister brought an action in the French Courts against the Comte de Chambord, nominally to recover the private property of the Royal family, but really to advance his claims as a descendant of Louis XVI. It was understood that the object of the suit was rather to obtain recognition than to put forward any serious pretensions to the Royal dignity, and M. Jules Favre, curiously enough, was the advocate employed by the plaintiffs, and would, no doubt, have felt a singular pleasure in unseating the Legitimist Royalty of Comte de Chambord. But into the details of the fantastic story which he told the Court declined to enter, and accepted itself with opposing to it the positive evidence of the dauphin's death furnished by such respectable witnesses as Lasne and Gomin; ridiculing to establish a lofty barrier between the dignity of the Crown and the impostors who seek to appropriate it." The Prince Naundorff" were accordingly cast in their suit and condemned to pay the costs of the trial, but they have had the consolation subsequently to write to the Comte de Chambord proposing a secret compromise—to be made in public only when the latter shall second the throne—according to which the Comte de Chambord was to acknowledge the Prince Adalbert" and the Princess Amélie" as the legitimate children of the Duc de Normandie (Louis XVII.), they ceding to him all the rights to the Crown. One does not exactly see what rights to subscribe; but, as the plaintiff had chosen to institute a suit which ought never to have been commenced, the bill must be dismissed with costs.

GERMANY.

Catholic Meeting.

Two thousand Catholics met on Thursday, February 19, at "Michael's Saloon," Berlin, to reciprocate the vote of sympathy passed by the four thousand Catholics who met at St. James' Hall a fortnight previously, as well as to refuse the statements made at the late gatherings of Protestant fanatics both in London and Berlin. The chair was occupied by Councillor von Kahler, and the meeting was addressed by several of the leading Catholics of Prussia, more particularly by Herrs Hirsel and Majunke, the proprietor and editor of the Germania, the following telegram was sent to Cardinal Antonelli for communication to the Holy Father:—Grex Catholici Berolinensis Multitudo congregati Sancto Patri reverentiam et obedientiam ac intimam cordibus vovent." (Two thousand Catholic citizens of Berlin, meeting this day, vow reverence and obedience to the Holy Father.) The resolutions, or so-called declarations, adopted by the meeting were as follows:

First.—The Catholics of Germany consider as an unwarrantable presumption the endeavors made by their antagonists to establish a German nation without them.

Second.—Our faithful and irreproachable allegiance to the tenets and teachings of the Catholic Church forms the best guarantee of our persistent loyalty to the emperor and the empire.

Third.—The distinction made by our enemies, either in good or in bad faith, between Catholics and "members of the Ultramontane party," is destitute of foundation, inasmuch as the Catholic Church knows but such members as look upon and revere the Pope as the visible head of the Church, by whom all questions of faith and morals are decided with infallibility.

Fourth.—The endeavors of our antagonists to excite the sympathies of foreign countries against the so-called Ultramontane party is tantamount to unrolling confederates against their own fellow-citizens, which, so far from deserving the gratitude of a patriotic veil, is worthy but of the most determined opposition on the part of every upright-minded German.

Fifth.—Whatever these resolutions were carried unanimously with shouts of "Long live the apostle Hyphæ, and Hoppeher the great Catholic meeting parted with a signal success.—London Universe, February 21.

The Government of Alsace.

I have just attended the sitting of the Parliament, where the deputies of Alsace-Lorraine have brought their motion, in order to obtain the repeal of the martial law, which submits the land to the exceptional measures of the state of siege. As I mentioned in my last letter, the motion, by virtue of that law, sentenced: 1st, to imprison the private houses in the night-time as well as day-time; 2d, to expel the convicts or people who have not satisfied residence in the provinces; 3d, to forbid all publications or meetings which they think likely to raise or keep up disorders. The first speaker who delivered a long and able speech in favor of the motion, was Abbé Joseph Guerber, a short-sighted and rather old man, with thin face and white hair, who studied divinity in Rome, and was superior of the episcopal seminary in Gillisheim, removed from that post by the Bishop in compliance with the express orders of the German Government, and presently chaplain in Hagenau. He supported the motion with very numerous facts, substantiating the deplorable assertion that Alsace-Lorraine is a prey to the most arbitrary and abusive exercise of power. He recalled to the public and unjustifiable action of the General-Vicar, Rapp; the systematical opposition and suppression of Catholic schools and Catholic papers; the compulsory oath to

EDUCATIONAL.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Brothers
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.
Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, A. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.
The Commercial Course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good English education in the shortest possible time.
While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught, Vocal and Instrumental music, drawing and modern languages, will form extra charges. The two sessions of the scholastic year begin respectively on the 1st of August and the 1st of January.
For further information address the Secretary.
Rev. FATHER ANTHONY, or Very Rev. F. BENNEBERY, Superior.

NOTRE DAME ACADEMY,
MISSION DOLORES, SAN FRANCISCO.
THIS ACADEMY IS A BRANCH OF THE Notre Dame Convent of Benicia, and is under the direction of the Sisters of the Holy Cross.
The system of instruction embraces the most approved methods of thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.
TERMS:
(Invariably half yearly in advance).
Board, Tuition, and Washing, per session.....$150 00
Use of piano, use of instrument, per month.....1 50
Guitar, per month.....1 50
No extra charge for French, Fancy Needlework, etc.
The academic year of ten months and a half commences August 16th, and terminates on the last Thursday in June.
For further particulars apply to
SISTER IN CHARITY,
Sacramento Street.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,
SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.
THE SEVENTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the first Monday in August, 1874.
The object of the institution is to give a good English, Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical education, at the lowest possible cost—a want long felt in California, and thereby bring its advantages within the reach of all.
TERMS.
Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....$10 00
Board, tuition, washing and wearing, per session.....200 00
Music, French and German form extra charges. Those who spend vacation at the College will be charged $30.
Payments are to be made semi-annually in advance. Parents will pay for medical attendance, and supply toilet articles, etc.
No deduction will be allowed by the College for the time of necessary sickness, a sufficient sum must be deposited.
For further particulars apply to
REV. J. C. O'KEEFE, O. S. F.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,
LOS ANGELES, CAL.
DEGREES CONFERRED
Rev. JAMES McGILL, C. M.
1686-tf President.

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA.....CALIFORNIA
Under the management of the Fathers of the Society of Jesus.
THE SANTA CLARA COLLEGE WAS FOUNDED in 1851, and in 1855 was incorporated with privileges of a University. Diplomas are conferred upon graduates in the usual form.
The College buildings are large and commodious, and the grounds are extensive, with ample room for healthful exercise.
The Lectures, Examinations, Text-books, Apparatus, and valuable collections in Natural History, Geography, Photography and Surveying, are the same as taught in a thoroughly fitted out College.
The Scholastic Year, which is divided into two sessions of five months each, commences in August, and closes towards the beginning of June.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually, in advance)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once.....$ 10
Board, Lodging, Tuition, Washing, and Mending of Linen, School Stationery, Use of Library, Attendance and Medicine, Baths, Per Quarter, in advance.....$ 75
Modern Languages, Drawing and Music form extra charges. For Clothing, Books, Pocket money and Incidentals, the parents will be charged.
For further particulars, apply to
REV. J. BOTTERO, S. J., Rector.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
MARYSVILLE.....CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION IS INCORPORATED with the privileges of a College, and is conducted by the Sisters of Notre Dame.
Board, Tuition, Washing, Use of Bedding, Use of Library, Use of Instruments.....$150 00
Music, with use of Instrument.....40 00
No charge for the French, Spanish and German languages, Drawing and Painting.
Vocal Music.....$ 5 00
Fancy Needle-work, etc.
The first term of the eighteenth annual session will commence August 16, 1873.
Pupils will be received in their advanced or Preparatory Classes at the opening of the session.
For further particulars apply to
SISTER SUPERIOR.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
BENICIA.....CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED BY the Sisters of the Holy Cross, and is situated in healthy and accessible locality. The grounds are extensive, and afford ample room for exercise. The house recently bought in the most approved style of architecture, and the system of education will be conducted, but, for the sake of convenience, the Academic year will be divided into two sessions of five months each.
The scholastic year, comprising in one session, on the 16th of August, and ends about the last week in June. Pupils will be received at any time during the session, except in case of sickness, or when the Superior shall deem it advisable. In any case, the fee is to receive from date of admission.
TERMS.
Per session (payable half-yearly in advance)
Board, Tuition.....$150 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged.....$ 30
Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.
Washing is done at the rate of $12 per dozen.
Parents are requested to be made with a proper outfit for their children, a list of which will be furnished on application.
Letters of inquiry may be addressed to
SISTER SUPERIOR.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.
YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.
THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORporated with the privileges of a College, is conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy Cross.
The system of education embraces the most approved methods of thorough English education, and the branches of a thorough education.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually, in advance)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once.....$ 10
Board, Lodging, Tuition, Washing and Mending of Linen, School Stationery, Use of Library, Attendance and Medicine, Baths, Per Quarter, in advance.....$ 75
Modern Languages, Drawing and Music form extra charges. For Clothing, Books, Pocket money and Incidentals, the parents will be charged.
For further particulars, apply to
REV. V. VASSEL, S. J., Rector.

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The children educated in the Catholic Institutions of Boston owe their city from the sum of $125,625 a year.

Bishop Neon, of Northport, Maine, has secured a lot for a convent in that town.

Bishop Lynch, of Toronto, has been spending the winter in Rome, and left Rome on the 6th of March.

The Catholic Hospital, New York, being in need of insufficient accommodation, a handsome new building is now being erected for that purpose.

Bishop Neon is planning the erection of a school in Portland, Maine, to cost $30,000. The building is to be of brick, with 70 style of architecture to the edifice.

The Right Rev. William Murphy, of Rutland, Vt., has raised to the dignity of the priesthood the Very Rev. Michael Hoyt. Bishop of Monterey, who is assigned to the duties of assistant to the Cathedral at Burlington.

The selection is that there was but one Catholic church in Washington City when Father Hoyt was elected President of the United States. Perhaps there were but there are not, and five more

Father Hoyt has read in the churches of Long-Island Archbishop Meaning, he declared that he was ashamed to be a priest every one who took part in Russell's meeting of sympathy with Parnell's persecution in Ireland.

The Liberty Reflector says that Right Rev. Mr. Conroy was confined to his bed with a severe cold, which settled on his lungs, pneumonia, and although he has not been considered in danger

Rev. Mr. (N. R.) Catholic priest an infidel sheet called the Very Rev. Father of Limerick, the author of "Alley and other works. He was for a zealous worker in the Dublin

Sisters of Fort Hall Agency, Idaho Ter., have addressed the President for aid of liberty of conscience. They have long been accustomed to their missions, which schools are now removed from them, and they understand those that the President

The Ecclesiastic Library Association of St. Mary's, open their course of lectures 16th and 17th of April, by Rev. Mr. Brosnan, Hon. William Parsons, a Catholic, whose fine oratorical powers, and pastoration, Stacy Pinto is the large. Tuesday at the Academy of Music, Rev. Mr. Hecker, Rev. Father Hewit, Rev. Father Deshon, all of the same, Philadelphia, Pa., giving name of the paper.

Forthcoming

DURYEA'S
SATIN GLOSS STARCH,
AND
DURYEA'S
IMPROVED CORN STARCH,
ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

Use It Once and You Will Use no Other.

THESE BRANDS HAVE SUCCEEDED in rolling up such an entire popularity, and developing such a steadily increasing demand, as to prove conclusively that they possess merit of the highest order, and in its fullest conformity. Much of the success of these brands is due to the fact that they are always perfect in quality, and that the consumer may rely upon forever sameness, readily perceived by purchasers, accustomed to the use of these brands, and impossible to be detected by merchants—a color and desirable for one's linen, but to the public at large, who are not conversant with the fact.

They pledge themselves to the public to give a better article than can be had for the same money, and they will keep their word. Their Satin Gloss Starch will secure linen as no other starch can, and will impart a beautiful gloss and finish to the fabric, which no other starch can produce.

Their Improved Corn Starch is unsurpassed for laundry purposes, and is the best for all kinds of cooking. Many of the most noted cooks in the country have given the preference to this starch.—a color and desirable for one's linen, but to the public at large, who are not conversant with the fact.

They pledge themselves to the public to give a better article than can be had for the same money, and they will keep their word. Their Satin Gloss Starch will secure linen as no other starch can, and will impart a beautiful gloss and finish to the fabric, which no other starch can produce.

Their Improved Corn Starch is unsurpassed for laundry purposes, and is the best for all kinds of cooking. Many of the most noted cooks in the country have given the preference to this starch.

Ask your Grocer for DURYEA'S STARCH, and take no other. Sold by all Grocers.

DURYEA'S STARCH WORKS,
Greenpoint, L. I.

"THE WHOLE OF IT."

Mary Jane, as very queer,
Used to steadfast a will,
Her self-will and lower ink bear,
Left her in the lurch,
She was almost dead,
At the end of the week, was done,
Her mind was quite sick and bread.

Father, though stern and cold,
Was not a cruel man,
Nor a great oppressor,
He'd a very kind heart,
Only a jug of whiskey,
And to have seen down the wood
Apart from Mother Nature's—
Mary Jane, as very queer,
Used to steal his waistcoat buttons.

Here's the reason the miner drew
Up his petition for divorce,
Because his pocket knife,
Was the only cause of grief,
Which, he pleaded then his,
Was the only cause of grief,
Which, he pleaded then his,
Was the only cause of grief.

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

Brother Arnold, of the Christian Brothers at Toronto, is projecting a grand international bazaar in aid of the De la Salle Institute in that city.

The Viscount St. Joseph, eldest son of the Earl of Ashburnham, has become a convert to the Catholic Church; so has Lady Beryl, daughter of the Earl of Abingdon.

The German Catholics of the central portion of Clayton county are to build a church at Minster, Iowa. Bishop Hennessy, of Dubuque, is to aid them in carrying forward the enterprise.

The second annual report of the Catholic Union of New York shows the Treasurer's receipts for the fiscal year to have been $16,613.19; expenditures, $7,464.77; balance on hand at date of the Bank, $9,147.96.

His physicians have fastened Right Rev. Bishop McFarland of Hartford, Ct., off to Florida for the benefit of his health, and Rev. Father Reed of the same place with him.

On the 6th inst., in the Church of the Holy Redeemer, the Rev. Father Lorkin, pastor, received Louis Gordon and Isidor Cohen, Jewish converts, and received at Vicar, Rome, into the Church.

The Boston Globe says that Mr. Joseph Providence Abeddick intends to leave a considerable amount to Catholic charities, and that one-half the funds of the Society is contributed by Catholics.

The Catholic University of Georgia is, we feel, a grand success. A splendid tract of land, studded with cool woods, has been donated by the city of Macon, and $50,000 downtown of $500,000 has been guaranteed.

That feminine monstrosity, Edith O'Gorman, was exposed by Beverly Cochrane sometime in Louisville, Ky., lately; that she had to be led from the stage on which she was to hold forth. The specimen is as frail as she is fraudulent.

Hon. Joseph Keaney, of Troy, N. Y., was formally received into the Catholic Church, Rev. Father Carroll, of St. Mary's, administering the sacrament of baptism. He was sponsor in the reception of the good Knight of Charity.

Father Lange, of St. Patrick's church, Louisville, Ky., has been visiting the colonies of that city with the view of providing on the properties to remove the churches where are not uncommon in such places, and it is believed that he has made quite success.

The private Secretary of he Eminence Cardinal Antonelli, is dead. His name was Monsig. Bedini, and he had been in the service of the Cardinal for more than twenty years. He was a great linguist, and a pleasant, affable priest.

Rev. E. M. Smith, of the Congregation of the Missions, has been identified with the work of St. Peter's, in Brooklyn; has been transferred to the Church of La Salle, Ill., belonging to the priests of the Mission of Rev. P. V. Byrne, C. M., succeeds him.

An immense temperance demonstration, under the auspices of the Catholics of Elmira, N. Y., on the 18th March, at the Academy of Music, which was crowded to suffocation. The Bishop, his Vicar-General and most of the clergy of the city attended.

Father Lange's new church at Greenpoint, L. I., is to be completed that divine service was held in the basement on the 6th inst. Rev. Eugene Kennedy, of Brooklyn, and Mass, and the Bishop preached an effective sermon. The people were re-joiced at the dawning of their pastor.

The Most Rev. Archbishop of New Orleans has received from the Sovereign Pontiff the confirmation of establishing successfully in his cathedral a Confraternity of our Lady of Lourdes, and of affiliating it to the Arch Confraternity of Lourdes, and thereby gaining the indulgences.

The Archbishop of Tuam concludes his Lenten Pastoral with the following touching words: "Should the mission on Good Friday will be in Irish, and the public instructions should, for the benefit of the people, be dispensed in our own as much as least as in the English language, wherever necessary."

The will of Daniel Maughan, of New York, contains the following bequests: St. Thomas's Home, $5000; St. Female Orphan Asylum, $300; Little Sisters of the Poor, $300; St. Vincent de Paul Society of the Annunciation's church, $100; Dorcas Society of St. Augustine's church, $100.

William Duggan, of Philadelphia, lately made his will, in the following legacies, payable after the death of his wife: To the Catholic Orphan Asylum of Philadelphia, $5,000; St. Peter's Hospital, $3,000; Sisters of the Convent of Mercy, $1,000; erection of the Cathedral in Philadelphia, $1,000; erection of Paul of St. Patrick's church, $500.

In the wild valley of the Black Forest, Germany, stood a lonely cabin, and was known as the Abbey of Saint Blaise. In the nearby town preserved tapestries made by Saints Catherine and Maria Antoinette. The other buildings were costly and superb. It was a beautiful and rather wild. It is destroyed by fire. The loss of property must be enormous, as the abbey had for centuries been the resort of wealthy pilgrims, and was the shrine of pilgrimages from all parts of Europe.

In vain is the cemetatory to the many friends of the lamented Dean O'Kane to learn that the Holy Father, now hearing the dangerous illness of this distinguished ecclesiastic, was graciously pleased to direct that his apostolic benediction should be transmitted to him through the telegraph. A message of condolence and prayer was at the same time forwarded on the part of the Holy See. Rev. Monsignor Kirby, Rector of the Irish College, Rome.

The feast of St. Thomas Aquinas, the great Doctor of the Dominican Order, was celebrated on Saturday, March 10, in the old church in Dublin. At the conclusion of the High Mass, at which his Grace Archbishop Leahy officiated, the relic of the saint was presented by the Rev. Thomas Burke, O.P., who briefly narrated the eventful life of the great Doctor of the Church, and dilligently eulogized his learning, virtue and humility.

Rev. Thomas was consecrated Bishop of Memphis and Vicar Apostolic of Basin Sta., Memphis, Upper Canada, by the Most Rev. Patrick Lynch, of Toronto, at the church of Notre Dame, Montreal, assisted by Bishop Larocheoul, formerly of Toronto, and now a Dioscese church and the Bishop of Nevers. The Archbishop of Tours and of Bruges, the Bishop of Quebec and the Abbes of the Premonstratensian order.

The ladies connected with the Cathedral in Nashville, Tennessee, met together on Monday evening, February 26th, and received 16 cts income work for the orphans' fair immediately. We may state here, for the information of the many friends of the Memorial Seminary, that the annual sermon of St. Mary's Orphan Asylum is from Sunday to Sunday, and that the only means of support is through private charity. The sixty little ones are hale, hearty and well

The Richmond (Va.) Dispatch says: "The venerable Bishop Wadon of Wheeling, W. Va., who was the first Bishop of Richmond in the Catholic Church, and left this city about twenty-five years since, occupied the pulpit at St. Peter's cathedral on Sunday, March 1st. His appearance was very striking, and he was looked upon with feelings of the deepest interest by all present. His unwearying affection for his Southern children of the Church, and for all the Southern people, all knew and gratefully remembered."

On Sunday morning, March 16th, the following gentlemen were ordained to the priesthood by the Right Rev. Bishop Wood, of Philadelphia, in the chapel of St. Charles' Seminary, in the presence of a large number of reverend clergy and of a large attendance of laity: Revs. John Donnelly, Francis McManus, John Dolan, John Wagner and Eugene McShane, of St. Charles' Seminary; upon Revs. James T. O'Reilly, Henry J. A. Fleming and Daniel D. Regan, of the Augustinian College, at Villanova; and upon Revs. Peter Aloysius Callaghan and Francis Hannegan, of Mt. St. Vincent's Seminary, C. M., Germantown.

Of James Gordon Bennett's gifts to charities the portion which fell to the St. Vincent de Paul Society of New York was $787 87. The treasurer of the Society, in acknowledging the donation says, "Permit me to add that no object of charity is foreign to the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, and that we have now on our relief rolls not only Catholics, but the poor of almost every creed and of no creed, the colored as well as the white. The grand rule of the Society is 'to visit the poor at their dwellings and so aid them by relief in kind.'" At present the Society has on its rolls about 5,000 families—say 12,000 persons—to whom it gives assistance every week.

When Bishop Fenwick arrived in Boston, in December, 1825, to use the words of a respected priest, "the Pilgrims landing at Plymouth could scarcely have looked over a more melancholy waste." There was one priest in Massachusetts, one in New Hampshire and one in Maine. There were eight churches, of which one only deserved a higher name than a chapel. And this was the Catholic Church in all New England in the year 1825. Ten years later, in 1835, there were 34 churches and 34 priests and 40,000 Catholics. Even in 1844, when Confession was added Rhode Island made a new alcoves, there were but 30 priests, 37 churches and 90,000 Catholics in all New England. Nearly all New England we have six dioceses, and so many churches that if a signal fire was lighted on all our steeples it would almost seem as a continued light from northern Maine to southern Connecticut. Every where you find the Catholic with their churches, schools, colleges and academies; with their hospitals, asylums and homes of refuge. In the New England of to-day we number 5 bishops, 441 priests, 493 churches, and nearly a million of Catholics.

Custom the Stabling System.

The feelings of excitement produced by the stimulus in ordinary use, are followed by a reaction that it always seems to leave the system in the darker pass. Diminished for a moment by the lightning's flash, increased apparently darker than ever after the flash is over, is the mental gloom and physical debility that vanish temporarily under the influence of a dram, recurs with a re-doubled intensity when the first transient effect ceases. Yet physicians habitually prescribe the Tonic of ommission for patients suffering from bodily weakness and mental misery. The true remedy in such cases is a pure stimulant combined with the food-supplying properties of which the vegetable kingdom affords, and Hostetter, Smith & Co. have in the Old Bourbon Whiskey which they distill from the choicest grain, the most perfect stimulant and tonic in existence. Recommended by the talent in every State in the Union, and in proportion as the virtues of the article become known, so will the sale increase. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONTHLY OFFICIAL, SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, April 5, 1866.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export the inquiry has been moderate. We quote—Extra at $6@6 12½, and superfine at $5@5 50, as to quality.

WHEAT—The market has ruled quiet and at nearly rates the past week, at the close the market is unchanged. We quote $1 95@2 10 per ctl.

BARLEY—The demand has been very good at better rates. The receipts for the week ending at noon brewing at $1 15@1 20 per ctl.

OATS—Nothing doing. Nominal, at rechargeable $1 75@1 90 per ctl. for the best.

CORN—The receipts have been light during the past week, while the demand continues to rule close at $1 80@1 90 for ordinary to choice 2 ton.

RYE—Quotable at $1 70@1 75 per ctl.

CORN—Yellow quotable at $1 70@1 77½ @ ton for Eastern, and $1 80@1 90 for Pacific. Yellow Mixed, Barn, $1 70; Feed, $1 30; Feed and Seed, $2 75; small White, $2 75; and Large White, $2 75 per ctl.

ONIONS—We quote at $1 25@1 75 @ 100 lbs.

VEGETABLES—Green Peas, 10@12½ @ lb; Dried Peas, 10@12½ @ lb; Garlic, 10@12½ @ lb; Dried Onions, 10@12½ @ lb; Potatoes, 1@1½ @ lb; Asparagus, 50@75 @ lb; Rhubarb, 10@12½ @ lb.

APPLES—Dried apples have been in demand, with a fair demand. We quote the range at $1 00@2 00 @ 100 lbs.

BEANS—Quotable at $3 @ ton from mill.

MIDDLINGS—Fair to good feed at $27 @ ton from the mill.

BRAN—Quotable at $1 70@1 75 @ 100 lbs.

BUCKWHEAT—Quotable at $2 00@2 75 @ 100 lbs.

MEXICO—We quote at $3 50@4 00 @ 100 lbs.

Mustard, 18@24c; Alfalfa, 16 @ 17c; Timothy, to 10c.

HIDES—We quote California dry at 18@19c, and Mexican at 16@17c.

TALLOW—Quotable at 6@6½c @ lb.

OIL-CAKE MEAL—Quotable at $35 @ ton from mill.

WOOL—In the absence of transactions quotations are entirely nominal.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh roll, good to choice, 30 @ 35c; Eastern fresh, ordinary to choice, 25@30c; choice, boxs in the market, 35@37½c.

CHEESE—California, 14@17c; Eastern, 20@21½c.

EGGS—California, 20c @ dozen; Oregon, 20c.

CURED MEATS.

HAMS—California, 11 @ 12c @ lb; Oregon, none; Eastern do., 13@15c.

BACON — California, 12@13c @ lb; Eastern Rough and Sugar-cured Hams, 11@12c; do. canvas, 12@13c.

LARD—California, 10@12½c @ lb; Oregon, none in the market; Eastern, 12@13c; do. in cans, 13@14c; do. in kegs, 13@14c.

FRESH MEATS.

BEEF—For first quality, 10@12c; other grades, 6@9c @ lb.

VEAL—At 10@12c @ lb.

LAMB—At 10@12c @ lb.

MUTTON—At 10@12c @ lb.

PORK—Hogs, large, @ 6@7 6c; Barrows, 7@8; Sows, 6@7c @ lb.

SPRING LAMBS—Quoted @ 8 cents.

CALVES—@ 7@8 @ cents.

POULTRY AND GAME.

POULTRY—Hens, large, @ 10@7 6c; Broilers, 17@8; Roosters, 10@12½ @ dozen.

DUCKS—Tame at $5@6 @ dozen.

GEESE—At $3@4 @ dozen.

TURKEYS—Alive, 18@19c; dressed, 18@20c @ lb.

HARE—At 10@12½ each.

RABBITS—At 25c each.

PIGEONS—Tame, @ 10@12½ doz.

QUAIL—Mountain, @ 10@12½ doz.

TURKEYS—@ 20 @ lb.

QUAIL—@ 10@12½ @ dozen.

The late firm of George T. Healy & Co., 321 Market street, are offering superior inducements to all lovers of choice teas, pure coffee, and first-class ground and green spices. People can economy by being on premises the firm.—S. F. Post.

Where Does it Come From?

Pimts and quarts of filthy catarrhal discharges—where does it all come from? The mucous membrane, being the exact cover of the nose, and its blind glands are diseased, so that they draw from the blood its liquid, and as matter to the air changes it into corruption. This life blood was so intended for system, but is vitiated, and the system is starved and by the loss. To cure, gain flesh and vitality, using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which acts directly upon the blood, correcting those alterations and impurities which cause Catarrh. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, the only method of reaching the upper cavities where the discharges accumulate and evolve fetor.

Catarrh cured or money refunded. 500 cases cured.

Dr. Sage's Remedies, Parish, La., Sept. 15, 1871.—R. V. Pierce, M.D.: Sir—Some months ago I sold a large number of your remedies, and they have universally cured me of thirteen of my family, Respectfully, R. V. PIERCE, M.D.

Subscriptions Received.

Oakland—H. Chrisman ..... $ 00
San Bernardino—P. Cunningham ..... 4 00
Los Angeles—
Mission ..... 4 00
Guadalupe—J. Malarin ..... 4 00
Santa Barbara—Rev. Father Real ..... 4 00
Newhall—Richard Gleason ..... 4 00
Fort Harrison—Martin Pinto ..... 4 00
Marysville, T.—Thomas Fox, (legal tenders) ..... 4 00
Samuel Mischler ..... 4 00
William C. Bishop ..... 4 00
M. M. Cullinan ..... 4 00
Virginia, (Nev.)—R. Gregory ..... 4 00
Austin, (Nev.)—Rev. Father Quinn ..... 4 00
Georgetown—John Taggart ..... 4 00
Clipper Gap—Thomas Fitzpatrick ..... 4 00

SAVE YOUR MONEY!

DRY GOODS!

DRY GOODS!

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES AT

E. SUPPLE'S, 638 Market Street,

NEARLY OPPOSITE FOURTH.

FOLLOWING IS A LIST OF PRICES WHICH defy competition:

A lot of Striped Ponties, 20 cents, worth 37½.
Ladies' Kid Scolloped Gaiters, ..... $1 00
Ladies' Kid Scolloped (Pebble) Gaiters, ..... 1 25
Ladies' Kid Scolloped (plain) Gaiters, ..... 1 50
Children's Embossed, Scolloped, Needle-pointed, ..... 1 25
Children's Extra quality, Scolloped, ..... 1 00

In great variety and all other goods in proportion. I am selling Gents' D. S. Hand Sewed Boots at worth $15; 20 cases Men's Brass Boots, at 10 and 12 apward, and

New or Never will appear at Cheap Shoes as will be Sold for the Next 30 days at

HEALY'S RED HOUSE,

848 Market Street.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

FRATINGER & NOLL

WILL EXHIBIT RARE NOVELTIES during the coming week in handsome

LINEN SUITS,

NEW STYLES,

Embroidered and Braided in all the new Shades and Designs.

NEW STYLE CLOAKS,

—CONSISTING IN—

Drap d'Ete, English Walking Jackets, Dolman's Talmas, and Polonaise,

Trimmed and Inserted with YAK LACE and PASSEMENTERIE, both Plain and Beaded.

HOUSE WRAPPERS!

A Large Assortment, consisting in French Calico, Cashmere and Silk.

STREET SUITS,

In all New and Desirable SPRING GOODS, made up stylish and handsomely trimmed in two colors or with silk.

SPRING SILKS

Can be found in all Shades and at all Prices.

PASSEMENTERIES!

PASSEMENTERIES!

The Largest and Best Assortment of

BEADED GIMPS,
ORNAMENTS,
BUCKLES, SLIDES,
FRINGES
AND BUTTONS.

YAK LACE AND INSERTIONS,

Both Plain and Beaded, in large variety.

FRATINGER & NOLL,

Leading Cloak and Suit House of the City,

10 Montgomery Street.

KENNEDY,
O'NEILL &
BRENNAN,

DIRECT IMPORTERS OF—

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRY GOODS,

110 and 112 Third Street,

Corner of Minna ..... SAN FRANCISCO.

ONE PRICE ONLY.

DIXON BROTHERS,

Plumbers, Gas and Steam Fitters,

506 Montgomery street,

Opposite Wells, Fargo & Co. ..... SAN FRANCISCO

All work warranted.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

GRAND OPENING —OF— NEW SPRING GOODS!

J. J. O'BRIEN

Has pleasure in announcing to his numerous patrons and the public in general that he has received

Forty Cases —OF— NEW SPRING GOODS,

All Styles and Prices, and Beautiful Designs and Shades.

These Goods are now open for inspection, and all are cordially invited to come and judge for themselves of the Beauty, Utility and Moderate Prices of the Goods offered for sale.

COME TO-DAY, COME TO-MORROW, —TO— J. J. O'BRIEN'S 606 MARKET STREET, NEAR MONTGOMERY ..... SAN FRANCISCO.

During the Summer months the Store will be opened at 7:30 A. M. and closed at 7 P. M.

Samples sent free on application.

IMPORTATION DIRECT.

M. SHORT

PIONEER TAILOR,

COMMERCIAL STREET, ..... Corner of Leidesdorff

THE FINEST GOODS ever imported into this market, including MELTONS, CAMELOTS, CHEVIOTS, NAPIER, OXFORD, WITNEYS, RAGLANS, WEST'WILS, &c., &c., &c.

—Also—

A Large Assortment of Genuine Irish Frieze.

Being the NEWEST FASHIONS, both in material and colors, which he now offers at price which

Cannot be touched by any other house in the city.

An inspection of THIS SPLENDID STOCK is respectfully invited. Fit guaranteed.

Remember, my Prices are Fixed.

Cannot be followed. Entrance Below.

M. SHORT,

827 Commercial St.,

SAN FRANCISCO.

GREAT BARGAINS —IN— BOOTS AND SHOES, —AT THE— RED HOUSE

848 MARKET STREET, (OPPOSITE FOURTH).

REDUCED FULLY FROM 25 TO 75 PER CENT.

The most complete assortment of BOOTS AND SHOES ever offered to the public is now at the RED HOUSE, and for sale at from 25 to 75 per cent. less than can be found in the city. Read my List of Prices:

Twenty-five cases Children's Fancy Shoes, with spring fronts ..... $1 and upward
Ladies' Kid Scolloped (Pebble) Gaiters, ..... $1 75
Ladies Kid Scolloped, (Pebble) Gaiters, ..... 2 00
Ladies Kid Scolloped (plain) Gaiters, ..... 1 50
Children's Embossed, Scolloped, Needle-pointed, ..... 1 25
Children's Extra quality, Scolloped, ..... 1 00

In great variety and all other goods in proportion. I am selling Gents' D. S. Hand Sewed Boots at worth $15; 20 cases Men's Brass Boots, at 10 and upward, and

New or Never will appear as Cheap Shoes as will be Sold for the Next 30 days at

HEALY'S RED HOUSE,

848 Market Street.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CASH TEA STO

GEO. T. HANLY & C

DEALERS IN

TEAS

COFFEES AND SPIC

928 MARKET STREET,

Between Stockton and Powell ..... SAN FRAN

GRAY'S

Music Stores and Music Publi

House,

923 and 925 Clay Street, San Fran and 101 First Street, Portland,

STEINWAY PIANOS AND BURDETT ORGANS;
GUILD, CHURCH & CO. PIANOS AND SHONINGER ORGANS.
CARL SCHMISCH, KRANICH & BACH.
HAMLIN, AND M. GRAY Squares & Uprights.

The Largest Stock of Music in Pacific Coast.

Pianos for Rent at from $3 to $ month. at

GRAY'S MUSIC STORE

BACON & COMPANY'S CUBE & PRINTING SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

PRINTIN

Paper Ruling and Book Binding, Neatly, Promptly, Cheap

PERFORMED BY

Bacon & Compan

Corner Clay and Sansome St

Country Orders will receive equal consideration to those from our city patrons.

IRISH FLAG

FOR SALE

THREE GENUINE IRISH NATIONAL F... for sale—over 9ft. 7ad two Rosettes. The Flag is genius up to the best specimens of the kind ever seen; the emblems—harp, sceptre and wolf-hound—are beautifully worked in silk and satin. The Rosette Flags are also genius up to the painter, and are in size respectively 5ft. and 4ft. Apply immediately, personally or by letter, to

C. J. BARRETT,
816 Market street, San Fran

$25 For Day guaranteed Well Auger or Pump. Circulars free. O.W. ELLIS, Jackson, Mich.

mh7 1mos.

THE MONITOR.

The Only Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

LYONS & BARRY, ..... Publishers.
JOHN LYONS. JOHN G. BARRY.

RICHARD O'SULLIVAN ..... EDITOR.
DENIS LYONS ..... BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—NO. 534 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny (up stairs). All letters and communications should be addressed to JOHN G. BARRY.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):

Served by Carriers, per week ..... 12½ cts
Mailed to subscribers, per month ..... $1 00
Mailed to subscribers, per quarter ..... 3 00
Mailed to subscribers, per year ..... 12 00
The Monitor and Catholic World, one year ..... 16 00
Gaelic's Lady's Book and Monitor ..... 3 00
Gaelic's Lady's Book, Monitor and Catholic World ..... 4 00

ADVERTISING RATES:

1 square, 1 week, ..... $ 1 00 | 1 square, 3 months, ..... $10 00
1 square, 1 month, ..... 3 00 | 1 square, 6 months, ..... 15 00
1 square, 2 months, ..... 5 00 | 1 square, 12 months, ..... 25 00

The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

The Monitor.

VOL. XVII. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, APRIL 21, 1877. NO.

Address to the Archbishop of Posen from Poles in the United States.

Mieczyslas, Count Ledochowski, the present illustrious Archbishop of Gnesen and Posen, was born in the village of Kiszkowo, in the Grand Duchy of Posen, on the Feast of Sandomir (Stanislaus Kostka), in 1822. His elementary education he received at home, and afterwards in the Polish colleges of Posen and Warsaw. From his early youth he manifested an inclination for the sacred calling, in consequence of which, on the graduation, he entered the celebrated Seminary of Warsaw. He was ordained when only eighteen years of age, after which he proceeded to Vienna and Rome, where, in the famous Collegium Nobilium, he perfected himself in theological philosophy and the knowledge of languages. In 1845 he was ordained priest by dispensation, being only then twenty-two years old.

In 1846, after the accession of the present Pope, Father Ledochowski was appointed auditor in the Apostolic Nuncio in Lisbon, where, during his eight years residence, he was thoroughly loved by the Portuguese. In 1856, he was sent to Austria, Apostolic to New Granada, but soon after his arrival at Bogota was recalled by the Government, the reins of power having passed into the hands of a Liberal party. Their President, General Moschara, proved to be so despotic that he caused not only the expulsion of the Jesuits and the Apostolic Nuncio, but practiced every persecution towards his own venerable Bishop. Mgr. Ledochowski, after making protest against such indignities, returned to Rome. The Pope approved the action of his energetic Legate, and in 1861 rewarded him with the title of Archbishop of Thebes (in part. infidel.), at the same time appointing him Apostolic Nuncio to Brussels (Belgium), where he discharged the duties till 1865. In that year he was appointed Archbishop of Gnesen and Posen.

On Tuesday Prince Louis Napoleon, having completed his eighteenth year, came of age by the law of France, and to celebrate the occasion, as well as to demonstrate continued attachment to the dynasty of the Bonapartes, about five thousand Frenchmen and women, mostly persons of some distinction, came and waited upon the Prince at Chiselhurst. The throng included M. Rouher, once known as the Vice-Emperor, the Princes Murat and Bonsparte, nearly every statesman now alive who had place under Napoleon III., and the whole of the staff-dre of the eighty-seven Prefects who ruled over the French departments at the fall of the Empire. The visit, the imperial flower, was displayed by every visitor, and numberless bunches of it came by post from sympathizers who were not present in person. The Prince, his Imperial mother, and a number of distinguished guests went to Mass at the little village church, after which the young representative of the late fallen dynasty received an address from the visitors in a tent on the lawn of Camden House, and replied in a brief reply. He alluded to Marshal MacMahon, who now holds the sword of order, as his friend and companion-in-arms of his father. He proclaimed that a plebiscite is the only legitimate means of developing the sovereign will of France, and, if called upon by such a summons, whenever the call should come he said he would not hesitate ready to take on himself the responsibility of obeying it.—Weekly News, March 31.

THE FIRST CHURCH OF AMERICA.—Key West (Fla.) Dispatch says: "On Cozumel Island are yet to be seen the walls of the first church ever built on the continent of North America. Cortez, before his conquest of Mexico—say about three hundred years ago—built his first place of public worship on this beautiful island. The foundation and walls are yet partially preserved; each side has an elevation of some ten feet in places. The altar is covered with an almost impenetrable growth of evergreen, and all about and growing inside these ruins are ancient and modern bombs, where pardacuna rest. The wild flowers bloom over them in great profusion, and the birds coral sweet songs morning and evening. A grand wall extends from the portal several hundred yards westward, but is now almost buried from sight in the sand. Excavations are soon, where searchers after hidden treasures have delved. There is a fine field yet there for the curious to explore. But the natives of the locality allow it to rest so quietly that the dense shrubbery almost hides it."

A VENERABLE HERO.—Paris has a remarkable celebrity in the person of Max von Waldeck, an artist, who recently celebrated his one hundred and eighth birthday. His history is strangely eventful. When only seventeen years old, in 1785, he accompanied an exploring expedition to Southern Africa. He witnessed all the horrors of the French Revolution, and in 1794 went as a volunteer in the French army, under Napoleon, to Italy. At a later date he again accompanied exploring expeditions to Africa, Real India and South America. He is still comparatively vigorous, and in his hundredth year painted two pictures that were exhibited at the Paris Exposition of 1867.

The cholera still continues in Buenos Ayres. About four cases occur daily.

Address to the Archbishop of Posen from Poles in the United States.

Mieczyslas, Count Ledochowski, the present illustrious Archbishop of Gnesen and Posen, was born in the village of Kiszkowo, in the Grand Duchy of Posen, on the Feast of Sandomir (Stanislaus Kostka), in 1822. His elementary education he received at home, and afterwards in the colleges of Posen and Warsaw. From his early youth he manifested an inclination for the sacred calling, in consequence of which, on the graduation, he entered the celebrated Seminary of Warsaw. He was ordained when only eighteen years of age, after which he proceeded to Vienna and Rome, where, in the famous Collegium Nobilium, he perfected himself in theological philosophy and the knowledge of languages. In 1845 he was ordained priest by dispensation, being only then twenty-two years old.

In 1846, after the accession of the present Pope, Father Ledochowski was appointed auditor in the Apostolic Nuncio in Lisbon, where, during his eight years residence, he was thoroughly loved by the Portuguese. In 1856, he was sent to Austria, Apostolic to New Granada, but soon after his arrival at Bogota was recalled by the Government, the reins of power having passed into the hands of a Liberal party. Their President, General Moschara, proved to be so despotic that he caused not only the expulsion of the Jesuits and the Apostolic Nuncio, but practiced every persecution towards his own venerable Bishop. Mgr. Ledochowski, after making protest against such indignities, returned to Rome. The Pope approved the action of his energetic Legate, and in 1861 rewarded him with the title of Archbishop of Thebes (in part. infidel.), at the same time appointing him Apostolic Nuncio to Brussels (Belgium), where he discharged the duties till 1865. In that year he was appointed Archbishop of Gnesen and Posen.

On Tuesday Prince Louis Napoleon, having completed his eighteenth year, came of age by the law of France, and to celebrate the occasion, as well as to demonstrate continued attachment to the dynasty of the Bonapartes, about five thousand Frenchmen and women, mostly persons of some distinction, came and waited upon the Prince at Chiselhurst. The throng included M. Rouher, once known as the Vice-Emperor, the Princes Murat and Bonsparte, nearly every statesman now alive who had place under Napoleon III., and the whole of the eighty-seven Prefects who ruled over the French departments at the fall of the Empire. The visit, the imperial flower, was displayed by every visitor, and numberless bunches of it came by post from sympathizers who were not present in person. The Prince, his Imperial mother, and a number of distinguished guests went to Mass at the little village church, after which the young representative of the late fallen dynasty received an address from the visitors in a tent on the lawn of Camden House, and replied in a brief reply. He alluded to Marshal MacMahon, who now holds the sword of order, as his friend and companion-in-arms of his father. He proclaimed that a plebiscite is the only legitimate means of developing the sovereign will of France, and, if called upon by such a summons, whenever the call should come he said he would not hesitate ready to take on himself the responsibility of obeying it.—Weekly News, March 31.

THE FIRST CHURCH OF AMERICA.—Key West (Fla.) Dispatch says: "On Cozumel Island are yet to be seen the walls of the first church ever built on the continent of North America. Cortez, before his conquest of Mexico—say about three hundred years ago—built his first place of public worship on this beautiful island. The foundation and walls are yet partially preserved; each side has an elevation of some ten feet in places. The altar is covered with an almost impenetrable growth of evergreen, and all about and growing inside these ruins are ancient and modern bombs, where pardacuna rest. The wild flowers bloom over them in great profusion, and the birds coral sweet songs morning and evening. A grand wall extends from the portal several hundred yards westward, but is now almost buried from sight in the sand. Excavations are soon, where searchers after hidden treasures have delved. There is a fine field yet there for the curious to explore. But the natives of the locality allow it to rest so quietly that the dense shrubbery almost hides it."

A VENERABLE HERO.—Paris has a remarkable celebrity in the person of Max von Waldeck, an artist, who recently celebrated his one hundred and eighth birthday. His history is strangely eventful. When only seventeen years old, in 1785, he accompanied an exploring expedition to Southern Africa. He witnessed all the horrors of the French Revolution, and in 1794 went as a volunteer in the French army, under Napoleon, to Italy. At a later date he again accompanied exploring expeditions to Africa, Real India and South America. He is still comparatively vigorous, and in his hundredth year painted two pictures that were exhibited at the Paris Exposition of 1867.

The cholera still continues in Buenos Ayres. About four cases occur daily.

Bismarck.

The Bismarck in the world is a ... with some white hair. He ... military ... though he is rather inclined to ... lounsmen, having a certain ... and a stomach not easy to ... But the man is very upright, very strong, very pleasant, very affable. ... He looks in robust health all ... and then an observer ... to notice peculiar ... of the face, which reveal ... nerves. His manner ... is a rollicking, overbearing ... He ... children and friends ... two of him. He will ... listen to remonstrance, still less to contradiction. His strides ... in occasions and acquaintances, meddling ... the latter as he puts his foot on the former.

The man is of a giant ... for work and food. He ... and ... and black ... bread, served ... without ... and a mighty mass ... in plenty, washed ... Rhine. He smokes ... works and talks perpetually. He loves ... like a Solomon in ... opinion. His ... and acquaintances ... meddling ... the latter as he puts his foot on the former.

The man is of a giant ... for work and food. He ... and ... and black ... bread, served ... without ... and a mighty mass ... in plenty, washed ... Rhine. He smokes ... works and talks perpetually. He loves ... like a Solomon in ... opinion. His ... and acquaintances ... meddling ... the latter as he puts his foot on the former.

"A Peer of the Realm."

One of the efforts of the English in Ireland was to substitute for the ancient chieftains of the people the English system of "Peers of the Realm." What sort of a ... they ... has ... been judged from ... Spenser, who was fed in the Dublin ... Freeman's Journal of March 7th:

"A correspondence appears in the Newry Reporter, the circumstances of which are interesting. Lord Newry, it appears, has been in the habit of subscribing annually to the poor funds of that town. His charity check was forwarded this year, as usual, and distributed among the needy without any ecclesiastical distinction. After the general election, at which he was the defeated candidate, his Lordship wrote a letter to the Rev. Father O'Hagan, of Newry, with respect to the portion of the donation intended for the Catholic poor. The priest, in reply, referred his Lordship to the bottom of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, and to the Poor Clares and Sisters of Mercy Convents for proof that the subscription was applied according to its intent. The letters were published some days since in the Newry Reporter, and in the last issue of that journal a further correspondence appears. It includes a letter from Father O'Hagan to J. J. O'Hagan, Esq., J. P., stating that a citizen, sympathizing with the religious bereaves of the unwarrantable insinuations of Lord Newry, had given £50 for the purpose of repaying his Lordship the donation he had bestowed, and returning, on the part of the Rev. Fath. £40, the share of the charity received by them. Another letter is from Mr. P. Curran, President of St. Joseph's Conference, to Mr. O'Hagan, the gentlemen who was the medium of his Lordship's gift, inclosing £20 donation to the Conference, and repudiating in respectful terms any insinuations as to the appropriation of the money. Thus the entire £60 has been refunded to the donors."

Whitlow.

Pity is a mild sort of disgust.

The Solons man is always hunting for something, and gets mad because he finds it.

When a man gets to going down hill it seems as if everything was greased before him.

Mosquitoes are like most articles of commerce—the supply exceeds the demand.

They are born of poor but industrious parents, but have in their veins some of the best blood in the country. They are emphatically self-made men.

Blessed is the man who has nothing to say, and says it.

Blessed is a man of very few words who says them.

Blessed is a man of very few words who says them.

Blessed is a man of very few words who says them

THE FRANC-TIREUR.

A Tale of the Franco-Prussian War.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

A LETTER.

The unaccustomed cry of the Marquise had brought a number of servants to the door of the salon where she sat. The disturbance caused by their entry recalled her from the abandonment of her grief, and she rose, wringing her hands and with a wild excitement that seemed unnatural in her sweet countenance. Turning to Annette, she said with a weary accent, "Read for me, read all that fatal letter."

A gray-headed old man stepped forward from the group of servants, and said in a tone of respectful but affectionate inquiry, "There is something the matter with Madam la Marquise?"

"Oh," she sobbed, "something the matter with me! You may say, Charles, and hear that terrible letter, and then you will know there is indeed something the matter with me. God have pity on me, a bereaved mother."

"Bereaved, madam!" said the old man with a start, while the women behind him raised a cry.

"Hush," said the Marquise, "I want to hear, hand, child."

Annette felt her frame quivering with emotion, as she proceeded to read aloud the paper she held in her hand:

"MY DEAR FRIEND.—When these opened this letter remember that affliction, like all good, comes from God. Be prepared to lay thy burden on Him. And, oh! Angela, wife! tell thee this that thou art bound to remember, my heart bleeds for thee. It is the saddest task of my life to have to inflict a terrible blow upon my cherished old friend and companion. Prepare, then, brave, noble, generous son—the flower of the old nobility—the young man who kept the shining soul of the Crusader in the debauched nineteenth century, has fallen on the field of battle, fighting in defense of his country.

"Thou will perhaps wonder how I came first to have this sad intelligence to give to thee. I have learned it from some of the wounded brought hither from the fight at St. Denis. There can, alas! be no doubt as to the truth. Several of them saw him fall, pierced by a dozen Prussian balls. As might have been expected from his chivalrous nature, he was in advance of his comrades, and alone against a host. I am much fear that the Marquis is in ignorance of this awful calamity. The night before the battle I hear he had gone down to Nogent, but I am glad to believe that he is not. How shall I express my sympathy for thee in this hour of trial! Alas! what would avail, indeed, my companionship, or that of any other mortal, even if I could pour it out in eloquent and persuasive words.

"I know that well, Angele; I know that thou dost not need, in the supreme hour, to be taught where to seek for solace. I will only pray for him who is, I hope, gathered into the fold of his heavenly Father, and I will pray that this blow may fall as lightly and then, though still weak, became more reassuring. Annette had at the first alarm sent to inquire if there was a medical man in the ambulance, but it happened that there was none in-doors. She had, therefore, to take upon herself the whole responsibility of the patient, and felt in no slight degree relieved when she found how her simple skill was likely to be rewarded with success. Before long the Marquise had sufficiently recovered to be thought to her own apartment, in lifting her to which the strong and gentle hands of Annette were no small aid.

The insensibility of the patient had now changed into an intermittent slumber, in the intervals of which she was delirious. Annette, who watched by her bedside, heard a picture of beautiful beauty, was lost in admiration of the delicate grace that marked the lineaments of the woman who lay before her. Aristocrat seemed to be marked in every line of her pale face, and even in the movements of the small hands, which fluttered uneasily above the coverlet. Aristocrat, in everything but suffering; and there, thought the watcher, she has no advantage over the coarsest mother of a peasant who learns by the Gazette that her son is among the slain.

Through the long night she sat minister-ing such palliatives as were needed. It was sometime after midnight that a doctor came and examined the patient, and was not long, poor man, since his heart would have bounded with joy at the idea of being summoned to the bedside of the wife of a duke of the Hotel Mirecourt; now patients were very few and very far between, and not high-est rank, owing to a doubtful capacity of paying. It was, therefore, with an air of profound importance that Annette felt herself approached the bedside of the Marquise, and, after a brief examination, approved of Annette's treatment, and departed.

In the silent watches of the night the low voice of the patient somewhat grew in power, and Annette could catch whole phrases. She spoke of the Marquis, and of certain events of his past career, now delight in bowing. There were references to a little house—got in part with money—and of a brave boy, named Hippolyte, with brown eyes and broad shoulders, but of the recently date not a word.

During the night more than one of the maid servants appeared in the doorway of her sick; but she refused. She now quite understood the object of the sun in making her talk—and of the lull now, and she was anxious to discharge the duty to the utmost of her capacity. And so she sat through the chill discomfort of night, and saw the slow growth of the light in the drear December morning.

The forenoon was well advanced when Annette suddenly perceived that the patient was awake, and that her eyes rested fixed upon her. The wildness had now passed from them, and in their place was an expression of a thousand-fold increased. Annette at once perceived that conscious-ness had filled some book.

"You are the girl," said the patient, "who brought me the terrible letter?"

"I am, alas, Madam!"

"And have been ill—insensible?"

"Yes, Madam la Marquise!"

"And you watched over me?"

"I did my best, Madam la Marquise."

"Then I very ill!"

"Well," said Annette hesitatingly, "as one may be ill!" and first afraid Madam would have never recovered.

"And you helped to bring me back to life?"

"Did what I could Madam."

"Ah, child!" she said, with a heavy sigh, "you meant well, and you have done your best, but you have only prolonged my misery. Much sorrow I have seen and known in this terrible war, but no event of it has so struck me so deeply as this. If I did not know thy goodness of heart, I would ask how thou could so be the messenger of evil news; but, there, I know, thou could'st not have come to me unnecessary, much less duly deeply sorrowing friend."

—SOUR LUCIAN."

It was with a broken voice that Annette accomplished the perusal of the letter. The Marquise did not interrupt her save by the recurring ejaculation of "my poor boy," or, "oh! she sat with bowed head, and wept, piteous tears from the large dim eyes. The old man and the women behind wept deeply and silently. The women sobbed hysterically, while the old man went over to the window, and looked out, and, apparently feeding on one knee, took her hand and kissed it.

"Charles," said the Marquise, "you all loved him. You all loved my dear son—if not as?"

The sobbing of the women broke out afresh, while the old man, with passionate tears, exclaimed, "Oh, madame, who would not love the brave, gentle, handsome vis-count? France has lost much, madam, my poor master, but she has not lost nothing more precious than that gallant life."

"Ah, Charles," replied the Marquise, "everybody has lost him. I do believe it," she added with a wild air, "that God himself loved him too well to leave him in this miserable France!" Then with a fatal flush, as if of shame, on her pale cheek, she said hastily, "Hearts like Charles—go I good Marie and Jeanette."

The man bowed lowly, the women still in tears, made respectful courtesies, and they withdrew. The moment they had closed behind them, Marquise flung herself upon her knees, and by the broken exclamations which burst from her lips, Annette quickly perceived that she was engaged in the passionate prayer of one struggling between an overpowering grief and the duty of resignation. Annette felt herself in a position of some embarrassment. She thought she would have withdrawn with the servants, but the sun who had given her the message bade her wait and see if she could be useful. She wondered now it was that neither of such a mandate was, but was still more shocked to find the contemplation of the sorrow which was manifested before her, to her peasant's respect for rank which, though in the modern servile, was considerable, there was added the pain of feeling that she might be offending upon emotions which would naturally seek privacy. While in this conflict of feeling she stood embarrassed, she became aware that the supplications of the Marquise became fewer, that a longer interval passed between the love you that moment the kneeling figure. Suddenly all subsequent. Annette stepped lightly, and went over to the kneeling figure. The Marquise had fainted. Without a moment's hesitation, Annette caught gently in her strong arms the slight form of the Marquise, and bore her to a sofa; then rang the bell for assistance. She had not long to wait, for apprehensive servants were on the qui vive, and they trooped into the room in nervous trepidation. To the ministrations, however, Annette felt perfectly at home. She had rapidly acquired skill in dealing with bodily ailments, and her directions were given with an authority which, enforced by the unfeigned fear she inspired by the sudden and dreadful consequences, had prompt execution.

The symptoms of the Marquise was long and severe, at one time it degenerated into a mere struggle between life and death. A feeling of the lips dotted on the cheek, the quick ear of Annette only was able to detect the light fluttering of the heart. At last what seemed to the anxious watchers a period of hours, but was not in reality very many minutes, the pulse grew feebly beat, and then, though still weak, became more reassuring. Annette had at the first alarm sent to inquire if there was a medical man in the ambulance, but it happened that there was none in-doors. She had, therefore, to take upon herself the whole responsibility of the patient, and felt in no slight degree relieved when she found how her simple skill was likely to be rewarded with success. Before long the Marquise had sufficiently recovered to be thought to her own apartment, in lifting her to which the strong and gentle hands of Annette were no small aid.

The insensibility of the patient had now changed into an intermittent slumber, in the intervals of which she was delirious. Annette, who watched by her bedside, heard a picture of beautiful beauty, was lost in admiration of the delicate grace that marked the lineaments of the woman who lay before her. Aristocrat seemed to be marked in every line of her pale face, and even in the movements of the small hands, which fluttered uneasily above the coverlet. Aristocrat, in everything but suffering; and there, thought the watcher, she has no advantage over the coarsest mother of a peasant who learns by the Gazette that her son is among the slain.

Through the long night she sat minister-ing such palliatives as were needed. It was sometime after midnight that a doctor came and examined the patient, and was not long, poor man, since his heart would have bounded with joy at the idea of being summoned to the bedside of the wife of a duke of the Hotel Mirecourt; now patients were very few and very far between, and not high-est rank, owing to a doubtful capacity of paying. It was, therefore, with an air of profound importance that Annette felt herself approached the bedside of the Marquise, and, after a brief examination, approved of Annette's treatment, and departed.

In the silent watches of the night the low voice of the patient somewhat grew in power, and Annette could catch whole phrases. She spoke of the Marquis, and of certain events of his past career, now delight in bowing. There were references to a little house—got in part with money—and of a brave boy, named Hippolyte, with brown eyes and broad shoulders, but of the recently date not a word.

During the night more than one of the maid servants appeared in the doorway of her sick; but she refused. She now quite understood the object of the sun in making her talk—and of the lull now, and she was anxious to discharge the duty to the utmost of her capacity. And so she sat through the chill discomfort of night, and saw the slow growth of the light in the drear December morning.

The forenoon was well advanced when Annette suddenly perceived that the patient was awake, and that her eyes rested fixed upon her. The wildness had now passed from them, and in their place was an expression of a thousand-fold increased. Annette at once perceived that conscious-ness had filled some book.

"You are the girl," said the patient, "who brought me the terrible letter?"

"I am, alas, Madam!"

"And have been ill—insensible?"

"Yes, Madam la Marquise!"

"And you watched over me?"

"I did my best, Madam la Marquise."

"Then I very ill!"

"Well," said Annette hesitatingly, "as one may be ill!" and first afraid Madam would have never recovered.

"And you helped to bring me back to life?"

"Did what I could Madam."

"Ah, child!" she said, with a heavy sigh, "you meant well, and you have done your best, but you have only prolonged my misery. Much sorrow I have seen and known in this terrible war, but no event of it has so struck me so deeply as this. If I did not know thy goodness of heart, I would ask how thou could so be the messenger of evil news; but there, I know, thou could'st not have come to me unnecessary, much less duly deeply sorrowing friend."

—SOUR LUCIAN."

It was with a broken voice that Annette accomplished the perusal of the letter. The Marquise did not interrupt her save by the recurring ejaculation of "my poor boy," or, "oh! she sat with bowed head, and wept, piteous tears from the large dim eyes. The old man and the women behind wept deeply and silently. The women sobbed hysterically, while the old man went over to the window, and looked out, and, apparently feeding on one knee, took her hand and kissed it.

"Charles," said the Marquise, "you all loved him. You all loved my dear son—if not as?"

The sobbing of the women broke out afresh, while the old man, with passionate tears, exclaimed, "Oh, madame, who would not love the brave, gentle, handsome vis-count? France has lost much, madam, my poor master, but she has not lost nothing more precious than that gallant life."

"Ah, Charles," replied the Marquise, "everybody has lost him. I do believe it," she added with a wild air, "that God himself loved him too well to leave him in this miserable France!" Then with a fatal flush, as if of shame, on her pale cheek, she said hastily, "Hearts like Charles—go I good Marie and Jeanette."

The man bowed lowly, the women still in tears, made respectful courtesies, and they withdrew. The moment they had closed behind them, Marquise flung herself upon her knees, and by the broken exclamations which burst from her lips, Annette quickly perceived that she was engaged in the passionate prayer of one struggling between an overpowering grief and the duty of resignation. Annette felt herself in a position of some embarrassment. She thought she would have withdrawn with the servants, but the sun who had given her the message bade her wait and see if she could be useful. She wondered now it was that neither of such a mandate was, but was still more shocked to find the contemplation of the sorrow which was manifested before her, to her peasant's respect for rank which, though in the modern servile, was considerable, there was added the pain of feeling that she might be offending upon emotions which would naturally seek privacy. While in this conflict of feeling she stood embarrassed, she became aware that the supplications of the Marquise became fewer, that a longer interval passed between the love you that moment the kneeling figure. Suddenly all subsequent. Annette stepped lightly, and went over to the kneeling figure. The Marquise had fainted. Without a moment's hesitation, Annette caught gently in her strong arms the slight form of the Marquise, and bore her to a sofa; then rang the bell for assistance. She had not long to wait, for apprehensive servants were on the qui vive, and they trooped into the room in nervous trepidation. To the ministrations, however, Annette felt perfectly at home. She had rapidly acquired skill in dealing with bodily ailments, and her directions were given with an authority which, enforced by the unfeigned fear she inspired by the sudden and dreadful consequences, had prompt execution.

The symptoms of the Marquise was long and severe, at one time it degenerated into a mere struggle between life and death. A feeling of the lips dotted on the cheek, the quick ear of Annette only was able to detect the light fluttering of the heart. At last what seemed to the anxious watchers a period of hours, but was not in reality very many minutes, the pulse grew feebly beat,

Annette, in her gentle but steady way, went on. "My fiancé is a noble-minded man, who comparatively rich himself, chose me, a very poor girl. We were solemnly pledged with the consent of his father and mother, both of whom, alas, madam, have perished in the incidents of this cruel war. I feel myself almost as solemnly bound to him as if we had been married. He has fought bravely in the service of his country, but now languishes in a German prison. One of the chief motives of my going into the ambulance was to help him should he be wounded—and it actually was, by the goodness of God, my fortune to have dressed a wound of his, received," said Annette, with a slight taint of bitterness, "not from the common foe, but from his own countrymen. If I were to prove ungrateful to my vow towards him for the sake of worldly elevation, I should be a contemptible creature, indeed."

"But you might marry him. My husband, perhaps, could get him made an officer," interrupted the Marquise eagerly.

Annette shook her head. "Madam la Marquise, remember that he and I are peasants. He is a soldier, and I, as a nurse, am in a sense his equal; but he and I would be a very awkward couple in the middle of a salon. I do not believe there is a handsomer, or braver, or better man in France than my Michel, but I know, too, that he would not be at his ease in a drawing-room in the clothes in which genius-man go to court, or in attempting manners in ball."

The Marquise moaned, "If do not wonder that you should be ashamed of your station do not tempt you. I have led them all my life, and my life has been one of sorrow only. Ah, child, I have had a gloomy prince. His was ambitious, but he was faithful to his country and his master, and, as he would not sink a public life, he gnawed his heart in bitterness, and all around him he threw the shadow of his gloom. My husband's life has been made very discontented misery by reason of impossibilities sought to be turned into reality. One by one my four children here been taken from me—my dear only son, my baby—my sweet darling whose grave I had to cover with flowers before he had reached a twelvemonth. In that dreary there you will see a pair of little pink shoes —ah—" here she sobbed the interment of the poor lady.

In broken sentences she went on to tell of her broad-shouldered boy with the curly, manly, brown eyes, who had been drowned while swimming in the river one day, when she broke down altogether as she came to the mention of her last calamity. "Oh, my Fernando was the light of my soul, and yet a trouble deep and sad to me. Why, you will ask. He was too thoughtful. My mind was never busy trying to search the depths of life. The gayeties of young life had no charm for him, and yet he was not gloomy. No maiden ever attracted him, he used to kiss my hand, and my his beautiful mother—as he called me, and even the oldest of we are—was sufficient object of love to him. He had the ineffable sentiment of his family deep in his breast, but he never mingled or seemed to concern himself in politics. When the war broke out it irritated him. He blamed it as the outburst of a mad ambition. And when the Germans besieged Paris he came to me one day, and said, 'Mother there are no politics now; every Frenchman owes his blood his own country.' Alas, what could I say? Though I knew—oh! how well I knew—that he was right, I felt that my son of the Crusaders from the path of duty and honor? My boy, my beautiful, my down to die without a bit or a sup, or help of any kind."

"That he wasn't the luck of one Mike Malone."

"Eh?"

"Because, you see, owing to his lunch in the leg here he is cooked up in a grand palace with a beautiful young woman set-ting as his secretary."

"We shall leave out about the secretary," said Annette.

"And now I'd like to ask," said Mike, considering, "how the potatoes crop turned out. It's always a tender point in Ireland."

"Very well."

"And how the mother and father are getting on."

"I have written that."

"And it wouldn't be improper, would it, to ask if Lizzie Connell is married yet?"

"No, I think not."

"And whether she ever thinks of a crack-brained fellow who lately got shot in the great sortie?"

"I dare say the Père would not object. You are just down."

"Well, we ought not to end the letter without a word for all inquiring friends."

"Very good."

"And they'll be glad to hear," added Mike with a burst—"that I distinguished but a trifling incident of the family."

"What?" asked Annette in surprise.

"The Marshal," said Mike proudly.

"What of him? Which Marshal?"

As she spoke a sound like thunder shook the air. The French forts on the north had again opened fire, and presently a shower of shells from the German batteries answered. Annette the bed failing into the courtyard. For a moment there was a general pause. Then a voice was heard to say, "The bombardment has begun."

(To be Continued.)

SONGS IN EXILE.

The following songs, written by William Smith O'Brien and Thomas Francis Meagher on board her Majesty's ship "Swift," when going into exile, were never before, we believe, printed in Ireland:

Putting Out the Light.

Great Allies, here at midnight beer,
Surprised by the night,
I sing the triumph of thy power
O'er Ireland's martial sons.
'Twas not enough to make thy fee,
That thou hadst quenched the rising fire
Which still flashes our mind.

Where we with peaty divine
Kindle our lights and fight,
For sergeant Perry comes at nine
And then to bed at night.
Treasure, in England's age of old,
Bid how their duty be,
We're told, by Paddies everywhere,
To put the candles out.

The powers of darkness then assail
Those who would kindle a conflagration,
And, sleepless, as our life is frail,
Upon us they intrude.
Exult, proud England, over thy foe—
Thou hast put out the light!
His mind in entire most foreign
Will never more be right.

WILLIAM SMITH O'BRIEN.

Written on board H. M. S. —swift," July 27, 1848.

Words for Sudden Sorrows.

Although I seem to sing
The earth's wide surface o'er,
Yet still my heart is one long strain—
We're Paddies everywhere.

Once as we sailed the sparkling sea,
Or Afric's arid shore,
Still with the same sad melody
We're Paddies everywhere.

Although the whistling surge beat high,
And o'er the waves we fly,
Yet quail we not when death seems nigh—
We're Paddies everywhere.

Although the Cape we Hope may bring,
Our one cry we will raise,
For still in Table Bay we'll sing,
We're Paddies everywhere.

And when we attend Van Diemen's strand,
Prepared for that new sphere,
In purgatory we'll form our band—
As Paddies everywhere.

THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER.

H. M. S. —swift," July 29, 1848.

Archbishop Parcell on Temperance.

The temperance angels of Ohio have been trying to induce the good Archbishop Parcell to join the praying band, and arise, with bell, book and candle, all wine-bibbers, beer-swillers, and such other congenial spirits as punch-lovers, cocktail-suckers, &c. But the Christian shepherd is not to be wheedled even by angels, though clothed in muslin as a disguise, and he has dexterously tripped up the intruders with a question which, justifying himself with many a holy text. The Bishop's letter will probably tickle saints and sinners alike. It is in the following terms: "I am thinking for the poor and wretched and such as are sore oppressed, and the more of the spirit of the Lord is in my mouth that should be squeezed out of any amount of my heart-blood in serving them. There is a pity for the sufferings of the poor as well as for their failings such as the Master showed, and virtue becomes attractive because it is human. But the Bishop, like Jacob, can wrestle even with an angel, and is not to be terrified by a legion of them. There is something irresistibly comic in the home throes of the clerical staff when the Bishop tells the crusaders "to be wise unto sobriety." He evidently thinks that other forms of intemperance may be as offensive as wine-bibbing, and, with the bluntness of a good Christian, he brings down his staff with a thwack on the pates of the crusaders in a way that would be trying even for Father Mathew. "Sobriety!" the temperance prophet Diogive whose confronted with the words of Jehovah: "God made wine to cheer the heart of man!" Christian authority is altogether against the extreme temperance fanatics—a fact which would have occurred because men drink it to excess. The followers of Dio Lewis will do well to read carefully Archbishop Parcell's letter and ponder upon its contents, for even angelic beings may sometimes have an advantage be swayed by common sense.—N. Y. Herald.

LORD ROSSE'S TELESCOPE.—Scientific men will be glad to hear that the present noble owner of the new celebrated telescope erected by the late Earl of Rosse is about to remodel the smaller of the two instruments, by substitution of a clock as per-ance which is intended to move the telescope within a new observatory, which his lordship has already commenced to build. The undertaking will be watched with much interest by astronomers, as it is one long contemplated but never before attempted.—Dublin paper.

Modern Love Matches in France.

(French Correspondence of the London Times.)

PARIS, March 9.—Some weeks ago I met a lady acquaintance of mine, a rich, ugly, witty widow. "Did you amuse yourself much during the Carnival?" I asked. "No," she answered, "during the Carnival I danced, and I am now of an age when dancing is more of a toil than a pleasure. It is since Lent began that I have been amused." "You follow the sermons, then?" "No, but I watch the marching past of the pretenders, and I have nearly as many as the Throne of France." Perceiving my astonishment, she went on—"I see you are surprised, so I will explain the mystery for you. I am free, still young, too ugly not to be amiable, and I am mistress of an income of 80,000f. The empti-ness of the pleasures of the Carnival made me turn my attention to domestic matters, and after having consulted my tastes and my reason, I determined to think of matri-mony. I was imprudent enough to men-tion the matter to a friend, the wife of an ex-high functionary of the Empire, who seized on the idea, and since then not a day passes, whether I go out or stay at home, whether I go on the theater or return from a promenade, without my friend introduc-ing to me some pretender who seems to her likely to please me—always aloud. All tongues, ages and accostumes have already passed before me. Some were too far off, others too seriously, but so far, to the deep despair of my friend, no one of the gentlemen she has introduced to me has seemed to me young enough for me to permit him to pay his addresses." I laughed at the end of my left her with a wish that she might be more fortunate in future. I had forgotten that two months when, a few days after, hav-ing received

AN INVITATION TO A WEDDING,

I there met this lady of a certain high func-tionary of whom the young widow had spoken to me. "It is that lady," said one of my friends to me, "who is to be married the match; it is she who introduced the bridegroom to the bride's family." And thereupon recalled to mind the conversa-tion with the widow, and other circum-stances attending it, I felt sure that the man who had made the match was left at the fall of the Empire without the resources he had in the bank-ers' office brought in. I knew that neither she nor her husband had any private fortune, and that the latter had no place on the income of which they could live. Yet I saw them every where, I knew that their house was well ordered, their table well supplied, their servants well equipped, and I was unable to find the depths of life. The gayeties of young life had no charm for him, and yet he was not gloomy. No maiden ever attracted him, he used to kiss my hand, and my his beautiful mother—as he called me, and even the oldest of we are—was sufficient object of love to him. He had the ineffable sentiment of his family deep in his breast, but he never mingled or seemed to concern himself in politics. When the war broke out it irritated him. He blamed it as the outburst of a mad ambition. And when the Germans besieged Paris he came to me one day, and said, 'Mother there are no politics now; every Frenchman owes his blood his own country.' Alas, what could I say? Though I knew—oh! how well I knew—that he was right, I felt that my son of the Crusaders from the path of duty and honor? My boy, my beautiful, my jacoes with the young lady whose name he does not know nor that of her family, when only makes him the more natural. While he is dancing or during the evening the lady or gentleman who acts as intermedi-diary must find means of giving the parents of the young lady his or her opinion about the young man, who, on his side, like him the project, should naturally try to facili-tate the task of the agency. The intermedi-diary, a few days later, becomes the inter-preter of the feelings raised in the young man by this first meeting.

OTHER INTERVIEWS ARRANGED.

And, if a marriage follows, neither the young lady herself nor her family ever know that it was all done by a matrimonial agency; and when the mother and the bride announce the marriage the former never fails to observe, "Yes, dear madam, people are quite right when they say that marriages are made in heaven. It was the greatest of chances which brought us acquainted with the Marchioness's. We were at a ball at the Marchioness's. Mrs. Threesters was talk-ing with him, and, very casually, intro-duced him to us. The Viscount invited my daughter to dance. He danced with her three or four times without knowing who she was. You could easily see she was pleased with him, and he knew who she was, you may think, dear madam, that he had no notion that she had a million for her dowry. So when he came to present him-self to her daughter—though him agreeable, I was not, Mrs. Threesters's relations him and two days after he was the happiest of men." "Yes, yes," was the ready answer, "you are quite right—marriages are made in heaven." And a fortnight later the Vis-count pays a visit to Mrs. Threesters, in ex-change for which a few days after she returns the written engagement among the rest, which would show his happy spouse been made—that is to say, the bride to be. Sometimes, however, we have to do with ingenerally fellows who refuse to fall quite over head in the dowry. These are the thorns in the bride, for we must go to bed, even if we wish, the profession suffers. But often, too, we meet with

DELICATE AND GRATEFUL SOULS.

In one of the cities of the north I had an interview with a very rich old merchant, a young lady with three millions for her dowry, who wished to marry a man with a title, and who should marry her for her-self and not for her money. I chose from among all the young men, without any fortune, very respectable and very cool. He was presently appointed to a post in the town in question—went there escopain, saw my intermediary, who showed him the house where he was to come to see her, and in return in time for a ball given by the Pre-fect to which my intermediary had got him self invited. He took his stand near the door, and, when the young lady entered, he us-ed a pair of opera-glasses, and, observing her, that she herself started, and three months after he married her. "Well, sir," I said to him, "you are not only paid me the sum agreed upon, but ever since he has been married to you for the young Countess, she is so happy as she was the first day that her husband did not know he was falling in love with a dowry of three millions. She thinks you a cheap artist—you are not far from that opinion yourself. It seemed to me very strange that a lady who had refused so many suitors should have married you, and I have taken the trouble to find out the reason. Your self-love has been wounded, and you have sworn to be revenged. Your revenge is to be that the consciousness of having performed that good action could take the place of the ob-stacle and gratitude. Try to shake the master over, I come by degrees to the doc-trine of the world, and I have succeeded, and to the the pretty numerous category of intermediaries employed by matrimonial agents to the service of the high aristocracy of finance, and I received to clear up my doubts. Tothat end I called upon each of them.

THEY KNOW THEIR MATRIMONIAL AGENTS

in Paris, and asked him for an interview. I was very well received, and the agent showed himself very polite and very confi-dential. Chance had served me well. The lady who had given me the idea of calling upon him was one of the most ac-tive of the intermediaries he employed. "In France," he said, "thoroughbreds are to some so expensive that most men hesitate about marrying; at all events, men so longer can supply the means to keep up in-man must have his position insured before thinking of marrying, and when that is done he is no longer of the age when men obey the pulses of the heart at the expenses of their reason. I am one who thinks of mar-rying, there are nine who put the questions in the following order: Is she rich, pretty, healthy? Is she good? Is she well born? In most men, marriage is first a money mat-ter, next a matter of self-love, and finally a matter of the heart. The other questions come after. Hence men do not fear to marry a woman who has been compromised, recommended to me by a common friend. So far as the men are concerned, things are very simple. I have only to find out the rich-est men in Paris, and to make them aware that I can only write for you in French."

"But I wonder what would Lizzie Con-nell think of my having a letter written by a beautiful young woman?"

Annette laughed. She will know by my writing that I am young. I am only a hospital nurse you know."

"Very well, then, begin."

"Shall I sell it?"

"Oh! I am sure, how can I tell—me with a broken leg!"

"But that need not prevent him from tell-ing me what you want your friends to know."

"That's true. Well, tell Lizzie Connell, that there isn't a rein in my body that isn't in love with her."

"Don't you think that would be a strange thing to write to the Père O'Shaughnessy?"

"Oh, God forgive me," said Mike, "one would think that I'm as big a fool as I broke instead of my leg. What would you say, Miss Annette?"

"You might tell that you were in the great battle."

"Oh, grandly."

"And that you and a brave companion were among the foremost of the French forces."

"Miss Annette, say what you like about my comrade. He deserves it, for he broke or out of his equal isn't to be found. But as my epistolo consisted principally of get-ting a damaged leg, by one of our own bul-lets, it might look as if I were ungrateful to the French to put it down."

"Well then, what shall I say?"

"Let me see," said Mike thoughtfully. "It was a great battle. There was very hot work, and that was the only thing hot about it, for it was awful cold weather."

"That is writing down."

"Then there were a great many of us put out of the cold altogether, but in a way some people wouldn't like."

"What next?"

"And there were such a lot with their legs shot off, that to get a leg merely broken so that it might be repaired again was a wonderful piece of luck."

"And then?"

"And then to be wounded was a very bad thing for most, because many of them lay

Compulsory Education.

The following remarks, which we clip from Appleton's Journal, are worthy of at-tention, as setting forth the sentiment of those in this country who allow experience and common sense, instead of bigotry and prejudice, to influence their thoughts:

"We have no children in any marked advantages resulting from the compulsory system, we also fail to share the wretchedness felt by many in the moral results of purely secular education. Many of the statistics so freely paraded as to the enormous increase of crime among the crimi-nal classes, need to be read with qualifying lights. Many of them are the result merely of more vigilance and clearer views of sinning. These criminals, moreover, are mainly those who have been driven to adroit-ness, who have no influence or friends to shield them from the consequences of their misdeeds, who drift into prison because they are ignorant of methods how to keep out of them. Secular education is more success-ful in teaching men how to escape the con-sequences of their crimes than it is in teaching men not to commit crimes. There is a very large proportion of illiteracy in our prisons because the illiterate are stupid as well as illiterate, and are victims to their own restlessness. It is only occasionally that a bank defaulter acquires his crime by incarceration; it is comparatively rare that the wretched thief of the pavement escapes his prison-doom. If we could get statistics of all the crimes committed, and not simply of those punished, secular education would not come off so triumphantly as it now does in the criminal records."

SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 1874.

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

A new Irish Catholic monthly called The Harp has been started at Toronto.

Rev. Mr. Hoffman, O'Brien, died a few years a nun, died at Kingston, Ontario, re-cently.

The late Judge Daniels, of Baltimore, left the most of $200 to each Catholic charita-ble institution of that city.

Over $6,000 was made at the matinée at the Academy of Music, New York, on the 18th March, for the benefit of the poor.

The Catholic Orphan Asylum, New Haven, Conn., received $9,000 from the es-tate of Mrs. Ann Doolan, of Collinsville, re-cently deceased.

The Most Rev. James Roosevelt Bayley, Archbishop of Baltimore, has been on a fatal to the Right Rev. Bishop Wood, of Philadelphia, for several days.

The Pilot says that the entire debt on the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Boston, has been extinguished by generous donations. The church will now be conse-crated.

The new St. Stephen's Roman Catholic Church in Brooklyn has a spire two hun-dred feet high, surmounted by a cross of glass of various colors, which is to be illuminated at night.

The Buffalo Catholic Institute have se-cured, for $20,000, the property known as the Rudolf Block on Main street, which they will lose its sensational effect.

The eleventh annual Provincial Council of the Roman Catholic Archbishops of Brit-ish Columbia Bayley for the first Sunday of May next. The Council will embrace the twelve Dioceses and Vicariate which comprise the Province of Baltimore, and as the See is in close proximity to the city, it will be the Primary See of the United States, its deliberations will be of important weight, involving in some measure the future of the religious concerns of all Catholics in the country.

The Baltimore Daily Bulletin says: "Rev. J. C. Waters, the talented editor of the Bal-timore Catholic Mirror, will preside the ban-ning speech to the toast of St. Patrick, at the banquet of the Knights of St. Patrick, in a Rotunda room, in honor of the Catholic Fellow, Dublin. The British Government has such an affection for this gentleman that they have allowed him to visit every other country outside their dominions at—his own expense."

The late Marquis Gualtieri, Chamberlain to King Victor Emmanuel, which he fell his large and princely fortune to the Propaganda, who wished to bring him a doctor; no doctor, bring men priest; a priest alone could do any good to the dying. The Marquis did not leave the penitent man until he had heard his confession and absolved him. What a lesson this man's death ought to be to the royal master!

Alluding to a late article on "The Doctrine of the Sacred Heart," in the True Witness of Mon-treal, says: "The Rev. Father Hecker, of the generality of articles by Protestant writers on religious topics, is the only one I know so thing. They may be pardoned, as the old Irish lady observed, because of their unconscious ignorance." That is the proper word.

The corner stone of a new chapel and hall was laid on Sunday last in Bay View, Grove, Ohio, for the Sisters of Charity, by the Most Rev. Archbishop of Cincinnati, as-sisted by Rev. Messrs. Bleibler, Cassedy and Hogbers. The building will, be-sides the chapel, have a class-room and will be of fast by 40. The academy is flourish-ing, and has a large number of pupils, who are carefully trained by the Sisters.

By a vote of 22 ayes to 3 since the Legis-lature of New Jersey has refused to grant a charter to the Roman Catholic Bishop of the State Reform School. Four of the ayes were Republicans, and four were Democrats. Turks, Jews and Heathens are permitted to preach to the children, but not Papists.

The Hennessy Committee have contracted with the French Transatlantic line for the transportation of Bishop Loughlin and Father Periers, which leaves New York on Saturday, the 18th of May next. The former is the favorite vessel of the line, and the con-duct of the owners has been quite generous.

On Sunday, March 22d, a beautiful Gothic church, which cost $30,000, was dedicated to the service of God at Tremont, New York, by Rev. Father William Quinlan. The interior, in decorations and general appointments, is a marvel of elegance and good taste.

Four Sisters of Mercy came very near be-ing suffocated by coal gas that escaped from a stove in the room where they were sleeping at Fall River, Mass., on Wednesday night. One of them awoke and with difficulty aroused the door, and two others were quite insensible when help arrived.

The Young Catholics' Friend Society of Baltimore, Maryland, was established in 1842. It object always has been the educa-tion and clothing of destitute Catholic chil-dren, and it has nobly and successfully exer-cised out the object of its organization during the thirty-two years of its existence.

The extraordinary number of forty-two young ladies received the white veil at the mother house of the Sisters of the Holy Cross at St. Mary's of the Immaculate Con-ception, South Bend, Indiana, on the feast of St. Joseph. Through at their profession on the 25th of March.

In St. Thomas's Church, New York, on Sunday, March 15, a collection for the poor was taken up. It realized $1,050. Cloth-ing of all kinds is also given by the ladies connected with the church, who constantly visit the lenement house of the neighbor-hood, searching out and relieving cases of want.

The Ayener Gazette considers Catholic women a dangerous class. It defines Mrs. Sprague as Jesuits, and adduces as proof that in Davenport, Iowa, where she is living, Catholic Sioux City, Iowa, giving as outlines of the kind of "Jesuits" which it abhors, several facts he mentioned that it has supplied the Church with 24 Popes, 7,000 Cardinals and 15,000 Bishops. He is the appointed Agent for the establishment of a monastery at Carrlton, Iowa, which will give instruction exclusively in the English language, the first with this feature that has existed since the reign of Queen Elizabeth of England. The order has in this country seven mo-nasteries and four abbeys.

The Catholic population has completed a care-ful review of the census of 1871 of the British Empire. There are 38 persons to a square mile in England and 11 in the United Kingdom, 201 in Ireland 141 in the Colonies. It should be observed, however, that in some parts of India the density of the population more than equals that of England. The Queen rules over 284,762,-595 souls; her people dwell in 49,142,651 square miles. Of the lands they inhabit is not less than 7,709,410 square miles.

The sixteen Catholic institutions of New York have spent in charity the sum of $1,799,156 61, while, during the same period, the one hundred and fifty-eight Protestant and Jewish societies have given the sum of $1,724,918 58, or $74,208 03 less than their Catholic neighbors. On the other hand, while these "Protestant or gen-eral" bodies have distributed their alms at an expense for salaries, etc., of $446,611 74, the Catholic charities have cost in adminis-tration the comparative trifle of $40,819 66.

The German Roman Catholic Union on Monday night filled Cooper Institute, New York, on the occasion of an entertainment in aid of the Pope. The special features of the programme was an address by Rev. Dr. Schroeder on Germany's future, which he held would be Catholic and free. The German Catholic Union of New York, was organized in November last, combining, at present, thirty-four societies of the different German speaking parishes of that city. To aid our glorious Holy Father in the pres-ent deplorable state of affairs is one of the Union's principal objects.

A poem addressed by Michael Scanlan of Washington, D. C., to Mrs. General Sher-man on St. Patrick's Day, has the follow-ing preface in the New York Irish-American: "There is little necessity for explana-tion in regard to this great Catholic lady, whose name is a household word wherever the true Catholic spirit is found. She is all that women should be—the true wife, the fond mother, the friend, the lover, the gifted virtue—if there can be any spot-ty made where all the virtues is so beautifully developed. She is at once an honor to the Church and an example to those who desire to reach true womanhood."

An article in the London Contemporary Review for February, by Mr. John Hosi, an English Protestant, makes the following admissions: "Of all the theories of revela-tion that of the Church of Rome is most like what we should beforehand regard as the truth. It is the natural religion that our being would give a revelation, and that He would give it so as to secure men from all manner of doubt. And the best way to do this would be to establish a Church which should be the mouth of the Divine and infallible teacher of men for all time. This would give us the kind of certainty which we crave, and would secure us from the endless and ex-hausting labor of each suddenly fell upon him, carrying the body beneath, and killing him instantly.

The commissioners appointed by the Board of Trade to inquire into and report upon the proposal of the Imperial Gas Light and Coke Company, Dublin, for a revision of the charter of the Alliance and

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING APRIL 18.
April
12—Sunday—Low Sunday.
13—Monday—St. Hermenegild, Martyr.
14—Tuesday—St. Francis of Paola, Confessor (April 2).
15—Wednesday—St. Thurcrin, Valerius and Maximus, Confessors.
16—Wednesday—St. Isidore, Bishop, Confessor and Doctor of the Church (April 4).
16—Thursday—St. Vincent Ferrer, Confessor (April 5).
17—Friday—St. Leo, Pope, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.
18—Saturday—Vespers of the Immaculate Conception.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....APRIL 11, 1874.

AN INSTRUCTIVE CONTRAST.

It will not be denied, we think, that it is just and according to reason to judge the spirit and character of any organization, secular or ecclesiastical, by the tone of the publications exclusively representing it. This is by preëminence the age of socialism: there is, indeed, scarcely an object that men can propose to themselves which has not been made the prominent feature of an organization of some sort, and all of them have their special publications devoted exclusively to their interests.

With religious men this is the case in a very remarkable manner. Every petty Church or obscure conventicle in the United States deems it necessary to be represented in the world of letters by a broad sheet of greater or less pretensions. It is not, then, so glance considerably at many of these hybrid newspapers, and we feel we know enough about them to speak with confidence of their merits. We must say that we very much prefer the tone of one the character of which, literary or otherwise, is such as to command our respect. Differing among themselves in a thousand particulars, each considers sentimentally for the tenets of its own sect, there is one subject upon which they all agree, and that is enmity towards the Catholic Church. When anything affecting Catholicity, however remotely, comes up for discussion, they immediately forget all their quarrels and bowl with an united voice.

On one occasion, too, they invariably lose their heads, become abusive and insulting in the nasty habit of calling disagreeable names. A Catholic with them must be a "papist," the Church they designate as "popery," the wife terms they use in speaking of our priesthood, our episcopacy and our Synagogue Pastil, are such as to we should not care to repeat in these columns. The more of all this we read it is remarked to discover the special affecting the character of an ecclesiastic and when such a thing is found, or can be coined out of some practical basis, it is given to their readers with a gusto that is amusing. Such is fabulously ignorant, and even sentiment decency is shamelessly violated, as to the rule of grammar this commonly used in connection with the Catholic Church is disregarded, and a disturbance out of the Kingdom. Colonel Taylor, throughout his speech, represented Ireland as enjoying the blessings of almost perfect freedom, and the Irish people as deriving separate from making it happy with new laws. The idea that Ireland had any rights at all of her own seemed never to enter the heads of

In this unprincipled and discreditable manner is spoken Catholicity the so-called religious press and through by a large number of secular papers, which, nevertheless, make it their profession to be impartial. These latter having freed from the small modicum of respect for Christianity which, in some degree at all events, remains the sentiments of the former, readily take up the phrase of the day, and, without the slightest pretense to investigation or proposition, re-echo the cry of "Popery." Now, we do not say that we have any claim that these, vulgar City and provincial sheets are weapons peculiar to anti-Catholic journalists.

We have mentioned upon these observations, not indeed with the design of arousing angry feelings, which it has been always our wish to deprecate and extinguish, but solely for the purpose of calling attention to a remarkable and most significant fact which is very generally ignored.

A DOUBTFUL ADVANTAGE.

Colonel Taylor, one of the two members of Parliament returned for Dublin county, and a Conservative of the most pronounced character, recently accepted office in the Disraeli Government. This, according to law and usage, necessitated his reëlection, and some weeks since he addressed his constituency for a second time. The Home Rule League were of opinion that the sentiment was strong enough in the county to defeat him, and therefore avowed their intention of putting forward an opposition candidate. Whether they did so or not we do not know; but, at any rate, Colonel Taylor was reëlected and retained his seat in Parliament. The Home Rulers evidently underrated the strength of the Tory party in Dublin county, quite a large proportion of the voters of which are merchants and traders from the city who reside in villas. The Colonel, in appealing for support, was careful by divers manœuvres to get himself regarded as the Irish representative of the Liberal party, and enumerated a long list of benefits which his political friends were about to confer upon Ireland. He intimated, however, that the disturbed state of the country, the want of hearty support of the Government, would, in all probability, compel Mr. Disraeli to withhold his intended boons. The Home Rule agitation he described in addition covered by a very thin veil of constitutionality, inasmuch as which professing to be divided by local grievances, it aimed at a disturbance out of the Kingdom. Colonel Taylor, throughout his speech, represented Ireland as enjoying the blessings of almost perfect freedom, and the people as deriving separate from making it happy with new laws. The idea that Ireland had any rights at all of her own seemed never to enter the heads of the reputation of clergymen belonging to the Protestant sects, and present them as arguments against the Churches of which the erring individuals are members. A Catholic paper descending to such vulgar meanness would soon find itself disowned, and would perish for want of support.

The secular journals conducted by Catholics and printed in Catholic countries are equally honorable in practice. They mind their own legitimate business, and do not wantonly interfere with or hurt the sensitiveness of other people. Hence we can safely defy any person to mention a single avowedly Catholic newspaper which treats Protestantism as unfairly and discourteously as Catholicity is treated in this country, in England and elsewhere, by prints devoted to the interests of the "Reformed Churches." There is no parallel to be found in Catholic literature for such publications as Harper's Weekly, London Punch, and scores of daily papers, to enumerate which would be a needless waste of time and space. In short, we may lawfully claim that pious, vulgar City and provincial weapons peculiar to anti-Catholic journalists.

We have mentioned upon these observations, not indeed with the design of arousing angry feelings, which it has been always our wish to deprecate and extinguish, but solely for the purpose of calling attention to a remarkable and most significant fact which is very generally ignored.

A DOUBTFUL ADVANTAGE.

Colonel Taylor, one of the two members of Parliament returned for Dublin county, and a Conservative of the most pronounced character, recently accepted office in the Disraeli Government. This, according to law and usage, necessitated his reëlection, and some weeks since he addressed his constituency for a second time. The Home Rule League were of opinion that the sentiment was strong enough in the county to defeat him, and therefore avowed their intention of putting forward an opposition candidate. Whether they did so or not we do not know; but, at any rate, Colonel Taylor was reëlected and retained his seat in Parliament. The Home Rulers evidently underrated the strength of the Tory party in Dublin county, quite a large proportion of the voters of which are merchants and traders from the city who reside in villas. The Colonel, in appealing for support, was careful by divers manœuvres to get himself regarded as the Irish representative of the Liberal party, and enumerated a long list of benefits which his political friends were about to confer upon Ireland. He intimated, however, that the disturbed state of the country, the want of hearty support of the Government, would, in all probability, compel Mr. Disraeli to withhold his intended boons. The Home Rule agitation he described in addition covered by a very thin veil of constitutionality, inasmuch as which professing to be divided by local grievances, it aimed at a disturbance out of the Kingdom. Colonel Taylor, throughout his speech, represented Ireland as enjoying the blessings of almost perfect freedom, and the people as deriving separate from making it happy with new laws. The idea that Ireland had any rights at all of her own seemed never to enter the heads of

In this unprincipled and discreditable manner is spoken Catholicity the so-called religious press and through by a large number of secular papers, which, nevertheless, make it their profession to be impartial. These latter having freed from the small modicum of respect for Christianity which, in some degree at all events, remains the sentiments of the former, readily take up the phrase of the day, and, without the slightest pretense to investigation or proposition, re-echo the cry of "Popery." Now, we do not say that we have any claim that these, vulgar City and provincial sheets are weapons peculiar to anti-Catholic journalists.

We have mentioned upon these observations, not indeed with the design of arousing angry feelings, which it has been always our wish to deprecate and extinguish, but solely for the purpose of calling attention to a remarkable and most significant fact which is very generally ignored.

A DOUBTFUL ADVANTAGE.

Colonel Taylor, one of the two members of Parliament returned for Dublin county, and a Conservative of the most pronounced character, recently accepted office in the Disraeli Government. This, according to law and usage, necessitated his reëlection, and some weeks since he addressed his constituency for a second time. The Home Rule League were of opinion that the sentiment was strong enough in the county to defeat him, and therefore avowed their intention of putting forward an opposition candidate. Whether they did so or not we do not know; but, at any rate, Colonel Taylor was reëlected and retained his seat in Parliament. The Home Rulers evidently underrated the strength of the Tory party in Dublin county, quite a large proportion of the voters of which are merchants and traders from the city who reside in villas. The Colonel, in appealing for support, was careful by divers manœuvres to get himself regarded as the Irish representative of the Liberal party, and enumerated a long list of benefits which his political friends were about to confer upon Ireland. He intimated, however, that the disturbed state of the country, the want of hearty support of the Government, would, in all probability, compel Mr. Disraeli to withhold his intended boons. The Home Rule agitation he described in addition covered by a very thin veil of constitutionality, inasmuch as which professing to be divided by local grievances, it aimed at a disturbance out of the Kingdom. Colonel Taylor, throughout his speech, represented Ireland as enjoying the blessings of almost perfect freedom, and the people as deriving separate from making it happy with new laws. The idea that Ireland had any rights at all of her own seemed never to enter the heads of

THE AMERICAN PILGRIMAGE.

We have been for some weeks past giving details of a pilgrimage to Rome, the great centre of Faith, which it was proposed should be undertaken by American Catholics. It affords us much pleasure now to be able to state that all arrangements have been perfected, and that a party of gentlemen, representative, in every sense of the word, of true Catholic feeling and of sincere spiritual allegiance to the Holy Father, will set out on their way to the Eternal City from New York on the 15th of next month. There is only one drawback to the satisfaction with which we contemplate the intended pilgrimage, and it arises from the circumstance that, as far as we know at the present, California will not be represented among the visitors to Rome. There are no truer or more sincere Catholics in America than those who are building up the Church in this Golden State; and we think it a thing to be deplored that they should not have some prominent person to bear their respectful homage to the illustrious prisoner of the Vatican. It is not too late, however, and we hope that in our next issue we we shall be able to announce that a distinguished Californian Catholic will be numbered among the faithful pilgrims. If such should be the case it would be well if measures were taken at the same time to get up some sort of a presentation which would, in a befitting manner, prove to the noble-hearted and saintly Pius IX. how his children in California love and revere him, and keenly feel the indignities to which he is being subjected by the revolutionary Government of Italy. We feel sure that little more than suggesting such a procedure is necessary to ensure its being carried out. The time certainly is short, but it is not too short to have a splendid creditable done, provided that the proper persons come forward to inaugurate the affair.

Easter Sunday at St. Joseph's Church.

To the Editor of The Monitor—Permit me through the columns of your journal to make a few remarks concerning the sermons held at St. Joseph's church on Easter Sunday morning. As I am pretty well aware that a great many of your country and perhaps some of your city readers will feel interested in a communication of this kind, I hope you will be kind enough to give it a place. At early mass observed would be observed in most any direction approaching hurriedly, as if to be in time for some great ceremony, and it would have seemed to one unacquainted as if such was the case when it proved to be first. What a pleasing spectacle, to behold this eager crowd coming from all directions, and all earnestly intent upon taking part in the religious celebration of this glorious day! From early morn the church was crowded to its fullest extent. First Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Collins at half-past six o'clock, and I am sure he well repaid all who attended on them. I may safely say, without any exaggeration, that I have never seen so many approach the Holy Table on any occasion as on this morning. The next Mass celebrated was at eight o'clock—was celebrated by Rev. Joseph A. Gallagher, and it was a repetition of the previous one. The next Mass at ten o'clock was celebrated by Rev. Father Mc-Mahon, of Los Angeles, and from the large crowd present one could think it was in the Holy Week time of the day.

The next Mass being a grand Solemn High Mass, the church was filled to its utmost capacity, many persons had to be content with a place in the aisles, and even in the street; and I think that I may safely say that there was not an available seat to be had in the whole church. Mass was sung by Rev. H. F. Gallagher, celebrant; Rev. Joseph A. Gallagher, deacon; Rev. Father McGinnis, sub-deacon; and Rev. Father Collins, master of ceremonies. As soon as the gospel was sung, Rev. Father Collins left the altar and delivered a very able and interesting discourse, taking for his text the gospel of the day. Great credit is due to Rev. Father Gallagher for the beautiful style in which the church was decorated; the altars were beautifully adorned and lighted, and I doubt if I have ever seen any church look better. There was also on this occasion some very excellent vocal music, and taking it all in all, I think that St. Joseph's choir can compare favorably with any in this city. On next Sunday the Children of Mary will go to Holy Communion in a body at the eight o'clock Mass here in this city, and a grand one it is sometimes, I say, go there and you will be highly edified. Just picture to yourself six or seven hundred young men and women between the years of ten and twenty-one approaching the Holy Table for Communion, and ask yourself the question, is such a sight worth witnessing? I am sure that here you will agree with me that it is. N. J. O.

St. Bridget's Church Fair.

The ladies of St. Bridget's Church, of which Rev. E. T. O'Neill is pastor, are to-day to commence a grand promenade for the fair, which opened on Thursday evening of last week at Central Hall, corner of Folt and Bush streets. The ladies have been well filled and several valuable articles have been purchased which are both ornamental and useful. An excellent band of music will be on hand every evening, and the lover of good music can enjoy a rare treat. We feel sure that every effort to liquidate the church debt, it is hoped that its friends will promptly respond on this occasion. During fair will continue for ten days, during which time many novelties will be presented.

Subscriptions to the interior will oblige us by settling the amount of their indebtedness without further delay. Many of them are several years in arrears. The expense of calling upon them amounts, in many cases, to as much as their indebted ness; and this expense it is unreasonable on their part to expect us to incur. It is far easier for them to transmit the money to us, or to give it to our agents, than for us to send a person out on a special collecting tour.

A PROVINCIAL COUNCIL.

The subjoined pastoral communication from his Grace the Archbishop, which was read in the city churches last Sunday, will inform our readers that the first Provincial Council of San Francisco will soon meet in St. Mary's Cathedral. The 25th instant, feast of the Patronage of St. Joseph, is the time fixed for the opening of the Council, which will in all probability continue its sittings for a few days:

To the Catholics of the Diocese of San Francisco.

DEARLY BELOVED: It is our duty to announce to you the approaching celebration of a Provincial Council, the first of this Ecclesiastical Province, which, with the blessing of God, will be held in this Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception on the feast of the Patronage of St. Joseph, the 26th prox., and a few days following. The second Plenary Council, held in Baltimore in 1866, by all the Archbishops and Bishops of the United States, enacted many statutes most useful for the spiritual interests, the observance of discipline, and the prosperity of religion in the churches committed to their care, and by a special recognition of the Holy See, approved by the Sovereign Pontiff, the decrees of that Council are to be invariably observed by all the faithful within the limits of their dioceses. But our number the Church, ever solicitous for our good, directs also the occasional holding of Provincial Synods, in order that the wants may be well met, measures were taken at the same time to set up some sort of a presentation which would, in a befitting manner, prove to the noble-hearted and saintly Pius IX. how his children in California love and revere him, and keenly feel the indignities to which he is being subjected by the revolutionary Government of Italy. We feel sure that little more than suggesting such a procedure is necessary to ensure its being carried out. The time certainly is short, but it is not too short to have a splendid creditable done, provided that the proper persons come forward to inaugurate the affair.

Easter Sunday at St. Joseph's Church.

To the Editor of The Monitor—Permit me through the columns of your journal to make a few remarks concerning the sermons held at St. Joseph's church on Easter Sunday morning. As I am pretty well aware that a great many of your country and perhaps some of your city readers will feel interested in a communication of this kind, I hope you will be kind enough to give it a place. At early mass observed would be observed in most any direction approaching hurriedly, as if to be in time for some great ceremony, and it would have seemed to one unacquainted as if such was the case when it proved to be first. What a pleasing spectacle, to behold this eager crowd coming from all directions, and all earnestly intent upon taking part in the religious celebration of this glorious day! From early morn the church was crowded to its fullest extent. First Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Collins at half-past six o'clock, and I am sure he well repaid all who attended on them. I may safely say, without any exaggeration, that I have never seen so many approach the Holy Table on any occasion as on this morning. The next Mass celebrated was at eight o'clock—was celebrated by Rev. Joseph A. Gallagher, and it was a repetition of the previous one. The next Mass at ten o'clock was celebrated by Rev. Father McMahon, of Los Angeles, and from the large crowd present one could think it was in the Holy Week time of the day.

The next Mass being a grand Solemn High Mass, the church was filled to its utmost capacity, many persons had to be content with a place in the aisles, and even in the street; and I think that I may safely say that there was not an available seat to be had in the whole church. Mass was sung by Rev. H. F. Gallagher, celebrant; Rev. Joseph A. Gallagher, deacon; Rev. Father McGinnis, sub-deacon; and Rev. Father Collins, master of ceremonies. As soon as the gospel was sung, Rev. Father Collins left the altar and delivered a very able and interesting discourse, taking for his text the gospel of the day. Great credit is due to Rev. Father Gallagher for the beautiful style in which the church was decorated; the altars were beautifully adorned and lighted, and I doubt if I have ever seen any church look better. There was also on this occasion some very excellent vocal music, and taking it all in all, I think that St. Joseph's choir can compare favorably with any in this city. On next Sunday the Children of Mary will go to Holy Communion in a body at the eight o'clock Mass here in this city, and a grand one it is sometimes, I say, go there and you will be highly edified. Just picture to yourself six or seven hundred young men and women between the years of ten and twenty-one approaching the Holy Table for Communion, and ask yourself the question, is such a sight worth witnessing? I am sure that here you will agree with me that it is. N. J. O.

St. Bridget's Church Fair.

The ladies of St. Bridget's Church, of which Rev. E. T. O'Neill is pastor, are to-day to commence a grand promenade for the fair, which opened on Thursday evening of last week at Central Hall, corner of Folt and Bush streets. The ladies have been well filled and several valuable articles have been purchased which are both ornamental and useful. An excellent band of music will be on hand every evening, and the lover of good music can enjoy a rare treat. We feel sure that every effort to liquidate the church debt, it is hoped that its friends will promptly respond on this occasion. During fair will continue for ten days, during which time many novelties will be presented.

Burning of St. Vincent's Seminary, Santa Barbara.

We clip from the weekly Santa Barbara Times of March 21st the following details of the burning of St. Vincent's seminary, conducted by the Sisters of Charity in that town. The fire occurred on the 16th ult., about 3 P. M., and the whole building was in a short time completely destroyed. The people of Santa Barbara, without exception of class or creed, feel extremely sorry at the loss of the institution, which was a credit to the county, and was achieving much good. Of course efforts will be made at once to rebuild the Seminary, but unless, some wealthy and generous Catholic come to the rescue of the Sisters it may be long before they are in a position to resume their labors. We earnestly recommend them to the Christian charity and liberality of our readers, and we hope that we shall soon be authorized to state that the school and convent are once again in full operation:

The alarming cry of fire was made in the afternoon of March 16th, at 3 o'clock, and it was soon found to be in the building of St. Vincent's Seminary. In an incredibly short time numbers of our citizens flocked to the scene, conspicuous among whom were the Sisters of Charity, and the Pioneer Engine Company No. 1, who took charge, and pressing other into service went to work getting out the furniture, school desks, bedding, and in fact everything contained in the building. This was successful in doing. The main building is a three story brick, 80 by 60 feet, the lower story being occupied by the school, music and reception rooms, the second devoted to class rooms, the third to sleeping apartments. The fire broke out in the upper story, being caused by a defective flue. The fire burned slowly, and the building could and would have been saved with comparatively slight damage if there had been an adequate supply of water and buckets—at hand. As it was, it was fortunate that the furniture and valuables were saved to the extent we did, as the total loss will be about $25,000 to $30,000, unfortunately the building was entirely unprotected by insurance. They have temporarily removed to Mr. Wm. Hayward's house in Franklin, where they may at present be addressed.

Thanks Returned.—The Sisters of the Sacred Heart Presentation Convent, corner of Taylor and Fifth streets, beg to return their grateful thanks to the friends of their institution who have kindly favored them with tickets for Rev. Father Scott's lecture for the installation of a portion of the dest on their schools. At usual, the well-known eloquence of the reverend lecturer attracted a crowded audience, and the net sum of $1,000 was thereby realized.

Wong Ching Foo, a Chinaman, was admitted to citizenship in Detroit, Michigan, many cases, to as much as their indebted ness; and this expense it is unreasonable on their part to expect us to incur. It is far easier for them to transmit the money to us, or to give it to our agents, than for us to send a person out on a special collecting tour.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

The Gilroy tobacco factory is manufacturing six hundred pounds per day.

Rev. Father Bachand lectured in San José Wednesday evening.

Machinery for a paper mill, to be located at Alviso, has arrived.

The new Saratoga paper mill is turning out an excellent quality of pasteboard.

Amador county, last week, shipped a consignment of native wine direct to England.

The road between Murphys and the Big Tree Grove of Calaveras has been opened to travel.

A new stage line has commenced operations on the route between San Bernardino and Holcomb Valley.

Amador coal will be sold at Stockton at $8 per ton, as soon as the proposed railroad is finished.

Patents for about 43,000 acres of land are to be issued to the Trustees of San Diego City, for public lands.

Two married ladies (sisters) of Silver City, Nevada, eloped with two boys, aged four-teen years each, a few days since.

About a hundred men will be set to work on the recently discovered grants of quartz near Santa Rosa, Sonoma county.

Professor Fowler, the phrenologist, recently purchased a tract of land in the Mission Dolores, San Francisco, at $16 per acre.

Judge T. W. Freelon has secured a franchise for a street railroad from the wharf at San José to the Alameda Creek.

John Richardson, a well known livestock dealer of Petaluma, committed suicide on Wednesday morning at that place by shooting.

One hundred and ninety-seven thousand dollars were disbursed for labor in several mines, at Gold Hill, on Friday of last week.

The quicksilver mines of Lake and Napa counties yield about 1,000 flasks per month at present, which is the product of the Redington mine.

Out of thirty-five thousand sheep that were purchased in Napa and Solano county, prior to the winter season, scarcely three thousand survived the storms and snows of last year.

Work on the Southern Pacific Railroad was commenced at Delano, Kern county, on the 6th instant. It is expected the road will be completed to Bakersfield this season.

A man named Dennison shot one Downey in Salinas City on Monday last. Downey then wrenched the pistol from Dennison and shot him in the head. Dennison died within an hour; Downey may recover. Jealousy was the cause.

Salt Lake, April 7.—There is much attachment to day in mining circles in regard to the wonderful developements in the Hom estake, Dry Canon and Little Cottonwood districts. The latest discovery is a body of ore 8 feet wide. The Tribune claims it is the richest silver mass in the world. It yields $14,000 to the ton and persons at least participated in the discovery.

Stockton, April 7.—On account of the very sad continued rain-fall this winter, the farmers have been rather late sowing their grain. All grain now up looks well, and the crops will be as good as last year; and the same area has been sown. On Mokelumne River and Little Potato Slough the farmers have sown a greater part of the ground; but the land, which was very grass-last year, does not promise as much this season. The farmers in Pleasants Valley have sown as much as usual, and the prospect is good.

Santa Barbara, April 3.—The area of grain sown this year compares favorably with that of last season, and the yield promises to be much larger. In some places seeding is still going on, and every where the grain looks healthy and the prospects for a rich harvest look flattering.

Concord, April 3.—The prospects of the crops in this district are unusually good. As near as we can calculate, there are in this district about 6,000 acres of barley and about 3,000 acres of wheat, double the number of fruit trees set out. The hill soil, however, essentially a grazing soil, is looking very healthy, and with reasonable weather we may look for fair if not large yields.

Amador coal will be sold at Stockton at $8 per ton, as soon as the proposed railroad is finished.

Patents for about 43,000 acres of land are to be issued to the Trustees of San Diego City, for public lands.

Two married ladies (sisters) of Silver City, Nevada, eloped with two boys, aged four-teen years each, a few days since.

About a hundred men will be set to work on the recently discovered grants of quartz near Santa Rosa, Sonoma county.

Professor Fowler, the phrenologist, recently purchased a tract of land in the Mission Dolores, San Francisco, at $16 per acre.

Judge T. W. Freelon has secured a franchise for a street railroad from the wharf at San José to the Alameda Creek.

John Richardson, a well known livestock dealer of Petaluma, committed suicide on Wednesday morning at that place by shooting.

One hundred and ninety-seven thousand dollars were disbursed for labor in several mines, at Gold Hill, on Friday of last week.

The quicksilver mines of Lake and Napa counties yield about 1,000 flasks per month at present, which is the product of the Redington mine.

Out of thirty-five thousand sheep that were purchased in Napa and Solano county, prior to the winter season, scarcely three thousand survived the storms and snows of last year.

Work on the Southern Pacific Railroad was commenced at Delano, Kern county, on the 6th instant. It is expected the road will be completed to Bakersfield this season.

A man named Dennison shot one Downey in Salinas City on Monday last. Downey then wrenched the pistol from Dennison and shot him in the head. Dennison died within an hour; Downey may recover. Jealousy was the cause.

Salt Lake, April 7.—There is much attachment to day in mining circles in regard to the wonderful developements in the Hom estake, Dry Canon and Little Cottonwood districts. The latest discovery is a body of ore 8 feet wide. The Tribune claims it is the richest silver mass in the world. It yields $14,000 to the ton and persons at least participated in the discovery.

Half Irish at Least.—Mayor-Hewitt, of New York, is as great an advocate of Irish disruption from England as he was once an Irishman. However, if he is not, by his "better-half" some of the rebel Irish stock, for here is what he tells about her at the banquet of the Friendly Sons, held in New York on St. Patrick's Day last: "His did not wear a green suit, as was customary with other Mayors, but it was, nevertheless, very much mixed. On this point I can as easily satisfy you of my good will as Artemus Ward did of his loyalty by speaking his wife's relations to the war, and that I am much more of an Irishman than you suppose when I tell you that my wife's uncle was tried for the same offense, condemned to death, incarcerated in the same prison with Robert Emmet, but, instead of being executed with him, was pardoned. Soon afterward, Counselor Sampson, Doctor McNevens and John Caldwell, exiled to this country, where they long lived to adorn the upper story, being caused by a defective flue. The fire burned slowly, and the building could and would have been saved with comparatively slight damage if there had been an adequate supply of water and buckets—at hand. As it was, it was fortunate that the furniture and valuables were saved to the extent we did, as the total loss will be about $25,000 to $30,000, unfortunately the building was entirely unprotected by insurance. They have temporarily removed to Mr. Wm. Hayward's house in Franklin, where they may at present be addressed.

Thanks Returned.

The Sisters of the Sacred Heart Presentation Convent, corner of Taylor and Fifth streets, beg to return their grateful thanks to the friends of their institution who have kindly favored them with tickets for Rev. Father Scott's lecture for the installation of a portion of the debt on their schools. At usual, the well-known eloquence of the reverend lecturer attracted a crowded audience, and the net sum of $1,000 was thereby realized.

Wong Ching Foo, a Chinaman, was admitted to citizenship in Detroit, Michigan, many cases, to as much as their indebted ness; and this expense it is unreasonable on their part to expect us to incur. It is far easier for them to transmit the money to us, or to give it to our agents, than for us to send a person out on a special collecting tour.

Reports of the proceedings of St. Patrick's Day throughout the whole of the United States accord to the last celebration more solid, more enthusiasm and more moral and religious feeling than ever characterized any similar day in this or any other country. It was a glorious day for faith and fatherland.

CROP PROSPECTS.

Reports from all Prominent Points in California and Oregon.

SAN JOAQUIN.

STAR, April 2.—The condition of crops in this vicinity was never better. There is no perceptible difference between this and last year. We will be a third better than the crop of 1873, which was considered good. In this section, the District of eight townships, there are over sixty thousand acres put in. Parties from Hill's Ferry and Banisters county, report the crops are very flattering in that vicinity.

SAN BENITO.

HOLLISTER, April 3.—The winter in this section has been very mild and pleasant. Farmers under cultivation is probably much greater than last year, and will be in the aggregate to 15,000, of which a greater portion is wheat cultivation. Fifty hundred acres have been sown this year. The prospects for an abundant crop were never better since this valley settled than at present.

SAN MATEO.

HALF-MOON BAY, April 2.—The crops in this valley are very promising, although as yet it is a little late, on account of the late rains in April. There are about seven acres of land under cultivation this year than ever before.

SAN MATEO.

REDWOOD, April 3.—The crops look well, and we will have some in market by the first of June. As a general prospects for a good harvest were never better, and the farmers are jubilant over the prospect.

SAN MATEO.

HALF

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

IRELAND.

A Libel Suit Quashed.

Judge Fitzgerald is presiding over the Kerry Assizes in Tralee. The business for transaction on March 10th is thus described by the Cork Examiner:

On taking his seat his Lordship said: There is an application for Mr. Rickard O'Connell in person asking for an order to be at liberty to send up before the Grand Jury a bill of indictment against a Mr. J. M. Sullivan, who is described as publisher and printer of a newspaper called the Nation; and Mr. O'Connell complains that in the publication of that paper on the 5th November last he was libeled; for a subsequent number on the 28th he was also libeled. That is the whole description of the matter. He states that he went before the magistrates at Petty Sessions, who referred him to the resident magistrate who sat on the occasion; but he believed, supposing the paragraph to have been libelous, that Quarter Sessions had no jurisdiction. He then applied to the last Tralee Quarter Sessions, and the Chairman who presided there referred him to the Assizes, and he now comes here. There is no question at all of jurisdiction in cases of libel, and I for one would not be in the slightest degree unwilling to exercise it in cases of libel on private character. His Lordship said he gathered from the publication that Mr. Rickard O'Connell, having taken some part in a subscription published in the borough of Tralee, publishes in a local paper some letters that are not before the Court. Mr. O'Connell was the first to contribute a letter writing. Then came anonymous person signing himself "Hibernius" who publicly assumed that supposition his Lordship could not say—took exception to the letters of Mr. O'Connell. If there is anything libelous could this to be found in the letter of "Hibernius?" That letter originally published in the Tralee Chronicle, and thereupon Mr. O'Connell wrote a letter, and in it he has taken upon "Hibernius" the same serious responsibility. Going from a mud floor and cooking table at home, he has little idea of the splendor of a neat substantial and comfortable house. He has been accustomed in his own home to plenty and to rational entertainment, the Irish people having probably a smaller share and less variety of popular recreation than any other people in the world. So he knows of no other way to enjoy his money than in drinking; and, as he is of a social disposition, he treats his neighbors and they treat him, and thus the evil habit pursues him into the strange country and action down upon the colony where he lives. We confess we have no faith in altering this state of things by violent remedies. We believe no more in the permanent efficacy of Acts of Parliament to change the moral habits of a people than we do in the sensation crusades of the American ladies in which the Catholic Temperance Union refused to countenance. We only hope for improvement by the aid of voluntary temperance, where teetotalism be indulged to try it, and still more from extended education, increase of rational amusements, and such improvement in the dwellings and comforts of workingmen as may enable the strictness of home to outdid those of the tap-room.—Cork Examiner, March 11.

Death of a Polish Exile in Tipperary.

TRALEE, March 11.—To-day the solemn bell of our cathedral rang out the sad tale, "a hero is gone to his grave." Many readers of the Freeman will regret to recognize in him their friend Dr. Loudoski. In 1814 began at Cracow the eventful and honorable life which closed among us on the 5th inst. Educated at Bonn, where he was promoted to the priesthood, Dr. Loudoski entered on the Polish mission with a heart full of the love of God and of his suffering country. His longest remembrance was of his father dying on the scaffold for having struggled to right his country's wrongs. These wrongs still continued, and could the son of the patriotic martyr feel to them indifferent? No! His countrymen were driven in 1838 to rebellion; and the warm heart of Dr. Loudoski forced him into the vanguard. Some may deem his conduct rash; but we must say that even in a patriotic love knows not calculation. After several years in Siberia, Dr. Loudoski was set free on conditions of remaining a perpetual exile. He lived some time in Turkey, France and England, and at length found his home here with us in Tipperary. It was an exile's home, no doubt, but it was as happy as an exile's home can be. Many persons contributed to make it so, but they, with whom he willed to rest his mortal remains, deserve the applause of all who value Irish generosity and Christian charity. All that motherly tenderness and medical skill could do to prolong his life was done, as God had decreed to end the good fight of the faithful servant; and now neither height, nor depth, nor things present, nor things to come can separate him from the enjoyment of his God. His character may be established in these few words—those who knew him best loved him most. High Mass was celebrated in the Cathedral at 11 o'clock, the Grace Dr. Leahy presiding; Very Rev. A. F. Scully, President; Revs. Laurence Hayes and John Ryan, Professors, St. Patrick's College, celebrant, deacon and sub-deacon; Rev. L. Hayes, of the Christian Brothers, Thurles, assistant. The solemnity was added to the funeral procession by the presence of the students of the College, who accompanied the sad procession for a considerable distance. Every one of them felt a pride in honoring the poor exile, and would say from his inmost soul:

"Dear be the ground where the hero lies,
Soft be his pillow and sweet his rest."

—Corr. Dublin Freeman's Journal.

A Scandal Among Orangemen.

The subjoined shows upon what a small peg a quarrel may be hung by pusillilous individuals: A question affecting the status and dignity of the Archbishop of Armagh as Primate Bishops was brought under the notice of the Limerick Lunatic Asylum, March 10th, by Mr. Delmege. On perusing the minutes of the meeting in the name of the Governors to the Grand Jury, Mr. Delmege discovered that the Protestant Bishop of Limerick was put on a level with the Catholic Bishop, and simply described as the "Right Rev. Dr. Gillooly." This Mr. Delmege declared to be neither upon the Protestant people, who, under the Church Act, has a right to call himself a "Lord Bishop." The printer also omitted the Bishop's residence, which Mr. Delmege complained of this as a still more serious outrage than the first, inasmuch as it left the public in order that a person might be able to address him in his own grounds. Mr. O'Connell's letter is a specimen of the Tralee Chronicle and says "Dear Sir—You must see your own as apology for the insertion of the following letter in the Chronicle." The lowest theme of Billingsgate and calumny prompts Mr. O'Connell, even on so doctrine. He is a Protestant. Accordingly when the Rev. Father O'Connell took the law into his own hands, and thrashed in such a thing as a cat off to balance the account, the balance is largely in favor of Father O'Connell, for he has exposed the Orangeman trampled on his own platform. The Lord Lieutenant said Mr. O'Connell, in case he should be libeled, would have good to the Court of the Queen's Bench, and he would have ample opportunity of vindicating his character. Taking all the facts of the case into consideration, it would require the applicant to be a Protestant Orangeman.

Death and Arrest.

Edward Grimes, Mr. Coleman, P. said Judge Fitzgerald, "there could be no action in Kerry." There was a train to be starting and he, the speaker (if that expression may be applied to a judge), would be happy to be at the station only to baptize that the Judge congratulated the Grand Jury upon Mr. Rice for Ireland, as he subsequently observed, there could be found in any criminal business in that county to do. This is a remarkable attestation of the natural morality of the people, while at the same time it points to the one worm that gnaws at the root of their virtues. If the Irish people, as a body, could only be made sober, they would, we honestly believe, be the most respectable in morals by any other people in Europe. They are free from the vices of religion that bring when the enemy in the mouth has not stolen away the brains. They are free from questions and habits of perversion when that demon gets the upper hand with them. In short, the Irish people, when sober, have no more harm in the Irish man than is from elsewhere. Here their powerful and the constant overflowing of the priesthood tend to check the evil to some degree; it is when they go abroad to please or when they obtain independence and consequence by the same means that the evil comes to the front. Lord Eldon said he had never had to sit on a case of murder in which drink was not the principal agent. Ignorance has nothing to do with it.

When the ignorant Irishman in a foreign country receives a large sum in money wages he knows hardly what to do with it. He unfortunately has very little intelligence in very serious about what he eats; it does not strike him in lay on his stomach or on his clothes. Going from a mud floor and cooking table at home, he has little idea of the splendor of a neat substantial and comfortable house. He has been accustomed in his own home to plenty and to rational entertainment, the Irish people having probably a smaller share and less variety of popular recreation than any other people in the world. So he knows of no other way to enjoy his money than in drinking; and, as he is of a social disposition, he treats his neighbors and they treat him, and thus the evil habit pursues him into the strange country and action down upon the colony where he lives. We confess we have no faith in altering this state of things by violent remedies. We believe no more in the permanent efficacy of Acts of Parliament to change the moral habits of a people than we do in the sensation crusades of the American ladies in which the Catholic Temperance Union refused to countenance. We only hope for improvement by the aid of voluntary temperance, where teetotalism be indulged to try it, and still more from extended education, increase of rational amusements, and such improvement in the dwellings and comforts of workingmen as may enable the strictness of home to outdid those of the tap-room.—Cork Examiner, March 11.

A Lord Mayor Snubbed.

In the Cork Examiner of March 11th we find the following: "The Lord Mayor of London has received a severe snub from the young gentlemen who are to carry the colors of Oxford in the race between the Universities this year. Vanity, to the perpetrators enthusiasm which Londoners display about the match, the great civic dignitary invited the crew and some friends with him at the Mansion House on the evening of the race. No doubt whatever was taken of the invitation by Oxford, and when their secretary was written to a second time for an answer, asking to what number they were to be assibned by a lot of school-boys was too much for the temper of the Lord Mayor, and he has forthwith withdrawn the invitation. The Oxford crew that after the display of bad manners they had made in declining his invitation unanswered he did not regret the loss of their company. This may be all very well in London, but it hardly exhilarates him from the ridiculous position in which his presumption and folly placed the regular solution of the Oxford athletes. The Cambridge crew had accepted the invitation, but as the presence of Oxford was indispensable, his Lordship had to reluctantly quash his hospitable, though somewhat unobtrusive, plans.

A Woman's Stratagem.

The Orton correspondence has become quite an interesting feature in the London newspapers. Mrs. Pitmerhugh, the dear wife of the lawyer's clerk, has favored the Telegraph with three columns of her experience with the great Tichborne case, and the splendid building, the Tribunal of Commerce, was transformed, as if by magic, into a fine palace. The cours d'honneur, bordered row, was one of the most admirable hall-rooms imaginable, and nothing was left undone in the way of ornament and convenience. Shrubs and flowers, full-sized by large mirrors, rich carpets and costly furniture, gave it the appearance of a royal palace. Different from the Tuileries and gorgeous salons of the Hotel de Ville, the whole scene could be taken in at a glance from the upper galleries, as the pit and stage of a theater from the top row. A series of splendid apartments all round on the upper floor, and another from the hall round, all ordel place for the guests, who were not less than eight or nine thousand, for they came flocking in up to one o'clock in the morning. A great novelty was the flood of electric light which fell on the rich gray and gold drapery which covered the glass dome above. It looked like a burst of bright sunshine, making the five thousand taper lights below look pale, and had sometimes, when the rays were directed downwards, a most dazzling effect. At nine the dance began in both salons, and continued until the crowd became so dense that there was little space left. The right from above was one that baffles description. Paris, la reine de la mode, as she is often poetical, from the great capitalist to the Death of Cardinal Barnabo.

We regret to announce the death of the Most Eminent Cardinal Barnabo, Prefect of the Congregation of the Propaganda, which occurred on Thursday morning, the 12th inst., at the age of seventy-four years. The deceased Cardinal was born at Genazzano, in the Roman States, on the 15th of August, 1800. He was created Cardinal Deacon of the Title of St. Agatha of the Suburra in the Consistory held on the 22nd of December, 1856, and was appointed Prefect of the Propaganda on the 6th of January, 1868. His Eminence was also Archpriest of the Liberian Basilica, Grand Penitentiary, Protector of the Hospital of the Holy Ghost, and Protector of the Hospital of the Fatebenefratelli. The Cardinal was a member of the Congregations of the Index, Rites, Studies, Ceremonial, Loreto, Ecclesiastical Immunity, Indulgences, Relics, Sacred Penitentiary, Bishops and Regulars, Propagation of the Faith, Affairs of Religious, Council, Residence of Bishops, Extraordinary Affairs, Revision of Briefs, Consistorial, Ecclesiastical Affairs, Sacred Consulta, Revision of Processes, Rites of the Oriental Church, Sacred Visitation, Sacred Inquisition

LATE NEWS ITEMS.

On Sunday, March 23d, a new tombstone was put up over the grave of Wolfe Tone, at Bodenstown.

About two hundred and fifty Communists met in London, March 16th, to celebrate the anniversary of the Commune.

At the London International Exhibition of 1874 25,000 samples of all the Portuguese wines will be exhibited.

The high altar of the Catholic church, Maynooth, was dedicated with imposing religious ceremonial on March 16.

A coalition between New South Wales, Queensland and New Zealand is contemplated for the construction of another submarine cable to Singapore.

The London Corporation has decided to present the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh with a service of plate valued at 3,000 guineas.

At Ch'ok Anetzee, March 16th, the four militia men charged with the raid on the Belsdon barrack and robbery of arms were found guilty.

The Prince Imperial has gained the largest number of marks at the Woolwich College examination, and therefore has the first place on the list.

The disappearance of the cyclopic and wall cracks of Mount Vesuvius continues. In the absence of eruptive phenomena it may almost be said to have ceased to exist.

There was a public "rejoicing" March 17th at Castlecomar to celebrate the coming of age of Charles Stewart Butler Clarke Wandesforde, a connection of the house of Ormonde.

No less than twenty-three deaths were caused in Dublin during one week by scarlet fever. Four deaths were referable to typhus fever, and the same number to typhoid.

The new Prussian Cross Gazette says it is possible that the German Parliament will be dissolved if the first clauses of the military bill, fixing the peace effective strength of the army at 401,659 men, is not adopted.

Private advices from Stockholm state that typhus and small-pox are raging terribly, and have caused a perfect panic. There is much misery among the population, and economic distress.

The Italian Senate and Chamber of Deputies have adopted a congratulatory address to the King, which was to be presented to-day to the Queen of Italy, on the 22d of March, the anniversary of his accession to the throne.

At the London Bankruptcy Court, March 18th, an injunction was continued against the creditors of C. L. Lane, proprietor of the Soldier Army and Navy Club, whose debts are estimated at £22,000; assets £400.

John Ball, Harbor-master of Dunkarrig, Flintshire, while lighting the lamps of the harbor, was, it is supposed, on Tuesday, March 17th, blown from his ladder by a sudden gust of wind and drowned in the basin.

At a numerously attended meeting, held in Oldham, March 16th, a resolution in favor of the bill to remove the electoral disabilities of women was unanimously adopted. The Mayor presided, and there was a large number of ladies and gentlemen present.

Thomas Halliday and John Worrall, President and Secretary of the Miners' Amalgamated Association, England, with seven others, were charged at the Manchester assizes with conspiracy to induce miners to leave their employment.

The consecration of the Most Rev. Dr. Redwood, S. M. A., Bishop-elect of Wellington, New Zealand, by his Grace the Archbishop of Westminster, assisted by their lordships the Bishops of Birmingham and Southwark, took place in London on 25th March.

His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has approved of the appointment by Major Gen. W. L. Pye Tremch, R.E., of the post of Private Secretary to the Chief Secretary for Ireland, to which he has been appointed by the Right Hon. Sir Michael Hicks Beath, Bart., M. P., his new Chief Secretary for Ireland.

Mr. James Campbell, of Kilkea, has two very valuable ewes which, during one week, presented him with seven fine lambs, all of them being strong, healthy and full size. One of the ewes is thirteen years old, and never did better, but twice, when it was a lamb, which may be said to be a remarkable instance of prolificness in a ewe.

At a meeting of the Charity Organization Society, March 18th, Mr. W. E. Forster, M.P., in the chair, it was stated that over forty thousand cases had been investigated, six thousand relieved, four thousand put in the way of obtaining relief from other societies, and about five thousand dismissed as unworthy. Archbishop Manning, Mr. Alderman Booth, Duke of Newcastle, and Mr. C. Tovelyan, were among those present.

Sale of Land.—Sold adjoining the town of Naas, containing 4 acres, 3 roods and 27 perches, took places in the Town Hall, Naas on Tuesday last, the 17th inst., and was sold by lease for an unexpired term of about thirty-seven years from M. G. P. L. Mansfield, Morristown, Lattin, at a yearly rent of £38, and sold for the enormous sum of £600, exclusive of county fees, &c.

A very attractive auction was recently held by Mr. Paisson at the residence of the late Miss Alexander, daughter of the well-known Bishop of Meath. In the ornamentation of the villa, gems, lots, we have a magnificent silk quilt and lace pillows, presented to and used by William III. when at Jackson Hall, Colerain.—Ex.

An entertainment was given in the Round Room of the Rotunda, Dublin, on Tuesday evening in aid of the Meath Hospital, the proceeds were to be given to the destitute widow the orphans of Patrick Moorhead, the lately deceased pointsman. There was an exceedingly attractive attendance, and a varied and most attractive programme was very creditably sustained.

Four to six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery are warranted to cure any chronic blood disease, from a common blotch or pimple to the worst scrofula. Send to the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel Association, Buffalo, N. Y., for a treatise on blood and skin diseases, with colored plates, or 150 pages, for 10 cents in stamps. Address as above.

A WOMAN SO REMEDY.

TRINITY, Jackson Co., Ohio, March 20, 1873.—Dr. R. V. Pierce—Your Discovery needs only a few trial with me to fill you with wonder, joy and more tan. When I was fifteen I caught cold, and for twenty-eight years I had a terrible case of Catarrh of the head; and all the medicines and doctors' bills I have paid out would make you sick. Besides all this, and worse by far, I suffered from a severe pain in my back and lower bowels for the same time, and never by night, nor morn, when I grew up at least ever arose or rising for anything without I resorted one or four Anodyne Bonds. Still my suffering continued, and I was sick and sore. My friends did not think I was long for this world. My wife and I decided I was helpless and hopeless, and I was induced to try your Golden Medical Discovery, and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and was almost entirely cured in one year, and my wife was as well as ever I was. There was enough left to my head. Now my head is as sound as a dollar, my voice is clear, and I have used no bottles of your Discovery. It has cured me of catarrh, sore throat, heart disease, sick headache and bowel blues. My liver was very bad. By using your Discovery, what I put into my mouth was not my food, what I put into my mouth was not my food, what I put into my mouth was not my food

THE FRANC-TIREUR.

A Tale of the Franco-Prussian War.

CHAPTER LXX.

DARK TIDE.

The time of Annette was divided between attendance on the soldiers in the ambulance and on the sorrowing mistress of the house which had been given over to it. Though sad thoughts often filled the breast of the girl, and though her daily occupations were not of a nature to raise her spirits, she rejected the gloomy tendency that seemed to be in the very air she breathed. A few days after the death of the viscount, his father had come from his post to pay a dying visit to his wife. Annette was not present at the interview, and caught little more than a glimpse of the Marquis. He was in uniform. He appeared hardly as old as his wife, and his form was erect and vigorous. But there was a look on his face of sombre despair which startled Annette as she beheld it.

When she went to visit the Marquise after her husband had departed, she found her with her face buried in the pillow, and making no sound but low moans, which seemed to escape her unconsciously from time to time. Annette laid her hands softly a

She only shivered. Then, with the boldness of affection, the girl clung her arms around the wasted form, and kissed it with warmly soothing words. Before the energy had quite subsided she said to Annette, "I want to get up—help me."

"Alas, madame is not strong. In a few days, perhaps—"

"Talk not to me of days when there is a duty to be done. My boy's corpse has not come from Sedé, or put into some fosse without distinction. My husband—who would have spoken harshly to me had he ever reproached me with it. Come, I will go and make my boy," And with a force of fortitude scarcely she strove to rise from the bed. "Yes," she continued wildly, "it is in this bed in which he was born, how from my husband's manner that I feared never to see him again. He said to me his last hope was to get a medical bulletin from the Tuileries." While speaking thus in a high, excited voice, her hands were busy lifting the strings of her cap, as if she were immediately to rise. But the filial energy declined almost as rapidly as it arose. She let the fingers soon began to play idly with the strings, the flush died out of the wan cheek, and she lay back on her pillow with a renewed pallor that alarmed Annette for her life. The latter considerately stored with much care, but so diminished in quantity that it was not hard to see how the refreshment could not be long delayed.

The time of Annette was divided between attendance on the soldiers in the ambulance and on the sorrowing mistress of the house which had been given over to it. Though sad thoughts often filled the breast of the girl, and though her daily occupations were not of a nature to raise her spirits, she rejected the gloomy tendency that seemed to be in the very air she breathed. A few days after the death of the viscount, his father had come from his post to pay a dying visit to his wife. Annette was not present at the interview, and caught little more than a glimpse of the Marquis. He was in uniform. He appeared hardly as old as his wife, and his form was erect and vigorous. But there was a look on his face of sombre despair which startled Annette as she beheld it.

When she went to visit the Marquise after her husband had departed, she found her with her face buried in the pillow, and making no sound but low moans, which seemed to escape her unconsciously from time to time. Annette laid her hands softly a

She only shivered. Then, with the boldness of affection, the girl clung her arms around the wasted form, and kissed it with warmly soothing words. Before the energy had quite subsided she said to Annette, "I want to get up—help me."

"Alas, madame is not strong. In a few days, perhaps—"

"Talk not to me of days when there is a duty to be done. My boy's corpse has not come from Sedé, or put into some fosse without distinction. My husband—who would have spoken harshly to me had he ever reproached me with it. Come, I will go and make my boy," And with a force of fortitude scarcely she strove to rise from the bed. "Yes," she continued wildly, "it is in this bed in which he was born, how from my husband's manner that I feared never to see him again. He said to me his last hope was to get a medical bulletin from the Tuileries." While speaking thus in a high, excited voice, her hands were busy lifting the strings of her cap, as if she were immediately to rise. But the filial energy declined almost as rapidly as it arose. She let the fingers soon began to play idly with the strings, the flush died out of the wan cheek, and she lay back on her pillow with a renewed pallor that alarmed Annette for her life. The latter considerately but she blood seemed to rush back to her heart as she passed through a wide street she saw a high above her head a terrible dark object just rush screaming through the air. It tore through the roof of a house beside her, sending up a cloud of dust and smoke, with bright flame between, while a shower of fragments fell around. A piece of iron three or four pounds weight buried itself in the roadway close to her, while on the other side a tile from the roof threatened her with a grave peril. With screaming filled Annette's ears. At her side was immediately a half-a-dozen ragged lads plunging and struggling to get at the piece of iron which she regarded with such affright.

With a shout of triumph the biggest of the lads tore off the prize, which he waved above his head. "A grand specimen," he exclaimed in his shrill voice, "worth two francs." The beaten competitors looked on with envious faces, while Gamet threw remarked sadly, "If I too had Vogel should have got that, and there hasn't been a shell fired into this street for a week."

"Never mind," was the consolatory reply from a sympathetic companion, "the bombardment they say is to get heavier every day, and then we shall have plenty."

"Yes, but if they become so abundant nobody will pay for them."

"Ah, that's true."

Meantime amid the noise and confusion Annette's ear detected a sound of shrieks ringing loud and clear from the upper portion of the house. It was a poor quarter, the dwellings of which not very lofty; the least little or nothing of the neighborhood. Annette had no idea what animal produced a sound. But her heart bounded with pity, and after a moment's hesitation she entered the open door and rushed up the stairs. Many others were likewise ascending in eagerness; Annette followed them. Arriving at the highest landing the open door of a large attic was pushed in by one of the people. With the darkness and the sudden lightening came of the room presented an unexpected contrast, but it was become a great part of the roof had been blown away, while the rafters were on fire, though as yet the flame had not penetrated to the various stories. Right in the middle of the floor lay the body of a woman face downwards, and quite dead. From a wound in the head there flowed a copious stream of blood. Beneath her dress could be seen the feet of a little girl, perfectly still, but no sound came from the child. In a second it flashed across Annette's mind that the little things were deflected by the fall of the mother. There was one living thing, however, in the apartment. Crouched in the corner, with a bursted animal, with gleaming eyes that seemed to blaze from the dusk, stood a big dog. It had fallen over her shoulder, and she drew a napoleon from her pocket.

The woman reddened, and hesitated. Then she was a time, melodiously, when nothing would have induced me to accept every coin, but now—" She added with an embarrassed laugh, "it is idle to be proud when we are fed worse than the beggars of the town."

"Madam," said Annette, "you have no reason to be ashamed. And as she left her bounty pending on her eyes, she said in a slightly faltering voice, "Ah, there are still bright points in this terrible and gloomy siege."

CHAPTER LXXI.

DARKER AND DARKER STILL.

December had merged into January, but the new year had brought with it no beneficial change. The great Parisian festival was not celebrated with its usual gayety. Hunger and cold had all but killed the festivity of enjoyment. Annette continued to nurse the feeble health of the Marquise, who only heard at rare intervals of the unspoken grief of her husband, and who apparently derived little comfort from his brief letters. Even consolation as Annette could give was unavailing, but it is difficult to cheer those who are at once bowed by mental anguish and by bodily weakness.

Though her position was not enough she bore herself cheerfully in it, and struggled to be supported by the reasonings of her heart. But even here, as it seemed to her, the terror of the enemy pursued her. The gloomy shroom as she passed from her neighborhood of the Luxembourg through the Place St. Sulpice, she looked in vain for the face of Jean Gamet. He had attracted by curiosity to see closer the splendid proportions of the interior, half moved by that desire which impels pious souls to acts of devotion when opportunity appears to offer itself to them. Annette entered. There were but few in the church, mostly women. There presently a loud explosion from the direction of the Champs de Mars seems to belong to shrieks, so intense that it may be felt. A few lights flickered on the altar. Then and there were one or two kneeling figures in front of the rails. Annette drew near, held her head reverently, and put up a petition for the safety and happiness of those who were dear to her. Suddenly there was a roar, and a blinding glare, a crash and confusion that seemed to take away her senses. She sprang from her knees. The altar before her was leveled, the candlesticks and ornaments were overthrown and demolished, the hangings in flames. The church hitherto so silent was filled with the clamorous colony of terror. Some dozens of people before Annette fully realized the situation. A shell had struck the altar. She glanced aside. Her next neighbor lay prostrate on the ground. "She has swooned from fright," Annette thought to herself, and she stooped to raise the woman. But she found blood oozing from her breast; she had been struck by a fragment of the shell. A priest rushed hastily from the sacristy, and gave some directions for the suppression of the fire. Many had attacked the drapery, and then went to the aid of the fallen woman. "She is not dead," he said after a short examination, "but her condition is dangerous; we must have her removed." Add was a cab at the door, and the woman was borne away, the priest in close attendance upon her, anxiously watching the moment when the nature of her intelligence would enable her to receive his spiritual ministrations.

Annette moved sadly away, the impression made by the terrible scene and by her own narrow escape not to be easily got rid of. But her nature was strong and healthy, and she made an earnest effort to shake off the horror of the impression. She had partially succeeded when her attention was attracted by a crowd at a house in the street through which she was passing. It was a large pain building, with several stories, and the lower part of the center gable a cross; she had no difficulty in distinguishing it as a school. One of the windows had been torn away, and a large portion of the wall with it. Annette quickly comprehended the meaning of the now too familiar appearance. From the crowd there arose a loud and continuous noise as if persons speaking in a very excited manner above which rose every now and then a piercing shriek. As Annette came near the crowd opened, and two men emerged from it. They bore between them a flat board, and on it was extended a little child about eight years of age. There was blood upon the clothes, and the dark hair which fell in short curls over its forehead was stained and matted with gore. Beside the little corpse, holding one of the small hands, raising it now and then with loud piteous cries, to her lips, walked a young woman. As she came near the spot where Annette stood, she heard the words, "Only darling," were all the intelligible words Annette could gather, but they told of as much sorrow as a volume could.

"What is the matter, mademoiselle?" said a man who was looking on at the scene, not difficult to guess what is the matter. We are not starving fast enough for monsieurs the Prussians, but they are quick at off root and branch. They must kill our very children!"

"Was there more than that little fellow slain?"

"More! Why Le's the fourth corpse I've seen go out here, and they've got the dozen above there with a lot of the survivors in the

"It is nothing to what happened at the Pelagie," said another, "where twelve National Guards were slaughtered by the bursting of a single ball."

"Ah, but it was a shell, and a fearful one!"

"Shell or bullet, it's all the same to the dead."

"Mon Dieu! Why Le's the fourth corpse I've seen go out here, and they've got the dozen above there with a lot of the survivors in the

"It is nothing to what happened at the Pelagie," said another, "where twelve National Guards were slaughtered by the bursting of a single ball."

"Ah, but it was a shell, and a fearful one!"

"Shell or bullet, it's all the same to the dead."

Annette hastily bade him good evening, and hurried into the house. Before returning to her attendance on the Marquise she went to pay a visit to the ambulance, where she was in the habit of giving such attentions as she could in the intervals of her task. Here was not much to raise spirits depressed by appearances out of doors. New accessions to the number of wounded came in now and then, some struck in ouvert affairs, others hit by shells in the forts or in the streets. At the entrance door through which she passed there lay the corpse of a soldier who had just died. As yet the bearers had not come to remove him. At the farther end of the ward a soldier was seated on the side of his pallet with his head down, evidently in deep reception on some object he held in his hands.

"Good evening, Monsieur Mike," said she.

"Oh, Miss Annette," he replied, looking up, "I'm much better, thanks be to God, and to the good people here, your poor servant left included."

"You do not feel much pain in your leg?"

"Why, then, no—not exactly."

"Not exactly?"

"Well you see, if I was to say where the pain was precisely, I think I would say in the knapsack."

Annette smiled. "You have recovered very rapidly."

"I suppose I did, but after all, Miss, be two days and six weeks doesn't go so quickly on the flat of one's back."

"Ah, he assured I fully sympathize with you touching your case, but I must, considering the nature of the hurt, it is not long."

"To be sure it isn't, and I'm certainly hard to please when I'd grumble about it. But in truth, Miss Annette, I'm put out of humor."

"Indeed! Has anything been done to annoy you in the ambulance?"

"O, yes, not intentionally. The people here mean well. The old doctor is a little cross, but the members of the staff are very kind, and the nurses are civil enough. But the old chap wouldn't let him. I let them fight it out between them one time on Saturday. Tippersy assisse. A rural Lovelace that county had wooed and won the belle. It is a long story of rustic love making deceivers over? The gallant Tipperary was, too late, called to the transports and showed a desire to end his engagement. At this point Theodore, who had overheard the conversation, saw it was taken against the faithless one, was the story of a love tempest cleared, and we are glad to say that the prayers and tears of the injured fair were not in vain, and that the course of true love ran thenceforth smoothly. The lady, no doubt, had her lesson to teach, the young gent of twelve summers, and true triumphantly reward. The lady, no doubt, had her lesson to teach, the young gent of twelve summers, and true triumphantly reward.

"Then will, then, just this," and he brought forward a cuirass which he had laid beside him against the bed when Annette spoke.

"Mademoiselle is only a certain, but you will have to use it long."

"Aha! when I'm done with it the clegs will not be worth a rap."

"I trust in heaven it may be," said Annette with a vivid recollection of what she had seen through the day.

"But, Miss Annette, just look at the shell. It reminds me of the chest-pot. It calls back to me the days when I had a home and I stood together; and it tells me that while outside in walls men are fighting sternly against them infernal Prussians, I have a use-

(To be Continued.)

THE TREATY STONE.

Where Shannon's waters on their way
Through Limerick's fair city flow,
The treaty stone is planted by the margin,
Its base is hidden by the waters,
Yet, there and then,
It tells a tale
Of Ireland's fairest fighting time,
When Sarsfield led the van,
The battered bastion flew aroun
Her flag was flying still.

Ah, beware of that bloody past.
White yet the star of hope
Shone through the fiery cloud and blast
Is Freedom's horizon spot
Death winnows with his sickle could be dumb—
Remorseless the day
When Ireland fell
A prostrate victim bound
Appealing to heaven?
A perjured Saxon hand was laid on thee,
A soldier stamped the seal—
Stood firm, defiant, and unbending
Of English guile and shame!

What boots it if our sires, betrayed,
And stripped of life and home,
Broke service base and nothing made
In hand across the sea?
The blood they shed was Irish blood,
Sun red by Irish veins
We proved their worth
We proved their truth
And yielded beneath the steel.
All France's glory heaped on me;
Is mine now, for sold and free,
Some things had Europe's hail of shot
The Saxon could not steal.

And why did Ireland fall so low,
And very deep! her might!
Th shield of prayer and valour and blow
The ancient Jacob's!
Oh, treachery! Ireland by king!—
Her dead king, betrayed—
Her dead king, betrayed—
The d ordeal forever
Of her unconquered youth,
Grey prophecy and Druid's Banbane banter!
One oath through Ireland rolled,
And a nation's curse
Hurled for England kings.

For who recalls, his heart not pulsed,
That golden memories,
A cursed sinner's name maintained
On Ireland's shore,
Or Anglia's Bed—on Bayne's declivities
Where Saxon blood
And Irish mingled
The direct rose left,
Hewed it asunder,
For whom, for whom, was such red cost?
Thou Irish Saxon—
The—Ireland's name two centuries lost—
Hewed it asunder.

O solemn wheel by the tide!
O Thomond's Memnon, hear!
If broken is your spirit,
We've yet to learn it well
Ah, Ireland's fame and Sarsfield's haste
Has stirred our old spirit,
Though rusted it be
In rust would
Be born of roughhewed men,
Enough if hearts were there to fit
Its sutters from the mould,
The steel has been well wrought
Of which our blades were made.

God guard thee well, thou peerless stone,
Thy fame is spreading fast,
Thou dost it more than sense to note,
Or Saxon to forget,
Our Ireland of the Irish love,
Ever more a stone wrong—
Ever more a stone right
The living light
Is heaven's gift
Truth cometh—truth comes—the shadows race,
And now the dawn is done
Thy hit shall be the proudest place
In Ireland's Pantheon.

MORTIMER WEST.

An American "Evangelist" named Wall had, some weeks since, the consummate impudence to loudly address Monsignor Capel as he was descending from the pulpit in the church of St. Andrea delle Frate, Rome, after having preached a very eloquent sermon. The sanctity of the place was this "Evangelist's" only protection from a good sound kicking, which he richly deserved. Wall wanted to open a controversy there and then. Monsignor Capel politely told him that if he had any questions to ask they would be cheerfully and completely answered at either the "Evangelist's" house or at his own.

A Protestant Observer in China.

President Grant's "inspector of foreign consulates," Dr. J. P. Newman, has been contributing to the Methodist Christian Advocate some of the results of his researches into the state of Christian Missions in China. They are embodied in two articles, the first of which is devoted to the work of the Catholic Church in that empire, and is framed, not inaptly, "Christ in China," and the second, to "Protestant Missions in China." They are interesting, both for what they tell and what they omit to tell concerning both classes of these missions. Dr. Newman quotes the "Rev. Father Pathier" as his authority for saying that there are now in China forty Catholic bishops, nine hundred and fifty priests, of whom five hundred are native Chinese; forty Sisters of Charity, with thousands of orphans under their charge; sixty colleges, with learned professors and many students; and, at least, half a million of communicants. The last phrase we suspect to be a Newmanism. It certainly is not one likely to be used in such connection by a Catholic priest. The number of Catholic Chinese is given by the recent English traveler Cooper, the only foreigner not a Catholic missionary who has ever really penetrated the empire, and who did it only by their assistance, as something over a million. So far back as 1859, there were 530,000 in Cochin China alone; and in 1861, there were found in only two dioceses of that land 16,000 who suffered martyrdom for their faith, and 20,000 more who for the same cause were sold into slavery. "Then," says Dr. Newman's word for it that the still more recent measures against them have been more severe than ever that their courage. "At Tientsin," he says,

"THE CATHOLICS HAVE SURVIVED THE MASSACRE."

Their Cathedral, at the junction of the Paho and the Grand Canal, remains in a dilapidated condition but the walls where the Sisters were so brutally murdered a decade and a half ago still retain the marks of the atrocities, while in the Foreign Concession is their new cathedral, 50 by 150, surrounded by buildings for the residence of nuns and the orphans." Dr. Newman considers the triumph of Christianity in Roman Catholics in China as little removed in superstition and image-worship from the Buddhists," and mentions their work only on account of their being a real "power" in China. Real Christianity, according to his notion of what it may be, is to be found only in the Protestant missions, and we regret to be compelled to say of objections to the scheme, asking questions which we have already refuted. We have the story of a love tempest cleared, and we are glad to say that the prayers and tears of the injured fair were not in vain, and that the course of true love ran thenceforth smoothly. The lady, no doubt, had her lesson to teach, the young gent of twelve summers, and true triumphantly reward.

"Then will, then, just this," and he brought forward a cuirass which he had laid beside him against the bed when Annette spoke.

"Mademoiselle is only a certain, but you will have to use it long."

"Aha! when I'm done with it the clegs will not be worth a rap."

"I trust in heaven it may be," said Annette with a vivid recollection of what she had seen through the day.

"But, Miss Annette, just look at the shell. It reminds me of the chest-pot. It calls back to me the days when I had a home and I stood together; and it tells me that while outside to walls men are fighting sternly against them infernal Prussians, I have a use-

(To be Continued.)

The Home Rule Debate.

The principal incident in the House Commons last night was the debate on Home Rule; produced by Mr. Butt's motion for the repeal of the Union. The member for Limerick moved the assertion of a paragraph declaring the satisfaction prevails very extensively Ireland with the existing system of government, and that complaints are made the Irish people do not enjoy the benefit of the Constitution and the privileges of the law, and pledging himself to bring forward at an early opportunity the origin of the dissatisfaction, a view to the removal of all just and discontent. Mr. Butt claimed for the people that they should be allowed to help their own affairs, leaving to the perial Parliament control of such as affecting the integrity and power of country at large. He denied that the Home Government was responsible for any wish on the part of the Home to interfere with the unity of the empire. He complained of the severity of the sire code, which the Lord Lieutenant the power to enforce, and showed that liberties and freedoms enjoyed by the of the United Kingdom had been withheld from Ireland. He did not ask that ment should on this occasion give to the most savage and relentless civil strife ever before known, that raged for seven during those years of strife and bloodshed the built of the Roman Catholic population of Armagh were driven away from their homes. It was true that the People'-Day Boys had become known as "Lodge-Orange Defenders as Ribbonmen, which name in Ireland they still retain, and Ribbonmen in England and Scotland, the Ribbonmen in Ireland, as well as the Whiteboys, have been chiefly confined to the Province of Ulster.

FROM THE RIBBONMEN

they the present society called in America from the organizations of a similar character, have, in Ireland, degenerated. Like a the name of the age, although it is still religious in its character.

THE A. O. H. IN CALIFORNIA.

The first order was first established in America in 1836, in the city of New York, and is constituted to grow as the population, extending itself throughout the United States and Canada, and counts at the present time nearly hundred Lodges and 17,277 members. The Order was introduced into California by James Brown and James Walters in 1866, and to-day there are twenty-three Lodges on the coast, with a total membership of over seven hundred thousand. Eight of Pennsylvania Lodges are located in this city, with an active membership of about one thousand. "The Order seems to flourish better in New York and Brooklyn than they do elsewhere—twenty-two Lodges in the former city and eighteen in the latter—with a united membership of twenty thousand.

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE ORDER

is representative and democratic in form, the supreme power being vested in the National Council of Ireland, known as the Grand Lodge of Erin; but the Order in America is governed by the National Convention which holds its general meetings in the city of New York on the 31st March, which is presided over by the National Delegate, the head of the Order in America. The State Convention of each State also meets annually, about the same time as the National Council, and is composed of the officers of the various lodges throughout the State. There is also a Board of Directors for each county, composed of the officers of the different Divisions, together with the County officers, which meets on the 20th of each month for the local supervision and direction of the Order within the jurisdiction.

OFFICERS OF THE A. O. H.

The present State Delegate is M. Wards, the State Secretary J. H. Gilmore, and the County Delegate for this county is J. F. Sullivan. The General President for the county of San Francisco is M. C. Hassett, and the following are the Presiding Presidents for the Lodges in this city: No. 1—F. J. Kaid; No. 2—William Simpson; No. 3—H. Gallagher; No. 4—James Hunter; No. 5—J. McGrath; No. 6—H. Monaghan; No. 7—William Higgins; No. 8—William Gilleran.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR MEMBERSHIP, ETC.

The Order is benevolent and fraternal in its character, granting material and spiritual aid to its members, encouraging unity and good will among the brotherhood, and inculcating sobriety and Christian charity. Qualifications for membership—Males, between 21 and 60 years, and communicants of the Roman Catholic Church.

A Lesson from the Antipodes.

Has any thoughtful observer of Irish affairs pondered the significant fact that in proportion as the ties of nationality and religion—the two principles among Irish Catholics and Protestants, so are the embittered relations between men of different religious convictions soothed and suppressed; while denominational rivalry in the province of West-British provincialism we have the social estrangements, the painful conflicts, the rankling feuds, between Protestant and Catholic which are the normal condition of the only political purity in Ireland who make it a cardinal matter of principle and a primary duty of action to banish sectarian animosities and promote cordial and fraternal relations between Irishmen of different religious beliefs, are the Parnellites. Such is the policy and it is the interest of English factions to keep smouldering here the fires of religious animosities. The Russian Czar denounced the language in which a high-spirited and gallant people were deliberately insulted. The Russian press went further, and retorted on Prince Bismarck and his countrymen in phraseology rational and unmeasured. We need not say that the sting was most deeply felt where it was intended to be felt. The proud people were throbbed with fierce indignation at the fresh humiliation so cruelly and wantonly inflicted on them. The British journals, whose appliance has encouraged Prince Bismarck in part of his policy, hesitated to approve the latest exhibition of their statesmanship. All things calculated, the Prince saw that it had gone too far. A sort of authorised apology, or rather explanation with reference to the terms in which the words used by the Prince to Herr Jokai, was published in the Prussian official papers. In this it was declared that the remark had used the language attributed to him, with respect to France. He had not, however, called the French a nation of colored savages. The contradiction came, however, too late. The wounded vanity and the sullen resentment of the Prince have operated to soothe the wounded feelings of the French people, or removed the reasonable irritation excited among all sections.—It is only where Irishmen are freed, elevated, ennobled, by the privileges of freedom, and by the duties of self-government—that those sentiments can be found to pervade them.

The newspaper containing the above correspondence publishes also a farewell oration to an Irish "Orangeman" about to revisit the natal isle—nay an Irish Orangeman he was, and would have been still, here in Ireland; but an Irishman who, in the course of thirty years in that distant land, and assentially as a parliamentary representative in its independent local legislature, had learned to respect and love his fellow-subjects, and who had won no inconsiderable share in their regard and confidence. The Hibernian Society present him with an address; they speak of him as one who, though a Protestant, had ever been the friend of impartial and just dealing to them. Who is this gentleman? And what the opportunity for whose name still causes a thrill in Ulster, Samuel Gray, of Ballybay? What would this man be had he remained at home in Ireland? He would be a wretched bigot, a "D. G. M.," or a "P. D. G. M." or an "O. Y. Z." or some other mysterious functionary in a Home Ruler with that poor slave, Johnston of Ballykilbeg! What is Mr. Gray to-day? A man of fortune; a legislator in a free country; honored and respected by his fellow citizens of every class and creed. Are we surprised? In all this, O Irishmen!—Dublin Nation.

Brutality Run Mad.

We published not long since a resume of a conversation which occurred between Prince Bismarck and Herr Jokai, a Hungarian gentleman, who had "interviewed" the Carnot of German conquest. The Prince on that occasion mingled supercilious contempt for Irish affairs with personality represented by Herr Jokai with virulent abuse of France. He not only spoke disparagingly of French courage, and contemptuously of French discipline, but he went so far as to call the French people a race of savages. The Hungarian visitor faithfully reported the quotation verbo of the words used. As might be naturally expected, his disclosure produced a profound sensation. The American press denounced the language in which a high-spirited and gallant people were deliberately insulted. The Russian press went further, and retorted on Prince Bismarck and his countrymen in phraseology rational and unmeasured. We need not say that the sting was most deeply felt where it was intended to be felt. The proud people were throbbed with fierce indignation at the fresh humiliation so cruelly and wantonly inflicted on them. The British journals, whose appliance has encouraged Prince Bismarck in part of his policy, hesitated to approve the latest exhibition of their statesmanship. All things calculated, the Prince saw that it had gone too far. A sort of authorised apology, or rather explanation with reference to the terms in which the words used by the Prince to Herr Jokai, was published in the Prussian official papers. In this it was declared that the remark had used the language attributed to him, with respect to France. He had not, however, called the French a nation of colored savages. The contradiction came, however, too late. The wounded vanity and the sullen resentment of the Prince have operated to soothe the wounded feelings of the French people, or removed the reasonable irritation excited among all sections.—It is only where Irishmen are freed, elevated, ennobled, by the privileges of freedom, and by the duties of self-government—that those sentiments can be found to pervade them.

The newspaper containing the above correspondence publishes also a farewell oration to an Irish "Orangeman" about to revisit the natal isle—nay an Irish Orangeman he was, and would have been still, here in Ireland; but an Irishman who, in the course of thirty years in that distant land, and assentially as a parliamentary representative in its independent local legislature, had learned to respect and love his fellow-subjects, and who had won no inconsiderable share in their regard and confidence. The Hibernian Society present him with an address; they speak of him as one who, though a Protestant, had ever been the friend of impartial and just dealing to them. Who is this gentleman? And what the opportunity for whose name still causes a thrill in Ulster, Samuel Gray, of Ballybay? What would this man be had he remained at home in Ireland? He would be a wretched bigot, a "D. G. M.," or a "P. D. G. M." or an "O. Y. Z." or some other mysterious functionary in a Home Ruler with that poor slave, Johnston of Ballykilbeg! What is Mr. Gray to-day? A man of fortune; a legislator in a free country; honored and respected by his fellow citizens of every class and creed. Are we surprised? In all this, O Irishmen!—Dublin Nation.

BUSINESS CARDS.

JOHN M. BURNETT,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
608 Montgomery Street,
Between Washington and Merchant streets,
SAN FRANCISCO.

P. CUMMINS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Rooms 14 and 15 Court Block,
Cor. Clay street, and 641 Merchant street.
apl1

C. GREENWICH HOWARD,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Office—621 Montgomery street (over 316),
San Calabrese and Sacramento sts., San Francisco.
ap6

M. COONEY,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
Office, Room No. 7, Court Block,
316 CLAY and 609 MERCHANT STREET
jal5

F. J. BREARTY,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
La Porte, Plumas County, Cal.
Will practice in the Courts of the 2d and 10th Judicial Districts. Collections attended to. ap4

DR. TYRRELL,
Licentiate Royal College of Surgeons and King and Queen's College of Physicians, Ireland.
Office—Sacramento, between Sansome and Battery, over Fish and Lyonese, Sacramento. 418

ARBOR SALOON,
314 K Street.....A. S. HINKOOT
ARMSTRONG & HINKSON,
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW,
Office, corner Sacramento and K streets, Sacramento.

MARTIN HYNE.....PROPRIETOR.
The very best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on sale.

COYNE'S SALOON,
DEALERS IN WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS
126 K Street (opp. Pacific Hotel), Sacramento.

Household Liquors of the very best quality. 6m6

CENTRAL SALOON,
99 K street.....Sacramento.

DUNN & O'HALLORAN, Proprietors.
MARTIN DUNN..... THOS. B. O'HALLORAN.

BLUE WING SALOON,
Corner Fourth and K Streets,
M. HALLAHAN.....Proprietor.
Home but the very best Wines, Liquors and Cigars.

BARNEY CLARK,
Central Montague Saloon, Oyster and Chop House,
Northeast corner of Fourth and Q streets, Sacramento
Oysters in every style. Open night and day. 6m

P. H. BREEN'S
SAMPLE ROOMS,
16 and 18 Fifth Street, bet. J and K, Sacramento
Keeps on hand Fresh Bottled Lagers Beer
Bottled to order. 6m6

CITY HOTEL,
56, 71, 72, 73 and 77 K street, bet. Third and Fourth,
Head of Second Railroad Depot,
SACRAMENTO.
P. COWAN.....Proprietor.
Board, per week..... $4 00 | Meals..... 25 cts
Board, per month..... 15 00 | Lodging..... 25 cts
One Hundred and Fifty Well Furnished Rooms.
Open Sunday and Night. Free Coach to and from the House.
Parties Boarding at the House will be charged Half Price for Meals.

UNITED STATES HOTEL,
Corner of Second and K streets, Sacramento.
Board, per week..... $5 00 | Meals..... 25 cts
Board, per month..... 20 00 | Lodging..... 25 cts
Open Sunday and Night. Free Coach to and from the House.
Parties Boarding at the House will be charged Half Price for Meals.
Rooms Reserved by Telegraph.
P. VITRUCHSON, Proprietor.

JOSEPH A. CONBOIE,
UNDERTAKER,
107 J street, bet. Fourth and Fifth, Sacramento.

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQUORS

P. H. McGOVERN,
(Late of Murphy's Camp),
Cor. Twenty-third and Columbia Sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO,
GROCER,
AND DEALER IN
Flour, Provisions, Hay, Grain, Wines, Liquors, etc.
fa26

IMPORTANT NEWS!
HOUSEKEEPERS CAN SAVE TWENTY PER cent. by purchasing their GROCERIES AND LIQUORS
AT STEVE McCILLAN'S,
246 FOURTH STREET.
He guarantees to sell in consumers at WHOLESALE RATES, besides delivering goods free of charge.

FAMILY TRADE WANTED.
T. P. WALL,
Cosmopolitan Saloon
99 THIRD STREET,
Between Sansome and Battery sts., San Francisco.

HAS REFITTED HIS SAMPLE ROOMS IN the most elegant style, and will keep none but brands of WINES AND LIQUORS, imported direct by himself, and handled exclusively for family use, which he offers for sale at the following low rates: Gold Bourbon Whisky, $1 75 per gallon, or in cases of four bottles.
Fine Bourbon, $1 50 per gallon, or 6 cases per bottle.
Superior, $1 25 per gallon, or $5 25 per bottle.
Wines of all varieties at proportionate rates.
Attaching the Sample Rooms is a large room for the accommodation of other than Business Men, where all the daily and principal weekly papers are on file.
T. P. WALL, 99 Third st.

"SOLANO."
WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS,
Dunbar Alley (City Hall), San Francisco.
G. H. HOPPER.....PROPRIETOR.
jn16

JOHN McGULLY,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in
Fine Wines and Liquors, Ale & Porter,
S. W. corner Mission and Second sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
N. B.—Oysters in Every Style. fe14-3m

JOHN T. KELLY'S
BAR AND BILLIARD ROOMS,
650 Market Street,
Opposite Fourth street..... SAN FRANCISCO
Finest quality of Ales, Liquors and Cigars. 51

DUFFY BROS.' SALOON,
681 Merchant Street.....San Francisco
Wines, Liquors and Cigars. 6

N. LYMAN. T. RAFFERTY.
LYMAN, RAFFERTY & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND
WHOLESALE LIQUOR DEALERS,
414 MONTGOMERY STREET,
Corner of Merchant..... San Francisco
EAGLE EXCHANGE,
S. W. corner Mission and Second Sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
MILDAY & LANG.....Proprietors.
WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS
Of the best brands constantly on hand. Families supplied. 6m6

CHARLES LABOUREUR'S
Saloon,
Northeast corner Bush and Jackson sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Only the best brands of Liquors and Cigars.

WHYTE & NICHOLL,
IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN Foreign and Domestic
DRY GOODS
N.W. corner J and Seventh Sts.,
SACRAMENTO.
A large amount of NOTIONS always on hand. 6m6

MERCHANT TAILORS.

EDWARD CAREY,
Merchant Tailor,
19 Fourth Street, near Mission,
SAN FRANCISCO.

HAVING HAD A LARGE AND LONG EXPERience in the Cutting and Manufacturing of Clothing, and a thorough knowledge of the wants of the public, I am prepared to furnish a trial from the Cutting Department, which will be made in the latest style, and warranted to fit. Orders from the country promptly attended to. Samples and rules for self-measurement sent free on application. 6m6

T. CANTY,
Merchant Tailor
By Order street, near Montgomery,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Keeps on hand a large assortment of Goods, which will be made to order in the latest style, and warranted to fit. Orders from the country promptly attended to. 6m6

INFORMATION WANTED.

INFORMATION WANTED OF PATRICK and Thomas Hanlon, natives of Ireland, by their brother, who left Ireland in 1849, and has been in America about 1852, and resided in San Francisco about 1852, and resided in San Francisco about 1852, and resided in San Francisco

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK BEGINS APRIL 12.
12—Sunday—Second Sunday after Easter.
13—Monday—Feria.
14—Tuesday—St. Justin, Bishop, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.
15—Wednesday—SS. Carpus and Calus, Popes and Martyrs.
16—Thursday—St. George, Martyr.
17—Friday—St. Francis of Jaguarino, Martyr.
18—Saturday—St. Eleut, Evangelist.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....APRIL 18, 1874.

THE CASE OF FATHER POWER.

It cannot have escaped the notice of our readers that up to this date we have made no reference to the case of the Rev. Father Power, of St. Patrick's Church in this city, who some time ago was brought before the Police Court and fined the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars for an assault upon a woman known as BELLA BROWN. Our reticence was not caused by any desire to hush up the affair, or by any dread that its publication would create a scandal. We merely wanted that the legal character of the charge charged against the young clergyman should be definitely settled before we made any remarks upon the matter. We also wished some time to elapse in order that public excitement should cool down, and that an impartial judgment might be arrived at by the people. It is unfortunate circumstance, to say the least, that there should be a great tendency in the minds of a certain portion of the community to attach unusual importance to any and every accusation brought forward against a Catholic priest. Indeed, the mere charge of wrong doing, serious or trivial, if raised against a Catholic clergyman, he is practically condemned before he is tried at all! And something like a thirst for vengeance is aroused in the breasts of the heads of individuals who are in total ignorance of the facts of the case. And, what is over worse still, the alleged offence, whatever its nature, is everywhere availed of as a reproach against the sacred body of the supposed culprit's co-religionists.

This is unjust as well as ungenerous; it is malicious as well as discreditable; but it is the unfailing result of sectarian hatred to Roman Catholics. We, most assuredly, do not return evil for evil in this particular. Catholics are not low-minded enough or bigoted enough to treat the entire body of Protestants with indignity because one or individual ministers belonging to the various denominations. If we were, the columns of our press would hardly contain anything else but abuse of dishonorable lawyers and reproaches. We let all these things pass by unnoticed, and allow occasional journalistic meanderings there. Our mission is to explain and defend the great principles of truth entrusted by the Church to her children, and not to malign or insult our neighbors who differ from us in religious belief. There are in San Francisco, as in, we may say, every other city of the Union, bigots who are incessantly on the watch out for a chance of annoying or humiliating a priest; and when they succeed they imagine they have achieved a great victory over Catholicity. Let them be! let the shadow of foundation for a criminal charge against a member of the hated class, and they will neither spare time, trouble nor money in the endeavor to bring it before the public. They will invite reluctant prosecutors, they will purchase perjured evidence, they will fee unscrupulous and unprincipled lawyers, they will intimidate weak-minded judges with threats of political vengeance, they will stop at no infamy to strike down the victim of their religious hatred!

If all these things were not done in the case of Father Power, it was merely because circumstances rendered them unnecessary. But the conspirators against Christian charity and public peace were at their post and ready. Forces who attended the Police Court on the day of the "trial" would very easily perceive who the real prosecutors were. We were in hopes that all the facts relating to the assault, and tending to show its nature, would have been elicited at the preliminary examination before the Justice. They were not, however, and the public were left under the impression that Father Power had been guilty of an assault, pure and simple, upon a poor harmless and unoffending woman who was merely remarkable for her zeal! This false impression was circumstantially confirmed by comments of the most damaging character which the defamatory portion of the press of the city could indulge in. The Catholic Church, and the members of Rev. Donald Power, as they might have known from his previous career, were the objects of the bitterest hatred and the most unrelenting persecution. The fact that Father Power had been guilty of an assault, pure and simple, upon a poor unoffending woman was considered by many as sufficient to justify the most violent denunciations of the Church and her clergy. The evening of March 12th was the first occasion on which the public were made aware of the charge. The Evening Bulletin of that date was the first to publish it, and it was followed by the Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, Post, and Alta. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published the charge as made by Bella Brown. The Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published the charge in their issues of the 13th, over the signature of Bella Brown, as they had published it on the previous day. The Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 14th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 15th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 16th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 17th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 18th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 19th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 20th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 21st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 22nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 23rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 24th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 25th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 26th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 27th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 28th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 29th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 30th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 31st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 32nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 33rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 34th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 35th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 36th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 37th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 38th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 39th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 40th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 41st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 42nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 43rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 44th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 45th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 46th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 47th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 48th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 49th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 50th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 51st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 52nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 53rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 54th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 55th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 56th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 57th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 58th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 59th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 60th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 61st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 62nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 63rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 64th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 65th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 66th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 67th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 68th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 69th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 70th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 71st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 72nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 73rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 74th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 75th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 76th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 77th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 78th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 79th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 80th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 81st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 82nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 83rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 84th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 85th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 86th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 87th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 88th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 89th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 90th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 91st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 92nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 93rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 94th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 95th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 96th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 97th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 98th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 99th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 100th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 101st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 102nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 103rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 104th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 105th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 106th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 107th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 108th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 109th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 110th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 111th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 112th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 113th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 114th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 115th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 116th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 117th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 118th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 119th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 120th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 121st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 122nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 123rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 124th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 125th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 126th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 127th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 128th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 129th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 130th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 131st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 132nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 133rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 134th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 135th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 136th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 137th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 138th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 139th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 140th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 141st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 142nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 143rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 144th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 145th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 146th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 147th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 148th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 149th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 150th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 151st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 152nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 153rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 154th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 155th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 156th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 157th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 158th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 159th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 160th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 161st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 162nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 163rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 164th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 165th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 166th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 167th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 168th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 169th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 170th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 171st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 172nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 173rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 174th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 175th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 176th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 177th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 178th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 179th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 180th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 181st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 182nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 183rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 184th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 185th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 186th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 187th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 188th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 189th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 190th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 191st, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 192nd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 193rd, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 194th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 195th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 196th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 197th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published it as made by Bella Brown, over the signature of Bella Brown, in their issues of the 198th, and the Alta published it as made by a third party. The Bulletin, Call, Chronicle, Herald, Examiner, and Post published

SAINT'S DAYS IN APRIL.

A Sketch of Saint Catherine of Sienna.

The month of April contains the feast days of a great number of English Saints, whose names are among the most popular of the calender. Thus we have St. Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury; St. Beds, St. Egbert, St. Richard, St. Waltrude and St. Stephen Harding. All of these holy men and women are, and have been for many centuries, much venerated in England, and justly so, on account of their many and glorious virtues. St. Catherine of Sienna is also feasted in this month, and as her history is very remarkable we will here briefly narrate it. This blessed woman was born at Sienna in a house of humble appearance, which is still in existence, and which in the fourteenth century belonged to Giacomo Benincasa, a dyer, whose wife was named Lapa Piagenti. She was a very pious woman; among her children was Catherine, who subsequently became the great illustration of her native city. At a very early age Catherine manifested her extraordinary devotion to Our Lady, and would kneel on every step of the stairs in her home to recite on each an Ave Maria. At six years of age, as she was returning from the house of one of her married sisters, she beheld a vision of our Lord in glory seated in the midst of his apostles. Her little brother, Stephen, who was with her, dragged at her hand, and asked her to come along. Then starting, as of out of her sleep, she exclaimed, "Stephen, I did not see what I see you would not care to leave this spot." From the moment the child's vision was revealed to her, she devoted herself entirely to a life of prayer and contemplation. When a girl of marriageable age she was not at all a beautiful hair and veiled her head to the great annoyance of her parents, who desired to see her married and settled. They said her to the kitchen and made her work there, and deprived her of her own room, in which she had lived as in a convent cell. She received patiently rebukes, and by this means gained in her resolve to devote herself entirely to religion.

At last her father yielded to her determination, and allowed her to assume the habit of the Sisters of Penitence, in connection with the Order of Preachers. She continued to remember that she was settled with the most horribly impure thoughts and images which her imagination presented to her mind. The agony she suffered was great, as she prayed for deliverance from temptation, or yield to these horrible thoughts. Once, after such a trial, she was conscious of the presence of our Lord, and cried, "Oh, my Saviour, my Lord, why did'st thou forsake me?" She cried. "My child," He answered, "I have been with thee through all the struggle, and I, the Lord! in the midst of these vile thoughts and fiery imaginations!" "My child, you! I was in thy heart all the while, for thy will did not consent to the thoughts and images presented to thee."

She suffered from ingratitude in the exercise of charity. She was charged with attachment to a young man, and was much concerned by causes; and the unhappy creatures on her feeling thankful to her cares, poured out on her all the spite of a naturally vicious temper, rendered more irritable by what she met with in similar treatment from others, and beyond being sorry for it, she never showed her soul-

Exiled Popes—Pius IX.

On the 27th March the 40th session of the Academy of the Catholic Religion was held at the Archbishop's house, Westminster, London, when a paper was read by Right Rev. Monsignor Patterson, President of St. Edmund's College, entitled "Exiled Popes." The luminous and comprehensive retrospect taken by the learned President of the fortunes of the Holy See through past ages, led him to the conclusion that our feelings about the present calamitous circumstances of the Papacy ought not to take the form of despair. The restoration of the temporal power might be the result of agencies that are already at work among the European nations. If brought about, it would be so not by the will of man, but by the Providence of God. The World in all ages was equally hostile to the Church, whether the keys of Peter were loosed amid the billows of political convulsion, or gilded over the smooth treachery of worldly prosperity. Of one thing Catholics might be sure—there would be no compromise between the Holy Father and the enemies of the Church. His resolution never to capitulate with the Italian Government was not caused by pettiness of feeling. Some had blamed him for refusing to celebrate, as heretofore, the great festivals of the Church in St. Peter's. It was impossible he could do so while Rome remained in the power of the usurpation. The demand rendered one of the words of the Psalms—Super flumina Babylonis.

On the conclusion of the paper, Mr. Allies rose and said that of the many papers he had heard read at the Academia, the present was the one that excited both the greatest pleasure, and with every word of which he could most thoroughly agree. The beauty of its diction was equal to the interest of the matter. No one could as well foresee, with any degree of certainty, whether the Holy Father would be restored to his temporal dominions at an early or remote period. It might be that a trial, severer than any he had yet undergone, was reserved for him. Unless God had given the whole course of history to man, in which she had lived as in a convent cell. She received patiently rebukes, and by this means gained in her resolve to devote herself entirely to religion.

At last her father yielded to her determination, and allowed her to assume the habit of the Sisters of Penitence, in connection with the Order of Preachers. She continued to remember that she was settled with the most horribly impure thoughts and images which her imagination presented to her mind. The agony she suffered was great, as she prayed for deliverance from temptation, or yield to these horrible thoughts. Once, after such a trial, she was conscious of the presence of our Lord, and cried, "Oh, my Saviour, my Lord, why did'st thou forsake me?" She cried. "My child," He answered, "I have been with thee through all the struggle, and I, the Lord! in the midst of these vile thoughts and fiery imaginations!" "My child, you! I was in thy heart all the while, for thy will did not consent to the thoughts and images presented to thee."

She suffered from ingratitude in the exercise of charity. She was charged with attachment to a young man, and was much concerned by causes; and the unhappy creatures on her feeling thankful to her cares, poured out on her all the spite of a naturally vicious temper, rendered more irritable by what she met with in similar treatment from others, and beyond being sorry for it, she never showed her soul-

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

Don Carlos was crowned on Friday, March 5th, in the Cathedral of Talosa, capital of the province of Guipascoa. After the coronation he attended solemn High Mass of thanksgiving for the victories lately gained by his army.

Great excitement prevails in Treves on account of the ill-treatment by the Prussian officials of the Most Rev. Bishop Eberhard. The people seem disposed to rise against the Government.

The six centenary of St. Thomas Aquinas, which occurred on March 7th, has been celebrated with much pomp all over the Christian world. The Fathers of the Dominican Order especially honored the memory of their most illustrious Doctor.

The saintly Archbishop of Westminster, Dr. Manning, availed himself of St. Patrick's Day to address his faithful flock on the necessity of practicing holy temperance. The Irish of London followed his good advice in a remarkable manner.

The Sacred Congregations have issued a decree for promoting the process of beatification of the servants of God, John Eudes, a missionary apostolic, and founder of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, and the venerable Anna Maria Taigi.

The Right Rev. Francis Redwood, of the Society of Mary, was consecrated Bishop of Wellington, New Zealand, in the church of St. Anne, Spitalfields, London, on March 19th. Dr. Manning was the consecrating prelate. The ceremony was witnessed by quite a concourse of distinguished English laymen.

It is stated from Rome that the Bishops of Lombardy have addressed a collective letter to the Holy Father, in which they respectful terms against the bill enacting that the civil marriage ceremony must always be performed before the solemnization of the religious rite.

Another instance of the unfailing generosity of the Holy Father comes to us from Rome. His Holiness recently sent three hundred francs to the Irish emigrants at Treviso. The good parishioners have sent their hearty thanks in their minds by gift and devotion to the successor of St. Peter.

One of the most successful missions that ever took place in the city of Cork was recently concluded in the beautiful church of St. Peter and Paul. The number of communicants was unprecedentedly large. Most Rev. Dr. Delaney expressed in the most feeling terms his satisfaction at the happy results of the religious exercises.

The Holy Father, although much grieved by the death of Cardinal Barnabo, is not afflicted by the unfilial conduct of the Emperor of Austria, who is copying the infamous laws and decrees of Joseph II. and threatening them into his dominions, is in the enjoyment of excellent health, and takes a good deal of exercise.

The Church laws have been received with supreme joy by the majority in the Lower House of the Austrian Reichsrath, where the "Doctors" and the "Professors," the freemasons and the Jews, are decidedly preponderates. They will probably be subjected to adverse criticism and motions in the Upper House.

There is no telling to what absurd extremes English bigots will not run. The Oomsars' Committee of the town of Peterborough, fully represented in Parliament by the notorious Whalley, have refused to the Bishop of Nottingham the use of the words, "Pray for the soul of," etc., meaning as "Remember" in England. In the Church, and enthusiastic cheers for that.

The Chronicle says the Duke of Norfolk and eminent address, expressed the pleasure that it gave him to preside upon that impressive and solemn occasion, founded as they were upon the most holy purpose—doing honor to the memory of one of the greatest and most illustrious Irish that had produced. His honored dust rested beneath where they stood, and his memory was cherished in the hearts of the Irish race in all parts of the globe. The stone that lay over it had almost disappeared, having been worn away by the feet of pilgrims who came to carry as a precious relic to other lands, and there was nothing left to mark the spot where lay that beloved dust. In that state of affairs the young man of the Wolfe Tone Band formed a new slab over the grave, and the men of Kildare had completed the work by contributing the beautiful railings which now surrounded it. It was to the darkest days of Ireland's suffering when the Catholics were shut out from all voice in the government of their own country, and groaning under the heel of the Penal Code, that Wolfe Tone, a Protestant, took up their cause, and when he found their every exertion to obtain for them their just rights rendered futile by the massacre of his country men were shut out from the political arena he appealed to the last resort of an outraged people. Let his acts be a warning to every Government, that when they trample a people under their cruel and legally agitating for the reform of admitted and glaring grievances, and for the removal of acknowledged wrongs, when they trampled upon them. The time for which Wolfe Tone died, the time for freedom and independence of his native land, still animated the bosoms of the Irish people.

Mr. Mooney then moved a resolution to the effect that, in dedicating the tomb to the memory of Theobald Wolfe Tone, they desired, in testimony of their admiration for his labors in the cause of Irish independence and the devotion he ever displayed in the service of their country, to declare their identity in the great principle of self-government for Ireland, which he maintained.

A Voice—None Rule.

Mr. Hamill Kenny, of Dublin, seconded the motion in an eloquent speech, in which he called upon them to continue their efforts in behalf of their country in the independence.

Mr. John Keegan having been called to the second chair, a vote of thanks was passed to the chairman amid great enthusiasm. Cheers were given for the Wolfe Tone Band, and the proceedings terminated.

The Grave of Wolfe Tone.

A great national demonstration took place Sunday, March 22d, at Bodenstown, county Kildare, to celebrate the completion of a memorial over the grave of Theobald Wolfe Tone, whose remains repose under the shade of a ruined temple in that secluded churchyard.

It is stated from Rome that the Bishops of Lombardy have addressed a collective letter to the Holy Father, in which they respectful terms against the bill enacting that the civil marriage ceremony must always be performed before the solemnization of the religious rite.

Another instance of the unfailing generosity of the Holy Father comes to us from Rome. His Holiness recently sent three hundred francs to the Irish emigrants at Treviso. The good parishioners have sent their hearty thanks in their minds by gift and devotion to the successor of St. Peter.

One of the most successful missions that ever took place in the city of Cork was recently concluded in the beautiful church of St. Peter and Paul. The number of communicants was unprecedentedly large. Most Rev. Dr. Delaney expressed in the most feeling terms his satisfaction at the happy results of the religious exercises.

The Holy Father, although much grieved by the death of Cardinal Barnabo, is not afflicted by the unfilial conduct of the Emperor of Austria, who is copying the infamous laws and decrees of Joseph II. and threatening them into his dominions, is in the enjoyment of excellent health, and takes a good deal of exercise.

The Church laws have been received with supreme joy by the majority in the Lower House of the Austrian Reichsrath, where the "Doctors" and the "Professors," the freemasons and the Jews, are decidedly preponderates. They will probably be subjected to adverse criticism and motions in the Upper House.

There is no telling to what absurd extremes English bigots will not run. The Oomsars' Committee of the town of Peterborough, fully represented in Parliament by the notorious Whalley, have refused to the Bishop of Nottingham the use of the words, "Pray for the soul of," etc., meaning as "Remember" in England. In the Church, and enthusiastic cheers for that.

The Chronicle says the Duke of Norfolk and eminent address, expressed the pleasure that it gave him to preside upon that impressive and solemn occasion, founded as they were upon the most holy purpose—doing honor to the memory of one of the greatest and most illustrious Irish that had produced. His honored dust rested beneath where they stood, and his memory was cherished in the hearts of the Irish race in all parts of the globe. The stone that lay over it had almost disappeared, having been worn away by the feet of pilgrims who came to carry as a precious relic to other lands, and there was nothing left to mark the spot where lay that beloved dust. In that state of affairs the young man of the Wolfe Tone Band formed a new slab over the grave, and the men of Kildare had completed the work by contributing the beautiful railings which now surrounded it. It was to the darkest days of Ireland's suffering when the Catholics were shut out from all voice in the government of their own country, and groaning under the heel of the Penal Code, that Wolfe Tone, a Protestant, took up their cause, and when he found their every exertion to obtain for them their just rights rendered futile by the massacre of his country men were shut out from the political arena he appealed to the last resort of an outraged people. Let his acts be a warning to every Government, that when they trample a people under their cruel and legally agitating for the reform of admitted and glaring grievances, and for the removal of acknowledged wrongs, when they trampled upon them. The time for which Wolfe Tone died, the time for freedom and independence of his native land, still animated the bosoms of the Irish people.

Mr. Mooney then moved a resolution to the effect that, in dedicating the tomb to the memory of Theobald Wolfe Tone, they desired, in testimony of their admiration for his labors in the cause of Irish independence and the devotion he ever displayed in the service of their country, to declare their identity in the great principle of self-government for Ireland, which he maintained.

A Voice—None Rule.

Mr. Hamill Kenny, of Dublin, seconded the motion in an eloquent speech, in which he called upon them to continue their efforts in behalf of their country in the independence.

Mr. John Keegan having been called to the second chair, a vote of thanks was passed to the chairman amid great enthusiasm. Cheers were given for the Wolfe Tone Band, and the proceedings terminated.

DROWNED IN A GRAVEYARD.—The neighborhood of St. Patrick's Cathedral was thrown into a state of no ordinary excitement on Saturday when it became known that John Peagh, a person engaged for the purpose of digging the church, had been drowned in the ancient well of St. Patrick, in the cemetery attached to the cathedral. It appears that the deceased, who was about 60 years of age, left his residence that morning to attend to his usual duties. Shortly after eight o'clock, Mrs. Wagstaffe, one of the persons engaged about the church, observed the deceased lying on his head in St. Patrick's well. On his being raised, life was quite extinct, and that death was caused by drowning Dr. Fairleigh (who resides in the vicinity) was sent for, but on his arrival he found that he had fallen into the well for the purpose of taking a drink of water, and, on being attached by one of those fits of weakness to which it was said he was subject, he was unable to recover himself, and, falling forward, was suffocated before aid could reach him.—Dublin Freeman, March 18.

RAMPANT INFIDELITY.—The Paris Assemble Nationale publishes the following: "One of our friends, who lives in the South of France, writes to us that in the village of X—— all religious services have been suspended since September 4, 1870. They have there only civil marriages, burials and even baptisms. This is the ceremony of a civil baptism: The family go to the Mayor's house in procession, sing the 'Marseillaise' and other revolutionary hymns. A speech is then made, and a Phrygian cap is placed on the infant's head. It is the ceremony to half like boys by names such as Garibaldi, Manini, Bordone, etc. Infants have been received in the names of Marx, Robespierre and Chalmont Lacdel; some have even been called potato, carrot and colony (Algeria), anything that is not Christian. There is now no power in going to put a stop to this state of things."

An Assembly Rebuke.

PARIS, March 18.—The debate in the Assembly to-day proved a disappointment. Great excitement had been formed, and the house was as crowded as on the 24th of May last, when M. Thiers was upset. In some quarters the defeat of the Government was looked upon as so certain that lists of a new Left Center Cabinet were circulated; but the motions of want of confidence brought forward were negatived by 460 votes to 318, being a Government majority of 142.

The interpellation was moved by M. Chellemel Lacour in a speech the eloquence and power of which captivated even the hostile party.

M. de Broglie's reply was clever. He merely said: "I am no dictator. The gentleman's speech reminded me of the time of the Empire, when laws could be abolished or manufactured by Ministerial decrees. He has very severely attacked the Ministry on a great variety of subjects. All I can say is to repeat what I have said before. For seven years the powers conferred on Marshal MacMahon are immutable. As for what may follow, I think the Assembly will allow me not to dwell upon that." This declaration was loudly cheered.

Casenove de Pradines said: "I believe that the King will come and save the country, and when that occurs I do not believe that Marshal MacMahon will keep the King of France, acclaimed by the Assembly, waiting at the door under the pretext that the limit of his powers had not expired; but until that takes place I think the Septennate a very good thing."

The Duke de Broglie got into the tribune and said the views of M. de Pradines were detestably vile; and they did not be bind the Government.

Several Deputies angrily scaled the debate, though a couple of hours more were consumed by the attempts of other speakers to address the assembly, which was in a perfect state of noise which, to say the least of it, was not edifying, but which can hardly be described as disgusting. Finally the vote of want of confidence were proposed. They were set aside by the order of the day by the majority above stated.

EDUCATIONAL.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the Degree of B. A.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in a few years.

Where proper care is bestowed as every branch taught will be found to flourish, together with special attention. The daily exercises of the Students are carefully noted, and the result of each month discussed and corrected in the class-room.

SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance).

Board, Tuition and Washing ..... $100 00
Entrance Fee ..... 10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicine ..... 10 00
Vacation at College ..... 50 00
Use of Bedding ..... 5 00
Modern Languages, Music and drawing form extra charges.

Books will be procured on the bill of Agents, Parents or Guardians.

Good references required. 1m30

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN SANTA Barbara, a short distance from the Depot, and in the most healthy part of the city. The grounds are extensive, and afford facilities for exercise.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS

(Invariably half yearly in advance).

Board, Tuition, Washing, etc., per annum ..... $100 00
Entrance Fee, on admission, per annum ..... 10 00
Use of Bedding ..... 5 00
Physician's Fee, Medicine, etc. ..... 10 00
Books, Stationery, Clothing, Pocket Money, and all extras, to be settled for monthly.

DAY PUPILS.

Per quarter (in advance) ..... $15 00
Drawing and Painting ..... 10 00
Music, with use of instrument ..... 10 00
Modern Languages, each ..... 10 00

Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the formation of classes.

BOARDING PUPILS.

Per quarter (in advance) ..... $50 00
Bed and Bedding, each set of bedding ..... 10 00
Washing ..... 10 00
Fuel, lights, etc. ..... 5 00
Physician's Fee, Medicine, etc. ..... 5 00
Vacation spent at the Academy ..... 25 00

DAY PUPILS.

Terms per month (in advance).

School Day Scholars—Reading, first and second Classes ..... $1 00
Third and fourth Grammar Classes ..... 1 50
Preparatory and Primary ..... 1 00
Parochial Scholars, per month, throughout the year ..... 1 00

No extra charge for French, plain and ornamental needlework.

For further particulars apply to the Superioress.

1y26 SISTERS OF CHARITY.

Santa Barbara, Cal.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA ..... CALIFORNIA.

THE SEVENTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the first Monday in August.

The object of the institution is to give a good Business Education, including Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical Education, at the lowest possible cost—a want long felt in California, and one which the Fathers hope to supply.

TERMS.

Entrance Fee (to be paid but once) ..... $10 00
Tuition, Board and Washing, per session, or ten months ..... 150 00
Medicine and Doctor's fees extra charges.

Those who spend vacation at the College will be charged $25.

Payments to be made invariably in advance.

Parents will pay for medicine administered to their children.

Clothing will not be furnished by the College; for the purchase of necessary articles, a sufficient sum must be left in the hands of the Treasurer.

Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the Rev. Superior.

All correspondence of the young ladies will be under the supervision of the Superioress.

Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the Rev. Superior.

1y26 FRANCISCAN COLLEGE.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH HAS BEEN CHARTERED by the Legislature of California, with the privileges of a University, Diplomas and two Departments—the Classic and Scientific.

The College buildings are large and commodious, while extensive play-grounds, with two covered Pavilions, afford ample room for healthful exercise for the youthful students.

The Institution possesses a very complete philosophical apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has also, practical schools of Painting, Photography and Surveying. A military exercise is taught in a thoroughly fitted manner.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually, in advance):

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once ..... $10
Board, Lodging, Tuition, Washing, and Mending, per session ..... 200
Physician's Fee, Medicine, Doctor, Nursing, Attendance, and Medicine, Bathing, Fuel, Lights, per year ..... 20
Modern Languages, Drawing and Music form extra charges. For Clothing, Books, Pocket-money, and the like, no advance made by the Institution. For further particulars, apply to the REV. A. VARNI, S. J., President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

MARYSVILLE ..... CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS INCORPORATED ACcording to the laws of the State, and empowered to confer academical honors and grant diplomas to students of the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS PER SESSION.

(Payable in advance).

Board, Tuition, Washing ..... $150
Use of Bedding ..... 10
Vocal and instrumental music, drawing and modern languages, each ..... 10
Graduating Fee ..... 10
Use of the scholastic year commencer respectively on the first Monday in August and February.

For further information address the Secretary.

REV. P. J. KENNEDY, Superior.

Very Rev. P. REDMEDDY, Superior.

NOTRE DAME ACADEMY,

MISSION DOLORES, SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS ACADEMY IS A BRANCH OF THE "Notre Dame College," San José. The course of studies and the system of education are the same in both institutions. Every opportunity is offered to young ladies to acquire a thorough education. Music is the best Academy for vocal and instrumental music.

The first term of the fifteenth annual session will commence August 1st.

Pupil's will find it much to their advantage to be present at the formation of classes.

TERMS.

Board, Tuition, and Washing, per session ..... $150 00
Use of Bedding ..... 10 00
Physician's Fee, Medicine, Doctor, Nursing, Attendance, and Medicine, Bathing, Fuel, Lights, per year ..... 20 00
Modern Languages, Music and drawing form extra charges.

Books will be procured on the bill of Agents, Parents or Guardians.

Good references required. 1m30

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

BENICIA ..... CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED BY THE Sisters of St. Dominic, and is situated in a healthy and comfortable locality in Benicia. The plan of education embraces the various branches of literature usually taught in the best conducted institutions for young ladies. Regard for religious principles and the practice of virtue will be strictly enforced; all are required to be present at the religious exercises of their respective churches.

The scholastic year, comprising two sessions, commences on the first Monday in August, and ends on the last Thursday in June. The first session closes on the last Thursday before the 25th of December, except in case of the Midnight Mass falling on that day, when the 24th is to be the last day of session.

TERMS:

For session (payable half-yearly in advance) ..... $150 00
Entrance Fee, to be paid but once ..... 10 00
Washing ..... 12 50
Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged ..... 25 00

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges. There is no extra charge for the use of Bedding or for Needlework.

Pupils will be required to furnish bedding with bed to be charged $10.

Visitors of laundry may be furnished in the house at reasonable rates.

1y18 SISTERS SUPERIOR.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE,

Mohnerville, Humboldt County, Cal.

Conducted by the Priests of the Congregation of the Most Precious Blood.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR:

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

For board, tuition, washing and mending ..... $150 00
Entrance fee, to be paid only once ..... 10 00
Vocal and instrumental music, drawing and modern languages, each ..... 10 00
Physician's fee, medicine, doctor, nursing, attendance, bathing, fuel, lights, per year ..... 20 00

DAY PUPILS.

Scholastic year ..... $40 00
Entrance Fee ..... 5 00
Use of Bedding ..... 5 00
Physician's Fee and Medicine ..... 10 00
Vacation at College ..... 50 00
Use of Bedding ..... 5 00
Modern languages, Music and drawing form extra charges.

Books will be procured on the bill of Agents, Parents or Guardians.

Good references required. 1m30

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN SANTA Barbara, a short distance from the Depot, and in the most healthy part of the city. The grounds are extensive, and afford facilities for exercise.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS

(Invariably half yearly in advance).

Board, Tuition, Washing, etc., per annum ..... $100 00
Entrance Fee, on admission, per annum ..... 10 00
Use of Bedding ..... 5 00
Physician's Fee, Medicine, etc. ..... 10 00
Books, Stationery, Clothing, Pocket Money, and all extras, to be settled for monthly.

DAY PUPILS.

Terms per month (in advance).

School Day Scholars—Reading, first and second Classes ..... $1 00
Third and fourth Grammar Classes ..... 1 50
Preparatory and Primary ..... 1 00
Parochial Scholars, per month, throughout the year ..... 1 00

No extra charge for French, plain and ornamental needlework.

For further particulars apply to the Superioress.

1y26 SISTERS OF CHARITY.

Santa Barbara, Cal.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA ..... CALIFORNIA.

THE SEVENTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the first Monday in August.

The object of the institution is to give a good Business Education, including Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical Education, at the lowest possible cost—a want long felt in California, and one which the Fathers hope to supply.

TERMS.

Entrance Fee (to be paid but once) ..... $10 00
Tuition, Board and Washing, per session, or ten months ..... 150 00
Medicine and Doctor's fees extra charges.

Those who spend vacation at the College will be charged $25.

Payments to be made invariably in advance.

Parents will pay for medicine administered to their children.

Clothing will not be furnished by the College; for the purchase of necessary articles, a sufficient sum must be left in the hands of the Treasurer.

Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the Rev. Superior.

1y26 FRANCISCAN COLLEGE.

CONVENT OF THE IMMACULATE HEART OF MARY

FOR THE

EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES

GILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS.

Board, tuition, washing and mending, per annum ..... $150
Entrance fee, to be paid but once ..... 10
Physician's fee, medicine, doctor, nursing, attendance, bathing, fuel, lights, per year ..... 20

No extra charge for Drawing, Embroidery, Fancy and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

Books will be procured by the Agents, Parents or Guardians, Benicia, or for the Spanish language.

TERMS FOR DAY SCHOLARS:

Per month, per session ..... $1 00
Elementary and higher classes ..... 1 50
Music or Piano ..... 1 00
French ..... 1 00

No extra charge for Needlework, Embroidery, Fancy and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

NOTE.—The above establishment is also the residence of the Bishop of the Diocese.

For Prospectus and further particulars apply to the SISTER RAYMUNDA CREMAILL, 1y24 Superior.

Address by the Holy Father.

A few days since his Holiness received in audience at the Vatican a deputation of Roman police, who had come in the name of a number of which they were members to offer to Pius IX. the tribute of their loyal and affectionate sympathy, and to present him with a practical testimony of gratefulness to him. The Marchioness Medici read the address, and made the presentation of the offerings to the Holy Father. The Sovereign Pontiff replied as follows:

"Your presence to-day to the halls of the Vatican suggests to my mind a phrase of daily scripture, which declares that it is better to enter the house of mourning than the house of rejoicing. You, dear children, have to put in practice the sacred lesson, and have chosen to bend your steps towards the Vatican, rather than elsewhere, where there are pleasures and distracting amusements. It is not through any merit on your part you are here. People will tell you, what takes you to the Vatican? and you can answer that you go there to go and to do honor to the Vicar of Jesus Christ, His Sovereign Pontiff here below. You will answer that you go there to see him, but to tell him what you are doing for the salvation of souls by your labors, your works and by every other means which Christian charity may suggest, to tell him that you are wiping away the widow's tears; that you are bringing succor to the orphans; that you are visiting the poor outcasts of the street from their career of shame; that you are saving others from the blighting blasts of evil which surrounds them and lightening the burdens of those who are afflicted. Why, indeed, should you be ashamed of your profession? Is it not a profession which, from the Victor Emmanuel point of view, an admirable man, a faithful son of the Church, and a religious, moral and political creed was what is almost not quite to be literally as Italy and died, the best friend of—Up with the King and down the Pope! Let not our readers be shocked. The story was a true one. Italy not very long ago in England and in Ireland, too—in which character, by the way, it had the full benefit of the Pope's money. He was bound over by it, purchased by it, owned by it, body and soul and mind and heart. He fought on his God and his God rewarded his services at so much a week. So masters went and monkey; but Signor Luigi Furli was one day to die; and where was he God when the State would not accompany him out of the world; the State cared not a jot for his soul, or where he went to after death. Those pieces of silver for which Signor Luigi Furli had betrayed his Lord helped heavy on his sinking soul. Tradidem sanguinem, groaned, cried out Signor Luigi Furli. "What is that to me? What have you given me for it?" responded the fiend.

Signor Luigi Furli looked in his last moments for the consolations of the Church from the priests of Rome, from the Bishop of Nepius, according to the writer who supplies the New York Times with the letters of the reprobate functionary of the Italian Government" to the grave. "So the newspaper was a purely civic one, and in holy water was sprinkled or Latin prayers said," writes the correspondent of the Times. And this he calls a "priestly outrage." How these men and these writers let their own words at every turn! We taught the sprinkling of holy water was a mere superstition, and prayers over the dead Pagan memories and mediæval mythology. So they are, when they take leave at a Christian burial. But this man lies at the burial of this man and sees at who deny the Church all their life long, they would his cousin into heaven, the moment, and by the book door, the local is a "priestly outrage." It is without some of those gentlemen of easy conscience learn that the laws of God's Church are made to be kept, not broken;

BANKING HOUSES.

BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA,

INCORPORATED BY ROYAL CHARTER.

S. E. corner California and Sansome sts.

Head Office—LONDON.
Branches—PORTLAND, OREGON; VICTORIA AND CARIBOO, BRITISH COLUMBIA.

AGENTS:

New York—BANK OF MONTREAL.
Chicago—BANK OF MONTREAL.
Canada—BANK OF MONTREAL.
Mexico and South America—LONDON BANK OF MEXICO AND SOUTH AMERICA.
Ireland—BANK OF IRELAND.
Scotland—BRITISH LINEN COMPANY.
England—NATIONAL PROVINCIAL BANK OF ENGLAND.
Ireland—NORTH AND SOUTH WALES BANK.
Scotland—BANK OF LIVERPOOL

This Bank transacts a General Banking Business. Deposits received on current account subject to check, or on deposit.

Exchange and on London and all the principal cities and towns of Ireland and Scotland from £1 upward; also on New York and all principal places in Canada.

Commercial Credits granted available in Europe, China, Japan, South America, Australia and New Zealand.

Approved Bills discounted and advances made on approved collaterals.

6m6-127 WM. H. TILLINGHAST, Manager.

HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY

Office—Northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets.

(Formerly the Hibernia Savings Bank.)

President ..... M. D. SWEENY.
Vice-President ..... C. D. O'SULLIVAN.

TRUSTEES:

M. D. SWEENY, C. D. O'SULLIVAN, JOHN SULLIVAN, R. J. TOBIN, M. J. DONOHOE, M. H. DUNPHY, GUSTAVE TOUCHARD, P. D. ARMOUR, PETER DONAHUE.

Treasurer ..... EDWARD MARTIN
Secretary ..... EUGENE KELLY

Remittances from the country may be sent through Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express office, or any reliable express company, and the money will be returned for their safe delivery. The signature of the depositor must be given in full. Deposits made by mail or express will be delivered to the agent by whom the deposit is made.

Deposits received from $1 upward.

Office hours—From 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.

Jos. A. DONAHOE, San Francisco. EUGENE KELLY New York.

DONOHOE, KELLY & Co.

SAN FRANCISCO.

EUGENE KELLY & Co;

NEW YORK

BANKERS.

EXCHANGE ON

NEW YORK, LONDON, AND BANK OF IRELAND ..... DUBLIN

Payable at all the Branches,

AND IN EVERY COUNTY TOWN IN IRELAND

MEDICAL.

TO THE UNFORTUNATE.

NEW REMEDIES! NEW REMEDIES!

DR. GIBBON'S DISPENSARY,

No. 653 Market Street, opp. Commercial, San Francisco.

ESTABLISHED FOR THE TREATMENT AND cure of all kindred diseases of the Sexual Organs. Nervous and Physical Debility; all disorders of the Kidneys and Bladder; Gravel, and all Urinary complaints; and Stranger's Disease, Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Sterility, Nocturnal Emissions, Loss of Sexual Power

SAINT'S DAYS IN APRIL.

A Sketch of Saints' Collection of Stones.

The month of April contains the feast days of a great number of English Saints, whose names are among the most popular of the calendar. Thus we have St. Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury; St. Bede, St. Egbert, St. Richard, St. Waltrada and St. Stephen Harding. All of these holy men and women are, and have been for many centuries, much venerated in England, and justly so, on account of their many and glorious virtues. St. Catherine of Sienna is also feasted in this month, and as her story remaining ornament, a little silver cross, to a beggar, and at night she dreamt she saw our Saviour with it in his hand. Catherine played an important part in the public affairs of her age. A league had been formed against the Holy See, at the head of which were the people of Florence. Catherine, charged with negotiating peace, visited Pope Gregory XI. at Avignon, and was official in restoring the Pope to Rome; Gregory was succeeded by Urban VI., a friend of Catherine, who answered, "Do as you have promised God." His Holiness, who had not told any one that he had in fact made a vow to return to Rome, saw that this must now be henceforth be considered. He left Avignon, she wrote him several letters to urge him on to execute his promise, and he followed her counsel on the 16th of September, 1376. After having pacified the Church she continued her power of pacifying Italy; she went to Florence, then the scene of murders and confusions, and, at the risk of her life, she strove to calm the violence of party strife; and in 1377 succeeded in reconciling Florence to the Holy See. But the same year saw great commotion befall the Church, to the grief of pious souls. On the death of Gregory XI., Urban VI. was elected; but the French Cardinals declared his election void, elected Robert of Geneva, Clement VII., and returned with him to Avignon. Catherine wrote to the Cardinals pointing out to them the duty to the Kings and Queens of Europe, to obtain their assistance to Urban VI.; she reasoned, appealed to the best side of their nature, but was looked upon as a madwoman. Urban sent for her to Rome that he might have the benefit of her counsel to advise him, but her life was closing, her intrinsic increasing, and she was appointed to die.

The disobedience of her life was one of struggle. For a long time she lay sufficiently resigned to the will of God, but at last her soul, longing for everlasting rest, broke forth into words of entreaty, "Lord, my God! I have sinned, have mercy on me!" Then her servants were silent, and they heard her speak to Jesus, praying for forgiveness. This was followed by silence, but she was conscious of the presence of many saints, and of Mary, the Queen of Heaven, and earnestly requested to her soul.

She died in Rome, and was buried in the Church of Minerva. Her head was carried to Siena, and preserved in the Church of St. Dominic; were lost in the revolution of 1799. In regard to St. Catherine's reputation for sanctity, Pius II. declared on her feast day, the Dominican Order, when she, with Blessed St. Catherine of Siena, should be placed in the calendar of heaven to be applauded, when thou wert still in your earth." The queen of the Church, pray for Pius IX., and beseech thy Heavenly Spouse to remove from us the rightful punishment, and with them, inequality in Christendom.—The Month and Catholic Review.

The Merry and Lugubrious are appropriated the magnificent sum of $200 for the benefit of the widow of the Good Shepherd, which is now about one-thirtieth of the amount received. Were he burning, about ten years ago, 1 800 gentlemen would have raised.

Exiled Popes—Pius IX.

On the 27th March the sixth session of the Academia of the Catholic Religion for this season was held at the Archbishop's house, Westminster, London, when a paper was read by Right Rev. Monsignor Patterson, President of St. Edmund's College, entitled "Exiled Popes." The paper was the most comprehensive retrospect taken by the learned President of the fortunes of the Holy See through past ages, led him to the conclusion that our feelings about the present unfortunate circumstances of the Papacy ought not to take the form of despair. The restoration of the temporal power might be the result of agencies that are already at work among the European nations. If by brought about, it would be so not by the will of man, but by the Providence of God. The world in all ages was equally hostile to the Church, whether the lack of Peter were tossed amid the billows of political convulsion, or glided over the smooth treachery of worldly prosperity. Of one thing Catholics might be sure—there would be no compromise between the Holy Father and the enemies of the Church. His resolution never to capitulate with the Italian Government was not caused by pettiness of feeling. Some had blamed him for refusing to celebrate, as heretofore, the great festivals of the Church in St. Peter's. It was impossible he could do so while Rome remained in the power of the usurpation. The demand reminded one of the words of the Psalm—Super flumina Babylonis.

On the contrary, the Pope's people, Mr. Allies rose and said that of the many papers he had heard read at the Academy the present was the one that had afforded him the greatest pleasure, and with every word of which he entirely concurred. The reputation made on them. On the 5th of February, 1848, the Pope granted a Constitution, appointed by a certain Lord Ellenborough, accompanied to Cashary two Protestants who were charged with the duty of collecting the war tax. They took up their quarters in the house of a Catholic, by which they incurred the village, intending to encamp there until the following morning. During the night some of their people broke into the neighborhood, and they imagined themselves beyond the possibility of assistance. Discharges of musketry were heard, and, in the morning, the two Protestants were found miserably but they soon became aware that the assailants had fled, and they were heard upon the outskirts of the grove.

"There was soon great excitement in the village. Men, women, children dressed, and all the men flew to arms. The battalion, in whom brother, rushed towards the place from whence the firing had come. Finding themselves inferior in numbers, and seeing no enemy, they halted. A shout of victory was heard—for they were nothing but peasants—threw down their arms and fled in confusion. Many were slain, and would behind the trees.

Having recovered from their fright, the people returned victorious to their quarters. But the exploits of the inhabitants was not permitted to pass unpunished. The enemy received reinforcements, and prepare to chastise the men who were so insolent as to fire upon the troops of the Holy Father. On the following morning they took possession of the village, and commenced a general onslaught, under pain of plunder and fire, the surrender of the instigators of the night attack. The chief authority, the curé of Cashary, a man of large form and an ardent patriot, offers to give himself up as the instigator of the whole affair, if he might save the village. He allows himself to be denounced as the chief of the party; he is arrested, loaded with irons, and shortly dragged to Rieti.

Four weeks later, on Sunday, the 12th of February, this brave, but misguided Priest, was brought before a council of war, and without examining the slightest evidence, heard himself condemned to death. On the same day he was conducted to the heights of Borrago, a short distance from the village, and shot by the men of the Landwehr. Before ordering his men to fire, the chief of the firing squad approached the priest, and extending his hand, said:

"Forgive me, Monsieur le Curé, for the act I am about to commit. I cannot do otherwise, as my duty demands it."

"Proceed, monsieur; I forgive you."

These were the last words of the martyr. He tore off the bandage with which they wanted to blindfold him, and with his countenance beaming with goodness and courage, he fell pierced with bullets.

A few weeks later, Zimmermann died of shame and remorse. The civil and religious authorities of the town only assisted at the condemnation when it was too late to protest against the shameful execution. The inhabitants of Rieti have given a magnificent cenotaph of granite and black marble to the memory of the martyr in the "Cimetière de Nord." The victim, born at Mouron, the bourg so cruelly ravaged by the Bavarians on the eve of the battle of Sedan, is represented life-size, the body reclining face downwards, and the eyes unbandaged. This tomb, erected by patriotic subscriptions, is now the object of a series of pilgrimages. The victims of the war resort to it to mourn over their dead; children learn here the horrors of the invasion, and the duty which a love of country imposes upon every Frenchman.

The Grave of Wolfe Tone.

A great national demonstration took place on Sunday, June 29th, at Bodenstown, county Kildare, to celebrate the completion of a memorial over the grave of Theobald Wolfe Tone, whose remains repose under the shade of a ruined temple in the ancient graveyard. Among the many brave Irishmen who have lived and suffered in the cause of their country, Wolfe Tone holds a foremost place, and his memory is held dear in the hearts of Irishmen all over the world. His grave is regarded with that veneration which is characteristic of the Irish race, and it has always been a spot of peculiar interest and regard. Some few months since a number of gentlemen met by his grave by the members of the Wolfe Tone Band, Dublin, this laudable idea having suggested itself to them. Of course the Holy Father would be an exile from his dominions, but faithful Catholics in general might make up their minds to endure in the persecution; let them not expect their own lot to be better than that of the head of their religion. On the other hand, it might well enough be conceived that a Christian King could have the Vicar of Jesus Christ for his subject. The Pope was the independent of every nation in sovereignty, and between being independent of other sovereigns and being himself a sovereign, there was no difference or distinction. The true nature and necessity of the temporal power came out more clearly the more it was attacked. Unless it were restored, there was a convulsion of society impending, and he would therefore ask the shade the conflict of previous ages. No one could calculate the enormous elements of destruction stored up in the gigantic forces now existing in Europe, or have even half-formed of men in arms awaiting the call to war and bloodshed.

An Episode of the Late Franco-Prussian War.

A recent number of L'Assemble Nationale published the following interesting narrative, which was translated for the New York Freeman's Journal:

From the village of Cercy, situated about five miles from Reims, conceals its little cottages and gardens in the groves that encircle the hillside. The inhabitants, composed as it is of small farmers, are not rich, and of a peaceable character, were not heavily enthusiast to resist the requisition made on them. On the 5th of February, 1871, the Prussian General Von Zimmermann, commanding the Cavalry Division which encamped in Cashary two Protestants who were charged with the duty of collecting the war tax. They took up their quarters in the house of a Catholic, by which they incurred the village, intending to encamp there until the following morning. During the night some of their people broke into the neighborhood, and they imagined themselves beyond the possibility of assistance. Discharges of musketry were heard, and, in the morning, the two Protestants were found miserably but they soon became aware that the assailants had fled, and they were heard upon the outskirts of the grove.

"There was soon great excitement in the village. Men, women, children dressed, and all the men flew to arms. The battalion, in whom brother, rushed towards the place from whence the firing had come. Finding themselves inferior in numbers, and seeing no enemy, they halted. A shout of victory was heard—for they were nothing but peasants—threw down their arms and fled in confusion. Many were slain, and would behind the trees.

Having recovered from their fright, the people returned victorious to their quarters. But the exploits of the inhabitants was not permitted to pass unpunished. The enemy received reinforcements, and prepare to chastise the men who were so insolent as to fire upon the troops of the Holy Father. On the following morning they took possession of the village, and commenced a general onslaught, under pain of plunder and fire, the surrender of the instigators of the night attack. The chief authority, the curé of Cashary, a man of large form and an ardent patriot, offers to give himself up as the instigator of the whole affair, if he might save the village. He allows himself to be denounced as the chief of the party; he is arrested, loaded with irons, and shortly dragged to Rieti.

Four weeks later, on Sunday, the 12th of February, this brave, but misguided Priest, was brought before a council of war, and without examining the slightest evidence, heard himself condemned to death. On the same day he was conducted to the heights of Borrago, a short distance from the village, and shot by the men of the Landwehr. Before ordering his men to fire, the chief of the firing squad approached the priest, and extending his hand, said:

"Forgive me, Monsieur le Curé, for the act I am about to commit. I cannot do otherwise, as my duty demands it."

"Proceed, monsieur; I forgive you."

These were the last words of the martyr. He tore off the bandage with which they wanted to blindfold him, and with his countenance beaming with goodness and courage, he fell pierced with bullets.

A few weeks later, Zimmermann died of shame and remorse. The civil and religious authorities of the town only assisted at the condemnation when it was too late to protest against the shameful execution. The inhabitants of Rieti have given a magnificent cenotaph of granite and black marble to the memory of the martyr in the "Cimetière de Nord." The victim, born at Mouron, the bourg so cruelly ravaged by the Bavarians on the eve of the battle of Sedan, is represented life-size, the body reclining face downwards, and the eyes unbandaged. This tomb, erected by patriotic subscriptions, is now the object of a series of pilgrimages. The victims of the war resort to it to mourn over their dead; children learn here the horrors of the invasion, and the duty which a love of country imposes upon every Frenchman.

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

Don Carlos was crowned on Friday, March 6th, in the Cathedral of Talcoo, capital of the province of Guipazcoas. After the coronation he attended solemn High Mass of thanksgiving for the victories lately gained by his army.

Great excitement prevails in Treves on account of the ill-treatment by the Prussian officials of the Most Rev. Bishop Eberhard. The people seem disposed to rise against the Government.

The six centenary of St. Thomas Aquinas, which occurred on March 7th, has been celebrated at Rome, which poss all over his Christian world. The Fathers of the Dominican Order especially honored the memory of their most illustrious Doctor.

The salutiy Archbishop of Westminster, Dr. Manning, availed himself of St. Patrick's Day to address his Bishopric flock on the necessity of practicing holy temperance. The Irish of London followed his good advice in a remarkable manner.

The Sacred Congregations have passed a decree for promoting the process of beatification of the servants of God, John Eudes, a missionary apostolic, and founder of the Congregation of Jesus and Mary, and the venerable Anna Maria Taigi.

The Right Rev. Francis Redwood, of the Society of Mary, was consecrated Bishop of Wellington, New Zealand, in the church of St. Anne, Spitalfields, London, on March 17th. Dr. Manning was the consecrating prelate. The ceremony was witnessed by quite a concourse of distinguished English laymen.

It is stated from Rome that the Bishops of Germany have addressed a collective letter to the King, protesting in very respectful terms against the bill enacting that the ceremonial of marriage must also be performed before the solemnization of the religious rite.

The celebration of the unfailing generosity of the Holy Father comes to us from Rome. His Holiness recently sent three gold chalices and a rich chasuble as a gift to the Church of Bonisolo, in the diocese of Treviso. The good people returned their hearty thanks and profession of love and devotion to the successor of St. Peter.

One of the most remarkable miracles ever was carried on in the city of Cork was recently concluded in the beautiful church of SS. Peter and Paul. The cures of communicants was unprecedentedly large. Most Rev. Dr. Delaney expressed in the highest terms his satisfaction at the happy results of the religious exercises.

The Holy Father, although much grieved by the death of Cardinal Barnabo, and afflicted by the unfilial conduct of the Emperor of Austria, who is copying the infamous Prussian Church laws and introducing them into his dominions, is in the enjoyment of excellent health, and takes a good deal of exercise.

The Church laws have been received with Pope by a public audience in the Royal House of the Austrian Reichsrath, where Cardinal Rauscher, in the presence of the Protestants and the infidels decidedly preponderate. They will probably be published in the upper Austrian Chamber of the Upper House.

There is no telling to what absurd extremes English bigots will not run. The Rectory Committee of the town of Peterborough is fully represented in Parliament by the notorious Whalley, have refused to let the cemetery of the town only "Consecrated" ground. Resolved in MORDEN, according to the words, "Pray for the soul of," etc., consisting of "Bishoprick" is Stand" to be buried in this cemetery.

The creed of the secret society known as "Young Italy" is laid down by their own publications as "God's King, no priest, and holy purpose—doing honor to the memory of one of the truest of the many martyrs that world that land had produced. His honored dust rested beneath where they stood, but his memory was cherished in the hearts of the Irish race to all parts of the globe. The stone that lay over it had almost disappeared, but it had been removed in his old scrape by Irishmen to carry as a precious relic to their lands, and there was nothing left to mark the spot where lay that beloved dust. In that state of affairs the young men of the Wolfe Tone Band erected a new slab over the grave, and the men of Kildare had completed the work so well begun by erecting the beautiful temple which now surrounded it. It was in the darkest days of Ireland's suffering, when the Catholics were shut out from all voice in the government of their own country, and a groaning and bleeding land, that Wolfe Tone, a Protestant, took up their cause, and when he found that every conscientious effort to do good seemed but foiled—when the masses of his countrymen were shut out from the political race—he turned to the last resort of an outraged people. Let his acts be a warning to every Government, that they hound a people inevitably, desperately and legally agitating for the reform of acknowledged grievances, and for the removal of acknowledged wrongs, when they trampled upon them. The name for which Wolfe Tone lived and died, the freedom and independence of his native land, still animated the breasts of the Irish people.

Mr. Mooney then moved a resolution to the effect that, in dedicating the tomb to the memory of Theobald Wolfe Tone, they desired, in testimony of their admiration for his labors in the cause of Irish independence and the devotion which he displayed in the service of their country, to declare their fidelity to the great principle of self-government for Ireland which he maintained.

A Voice—Home Rule.

Mr. Richard Kenna, of Dublin, seconded the motion in an eloquent speech, in which he called upon them to continue their efforts in behalf of their country's independence.

Mr. John Keegan having been called to the second chair, a vote of thanks was passed to the chairman amid great enthusiasm. Cheers were given for Parnell and Sullivan, etc. The Wolfe Tone band having played "The Green of Wolfe Tone" round the grave, the demonstration terminated, and the several bands of the assemblage retired to their homes. The entire proceedings were orderly and enthusiastic.—Dublin Freeman.

HAPPANT INFIDELITY.—The Paris Assemble Nationale publishes the following: "One of our friends, who lives in the South of France, writes to us that in the village of X—— all religious services have been suspended since September 4, 1870. They have there only civil marriages, burials and civil baptisms. This is the severe result of a civil baptism. The family go to the Mayor's house in procession, sing the "Marseillaise" and other revolutionary airs. A speech is then made, and a Phrygian cap is placed on the infant's head. It is the custom to cut the baby by names such as Gambetti, Manuel, Bordone, etc. Infants have been received the names of Hoche, Robespierre and Chalbaud Lacaze would have even been called poudre, carrot and tobacco in which, anything that is not Christian. The province who is now in power is going to put a stop to this state of things."

SATURDAY, APRIL 18, 1874.

EDUCATIONAL.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of B.A.; the Scientific, B.S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

A Preparatory Department has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good English education before attending the higher classes.

Whilst proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, the pupils receive instruction in special attention. The daily exercises of the Students are conducted in the French language, as well as English.

Classes are held every day, except Thursday and Sunday, from 9 a.m. to 12 m., and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Pupils will find Saint Mary's in their advantage to present at the formation of classes.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR:

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

Board, Tuition and Washing.....$250 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicine.....10 00
Vacation at College.....40 00
Use of Bedding.....10 00
Modern languages, Music and Drawing form extra charges.

Tuition will be resumed on the 15th of August.

For further information address the Brother Director.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN SANTA CLARA, one mile from the Depot, and 50 miles from San Francisco. The grounds are extensive, and the buildings large and commodious.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches taught in Academies. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS.

(Invariably half yearly in advance):

Board, Tuition, Washing, Bedding, per session.....$125 00
Music, with use of instrument, per month.....1 50
Drawing and Painting.....2 00
Vocalizing and the Academy.....2 00

DAY PUPILS.

Terms per month (in advance.)

Select Day Scholars—Rhetoric, first and second.....$3 00
Third and fourth Grammar Classes.....2 50
Preparatory Classes.....2 00
Preparatory Scholars, per month, throughout the year.....1 00

No extra charge for French, plain and ornamental needlework.

For further particulars apply to the Superiores.

CONVENT OF THE IMMACULATE HEART OF MARY
FOR THE

EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES
SILVOT, SANTA CLARA CO.

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS:

Board, tuition, washing and bedding, per session.....$150 00
Entrance fee, to be paid but once.....10 00
Bouquet on Piano.....5 00
French.....5 00

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Fine and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged $40 00.

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.

Pupils will be required to furnish their own Bed and Bedding, Napkins, Towels, Silver Fork and Spoon, Goblet and Plate.

Pupils commencing at the Academy during vacation will be charged $40 00

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The collection for the Pope subscribed by the Catholics of the diocese of Pittsburg amounted to nearly $6,000; that for the Orphans reached a little over $4,000.

There is something approaching a famine in several parts of Italy. Bread riots are frequent, and the troops are kept busy restoring tranquility. The Communistic character of the demonstrations is proven by the cries of the infuriated and hungry mobs. United Italy is certainly not prosperous.

The New York Freeman's Journal, in an article on the American pilgrimage, suggests that Catholics who cannot make one of the party should subscribe for a testimonial of love and homage to the Sovereign Pontiff. In its issue of April 4th it publishes an initial list of the contributors. Among the names given we notice that of Very Rev. Father Delcon, of Grass Valley, for $25.

The announcement that Dr. Manning is to be made a Cardinal, although not official, is generally credited, and has called forth quite a number of congratulatory articles. We even notice some such in English Protestant papers. The Archbishop is a great man, and even British bigotry cannot prevent his countrymen from taking pride in him.

The Catholics of New Orleans are making up a subscription to defray the traveling expenses of the one chosen to represent their city in the American pilgrimage. By the Morning Star of the 5th April we notice that the amount collected already exceeds $500. We do not know the name of the gentleman who is to carry the banner of the Crescent City among the hosts army of faithful pilgrims.

On Sunday evening, March 8th, was concluded a most fruitful mission of seven days at St. Mary's Church, Alexandria, Va. Of a total Catholic population of about 1,300 souls there were nearly 800 who received Holy Communion, among them many who had not approached the Sacrament for years, and some grown old who had never received their first Communion.

The Paris Journal of the relics of the martyrs made by the Parisian Communists in 1871 has been reopened. Among other things are a number of pieces of vestment from the person of Archbishop Darboy, on which the victims had scratched their names, and many of these had even written their last requiem. The sentiment is a most touching one.

Reminders says the Pope is the only man literally to inherit the purple of Herod. If this is meant as a "speak" it bears anything perpetrated by Artemus Ward or Josh Billings. The people have been, at least since the Chancellor, with his usual brutality, taken as "Bismarck" by the servile admirers of the Liberal press, about as far as he can exist. Like all coarse beings, Bismarck delights in taunting the weak.

Cardinal Cullen, as well as every other Irishman, comes of like ancestry, and when his Eminence was Rector of the Irish College at Rome, he was an ardent supporter of the letters to the most Rev. Dr. Maguire, Bishop of Derry—a great light and a great loss to the Irish Church—and that so pleasantly as can be. As the Irish say, it seems likely to the Cardinal to be for he had two pensions bought in, "no."

The mission of St. Stephen's, Brooklyn, closed on the Feast of the Annunciation, when the Papal Benediction was given and the crowd illuminated. The cross is the invention of Rev. Father Walworth, pastor of the church. It stands upon a gilt ball at the summit of the spire, 210 feet above the sidewalk, is about a half foot in height and four in width. It is formed of 750 three-candle power glasses, imported from Bohemia, which are in a framework of galvanized iron. By the interior are a series of gas jets, which can be lit up by electricity.

The Rev. Simon Lemmer delivered a fine lecture, Monday evening, March 30th, on "Ireland, Her Scholars, Poets and Statesmen," in the Church of St. Francis, St. Louis, Mo., for the benefit of the sacred and sacrificial vestments of St. Patrick, the old Bell of Donegal, and the stone slab of regenerating the Irish people as John Stuart Mill has so ably shadowed forth in his "Subjection of Women." Mr. Lemmer is a descendant of the first thousand exiles of the Irish alphabet to the tongue. The result was that in time Ireland became the most enlightened country in the world.

The Semaine de Lourdes quotes the following from the Journal de Rome: "On the 25th of March a most glorious and grotto during the past year: The convent of the sacrament, which is situated on the top of the Janiculum, and the 1,200 pilgrims coming from forty several different countries and two to three days in order to visit the grotto. Consequently the hills among of Rome, and more than 3,000 persons were obliged to go away."

On Sunday evening, March 8th, was concluded a most fruitful mission of seven days at St. Mary's Church, Alexandria, Va. Of a total Catholic population of about 1,300 souls there were nearly 800 who received Holy Communion, among them many who had not approached the Sacrament for years, and some grown old who had never received their first Communion.

The Paris Journal of the relics of the martyrs made by the Parisian Communists in 1871 has been reopened. Among other things are a number of pieces of vestment from the person of Archbishop Darboy, on which the victims had scratched their names, and many of these had even written their last requiem. The sentiment is a most touching one.

Reminders says the Pope is the only man literally to inherit the purple of Herod. If this is meant as a "speak" it bears anything perpetrated by Artemus Ward or Josh Billings. The people have been, at least since the Chancellor, with his usual brutality, taken as "Bismarck" by the servile admirers of the Liberal press, about as far as he can exist. Like all coarse beings, Bismarck delights in taunting the weak.

Cardinal Cullen, as well as every other Irishman, comes of like ancestry, and when his Eminence was Rector of the Irish College at Rome, he was an ardent supporter of the letters to the most Rev. Dr. Maguire, Bishop of Derry—a great light and a great loss to the Irish Church—and that so pleasantly as can be. As the Irish say, it seems likely to the Cardinal to be for he had two pensions bought in, "no."

The mission of St. Stephen's, Brooklyn, closed on the Feast of the Annunciation, when the Papal Benediction was given and the crowd illuminated. The cross is the invention of Rev. Father Walworth, pastor of the church. It stands upon a gilt ball at the summit of the spire, 210 feet above the sidewalk, is about a half foot in height and four in width. It is formed of 750 three-candle power glasses, imported from Bohemia, which are in a framework of galvanized iron. By the interior are a series of gas jets, which can be lit up by electricity.

The New York Freeman's Journal, in an article on the American pilgrimage, suggests that Catholics who cannot make one of the party should subscribe for a testimonial of love and homage to the Sovereign Pontiff. In its issue of April 4th it publishes an initial list of the contributors. Among the names given we notice that of Very Rev. Father Delcon, of Grass Valley, for $25.

The announcement that Dr. Manning is to be made a Cardinal, although not official, is generally credited, and has called forth quite a number of congratulatory articles. We even notice some such in English Protestant papers. The Archbishop is a great man, and even British bigotry cannot prevent his countrymen from taking pride in him.

The Catholics of New Orleans are making up a subscription to defray the traveling expenses of the one chosen to represent their city in the American pilgrimage. By the Morning Star of the 5th April we notice that the amount collected already exceeds $500. We do not know the name of the gentleman who is to carry the banner of the Crescent City among the hosts army of faithful pilgrims.

On Sunday evening, March 8th, was concluded a most fruitful mission of seven days at St. Mary's Church, Alexandria, Va. Of a total Catholic population of about 1,300 souls there were nearly 800 who received Holy Communion, among them many who had not approached the Sacrament for years, and some grown old who had never received their first Communion.

The Paris Journal of the relics of the martyrs made by the Parisian Communists in 1871 has been reopened. Among other things are a number of pieces of vestment from the person of Archbishop Darboy, on which the victims had scratched their names, and many of these had even written their last requiem. The sentiment is a most touching one.

Reminders says the Pope is the only man literally to inherit the purple of Herod. If this is meant as a "speak" it bears anything perpetrated by Artemus Ward or Josh Billings. The people have been, at least since the Chancellor, with his usual brutality, taken as "Bismarck" by the servile admirers of the Liberal press, about as far as he can exist. Like all coarse beings, Bismarck delights in taunting the weak.

Cardinal Cullen, as well as every other Irishman, comes of like ancestry, and when his Eminence was Rector of the Irish College at Rome, he was an ardent supporter of the letters to the most Rev. Dr. Maguire, Bishop of Derry—a great light and a great loss to the Irish Church—and that so pleasantly as can be. As the Irish say, it seems likely to the Cardinal to be for he had two pensions bought in, "no."

The mission of St. Stephen's, Brooklyn, closed on the Feast of the Annunciation, when the Papal Benediction was given and the crowd illuminated. The cross is the invention of Rev. Father Walworth, pastor of the church. It stands upon a gilt ball at the summit of the spire, 210 feet above the sidewalk, is about a half foot in height and four in width. It is formed of 750 three-candle power glasses, imported from Bohemia, which are in a framework of galvanized iron. By the interior are a series of gas jets, which can be lit up by electricity.

Protein the Staking System.

The formula a condensant produced by the stimulants in ordinary use, are followed by a reaction that is always more or less injurious. Just as the fierce, blossomed for a moment by the lightning's glare, becomes apparently blacker than ever after the flash is over, so the mental gloom and physical debility that visibly temporarily under the influence of a drug, returns with a ten-fold intensity when the first transient effect ceases. Yet physicians habitually prescribe the poison of commerce for patients suffering from bodily weakness and mental despondency. The true remedy in such cases is a pure stimulant medicated with the finest tonics and alterative which the vegetable kingdom affords, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the only preparation at present known which thoroughly blends the emergency. The effect of this popular remedy is to complexion. Each dose taken invigorates the vital energies and the brain, and its prolonged use will unquestionably cure the most obstinate dyspepsia, biliousness, or mental torpor that does not arise from organic disease beyond the reach of medicine. It is in the interest of the word, and is fascinating and captivating certain. If the nerves are tumultuous nor relaxed, it braces them—if the bowels are constipated, it relieves them; if the liver is torpid, it possesses sensitivity in that organ if the mind is gloomy, it clears away the clouds; if the appetite is poor and digestion slow and painful it promotes, it creates a relish for food and soothes the stomach in its recovery to lose healthful aliment. Moreover, it is a specific for a large number of ailments to which it is more particularly prevalent in the damp and chill of autumn, such as fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney complaints, dyspepsia, biliousness, nervousness, constipation, child and fever, and all the morbid conditions of the digestive and secretive organs superinduced by sudden changes of temperature and the inclemency of the season.

Wholesale Market Report.

MORTON OTHUS, SAN FRANCISCO.
THURSDAY, April 16, 1874.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export the inquiry has been moderate. We quote—Extra at $5 75 @ 6 15; superfine at $4 87 1/2@5. In sacks $5 @ 5 50 bbl.

WHEAT—The market has ruled quiet and at steady rates the past week. At the close the market is unchanged at $1 60@1 62 1/2 ctls.

BARLEY—No demand has been very good at better rates. We quote for feed for ordinary to choice brewing at $1 02 1/2@1 07 1/2 @ 1 10 ctls.

OATS—The market is unchanged, at unchanged rates. Gray for seed and feed. Quotable at the close at $1 50@1 70 @ 1 80 ctls.

RYE—Quotable at $1 30@1 35 ctls.

CORN—Yellow Western is in fair demand and steady, with a good demand. Quotable at the close at $1 35@1 37 1/2 ctls. In small lots.

BUCKWHEAT—Quotable at $2 @ 2 25 ctls.

HAY—Quotable at $1 @ 1 50 @ 2 ton.

CORN—Quotable at $1 @ 1 25 @ 1 75 @ 2 ton.

BRAN—The following are the jobbing rates: Bran, $18 @ 19; Middlings, $20 @ 21; Shorts, $21 @ 22; Chicken Feed, $1 75@2 @ 2 25 ctl.

BEANS—Bayos, $3 @ 3 25; Butters, $3 @ 3 25; Pea, $3 @ 3 25; Lima, $5 @ 5 25; Red, $3 @ 3 25; Small White, $3 @ 3 25; Large White, $3 @ 3 25 ctl.

POTATOES—The receipts have been fair, with a fair demand. We quote the range at $1 75@2 25 per ctl. New Burbanks, $1 @ 1 50 ctl.

ONIONS—Quotable at $2 @ 2 50 ton from mill.

MIDDLINGS—We quote feed at $27 50 @ ton from mill.

HAY—Quotable at $1 75@1 75 @ 2 ton.

STRAW—Quotable at $1 @ 1 25 @ 1 50 ton.

BARLEY—Quotable at $1 @ 1 25 @ 1 50 ton.

OATS—Quotable at $1 @ 1 25 @ 1 50 ton.

TALLOW—Quotable at 6 1/2@7 3/4 @.

WOOL—We quote Spring, short staple, at 17@20c; medium, 21@23c; extra, long, 24c @ 2.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—Cubberds fresh roll, good to choice, 37 1/2 @40c; fresh firkin, fair to good, 30@35c; ordinary to fair, 25@28c; choice, none in the market.

CHEESE—California, fair to good, 15@16c; choice, 17@18c; Eastern, 18@20c @ dozen; Young America, 19@20c @ dozen.

EGGS—Per dozen, 25@30c.

POULTRY—Live Turkeys, 15 @ 18 @ 20 @ 22c; Geese, 90c @ $1 @ $1 25 @ $1 50 @ pair; Ducks, $1 @ $1 25 @ $1 50 @ pair; Chickens, $3 @ $3 50 @ $4 @ $4 50 @ $5 @ $5 50 @ $6 @ $6 50 @ $7 @ $7 50 @ $8 @ $8 50 @ $9 @ $9 50 @ $10 @ $10 50 @

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The collection for the Pope subscribed by the Catholics of the diocese of Pittsburg amounted to nearly $6,000; that for the Olphane reached a little over $4,000.

There is something approaching a famine in several parts of Italy. Bread riots are frequent, and the troops are kept busy restoring tranquillity. The Communistic character of the demonstrations is proven by the cries of the infuriated and hungry mobs. United Italy is certainly not prosperous.

The New York Freeman's Journal, in an article on the American pilgrimage, suggests that Catholics who cannot make one of the party should subscribe for a testimonial of love and homage to the Sovereign Pontiff. In its issue of April 4th it publishes an initial list of the contributors. Among the names given we notice that of Very Rev. Father Dalton, of Grass Valley, for $50.

The announcement that Dr. Manning is to be made a Cardinal, although not official, is generally credited, and has called forth quite a number of congratulatory articles. We print notice some sent in English Protestant papers. The Archbishop is a great man, and even British bigotry cannot prevent his countrymen from taking pride in him.

The Catholics of New Orleans are making up a subscription to defray the traveling expenses of the one chosen to represent their city in the American pilgrimage. By the Morning Star of the 5th April we notice that the amount collected already exceeds $600. We do not know the names of the gentleman who is to carry the banner of the Crescent City among the little army of faithful pilgrims.

On Sunday evening, March 8th, was concluded a most fruitful mission of seven days at St. Mary's Church, Alexandria, Va. Of a total Catholic population of about 1,500 souls there were nearly 600 who received Holy Communion, among them many who had long neglected the Sacraments for years, and some grown old who had never received their first Communion.

The Patriotic summum of the relics of the pillage made by the Parisian Communists in 1871 has been reopened. Among other things are a number of pieces of widow gloss from the house of La Roncière, from which the victims had scorched their names, and scraps of them had even written letters to friends. The museum attracts a great crowd.

Bismarck says the Pope is the only man likely to reconcile the people to Servage! If this is meant as a "quash" it bears anything perpetrated by Artemus Ward or Josh Billings. Impossibilities, however, are that the Chancellor, with his usual brutality, takes as "whatnesses" by the servile adulators of Liberal Lower Canada, will be sent out. Lake all coarse beings, Bismarck delights in insulting the weak.

Cardinal Cullen, as well as every other Irishman, cousin of like ancestry, and when his Eminence was Rector of the Irish College at Rome, he was an accomplished. His letters to the late Rev. Dr. Maguire, Bishop of Derry—A great light and a great loss to the Irish Church—show that at Rhemes's as can be. As the Irish people are to-day, so were they in the days of the Tudors and Stuarts.

The mission of St. Stephen's, Brooklyn, closed on Palm Sunday in the evening, when the Papal Benediction was given, and a crown illuminated. The crown is the invention of Rev. Father O'Reilly, pastor of the church. It stands on a gilt ball at the summit of the spire, 210 feet above the sidewalk, is two and a half feet in height and four in width. It is formed of 120 diamond-shaped glasses, imported from Bohemia, which are set in a framework of galvanized iron. In the interior are a blaze of gas jets, which can be lit up by electricity.

Rev. James Kenned delivered a fine lecture, Monday evening, March 30th, on "Ireland, Her Scholars, Poets and Songs," in Sansome Avenue church, St. Mary's. He held a full house of that sacred and soul-inspiring of Mr. Parnell, who told the holy people and the same time of religious persecution in the days of Queen Bess; for he wished them to be well apprised of the boons he was soon by distributing one thousand copies of the Irish apostle, to the peasantry. The result was that in time Ireland will be the most enlightened country in the world.

The Annales de Lourdes quotes the following railway statistics of pilgrims to the miraculous grotto and grants during the past year: The number of the railways, which had complied given to the number of 1,500 pilgrims, and which had formed seven different streams and were formed one hundred and fifty-three trains, exclusive of Omnibus of the official Agents we can account for 1,500 pilgrims who came by their individual initiative to the Grotto. These Mass Are, comprise of men only—one from Nimegue, one from Bordeaux, and one from Nimes, consisting of 1,100.

Don D. Vincent de Paul Moreby is the richest proprietor of mixed laborers engaged in charitable work in New York. He began his fortune by coming to New York for merely a few dollars. It was accumulated in the sale of liquors. He founded in the city Rome in 1846. The organization is composed of forty-two boys in company with a Brother, who oversees the proceedings of all the boys. The Institution is also maintained by about $40,000 a year, is at present in charge of 600 boys, and is usually full. Applications are made for admission every day, and the managers have no difficulty in selecting the most needy cases.

Among the remarkable incidents of St. Patrick's Day may be mentioned that of French and German medical nursing over many others in Baltimore, the Knights of Father Mathew, St. Michael's and St. Patrick (Germans) 60 into line, and it is said that there were more marching with a fine band. A Catholic Irishman, who was present, writes to us in a most complimentary manner of the manner in which the Irish of Baltimore and San Francisco are Catholics. We would not wish to be living in the days of the Church or its people who would not be proud of the Irish Catholics of Baltimore and San Francisco.

The Rev. Father Thebaud, S.J., has left for Europe, and will be absent for a year. He will be met by his brother, Father Thebaud, S.J., at Liverpool, and will spend the summer in Ireland, Scotland and England. He will return to this country in the fall, and will be met at the steamer

THE FRANC-TIREUR.

A Tale of the Franco-Prussian War.

CHAPTER LXXII.

THE HOTEL DE VILLE.

Despite the strong objection he entertained to his timber assistant, Mike Mahony was not long before he brought it into requisition. While still regarded as a patient of the ambulance he contrived to get into the streets and observe with much curiosity what was going forward. It did not always happen that what he observed was of a very striking nature. There is a good deal that is common-place even in times of siege in a great city. The bombardment interested him in some degree, but he had been under fire so often that it presented no great feature of novelty. He did, indeed, wonder at the indifference which began to be exhibited towards it by men, women, and even children, though at the time it was known that as many as fifty persons were daily slain by the shells or the fall of the materials of buildings.

As he rested one day on a bench placed outside a house, that once seemed to have been a sort of café, but was now closed, several men holding muskets in their hands passed him. They were all moving in one direction, and seemed to have a common destination. Most of them cast a careless glance at the figure of the soldier in a faded uniform, with a crutch, and passed on. One, however, who was declaiming energetically to two or three, suddenly paused before Mike, and addressing his companions, said, "Look here."

They stopped and looked. Mike observed with interest. The speaker was a man in shabby attire, meagre and under-sized, with hair closely cropped, and as eye which, under thick black eyebrows, seemed to blaze with animation. He stood in such a way before Mike and raised his arm to point him out, as if he were a lecturer expounding from a blackboard.

"You see this?" he said.

His friends saw it.

"Well, this is the symbol of the cures that is weighing us down."

The friends' countenances were turned into notice of interrogation, while Mike was deeply interested in this account of himself.

"Man of the military uniform!"

"Good."

"See how it is faded—color waned out—rotten in texture."

"Indeed, monsieur"—struck in Mike, but he seemed at interruption was to be the last.

The kernel of the other's eloquence overwhelmed him. "Behold," he cried, "the vile and rotten system which, when I was young, and new, charmed the eyes of the foolish nation, until they were blinded by the Man of December, and here is this same military system all faded, ragged and torn to pieces even by the Man of Sedan!"

The friends' faces now were notes of admiration.

"The wound of this soldier—what does it signify?"

"May be," struck in Mike, who did not quite like what he thought a certain disparagement implied in the question, "you would know be'ter if you had a touch your-self."

"It is France pierced in her weakest point."

"My leg, by the holey!" thought Mike to himself, "Well, I did think I wasn't ever feeble in them instruments, any how."

The friends' countenances were turned into notice of interrogation, while Mike was deeply interested in this account of himself.

"Man of the military uniform!"

"Good."

"See how it is faded—color waned out—rotten in texture."

"Indeed, monsieur"—struck in Mike, but he seemed at interruption was to be the last.

The kernel of the other's eloquence overwhelmed him. "Behold," he cried, "the vile and rotten system which, when I was young, and new, charmed the eyes of the foolish nation, until they were blinded by the Man of December, and here is this same military system all faded, ragged and torn to pieces even by the Man of Sedan!"

The friends' faces now were notes of admiration.

"The wound of this soldier—what does it signify?"

"May be," struck in Mike, who did not quite like what he thought a certain disparagement implied in the question, "you would know be'ter if you had a touch your-self."

"It is France pierced in her weakest point."

"My leg, by the holey!" thought Mike to himself, "Well, I did think I wasn't ever feeble in them instruments, any how."

And more fervid in the enthusiasm, "away, with the rags of military sanitism! away with the weak limbs which are not covered with the glorious scars of sublime fight! away with the wretched prop which will hinder up a barricade in the advance of that glorious freedom which will sweep like an unconquerable force of a despicable enemy, and pour the blessings of victory and peace over the cities and plains of immortal France."

"Why, then, the divil fly away wid you," was the disrespectful commentary Mike uttered to himself as the orator and his friends left him. He watched them, and saw that they went up a large flight of steps and entered a building of considerable size, and that with the men were mingled a large proportion of women and children. He was too far distant to hear any observations, but he saw enough to be aware of singing, and the notes of the "Marseillaise" were audibly borne on the breeze.

A young woman passing by, Mike asked her what that building was. The girl, winking pretty, had a pleasant face, but there was about it an air of unusual determination.

"Do you not know," she said, "the great Vendroyeau Club? Ah," she added, with a tone of contempt, "you are a soldier of the miserable army which has left us shut up here."

"Well, Miss," said Mike good-humoredly, "while I was able I did my part by the counthry that I, but you see this article here is not much of a weapon to fight the Prussians wid."

She was a Communist, inflamed with the fabled rhetoric she had heard in the club; but she was a woman, too, and she could not help sighting out the exclamation, "Pauvre soldat!" as she bent down to take her share in the council for the rescue of the country which was being held in the Vendroyeau.

"What would be the use of my going in there?" commented Mike with himself, "and it's a speech very well agin the Government I was at home in Cappagh or at Limerick, yez, what the divil is the use of hearing them unfortunate omadhawns blathering about bread and butter, and I suppose very hardly one of them knows how to load a gun."

A couple of hours later Mike found himself on the steps of the Hotel de Ville. His curiosity had led him through the streets of the city, and the Faubourg Trochu had reached, but he himself was eager to learn more of the Commune. While the building he perceived that a considerable number of troops, evidently the National Guard, were stationed there. Of these one was very conspicuous from the richness of his uniform, and the position occupied him quickly. He was a man of the stature of Mike's own countrymen, and his face was of the Irish cast. As Mike looked more closely he thought there was no room for mistake. It was Jean Macmahon, the commander of the Versailles forces

THE FRANC-TIREUR.

A Tale of the Franco-Prussian War.

CHAPTER LXXII.

THE HOTEL DE VILLE.

Despite the strong objection he entertained to his line bar assistant, Mike Mahony was not long before he brought it into requisition. While still regarded as a patient of the ambulance he contrived to get into the streets and observe with much curiosity what was going forward. It did not always happen that what he observed was of a very striking nature. There is a good deal that is commonplace even in times of siege in a great city. The bombardment interested him in some degree, but it had been under fire so often that it proceeded no great feature of novelty. He did, indeed, wonder at the indifference which began to be exhibited towards it by men, women, and even children, though at the time it was known that as many as fifty persons were daily slain by the shells or the fall of the materials of buildings.

As he rested one day on a bench placed outside a house, that once seemed to have been a sort of cafe, but was now closed, several men holding muskets in their hands passed him. They were all moving in one direction, and seemed to have a common destination. Most of them cast a careless glance at the figure of the soldier in a faded uniform, with a crutch, and passed on. One, however, who was following more energetically in two or three, suddenly paused before Mike, and addressing his companions, said, "Look here."

They stopped and looked. Mike observed with interest. The speaker was a man in shabby clothes, meagre and undershaved, with hair closely cropped, and an eye which, under dark black eyebrows, seemed to blaze with animation. He stood with his weapon before Mike and raised his arm to point him out, as if he were a lecturer expounding from a blackboard.

"You see him?" he said.

His friends saw it.

"Well, this is the symbol of the curse that is resting on us down."

The friends' countenances were turned into some sort of interrogation, while Mike was deeply interested in this scrutiny of himself.

"Mark the military uniform."

"Good."

"See how it is faded—color washed out—colorless in texture."

"Indeed, monsieur!"—struck in Mike, but he attempt at interruption was in vain. The object of the orator's eloquence overwhelmed him. "Behold," he cried, "this vile military system which, when fresh and new, damned the eyes of this foolish nation, until they were blinded by the Man of December, and here is this same military system all faded, ragged, and torn to pieces under the Man of Sedan."

The friends' looks now were notes of enlightenment.

The wound of this soldier—what does it signify?"

"Say he," struck in Mike, who did not quite like what he thought a certain disparagement implied in the question, "you would know better if you had a bullet yourself."

"It is France pierced in her weakest point."

"My leg, by the hokey!" thought Mike to himself. "Well, I did think I wasn't ever feeble in these instruments, anyway."

"Regard that crutch! There you see the miserable prop with which one office administration seeks to sustain the tatters raised by its miserable predecessor."

"Bravo," exclaimed the friends.

"Away," cried the speaker growing more and more fervid in his enthusiasm, "away, with the rags of military uniform! away with the weak limbs which are not covered with the grooves of sublime liberty! away with the wretched prop which will buckle up a barrier to the advance of that glorious freedom which will sweep like an avalanche the forces of a despicable enemy, and pour the blessings of victory and peace over the cities and plains of immortal France."

"Say, then, the civil fly-away wid you,"

was the disrespectful commentary Mike uttered to himself as the orator and his friends left him. He watched them, and saw that they went up a large flight of steps and entered a building of considerable size, and that with the men were mingled a large proportion of women and children. He was too far distant to hear any observations, but the air caught the sound of singing, and the notes of the "Marseillaise" were easily borne on the breeze.

A young woman passing by, Mike asked her what that building was. The girl, who was not being pretty, had a pleasant face, but knew was about it as air of unnatural determination.

"Do you not know?" she said, "the great Soudreyan Club? Ah," she added, with a tone of contempt, "you are a soldier of the enemy, enemy which has lost on shot up here."

"Well, Miss," said Mike good-humouredly, "whether I was shot I did my best to prevent it, but you see this article here is not much of a weapon to fight the Prussian with."

She was a Communist, inflamed with the love of liberty, who had heard in the club that she was a woman, too, and she could not help sighing out the exclamation, "Pauvre fille!" as she hurried away to take her share in the council for the rescue of the country which was being held in the Soudreyan.

What would be the use of my going in there?" murmured Mike with himself. "If I like a speech very well again the form of it, I can't see it from the flagpost or at the back of the crowd. Faix, I'm not much for public meetings, particularly coachmen and gentlemen's valets, and I suppose I'm only one of them here now so long as I'm not paid."

A couple of hours later Mike found himself in the room of the Hotel de Ville, which had been the scene of the fatal fire through the agency of the Communists. He was not very sorry to learn later Mike found himself in the room of the Hotel de Ville, which had been the scene of the fatal fire through the agency of the Communists. He was not very sorry to learn more than one of the members of the Commune had been arrested, but he was very sorry to learn that the building had been fired with petroleum, a number of the incendiaries having been captured through their own ex very clumsiness. Many of these, however, were released by the mob, which, in the rage of military uniform, tore to pieces under the idea that they were the agents of the Versailles Government.

Mike found himself in a large room, which was filled with persons of both sexes, who were engaged in the work of barricading the windows. Some were piling up chairs, tables, and other articles of furniture, while others were tearing down the curtains and hangings. Mike was not long before he brought it into requisition. While still regarded as a patient of the ambulance he contrived to get into the streets and observe with much curiosity what was going forward. It did not always happen that what he observed was of a very striking nature. There is a good deal that is commonplace even in times of siege in a great city. The bombardment interested him in some degree, but it had been under fire so often that it proceeded no great feature of novelty. He did, indeed, wonder at the indifference which began to be exhibited towards it by men, women, and even children, though at the time it was known that as many as fifty persons were daily slain by the shells or the fall of the materials of buildings.

As he rested one day on a bench placed outside a house, that once seemed to have been a sort of cafe, but was now closed, several men holding muskets in their hands passed him. They were all moving in one direction, and seemed to have a common destination. Most of them cast a careless glance at the figure of the soldier in a faded uniform, with a crutch, and passed on. One, however, who was following more energetically in two or three, suddenly paused before Mike, and addressing his companions, said, "Look here."

They stopped and looked. Mike observed with interest. The speaker was a man in shabby clothes, meagre and undershaved, with hair closely cropped, and an eye which, under dark black eyebrows, seemed to blaze with animation. He stood with his weapon before Mike and raised his arm to point him out, as if he were a lecturer expounding from a blackboard.

"You see him?" he said.

His friends saw it.

"Well, this is the symbol of the curse that is resting on us down."

The friends' countenances were turned into some sort of interrogation, while Mike was deeply interested in this scrutiny of himself.

"Mark the military uniform."

"Good."

"See how it is faded—color washed out—colorless in texture."

"Indeed, monsieur!"—struck in Mike, but his attempt at interruption was in vain. The object of the orator's eloquence overwhelmed him. "Behold," he cried, "this vile military system which, when fresh and new, damned the eyes of this foolish nation, until they were blinded by the Man of December, and here is this same military system all faded, ragged, and torn to pieces under the Man of Sedan."

The friends' looks now were notes of enlightenment.

"The wound of this soldier—what does it signify?"

"Say he," struck in Mike, who did not quite like what he thought a certain disparagement implied in the question, "you would know better if you had a bullet yourself."

"It is France pierced in her weakest point."

"My leg, by the hokey!" thought Mike to himself. "Well, I did think I wasn't ever feeble in these instruments, anyway."

"Regard that crutch! There you see the miserable prop with which one office administration seeks to sustain the tatters raised by its miserable predecessor."

"Bravo," exclaimed the friends.

"Away," cried the speaker growing more and more fervid in his enthusiasm, "away, with the rags of military uniform! away with the weak limbs which are not covered with the grooves of sublime liberty! away with the wretched prop which will buckle up a barrier to the advance of that glorious freedom which will sweep like an avalanche the forces of a despicable enemy, and pour the blessings of victory and peace over the cities and plains of immortal France."

"Say, then, the civil fly-away wid you,"

was the disrespectful commentary Mike uttered to himself as the orator and his friends left him. He watched them, and saw that they went up a large flight of steps and entered a building of considerable size, and that with the men were mingled a large proportion of women and children. He was too far distant to hear any observations, but the air caught the sound of singing, and the notes of the "Marseillaise" were easily borne on the breeze.

A young woman passing by, Mike asked her what that building was. The girl, who was not being pretty, had a pleasant face, but knew was about it an air of unnatural determination.

"Do you not know?" she said, "the great Soudreyan Club? Ah," she added, with a tone of contempt, "you are a soldier of the enemy, enemy which has lost on shot up here."

"Well, Miss," said Mike good-humouredly, "whether I was shot I did my best to prevent it, but you see this article here is not much of a weapon to fight the Prussian with."

She was a Communist, inflamed with the love of liberty, who had heard in the club that she was a woman, too, and she could not help sighing out the exclamation, "Pauvre fille!" as she hurried away to take her share in the council for the rescue of the country which was being held in the Soudreyan.

"What would be the use of my going in there?" murmured Mike with himself. "If I like a speech very well again the form of it, I can't see it from the flagpost or at the back of the crowd. Faix, I'm not much for public meetings, particularly coachmen and gentlemen's valets, and I suppose I'm only one of them here now so long as I'm not paid."

A couple of hours later Mike found himself in the room of the Hotel de Ville, which had been the scene of the fatal fire through the agency of the Communists. He was not very sorry to learn later Mike found himself in the room of the Hotel de Ville, which had been the scene of the fatal fire through the agency of the Communists. He was not very sorry to learn more than one of the members of the Commune had been arrested, but he was very sorry to learn that the building had been fired with petroleum, a number of the incendiaries having been captured through their own ex very clumsiness. Many of these, however, were released by the mob, which, in the rage of military uniform, tore to pieces under the idea that they were the agents of the Versailles Government.

Mike found himself in a large room, which was filled with persons of both sexes, who were engaged in the work of barricading the windows. Some were piling up chairs, tables, and other articles of furniture, while others were tearing down the curtains and hangings. Mike was not long before he brought it into requisition.

CHAPTER LXXIII.

THE ARC DE TRIOMPHE.

The dreary month of February had given way to March when M. Victor Damarest rose leisurely from his bed in a garret of the Rue Fassy. M. Damarest had gone to bed without supper, and had shivered through the cold night with only a blanket and his pallet. Yet, few people wanted to buy the politics which M. Damarest helped to make for the famous magazine in the Quartier Rivoli, money not being abundant enough to permit of general indulgence in such delicy articles, and the result was that the lucubrator had to put up with a very slender supply of the necessaries of life. Nevertheless, it appeared he was not without some luxuries, for as he sat on the side of his bed, drawing on the broken boots he had removed, but unjustly, to depositaries his still less substantial, he looked lovingly across the room, with the eye of a connoisseur in his vision on a rare work of art, and exclaimed, "My friend, I beholdyou still!" Carrying the eye in the direction indicated by the glance of M. Damarest it would not strike one that the object addressed was such a gem at all. It was simply a pocket, not even new, nor bright, but rather of stumpy make, the canvas being flattened with the number of years it had been stationed.

Having completed his toilet, which did not involve the appliance of water in any shape, M. Damarest descended to the lower corner of his person and seized the musket, which he placed at his breast after the fashion in which he means of Jean of Arc represent her, with the two-handed sword. "My friend," he addressed the weapon, "I am alone. My children are dead, my wife I have lost long before me, but thou—my fire of 1793, my companion of the Champs Elysees!—thee I will not leave in my loving arms."

The musket answered her discharge, which put its own life in peril.

"Bravo," exclaimed the friends.

"Away," cried the speaker growing more and more fervid in his enthusiasm, "away, with the rags of military uniform! away with the weak limbs which are not covered with the grooves of sublime liberty! away with the wretched prop which will buckle up a barrier to the advance of that glorious freedom which will sweep like an avalanche the forces of a despicable enemy, and pour the blessings of victory and peace over the cities and plains of immortal France."

"Say, then, the civil fly-away wid you,"

was the disrespectful commentary Mike uttered to himself as the orator and his friends left him. He watched them, and saw that they went up a large flight of steps and entered a building of considerable size, and that with the men were mingled a large proportion of women and children. He was too far distant to hear any observations, but the air caught the sound of singing, and the notes of the "Marseillaise" were easily borne on the breeze.

A young woman passing by, Mike asked her what that building was. The girl, who was not being pretty, had a pleasant face, but knew was about it an air of unnatural determination.

"Do you not know?" she said, "the great Soudreyan Club? Ah," she added, with a tone of contempt, "you are a soldier of the enemy, enemy which has lost on shot up here."

"Well, Miss," said Mike good-humouredly, "whether I was shot I did my best to prevent it, but you see this article here is not much of a weapon to fight the Prussian with."

She was a Communist, inflamed with the love of liberty, who had heard in the club that she was a woman, too, and she could not help sighing out the exclamation, "Pauvre fille!" as she hurried away to take her share in the council for the rescue of the country which was being held in the Soudreyan.

"What would be the use of my going in there?" murmured Mike with himself. "If I like a speech very well again the form of it, I can't see it from the flagpost or at the back of the crowd. Faix, I'm not much for public meetings, particularly coachmen and gentlemen's valets, and I suppose I'm only one of them here now so long as I'm not paid."

A couple of hours later Mike found himself in the room of the Hotel de Ville, which had been the scene of the fatal fire through the agency of the Communists. He was not very sorry to learn later Mike found himself in the room of the Hotel de Ville, which had been the scene of the fatal fire through the agency of the Communists. He was not very sorry to learn more than one of the members of the Commune had been arrested, but he was very sorry to learn that the building had been fired with petroleum, a number of the incendiaries having been captured through their own ex very clumsiness. Many of these, however, were released by the mob, which, in the rage of military uniform, tore to pieces under the idea that they were the agents of the Versailles Government.

Mike found himself in a large room, which was filled with persons of both sexes, who were engaged in the work of barricading the windows. Some were piling up chairs, tables, and other articles of furniture, while others were tearing down the curtains and hangings. Mike was not long before he brought it into requisition.

ROMA CAPTA.

The Rome Capta is abandoned to the world,
Hundreds of Rebellion round her ramparts
Rebelled.

The Rome Zoo live down trodden and the brilliant
Rome shall come,
Ancient deeds of daring, Alist, Kossler and Rebel!

The Rock be broken, never shall the Rome prevail,
Rome very table infernal to their strong en-
Rome!

The Church is the Thee, always peace-
Rome of darkness, for they know that
Rome

Rome bar—though fracing, tread her with Rome scorn,
Rome of the forsaken fears the burning
Rome of morn.

Rome and table unbelieving, bearing up the Rome shattered wall,
Rome her mighty Empire growing like the Rome trees, living branches all the rivers and
Rome

Rome the fadies, there her voice is fearful
Rome of Austral Asia hearts are found how
Rome

Rome Cares hundreds of her sons have
Rome

Rome of her martyrs raises the roost of
Rome

Rome she back to England like a vast, re-
Rome

Rome Prince Princes, Christ the keys steered
Rome

Rome ondering child of Erin she hath crossed
Rome Rome.

Rome Rome Princes, Christ the keys steered
Rome

Rome her glorious nobles, bleding fellow man
Rome

Rome Rome of Conemara in the Islands of
Rome

Rome and grow, and prosper—let her triumph
Rome

Rome the Lots Incarnate contrite nations bend
Rome

Rome and, sing for gladness, in the Church
Rome of salvation, with the enlivided throng!

Rome Rome Rome Rome through all regions, boasts
Rome

Rome Rome Rome—One Lord, one Faith, one
Rome baptism!

Rome Rome in all their city, glittering with eternal
Rome

Rome Rome the reigns triumphant, wielding her
Rome

Rome Rome of destruction threatens her on every
Rome

Rome Rome—when an infant, graver peril she
Rome

Rome Rome Rome Rome them, overcame them, till with strong
Rome

Rome Rome the Roman purple and her splendid
Rome

Rome Rome though firmly harnessed, brush and
Rome

Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome and conscripts, but I war against
Rome

Rome Rome of Babel could not, in their strange
Rome

Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome
Rome

Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome
Rome

Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome Rome

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 2.
Sunday—Third Sunday after Easter. Patronage of the Holy Ghost.
Monday—St. Cletus and Marcellinus, Popes and Martyrs.
Tuesday—St. Peter of the Cross, Confessor. St. Thalia, Martyr.
Wednesday—St. Peter, Martyr.
Thursday—St. Catherine of Sienna, Virgin.
Friday—St. Philip and James, Apostles.
Saturday—St. Athanasius, Bishop, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....APRIL 25, 1874.

THE DOWNFALL OF REPUBLICANISM.

When we speak of the downfall of Republicanism we do not, we are happy to say, allude to any cessation in the progress of free institutions. We merely mean the decline of that political faction in this country of which has usurped the honorable title of republican, although its remote object is the establishment of a plutocratic despotism. We can scarcely take up a single newspaper possessed of any influence with the people in which we do not find charges of the gravest character brought against the party now in power. If we are to believe their organs of public opinion there is hardly a official, from the President down to the pettiest departmental employé, who is not in some way connected with jobbery, corruption or dishonesty. Without exaggerating guilty as in denunciation as that, we can safely aver that there is not a single Republican statesman or office-holder of any prominence whose reputation has not been to some extent tarnished by the astounding revelations of roguery and malfeasance to which the people have been treated during the last few years.

There is not the slightest use in pretending that these revelations only affect the implicated persons as individuals, and that the party to which they belong bears no share in their infamy. The number of men concerned is so large, and they occupy such a marked position in their political faction, that if they are taken away, Republicanism remains a lifeless corpse, without either head or limbs. In fact, these criminals, concerned and unconcerned, constitute the Republican organization, and bereft of them it is reduced to a complete nonentity. To prove this it is only necessary to watch the course pursued by the Administration papers towards them. Denunciation of their misdeeds we can find in abundance—it seems very heroic and it costs nothing; but of any desire to save the nation from their misdeeds, or any wish to replace them by honester men, we cannot discover the smallest symptom. Yet, but a Democratic journal, or even a Republican one, conscientiously opposed to the singularly persuasive powers of revolvers. But and rifle-pits have marked their progress, because the crowds they collect around the saloon doors are not such as are distinguished for edifying conduct on any occasion. The public is becoming thoroughly disgusted with the "roughs," and the respect due to the ear of the prying people is gradually losing its power to protect them from scoff and insult. The ladies have been added and abetted in their unmannerly behavior by a number of fanatical and small-minded preachers, who will not recognize any Christianity which is not steeped and dyed with sectarianism. We have not the heroism, or addresses, delivered to their congregations by some of these so-called extremists, filled, whilst scruples, may well be worthy of Chauncey Giles or "Chadband." Devoid alike of coherency and common sense, they were eminently suited to the intellectual capacities of the

Of course, the Standard Temperance Reformation is already on the wane. Like a fire, it blazed wildly for a time, and then went out in darkness. We do not know that it will leave behind it any lasting benefits, unless more temperate habits and more abstemious dietetic regulations are embalmed. But this much is certain, that the reformation is not based upon any reasonable effort to remedy the evil. It can have no appreciable effect upon the habits wrought by intemperance. When we contrast the gesmodic and fanciful festivities attendant with the [illegible] and powerful influence exercised by the Catholic Church against intemperance and its degrading attendant vices, we cannot help realizing the great fact that the Catholic Church inspires the latter, while the former is the proper fruit of societarianism. The Catholic Temperance Association, which we now found in every part of the Union, accomplish more real and substantial good, do more for the suppression of drunkenness, in the course of one year, than those lady operators could do if they were to continue their work uninterruptedly during the present century.

BALLS FOR ST. PATRICK'S ORPHANS.—A few days ago we had a cordial greeting from Peter Donahoe, Esq., the popular and wealthy Irish-American merchant from Frisco. His mission in the East is to the pages of getting a chime of bells for the Cathedral, which he intends to present to Father Gray's church—St. Patrick's—of San Francisco. He has made arrangements with the publishers, Messrs. [illegible] & A. G. & G. Meneely, of Troy, N. Y., to have the bells cast. Donahoe looks hale and hearty, and bids fair to live many years, and we hope he may enjoy the mutual sound of the bells of St. Patrick's church, when, ere long, will [illegible] the plaid waves of the Pacific Ocean.—N. Y. Irish-American, April 18.

THE BISHOP OF OLINDA.

It is very often charged against the Catholic Church by the advocates of so called "liberal ideas" that she supports monarchical or imperial Governments in preference to republican. The truth is the Church has not the least predilection in favor of any particular form of government, and, as long as she has freedom to pursue her divine mission of saving souls, does not care under what form people manage their secular affairs. She advocates the fullest measure of civil and religious liberty, and condemns all sorts of tyranny as infractions of divine law. But she has good reason to know that republics can be quite as unjust and tyrannical as any monarchy that ever existed. Both Governments have persecuted the Church, and are persecuting her at the present moment.

She enjoys no more freedom of action in republican Switzerland than she does in imperial Germany or in monarchical Italy. In the New World she has to contend against quite as much opposition as she meets in Europe. There is no real religious freedom in republican Mexico nor yet in imperial Brazil. The later power, indeed, has just achieved the infamous notoriety of sentencing a Bishop to penal servitude for faithfully his spiritual duties. The Bishop of Olinda has been condemned to FOUR YEARS' IMPRISONMENT WITH HARD LABOR! What has he done to merit such a fearful punishment? In the eyes of the Brazilian Government he is guilty of some terrible offence against the law to be visited with a similarly heavy penalty. Every day we read of robbers, burglars, incendiaries and even assassins being let off with smaller chastisements. What, then, has the Bishop of Olinda done? He has publicly excommunicated Freemasons! This, and absolutely nothing more, is the extent of his crime. There was nothing else charged against him, or alleged against him by his prosecutors. Every child who knows his catechism understands that a person cannot be a Free-mason and a Catholic at the same time. Every man has his voluntary choice between the two, there can be no compulsion on him as to which he will be; but both he cannot be by any possibility. Yet the Freemasons of Brazil, knowing this perfectly well, insisted upon taking part in religious ceremonies and processions, clad in all the regalia, decked out with all the insignia of their Order. This was a public scandal, a flagrant defiance of the recognized rules of the Catholic Church. The Bishop forbade these men to behave in such a manner, and declared them outcasts of the Church if they did not like it to be punished as heartily as the worst burglar or thief would be for any crime he could commit. Supposing the case were reversed. Suppose the Pope or a body of religious instituted upon being proof of the [illegible] celebrations clad in their monastic habit—acted without any violence—what, we ask, would be thought of the Government which would condemn him to four years' penal servitude for defending the rights and privileges of the organization to which he belonged?

Let us take another parallel case. Suppose it was a long established rule of the Presbyterian sect that the minister of the Ancient Order of Hibernians could belong to their communion, and that, notwithstanding this, the organization persisted in parading its full regalia at all the ceremonies in Calvary Church, what would be thought of the Government which would condemn Rev. JOHN HENRIHAN to a long term of hard labor for telling his flock that the Hibernians were not Freemasons, and had no right to be there? Why, if the congregation rose en masse and expelled the intruders, and, in doing so killed a score of them, the inquiry-verdict of Americans of exceptions and creed would be—"served them right." There is no point upon which he generality of mankind are so sensitive upon their religious freedom. According to Brazilian law, framed by Freemasons, the Catholic Church has no rights whatever, and cannot defend self against the lawless attacks of individuals who despise and rejo ice teachings.

The misrepresentations of the Bishop of Olinda's case, plainas it is, which have been spread abroad by American newspapers are a positive disgrace to journalism. We are told that it is a conflict between the clergy at laity, between the Ultramontanes and ts Liberals, between the pretensions of Catholicity and the just rights of civil government; whereas it is nothing more or less than an attack upon the most sacred rights of conscience. If the Catholic Church will not be permitted to define her own position, to declare who are of her fold and who are not, to lay down the rules of membership in her own communion, to exclude from her celebrations and devotions those who refuse to submit to her discipline, she is unquestionably deprived of the liberty accorded to every other denomination in the world.

MONEY AT LOW INTEREST.—We learn from the best authority that the central organization of the State Grangers has written to subordinate lodges, offering to loan money at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum to such members as required it. Considering that the Banks charge from 12 to 18 per cent. for country loans, this is certainly a low rate of interest. The natural inference to be drawn is, that the chief officers of the Orangers control Banks or foreign money.

It is thought that the disaffected Republicans will coalesce with the Democrats in Stockton at the approaching municipal election.

The Advocate says that after the 1st of May two trains will run directly between Gilroy and San Francisco.

THE LAW OF ALLEGIANCE.

One of the effects, it seems, of the civil war now raging in Cuba has been the immigration of a large number of refugees into the port of Key West, Florida. These men are, of course, Catholics, and their spiritual condition has deeply interested Dr. VENOT, Bishop of St. Augustine, within whose diocese their present home is located. In a most effectionately-worded pastoral, addressed to these expatriated victims of civil commotion, on March 19th, his Lordship explains the condition of the Catholic Church in the United States and its relations with the Government. He then exhorts them to continue to be true and loving sons of the Church of their forefathers, and not to consider themselves as strangers in America. He also warns them against permitting the influence of non-Catholic society, in the midst of which they are now settled down, to alienate them from faith, or make them neglect the practices of religion in which lie their hopes of salvation. With regard to their political opinions, which have been the cause of their exile from Cuba, Bishop VENOT thus expresses himself:

We tell you and we repeat it, that the priests of Key West so tell you that the separation of your native views on politics, which you have left and have to do, and that we will not interfere by spiritual weapons with your liberty in this respect, considering that if the subjects of Spain have deemed themselves justifiable in pulling down an old and a new dynasty of kings, in making and unmaking a Republic, they have the right to do the same with the form of ruling your own judgment in political matters.

These are noble words, and we only wish that they were known in every household of an island which is somewhat farther away from American shores than Cuba. They would prevent a vast amount of misunderstanding, and of the bitter hostility and communistic revolutionists of one of their standing arguments against the Catholic Church. These wicked and unprincipled men, who are not without their counterparts in San Francisco, are constantly endeavoring to persuade ignorant but enthusiastic Irishmen that the Church is hostile to liberty, as enemy to republican institutions, an upholder of regal and despotic power, an opponent of Irish independence. Of course all such assertions are scandalously false as the history of Ireland, better than that of any other country on the globe, incontestably proves. Yet the Freemasons know that the revolutionists cannot possibly hope to fasten the hour of Ireland's liberation by such assertions, and the further circumstance that the only effect of their words is a public scandal, a flagrant defiance of the recognized rules of the Catholic Church. The Bishop forbade these men to behave in such a manner, and declared them outcasts of the Church if they did not like it to be punished as heartily as the worst burglar or thief would be for any crime he could commit. Supposing the case were reversed. Suppose that the Pope or a body of religious instituted upon being proof of the [illegible] celebrations clad in their monastic habit—acted without any violence—what, we ask, would be thought of the Government which would condemn him to four years' penal servitude for defending the rights and privileges of the organization to which he belonged?

SENATOR ROACH.

If general commendation makes a man happy, the Hon. PHILIP A. ROACH ought to be the most jubilant of men; for from every quarter come approval of his legislative career. The echoes of public opinion, the Press, who have had occasion to allude to him, have done so in most flattering terms. Even those differing from him in politics, pay homage to the ability and integrity of the man. From the day he first took the oath of office until the close of the session, he convinced his brother Senators that he was the intellectual peer of the ablest among them. He came prepared with a well weil stored with solid facts and practical information, supplemented with a command of choice language and familiarity with parliamentary rules, which gave him peculiar advantages as a debater.

It is to his efforts in a large degree that the various charities are indebted for their increased allowance during the past two years; and this in the face of a numerous and influential opposition. It will be remembered that GOVERNOR BOOTH, in his second biennial message, recommended the withdrawal of all State aid from private charities, and the establishment of a grand central orphanage to be managed by the State. The idea took possession of the minds of a large majority of the Dolly Varden members, who wished to be in harmony with their chief, and was advocated by the Sacramento Union, San Francisco Bulletin and other influential papers, and echoed in the Legislature by Speaker ESTEE and Mr. SWIFT in the Assembly, and by LAINE and ROGERSTON in the Senate—intellectually the ablest of the Independent representatives. But the task of opposing a measure so popular was undertaken by Mr. ROACH—aided of course, in a greater or less degree by Senator DOWTY and Assemblymen HAMILL, DIXON, MURPHY, FARNEY, BYRNES and others—to expose their sophistries, and instead of a withdrawal of State aid, the appropriation per capita was nearly doubled. Instead of $25 per annum for half orphans, hereafter they will get $50; and instead of $50 per annum for whole orphans, they now receive $75; and children deserted by their parents, in charge of any institution (for whom no allowance was formerly made), will hereafter be paid for as half orphans. It is needless to say this is a just law. There is no distinction of creed or sect—the Catholic gets proportionately as much as the Protestant—Rev. Fathers CRONIN and KELLY and the Israelite and Odd Fellow and Good Templar as much as either.

In his first message to the Legislature GOVERNOR BOOTH recommended, among other things, the appropriation of one hundred thousand dollars for a Reformatory, or Branch State Prison, and gave as his opinion that one prison could be more economically managed than two. The Legislature ranged so as to afford better facilities for the Hon. MR. ROACH took strong ground, and his able speech on the 18th March last, advocating Folsom as the location for the Branch Prison, not only carried the House but convinced the Governor, who, instead of for relieving the overcrowded building at San Quentin being granted, the next thing we saw the selection of a site for a new prison in the mountains of Calaveras, which will be expected from the seed that we blessed when the British came to fight shoven with their remorseless Catholicity, and their godless and [illegible] tyrannical [illegible] the fate of the native [illegible] equal footing in this country with [illegible] pots of the "most favored nations" both Houses by a large majority, and introduced in the United States Senate by Roger a few days thereafter.

Mr. ROACH advocated and exercised his powers of persuasion in a manner beneficially effecting the interests of the State, which we have not time to do to-day. He was always on the ways to his seat when the House session, and never let slip an opportunity to advance the cause of his constituents. He has evidently studied well the duties of a Senator, and it may be said that his success was commensurate with his labor. In 1866 Baltimore was raised to the rank of a Metropolitan See, with four suffragan bishoprics were erected at New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Bardstown. How American diocese have since wonderfully extended and multiplied may be learned from the "Catholic Directory" of the year.

ARCHBISHOP CARROLL.

Without detracting in the least degree from the merits of other illustrious prelates, it may be unhesitatingly asserted that, under God, the Catholic Church of the United States owes its grand record to the firm and broad foundation on which Archbishop Carroll placed it. "He had," says De Courcy (History Catholic Church in the United States) "commenced the ministry in America when Catholicity was persecuted here, and a few poor missionaries alone shared the toils and perils of the apostleship. He lived to see the United States an ecclesiastical province, and in his own diocese he had established a seminary, colleges and convents, and created religious vocations and founded a national clergy. Germans, with his Episcopal See, its convents and clergy, had been added to the United States, and was now confided to one of his clergy as prelate."

The same author tells us how Dr. Carroll made his episcopal career: "The Bishop of Baltimore zealously undertook four essential to the religious prospects of the United States—(1) The Catholic education of youth, (2) the formation of a national clergy, (3) the creation of churches, (4) formation of female communities to take care of the sick and orphans." He regarded five objects as the most urgent, but he triumphantly successful in the attainment of all. These four enterprises, their progress and accomplishment, open up so wide a field for consideration that the nature of our paper forbids a division of the subject, therefore glance first at Dr. Carroll's

CATHOLIC EDUCATION OF YOUTH.

This will fall naturally under the two heads—education of boys and education of girls. As the latter deserves a paper to itself, I will deal with it hereafter, saying a few words now about the provision made for the former. The venerable prelate believed, and all experience confirms his belief, that to build up the Church and make it a tower of strength in the land, its members should be virtuous and well-instructed, that the man should be upright and strong, and the women bright of intellect and pure of heart. To thus make them guiltless of the State and ornaments of the Church, he held that Solomon's advice was the wisest: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." His efforts, therefore, to promote Catholic education were strenuous and unresulting. Apart from elementary schools and the establishment of classes for catechetical instruction, one of the objects he aimed at earliest was the establishment of a college. In fact, in 1788, while yet but Vicar-General, he laid the foundation of an institution which has since won a European as well as American reputation.

THE JESUITS.

It will be remembered that the Jesuits had some property in Maryland. A considerable portion of this property was devoted to the erection of the modest building now consecrated to the purposes of education. It was simply styled Georgetown College, and was opened in 1791. The Jesuits were then too few to spare from missionary labor the number of professors necessary, and they were accordingly replaced by the Sulpitians, established a short time before in Baltimore. Yet, starting with such humble beginnings, it went on and prospered, and to-day it shall be sent to the great London International Exhibition. The Jesuits have voted a credit of 15,000 francs to that effect.

At a recent weekly meeting of the newly appointed Board of Paymasters of the Right Hon. the Earl of Rosse was unanimously elected chairman for the ensuing year. Mr. Lennox Brabazon, Esq., and John F. Armstrong were appointed vice and deputy vice-chairman, respectively.

The Municipal Council of Paris have decided that all objects exhibited at Vienna in 1873 shall be sent to the great London International Exhibition. The Council has voted a credit of 15,000 francs to that effect.

At a recent weekly meeting of the newly appointed Board of Paymasters of the Right Hon. the Earl of Rosse was unanimously elected chairman for the ensuing year. Mr. Lennox Brabazon, Esq., and John F. Armstrong were appointed vice and deputy vice-chairman, respectively.

The Right Hon. Lord Crave has been elected chairman, Mr. Matthias Alden Maher as vice-chairman and Mr. Laurence W. Corcoran, of Dublin, as deputy vice-chairman of the Kenilworthy Union.

The Municipal Council of Paris have decided that all objects exhibited at Vienna in 1873 shall be sent to the great London International Exhibition. The Council has voted a credit of 15,000 francs to that effect.

A memorial from the Irish letter-carriers of Dublin, addressed to C. O. Anderson, Esq., Controller General Postoffice, Dublin, to be forwarded to the Postmaster-General, has been placed in the hands of Mr. Dowling, Mrs. Henry Kingsley and Miss Caroline A. Biggs delivered addresses in behalf of the objects of the doctoral dissertation of women, and a resolution in support of the object of the meeting was unanimously adopted. Another resolution requested the Mayor, who presided, to forward a petition for presentation to Parliament. Enthusiastic cheers were given for the lady speakers.

At meeting of the County Dublin Tenants' Defence Association was held March 20, T. Matthews, Esq., Balbriggan, in the chair. After a long discussion about the recent county election, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, on the motion of Mr. J. J. Keith, seconded by Mr. W. Kelly: "That the best thanks of the County Dublin Tenants' Defence Association are heartily tendered to P. Farrell, Esq., for the manly struggle which he maintained in fighting our battle at the recent election, and that we promise to use every exertion to have the registry so revised that we can with confidence bring him to come forward as our champion at the next opportunity."

Another magnificent new railway station has just been completed and opened at Ranelagh road, Liverpool, close to Lime street, called the "Central Station," which affords improved facilities to persons proceeding to London and the South by the Midland constitute, and south and west of England. The station places the Midland Company's new and short route through Derbyshire and Leicestershire to London, in a very improved position, and as that company has been the first to introduce into England, and will shortly commence running on their lines, Pullman's famous American "Palace Cars," we think their position must, at all events, stand well at Liverpool.

At a meeting held by the sons of the Emerald Isle Benevolent Association, on the 15th instant, the following gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing six months: President, Daniel Sheehan; Vice-President, P. C. Daley (reflected); Treasurer, James O'Connell (reelected); Recording Secretary, James O'Brien (reflected); Financial Secretary, P. S. Guerin (reelected); Corresponding Secretary, John E. Donovan. Board of Trustees—Edward Reilihan, Patrick Kilalee, James Burke, Terence Fagan, William Lee and Michael Allen.

Division No. 1, A. O. H., of Sacramento, at their meeting, last Monday night elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, M. S. Horan (reelected); Vice-President, O. E. Hughes; Recording Secretary, J. J. Cooper; Financial Secretary, Hugh Duffy (reelected); Treasurer, W. J. O'Brien (reelected).

According to a correspondent of the Call, the picnic excursion of the "Lone Star Social Club" to San Rafael, last Sunday, was a most disgraceful affair. Hoodlumism—waste and pandemonium—ruled supreme.

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY.—About the neatest and most fashionable stock of millinery goods—hats, bonnets, flowers, feathers, and all the many with which stylish ladies like to decorate themselves—which can be found in this city of San Francisco, is to be seen at the store of Miss Woodside, 32 Third street, near Mission. Every lady who has been spending fools whatever her taste, and pass over our establishment, and cannot but secure a widely extended trade.

A pair of shoes will cost you only five cents more with a SILVER TIP on than without, and it will add twice the cost of the shoe in their wearing value.

LATE NEWS ITEMS.

The farmers near Banbury, England, having refused to advance wages, their laborers have struck work.

A motion is before the Common Council to present SIR GARNET WOLSELEY the freedom of the city of London, and a sword of 150 guineas value.

At a meeting of Protestants held in Carman, it was resolved to build a Protestant Hall, at a cost of £1,500. Lord Farnham has granted a site for the new building.

The Lord Mayor of London entertained SIR GARNET WOLSELEY and the officers engaged in the Ashantee expedition at a banquet given at the Mansion House, March 21st.

A deputation of workmen waited upon the English Home Secretary, March 26, to urge the adoption of the nine hours' system in factories. MR. CROSS promised a careful consideration.

The Jubilee meeting of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution was held on the 26th March at the London Tavern, the Duke of Northumberland presiding. It was stated that during the past year the society's boats had saved 471 lives.

A great meeting of Mayors, at which SIR M. P.'s were present, was held in London, March 26, for the purpose of discussing certain proposed amendments in the law relating to the registry of Parliamentary and municipal elections.

The Right Hon. Lord Crave has been elected chairman, Mr. Matthias Alden Maher as vice-chairman and Mr. Laurence W. Corcoran, of Dublin, as deputy vice-chairman of the Kenilworthy Union.

The Municipal Council of Paris have decided that all objects exhibited at Vienna in 1873 shall be sent to the great London International Exhibition. The Council has voted a credit of 15,000 francs to that effect.

At a recent weekly meeting of the newly appointed Board of Paymasters of the Right Hon. the Earl of Rosse was unanimously elected chairman for the ensuing year. Mr. Lennox Brabazon, Esq., and John F. Armstrong were appointed vice and deputy vice-chairman, respectively.

On Saturday, March 28th, Robert Stewart delivered his fifth lecture on Handel, to a large audience, in Trinity College, Dublin. This lecture, being entirely devoted to Handel's visits to and residence in Ireland, excited more than ordinary interest. Lord Carlisle and Greenwood Park, St. Dublough's seems in have been the places chiefly occupied by the great composer at that time.

At a numerously attended meeting at the Dowsing, Mrs. Henry Kingsley and Miss Caroline A. Biggs delivered addresses in behalf of the objects of the doctoral dissertation of women, and a resolution in support of the object of the meeting was unanimously adopted. Another resolution requested the Mayor, who presided, to forward a petition for presentation to Parliament. Enthusiastic cheers were given for the lady speakers.

At meeting of the County Dublin Tenants' Defence Association was held March 20, T. Matthews, Esq., Balbriggan, in the chair. After a long discussion about the recent county election, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, on the motion of Mr. J. J. Keith, seconded by Mr. W. Kelly: "That the best thanks of the County Dublin Tenants' Defence Association are heartily tendered to P. Farrell, Esq., for the manly struggle which he maintained in fighting our battle at the recent election, and that we promise to use every exertion to have the registry so revised that we can with confidence bring him to come forward as our champion at the next opportunity."

Another magnificent new railway station has just been completed and opened at Ranelagh road, Liverpool, close to Lime street, called the "Central Station," which affords improved facilities to persons proceeding to London and the South by the Midland constitute, and south and west of England. The station places the Midland Company's new and short route through Derbyshire and Leicestershire to London, in a very improved position, and as that company has been the first to introduce into England, and will shortly commence running on their lines, Pullman's famous American "Palace Cars," we think their position must, at all events, stand well at Liverpool.

At a meeting held by the sons of the Emerald Isle Benevolent Association, on the 15th instant, the following gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing six months: President, Daniel Sheehan; Vice-President, P. C. Daley (reflected); Treasurer, James O'Connell (reelected); Recording Secretary, James O'Brien (reflected); Financial Secretary, P. S. Guerin (reelected); Corresponding Secretary, John E. Donovan. Board of Trustees—Edward Reilihan, Patrick Kilalee, James Burke, Terence Fagan, William Lee and Michael Allen.

Division No. 1, A. O. H., of Sacramento, at their meeting, last Monday night elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, M. S. Horan (reelected); Vice-President, O. E. Hughes; Recording Secretary, J. J. Cooper; Financial Secretary, Hugh Duffy (reelected); Treasurer, W. J. O'Brien (reelected).

According to a correspondent of the Call, the picnic excursion of the "Lone Star Social Club" to San Rafael, last Sunday, was a most disgraceful affair. Hoodlumism—waste and pandemonium—ruled supreme.

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY.—About the neatest and most fashionable stock of millinery goods—hats, bonnets, flowers, feathers, and all the many with which stylish ladies like to decorate themselves—which can be found in this city of San Francisco, is to be seen at the store of Miss Woodside, 32 Third street, near Mission. Every lady who has been spending fools whatever her taste, and pass over our establishment, and cannot but secure a widely extended trade.

A pair of shoes will cost you only five cents more with a SILVER TIP on than without, and it will add twice the cost of the shoe in their wearing value.

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

The quarrel between Brooks and Baxter for the Governorship of Arkansas continues. An armed collision is apprehended every moment.

The French Government has advised De Lesseps to accept the decision of the International Commission in regard to the Suez Canal.

Queen Victoria, in a message to the House of Commons, recommends a grant of £25,000 to General Wolseley. She has created him a Baronet.

After three weeks' balloting, the Massachusetts Legislature elected last Saturday GOV. W. B. WASHBURN to the U. S. Senate, vice Sumner, deceased.

Late dispatches from Spain say that several advanced positions of the Carlists before Bilboa have been abandoned to the Republicans.

The Ohio Constitutional Convention defeated the women's suffrage clause, but on the educational clause voted that women may hold all the school offices but that of State Commissioner of Schools.

On the 16th instant Senator Carpenter introduced a resolution in the United States Senate to recognize Cuba as an independent State, and give the insurgents belligerent rights.

Senator Buckingham has introduced a bill allowing Indians who can show a moderate amount of civilization, and sufficient ability to support themselves without begging or stealing, to become citizens of the United States. They are required to swear allegiance the same as foreigners.

DIED, at 9 a. m., April 22, Annie, infant daughter of Patrick and Annie Kennedy, aged 7 months and 7 days.

HALLAHAN—In Sacramento, April 16, Mary Ann, beloved wife of Patrick Hallahan, a native of Kilkenny, aged 4 years, 8 months and 16 days. [We sincerely sympathize with Mr. Hallahan in their sorrowful affliction. They can, however, console themselves with the reflection that her infant child is now in Heaven.—EDITOR MONITOR.]

WEIR—In this city, April 20, Mary, wife of James Weir, and mother of J. J. Weir, a native of county Down, Ireland, aged 50 years.

DONAHUE—In this city, April 17, Grace Marie, beloved daughter of Jeremiah and Ellen Donahue, aged 2 years and 3 months.

MURPHY—In this city, April 16, Richard Henry, a native of Ireland, aged 38 years.

KENNEDY—In this city, April 17, James Kennedy, son of Patrick and Anne

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINS MAY 3.

Sunday—Third Sunday after Easter. Patronage of the Holy Ghost.
Monday—SS. Cosmo and Damodianus, Popes and Martyrs.
Tuesday—St. Peat of the Cross, Confessor. St. Vitale, Martyr.
Wednesday—St. Peter, Martyr.
Thursday—St. Catherine of Sienna, Virgin.
Friday—SS. Philip and James, Apostles.
Saturday—St. Athanasius, Bishop, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....APRIL 25, 1874.

THE DOWNFALL OF REPUBLICANISM.

When we speak of the downfall of Republicanism we do not, we are happy to say, allude in any occasion in the progress of free institutions. We merely mean the decline of that political faction in this country which has usurped the honorable title of republican, although its remote object is the establishment of a plutocratic despotism. We can scarcely take up a single newspaper possessed of any influence with the people in which we do not find charges of the grossest political corruption brought against the party now in power. If we are to believe these organs of public opinion there is hardly an official, from the President down to the pettiest departmental employé, who is not in some way connected with jobbery, corruption or dishonesty. Without exaggerating so far in denunciation as that, we can safely aver that there is not a single Republican statesman or office-holder of any prominence whose reputation has not been to some extent tarnished by the astounding revelations of roguery and malfeasance to which the people have been treated during the last few years.

There is not the slightest use in pretending that these revelations only affect the implicated persons as individuals, and that the party to which they belong bears no share in their infamy. The number of men concerned is so large, and they occupy such a marked position in their political faction, that if they are taken away, Republicanism remains a lifeless corpse, without either head or limbs. In fact, these criminals, convicted and unconvicted, constitute the Republican organization, and therefore, if it is reduced to a complete nonentity. To prove this it is only necessary to watch the course pursued by the Administration papers towards them. Denunciation of their misdeeds we can find in abundance—it seems very heroic and it costs nothing; but of any desire to save the nation from them, or any wish to replace them by honester men, we cannot discover the smallest symptom. Now, but a few days are for new and honest Republican nominations to be made, the latter party that arose in the Union," with its Lutheran motto "equal moral principles," is dazzled by the Radical journals, and all of them, big and little, bent their drums in harmony. Some of them were successful for a long time, but now there is every appearance that they have gratified their ambition. We, even are beginning to dislike the necessity of having a man merely because he is affiliated with a certain political clique, when he has nothing beyond that to recommend him.

All the respectable people must know that Republicanism is verging to a rapid decline. It has no raison d'etre, if we except the pitiable and despicable one of holding on as long as possible to the national spoils. It has no principles, it has no distinctive policy, it has nothing to promise the country; and if it did make a promise it would be sure not to keep it. Take it is thus devoid of any principle. That is to open to the most terrible charges of treachery and dishonesty. The public opinion, the national honor, the peace of the country, have been ruthlessly sacrificed to the one object of making Radical office-holders and monopolists rich, even at the expense of the whole community. Men as the leaders who are engaged in waging the life-blood of the nation are known to have gorged the patronage which will proceed to apply others' money to the ends of rapacious hunger, allegiance will be the consciences of corporators.

Of course [illegible] Temperance Reform [illegible] already on the wane. [illegible] it lasted wildly for a year [illegible] and it is in darkness. We do not know that it will leave behind [illegible] more unpleasant [illegible] than [illegible] more ambitious. The misrepresentations of the Bishop of Olinda [illegible] owing to so miserably insignificant [illegible] can have no appreciable effect [illegible] mischief wrought by intemperance. [illegible] we counsel the genuine friends of these feelings to consider with the [illegible] gentleness and powerful influence [illegible] by the Catholic Church against intemperance, and its degrading attendant evils. We cannot help realizing the great fact that the divine wisdom inspires the latter, while the former is the proper fruit of secularism. Catholic Temperance Associations, which are now found in every State in the Union, commence with more real and substantial good, do more for the suppression of drunkenness, in the course of a year, than these lady operators could do if they were to continue their work uninterruptedly during the present century.

BELLS FOR ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH.—A few days ago we had a cordial greeting from Peter Donohue, Esq., the popular and wealthy Irish-American merchant from San Francisco. His mission in the East is for the purpose of getting a chime of bells manufactured, which he intends to present to Father Gray's church—St. Patrick's—of San Francisco. He has made arrangements with the celebrated Meneely Foundery, Troy, N. Y., A. A. & O. R. Meneely, of Troy, N. Y., to have the bells cast. Mr. Donahue looks hale and hearty, and bids fair to live many years, and we hope he may enjoy the musical sound of the bells of Father Gray's church, which, are long, will

"Sweet as prayer and as powerful as love" the pleid waters of the Pacific Ocean.—N. Y. Irish American, April 18.

THE BISHOP OF OLINDA.

It is very often charged against the Catholic Church by the advocates of so called "liberal ideas" that she supports monarchical or imperial Governments in preference to republican. The truth is the Church has not the least predilection in favor of any particular form of government, and, so long as she has freedom to pursue her divine mission of saving souls, does not care under what form people manage their secular affairs. She advocates the fullest measure of civil and religious liberty, and condemns all sorts of tyranny as infractions of divine law. But she has good reason to know that republics can be quite as unjust and tyrannical as any monarchy that ever existed. Both Governments have persecuted the Church, and are persecuting her at the present moment.

She enjoys no more freedom of action in republican Switzerland than she does in imperial Germany or in monarchical Italy. In the New World she has to contend against quite as much opposition as she meets in Europe. There is no real religious freedom in republican Mexico nor yet in imperial Brazil. The latter power, indeed, has just achieved the infamous notoriety of sentencing a Bishop to penal servitude for fulfilling the spiritual duties. The Bishop of Olinda has been condemned to FOUR YEARS' IMPRISONMENT WITH HARD LABOR! What has he done to merit such a fearful punishment? In this free republic a man must be a criminal, guilty of some terrible offence against the law to be punished with a similarly heavy penalty. Every day we read of robbers, burglars, incendiaries and assassins being let off with smaller chastisements. What, then, has the Bishop of Olinda done? He has publicly excommunicated Freemasons! This, and absolutely nothing more, is the extent of his crime. There was nothing else charged against him, or alleged against him by his prosecutors. Every child who knows his catechism understands that a person cannot be a Free-mason and a Catholic at the same time. Accordingly, there has also been no question made as to the voluntary choice between the two, the one not being so compulsion on him as to which he will be; but both he cannot be by any possibility. Yet the Representatives of Brazil, knowing this perfectly well, insisted upon inflicting part in religious ceremonies and processions, clad in all the regalia, decked out with all the insignia of their Order. This was a public scandal, a flagrant defiance of the recognized rules of the Catholic Church. The Bishop forbade these men to be-have in such a manner, and declared that he would not in a British Empire during his life rather than our "friendly relations" with England should be in the least impaired. The late Archbishop Spalding took great interest in Canon Conroy, and was nothing in efforts for his release. The Archbishop of Cincinnati was equally zealous in his behalf. The result of these joint efforts was that no noble prelates has been made apparent recently in the fact that the Committee on Foreign Affairs at Washington reported favorably on his case last Friday week, and the Senate and House of Representatives afterwards passed resolutions praying for his liberation. There is scarcely a doubt that poor Conroy will soon be a free man once more.

THE PROVINCIAL COUNCIL.

The Provincial Council, announced in a pastoral letter issued by his Grace the Archbishop and published two weeks ago in THE MONITOR, will begin to-morrow (Sunday), Feast of the Patronage of St. Joseph. The opening will be marked by very imposing ceremonies, which will naturally be productive of great interest to all the faithful. Part of the proceedings will be public, and even in the Cathedral can, we believe, be put accommodation. The deliberations and decrees of the Council will be forwarded to Rome for approval by the Holy Father, and will afterwards be promulgated to the faithful. The Archbishop's pastoral requests Catholics to be assiduous in prayer to whom the Holy Spirit may direct both pastors and people and strengthen them in the discharge of their duties.

The Council will, as announced, be divided into [illegible] and meeting in the Cathedral.

J. S. TAN is requested to transmit to this office, without further delay, the money collected by him for TAN MONITOR.

THE LAW OF ALLEGIANCE.

One of the effects, it seems, of the civil war now raging in Cuba has been the immigration of a large number of refugees into the port of Key West, Florida. These men are, of course, Catholics, and their spiritual condition has deeply interested Dr. Vasor, Bishop of St. Augustine, within whose diocese their present home is located. In a most affectionately-worded pastoral, addressed to these unfortunate victims of civil commotion, on March 19th his Lordship explains the condition of the Catholic Church in the United States and its relations with the Government. He then exhorts them to continue to be true and loving sons of the Church of their forefathers, and not to consider themselves as strangers in America. He also warns them against permitting the influence of non-Catholic society, in the midst of which they are now settled down, to alienate them from faith, or make them neglect the practices of religion in which lie their hopes of salvation. With regard to their political opinions, which have been the cause of their exile from Cuba, Bishop VEROT thus expresses himself:

We tell you and we have directed the priests of your race to tell you that the selection of your political views is entirely optional with you and not with us, and that we will not interfere by spiritual weapons which are not of this world in the political questions which engage your minds. You have deemed themselves justifiable in political theory and practice in the country of which you are now remaining a Republic; you will not fail under the same circumstances in the new country adopted by you to indulge in political matters.

These are noble words, and we greatly wish that they were known in every household of an island which is somewhat farther away from American shores than Cuba. They would point a vast amount of misunderstanding, and would deprive infidel and communistic revolutionists of one of their standing arguments against the Catholic Church. These wicked and unprincipled men, who are not without their comrades in San Francisco, are constantly endeavoring to persuade ignorant but enthusiastic Irishmen that the Church is hostile to liberty, as necessary to republican institutions, as upholder of imperial despotisms, and an opponent of Irish independence. Of course all such assertions are scandalously false as the history of Ireland, better than that of any other country on the globe, incontestably proves. The circumstances under the revolutionists cannot possibly hope to hasten the hour of Ireland's liberation by such assertions, and the further circumstance that the only friends of their words is to make some poor foolish dupes throw off the restraints of religion and imagine themselves free from all obligations, show conclusively, to Catholics at least, the character of the spirit by which they are inspired.

OPENING THE PRISON DOORS.

It is needless to state that there is very probability that [illegible] undergoing penal servitude in [illegible] for [illegible] will be released. It is usually called the Manchester [illegible] and is [illegible] to afford better facilities for [illegible]'s Mr. Roache took strong ground, and his able speech on the 18th March last, addressed to Folsom as the location for the Branch Prison, not only carried the House but convinced the Governor. The necessity for relieving the overcrowded building at San Quentin being granted, the next thing was the selection of a site that should combine economy, salubrity and facility of access. The working of the Folsom stone quarries, even for supplying material for the Belgian pavements, was proved by the Governor to be able to yield a good profit; the locality of Natural ALEXANDER and the personal knowledge of other members of the Senate were adduced as to the healthy nature of the chosen site; and the proximity from Sacramento to Folsom rendered access easy. The valuable material belonging to the State at Folsom that can be supplied to our cities by convict labor that will give activity to building and secure employment to hundreds of workingmen, whereas the old and present contract system at San Quentin draws hundreds from handicraft employments and adds to our taxes and unsettle competition.

His efforts in favor of a pure water bill, by means of which the city could obtain its own water, and thus rid us of that most tyrannical of monopolies, are well known. They secured the influence of the monopoly, however, was too powerful for him, so he was relentlessly compelled to accept a substitute as the least of two evils. The act as passed contains many of the good features of the original bill, but is objectionable in so far as it puts off the question of submitting the matter to a vote of the people until the general election in 1875, whereas the first bill provided for a special election this year.

Another important measure advocated by Mr. ROACH was a system of deepening the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, so as to obtain [illegible] and secure the towns and reclaimed lands along their banks from overflow. He urged the State to do this at once as an urgent necessity for its [illegible] and that after the Federal Government would repay to the State all it did our Indian War expenses. If the State would appropriate a small sum annually, the rivers might be improved from the Straits of Carquinez to Sacramento, Marysville and Red Bluff; and on the San Joaquin to the smaller towns above Stockton, which are the centers of grain production. That course would save the railway problem. It would prevent overflow, and would add millions in value to the lands in proximity to the rivers. For ten years the State has paid $106,00 interest annually on railway bonds—it must do the same, under the Act of 1864, for ten years more. At the end of that time the State would derive a small sum to improve the rivers—the great high ways of the State—we would have the greatest river system of any region of the globe, and cheap transportation. The bill passed to engrossment in the Senate the last day of the session, but too late to be [illegible] in the Assembly.

His efforts in securing the Apportionment bill are well known to the San Francisco gets somewhat representation in the Legislature of 4 Senators, we will have a body of 12 Assemblymen, we will have a fair concurrent resolution to abolish the LINGANE (Chinese) Treaty—a law of it which places Chinese on equal footing in this country with the "most favored nations." both Houses by a large majority, and passed the Senate.

Mr. ROACH advocated and secured the passage of several other laying passed many bills of a local character, but which were of no general interest, among which were beneficially affecting the interests of the State, which we have not time to-day. He was always on hand, ways in his seat when the session, and never let slip an opportunity to advance the cause of his constituents. He is hardly necessary to say that his efforts were always unselfish in the interests of his motives was never questioned by any one, and he left the Assembly with the esteem and without reproach.

CATHOLICITY IN THE UNITED STATES.

NUMBER I.

WRITTEN FOR OUR MONITOR AT [illegible]

A perusal of the statistics in "Catholic Directory" for 1874 will convince all [illegible] of the progress of holy priests and devoted Bishops who are reelected at the head of the Church. The [illegible] and triumphs of the Church in the United States have been wonderful. Though not yet [illegible] as the Church in Mexico, already an exalted position, and [illegible] to which she has attained must glance back to the depths of the first invasion.

CALIFORNIA.

It would give a stranger pleasure to progress to show him the Catholic [illegible] convents, colleges, schools, orphanages of San Francisco, and to him that a quarter of a million dollars was in this city but one poor English speaking persons, and where St. Francis' church [illegible] little more than a shanty, and a triple purpose of church, school and tory! When Dr. Alemany was [illegible] Archbishop of Monterey in 1850 [illegible] two priests—Rev. Father Croke—in the city, and but three all the State. There are now [illegible] and all experience confirms his belief, that to build up the Church and make it a tower of strength in the land, its members should be virtuous and well-instructed, that the man should be upright and strong, and the woman bright of intellect and pure of heart. To these ends them guardians of the State and ornaments of the Church, he held that Solomon's advice was the wisest: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." His efforts, therefore, to promote Catholic education were strenuous and unremitting. Apart from elementary schools and the establishment of classes for esthetical instruction, one of the objects he aimed at earliest was the establishment of a college. In fact, in 1768, while yet but Vicar-General, he laid the foundation of an institution which has since won a European as well as American reputation.

THE JESUITS.

It will be remembered that the Jesuits had some property in Maryland. A considerable portion of this property was devoted to the erection of the modest buildings connected with the new establishment. It was simply styled Georgetown College, and was opened in 1791. The Jesuits were then too few to spare from missionary labor the number of professors necessary, and they were accordingly assisted by the Sulpitians, established a short time before in Baltimore. Yet, small as the college was in its beginnings, it went on and prospered. Soon it became an object of pride to the young city, Washington, which was afterwards located in its vicinity. It received University privileges from Congress in 1815, and remains a proud monument to Archbishop Carroll's zeal in the cause of Catholic education.

In 1803 the Jesuits that survived in Maryland numbered only thirteen, and even these were not recognized at Rome as belonging to a society of religious. Yet such is Catholic vitality and such the power of resurgence that, soon after the formal creation of the Order in 1814, the Jesuits spread out everywhere as missionaries, church-builders and teachers. Apart from their missions and schools, churches and novitiates, I find from the "Catholic Directory" that in the United States they have colleges for the literary education of youth at the following places: Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Fordham (N. Y.), New York City, Worcester, Boston, Buffalo, St. Louis, Chicago, Cincinnati, New Orleans, Grand Coteau (La.), Mobile, Santa Clara and San Francisco. The progress and extension of other Orders of religious teachers is not less remarkable. The most signal example of this is the extraordinary development given in our own days to an Order with which we have grown familiar—namely, that of

THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS.

In 1846 their first community in the United States opened a school and novitiate in [illegible]. Now [illegible] hundred subjects, [illegible] hundred students, and in the city parochial schools taught by them there are three thousand pupils. In 1848, after much solicitation, Archbishop Kenrick succeeded in getting a community of four Brothers established in New York. In that city the Brothers now teach twelve thousand pupils in the parochial schools, and in their institute, academies and colleges have over fifteen hundred students. The same success has everywhere attended their labors—the only cause for surprise to experience being that they appear to accomplish so much in excess of the demand. Without mentioning Catholic schools or select academies which the conduct, the "Catholic Directory" tells that they have flourishing colleges in the following places: Manhattanville (N. Y.), Philadelphia, Ellicott City (Md.), St. Louis, St. Joseph (Mo.), Buffalo, Detroit, Prairie du Chien (Wis.), Chicago, New Orleans, Pass Christian (Miss.), Santa Clara, Oakland.

I was near omitting to mention that San Francisco can also boast of one or two, but it is a subject which will bear another hearing.

ARCHBISHOP CARROLL.

Without detracting in the least degree from the merits of other illustrious prelates, it may be substantially asserted that the first Bishop of the United States owes its grand record to the firm and broad foundation on which Archbishop Carroll placed it. "He had," says Dr. Shea (History Catholic Church in the United States) "commenced the ministry of American when Catholicity was persecuted by the laws, and a few poor missionaries alone kept the toils and perils of the apostolate up. He lived to see the United States an ecclesiastical province, and in his own diocese he had established a seminary, colleges and convents; had created religious institutions and founded a national clergy. Indians, with its Episcopal See, its convents and clergy, had been added to the Church in peace, and was now confided to one of his clergy as prelate."

The same author tells us how Dr. Carroll won his episcopal career: "The Bishop Baltimore zealously undertook four important essentials to the religious prosperity of the United States—(1) The Catholic education of youth, (2) the formation of a native clergy, (3) the erection of churches, (4) formation of female communities to take care of the sick and orphans." He regarded the first object as the most urgent, but he triumphantly successful in the attainment of all. Those four enterprises, their growth and accomplishment, open up so fair a field for consideration that the materials for one calls for a division of the subject, and therefore glance first as Dr. Carroll's enterprise.

THE CATHOLIC EDUCATION OF YOUTH.

He will fall naturally under the two heads—education of boys and education of girls. As the latter deserves a paper to itself, I will deal with it hereafter, saying a word now about the provision made for children and children's children.

FOUNDATION OF THE CHURCH.

Before Jamestown was founded in [illegible] Rock ever heard of, the Spanish Jesuits and other missionaries had penetrated to the wilds of Texas, from Florida to Illinois, converted to Christianity those tribes, and founded churches. The fruit was so rapid from the seed that [illegible] when the British colonies [illegible] shores with their remorseless [illegible] and [illegible] Christianity, and their godless [illegible] of the Indians. [illegible] pumped for [illegible], and [illegible] sealed the fate of the native [illegible] race scattered thousands alone [illegible] was afterwards an effective instrument in the establishments of their [illegible] places: Manhattanville (N. Y.), Philadelphia, Ellicott City (Md.), St. Louis, St. Joseph (Mo.), Buffalo, Detroit, Prairie du Chien (Wis.), Chicago, New Orleans, Pass Christian (Miss.), Santa Clara, Oakland.

The Right Hon. Lord Carew has been elected as chairman, Mr. Maddox Aidan Blake as vice-chairman, and Mr. Laurence W. Corcoran, of Dublin, as deputy vice-chairman of the Emsleconby Union.

The Catholic Association of Paris has decided that all objects exhibited at Vienna by the city of Paris shall be sent to the Catholic Exhibition. The Exhibition Council has voted a credit of 15,000 francs to that effect.

At a recent weekly meeting of the newly appointed guardians of Parsonstown Union the Right Hon. the Earl of Rosse was unanimously elected chairman for the ensuing year. Henry Hemsworth, Esq., and John M. Armstrong were appointed vice and deputy vice-chairman, respectively.

On Saturday, March 28th, Robert Stewart delivered his fifth lecture on Handel, to a large audience, in Trinity College, Dublin. This lecture, being entirely devoted to Handel's visit to and residence in Ireland, excited more than ordinary interest. Liffey street and Greenwood Park, St. Doulough's Road, have been the places chiefly occupied by the great composer at that time.

At a somewhat crowded meeting at the Downing, Mrs. Henry Kingsley and Miss Caroline A. Biggs delivered addresses in favor of the removal of the sectoral disabilities of women, and a resolution in support of the object of the meeting was unanimously adopted. Another resolution requested the Mayor, who presided, to forward a petition for presentation to Parliament. Enthusiastic cheers were given for the lady speakers.

A meeting of the County Dublin Tenants' Defense Association was held March 26, T. C. Maddock, Esq., Ballybrigan, in the chair. After a long discussion about the recent county election, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, on the motion of Mr. A. J. Kettle, seconded by Mr. W. Kelly: "That the tenant-right of the County Dublin Tenants' Defence Association are heartily tendered to C. S. Parnell, Esq., for the manly struggle which he had gone through in fighting our battle at the recent election, and that we promise to use every exertion to have the registry so revised that we can with confidence invite him to come forward as our champion at the next opportunity."

Another magnificent new railway station has just been completed and opened at Ranelagh street, Liverpool, close to Lime street station. The station, which [illegible] affords improved facilities to persons proceeding to London and all places in the south of England and south and west of England. The station places the Midland Company's new and short route through Derbyshire and Leicestershire, which is a very improved position, and as that company pay has been the first to introduce into England, and will shortly commence running on their "Pegs, Pullman's famous American "Palace Cars." We think their prospects must, at all events, stand well at Liverpool.

At a meeting held by the Sons of the Emerald Isle Benevolent Association, on the 17th instant, the following gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing six months: President, Daniel Sheehan; Vice-President, P. A. Delany (reelected); Treasurer, James O'Connell (reelected); Hon. Secretary, James O'Brien (reelected); Financial Secretary, P. S. Guerin (reelected); Corresponding Secretary, John F. Donovan. Board of Trustees—Edward Reulban, Patrick Killeen, James Burke, Terence Fagan, William Lee and Michael Allen.

Division No. 1, A. O. H., of Sacramento, at their meeting, last Monday night elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, R. S. Hughes (reelected); Vice-President, O. E. Hughes; Recording Secretary, J. J. Cadogan; Financial Secretary, Hugh Duffy (reelected); Treasurer, W. J. O'Brien (reelected).

According to a correspondent of the Call, the picnic excursion of the "Lone Star Social Club" to San Rafael, last Sunday, was a most disgraceful affair. Hoodlumism—pants and petticoats—ruled supreme.

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY.—About the easiest and most fashionable stock of millinery goods in town, however, forever, outdoes, and all the finery which parties before leave to bestow themselves—which can be found in the city of San Francisco, is to be seen at the store of Miss Kenny, 24 Third street, near Mission. Every lady who goes there speedily finds what suits her taste, and goes away best pleased. The prices put on all the goods are extremely moderate, and cannot but secure a widely extended trade.

A pair of shoes will cost you only five cents more when a SILVER TIP is thus whisked, and it will add twice the cost of the shoe to their wearing value.

LATE NEWS ITEMS.

The farmers near Banbury, England, having refused to advance wages, their laborers have struck work.

A motion is before the Common Council to present Sir Garnet Wolseley the freedom of the city of London, and a sword of 150 guineas value.

At a meeting of Protestants held in Cavan, it was resolved to build a Protestant Hall, at a cost of £1,500. Lord Farnham has granted a site for the new building.

The Lord Mayor of London entertained Sir Garnet Wolseley and the officers engaged in the Ashantee expedition at the great Guildhall banquet given at the Mansion House, March 31st.

A deputation of workmen waited upon the English Home Secretary, March 26, to urge the adoption of the nine hours' system in factories. Mr. Cross promised a careful consideration.

The jubilee meeting of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution was held on the 26th March at the London Tavern, the Duke of Northumberland presiding. It was stated that during the past year the society's boats had saved 471 lives.

A great meeting of Mayors, at which several M. P.'s were present, was held in London, March 26, for the purpose of discussing certain proposed amendments in the law relating to the registry of Parliamentary and municipal elections.

The Right Hon. Lord Carew has been elected as chairman, Mr. Maddox Aidan Blake as vice-chairman, and Mr. Laurence W. Corcoran, of Dublin, as deputy vice-chairman of the Emsleconby Union.

The Catholic Association of Paris has decided that all objects exhibited at Vienna by the city of Paris shall be sent to the Catholic Exhibition. The Exhibition Council has voted a credit of 15,000 francs to that effect.

At a recent weekly meeting of the newly appointed guardians of Parsonstown Union the Right Hon. the Earl of Rosse was unanimously elected chairman for the ensuing year. Henry Hemsworth, Esq., and John M. Armstrong were appointed vice and deputy vice-chairman, respectively.

On Saturday, March 28th, Robert Stewart delivered his fifth lecture on Handel, to a large audience, in Trinity College, Dublin. This lecture, being entirely devoted to Handel's visit to and residence in Ireland, excited more than ordinary interest. Liffey street and Greenwood Park, St. Doulough's Road, have been the places chiefly occupied by the great composer at that time.

At a somewhat crowded meeting at the Downing, Mrs. Henry Kingsley and Miss Caroline A. Biggs delivered addresses in favor of the removal of the sectoral disabilities of women, and a resolution in support of the object of the meeting was unanimously adopted. Another resolution requested the Mayor, who presided, to forward a petition for presentation to Parliament. Enthusiastic cheers were given for the lady speakers.

A meeting of the County Dublin Tenants' Defense Association was held March 26, T. C. Maddock, Esq., Ballybrigan, in the chair. After a long discussion about the recent county election, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, on the motion of Mr. A. J. Kettle, seconded by Mr. W. Kelly: "That the tenant-right of the County Dublin Tenants' Defence Association are heartily tendered to C. S. Parnell, Esq., for the manly struggle which he had gone through in fighting our battle at the recent election, and that we promise to use every exertion to have the registry so revised that we can with confidence invite him to come forward as our champion at the next opportunity."

Another magnificent new railway station has just been completed and opened at Ranelagh street, Liverpool, close to Lime street station. The station, which [illegible] affords improved facilities to persons proceeding to London and all places in the south of England and south and west of England. The station places the Midland Company's new and short route through Derbyshire and Leicestershire, which is a very improved position, and as that company pay has been the first to introduce into England, and will shortly commence running on their "Pegs, Pullman's famous American "Palace Cars." We think their prospects must, at all events, stand well at Liverpool.

At a meeting held by the Sons of the Emerald Isle Benevolent Association, on the 17th instant, the following gentlemen were elected officers for the ensuing six months: President, Daniel Sheehan; Vice-President, P. A. Delany (reelected); Treasurer, James O'Connell (reelected); Hon. Secretary, James O'Brien (reelected); Financial Secretary, P. S. Guerin (reelected); Corresponding Secretary, John F. Donovan. Board of Trustees—Edward Reulban, Patrick Killeen, James Burke, Terence Fagan, William Lee and Michael Allen.

Division No. 1, A. O. H., of Sacramento, at their meeting, last Monday night elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, R. S. Hughes (reelected); Vice-President, O. E. Hughes; Recording Secretary, J. J. Cadogan; Financial Secretary, Hugh Duffy (reelected); Treasurer, W. J. O'Brien (reelected).

According to a correspondent of the Call, the picnic excursion of the "Lone Star Social Club" to San Rafael, last Sunday, was a most disgraceful affair. Hoodlumism—pants and petticoats—ruled supreme.

FASHIONABLE MILLINERY.—About the easiest and most fashionable stock of millinery goods in town, however, forever, outdoes, and all the finery which parties before leave to bestow themselves—which can be found in the city of San Francisco, is to be seen at the store of Miss Kenny, 24 Third street, near Mission. Every lady who goes there speedily finds what suits her taste, and goes away best pleased. The prices put on all the goods are extremely moderate, and cannot but secure a widely extended trade.

A pair of shoes will cost you only five cents more when a SILVER TIP is thus whisked, and it will add twice the cost of the shoe to their wearing value.

Old Bender, arrested in Utah, has been identified through photographs of him sent to Kansas, and will be taken there for trial.

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

The quarrel between Brooks and Baxter for the Governorship of Arkansas continues. An armed collision is expected every moment.

The French Government has advised Delesseps to accept the decision of the International Commission in regard to the Suez Canal.

Queen Victoria, in a message to the House of Commons, recommends a grant of £35,000 to Henry Wolseley. She has created him a Baronet.

After three weeks' balloting, the Massachusetts Legislature elected last Saturday Gov. W. B. Washburne to the U. S. Senate, vice Sumner, deceased.

Late dispatches from Spain say that several advanced positions of the Carlists before Bilbao have been abandoned to the Republicans.

The Ohio Constitutional Convention defeated the women's suffrage clause, but on the educational clause voted that women may hold all the school offices but that of State Commissioner of Schools.

On the 16th instant Senator Carpenter introduced a resolution in the United States Senate to recognize Cuba as an independent State, and give the insurgents belligerent rights.

Senator Buckingham has introduced a bill allowing Indians who can show a moderate amount of civilization, and sufficient ability to support themselves without begging or stealing, to become citizens of the United States. There are about a thousand Indians in the same as Foreigners.

RALEIGH, N. C., April 23.—A letter from Chimney Rock, at the foot of Stone Mountain, dated the 18th, says: "Stone Mountain and vicinity experienced one of the most terrific storms yesterday that has yet been felt. The whole earth shook, and things were disarranged in houses. Several horses in Little Tabern Cotton and took to the mountains on foot, yesterday morning. The party will be reinforced by Rowland and four men, who started last night from this city. Moore and Cunningham and their men will probably join the Los Angeles parties in hunting the heathen down. Morris is supposed to be on the other side of mountains. Vasquez's camp was captured, also his horses. Further particulars are not yet received.

THE annual picnic of St. Joseph's Church Society, at Merrydale, will take place this year on Thursday, May 7, at Hoyt's Farm, in Sonoma county, and about six miles from Merrydale. "Hoyt's Farm" is one of the most beautiful groves in the vicinity of Merrydale, and everybody knows that Merrydale has many handsome resorts. It was formerly the residence of General John A. Sutter, and was known as Mr. Chris. Smith. Noted as the St. Joseph's Church Society is for the excellence of its entertainments, it is not much to say that the approaching picnic will be well worth the patronage of the people residing on the banks of the Yuba and Feather rivers.

Subscriptions Received.

James City—Parnassus Nortes ..... $1 00
Sacramento—D. J. Desmond ..... 1 00
Alameda—James Jackson ..... 1 00
Seattle, W. T.—Patrick Hayes ..... 1 00
Knoxville—James Conway ..... 1 00
Duffy's Cove—H. J. Mullette ..... 1 00
Sacramento—Patrick Mahoney ..... 1 00
Sacramento—Patrick Mahoney ..... 1 00
Sacramento—Peter Fitzpatrick ..... 1 00
Sacramento—Peter Fitzpatrick ..... 1 00
Alameda—Mrs. Mary Ann Hayes ..... 1 00
Alameda—John B. Haynes ..... 1 00
Watsonville—J. F. Fuller ..... 1 00
Yuba City—Patrick Connolly ..... 1 00
Yuba City—Patrick Connolly ..... 1 00
Virginia—P. McGrath ..... 1 00
Virginia—P. McGrath ..... 1 00
Virginia—P. McGrath ..... 1 00
James L. Bailey ..... 1 00
Georgetown—John Flynn ..... 1 00
Stockton—Martin A. Hogan ..... 1 00
San Antonio—Gerhardt Kuhn ..... 1 00
Rincon—Rev. P. Brown ..... 1 00
St. Helena—
St. Helena—
Folsom—James Lynch ..... 1 00

New Advertisements.

CROWDED OUT
FOR NT OF ROOM!
GRAND REMOVAL SALE
AT
J. J. O'BRIEN'S,
606 MARKET STREET.

J. J. O'BRIEN HAS GREAT PLEASURE IN announcing to the Ladies of San Francisco and the public in general, A GRAND CLEARING OUT SALE, on account of Removal to the large, elegant building in course of erection on Market street, opposite the Lick House, a number of whose rooms are already completed. The whole stock of the present Store must be sold before July. Now, no matter how great the sacrifice of profits, 606 MARKET STREET is the place to buy your BARGAINS.

TREMENDOUS SLAUGHTER
IN GOOD...
BLACK SILKS!

No. 1—Worth $2 00.....Reduced to $1 50 per yard.
No. 2—Worth $2 50.....Reduced to $1 75 per yard.
No. 3—Worth $3 00.....Reduced to $2 00 per yard.
No. 4—Worth $3 50.....Reduced to $2 25 per yard.
No. 5—Worth $4 00.....Reduced to $2 50 per yard.
No. 6—Worth $4 50.....Reduced to $2 75 per yard.
No. 7—Worth $5 00.....Reduced to $3 00 per yard.

Also 200 pieces 24-Inch Lyons VELVET will be sold for less than half the original price.

SWISS SILKS,
JAPANESE SILKS,
ARTEMISIA SILKS,
All at Half Price.
ARMANTYNE SILKS,

Also A few less Plain and Striped Iron Grenadines, 25 cents a yard.

IRISH POPLINS,
FRENCH POPLINS,
JAPANESE POPLINS,
All at A Fearful Sacrifice.

200 Seventy-five piece Gros Grain and Moire Francaise Poplins, 50 cents a yard—worth $1.

BLACK GOODS DEPARTMENT,

Bareges, Grenadines, Barèges, Organdies, Barèges, Chenoines, Grenadines, Chenoines, Alpacas, Mohair Lustres, ALL AT Greatly Reduced Prices.

100 pieces all-wool Twilled Cloth, 36 inches wide, 37½ cents a yard—reduced from $1.

One case Black Cretonne, slightly damaged by water, worth $1 25 a yard—reduced to 75 cents.

DRESS DEPARTMENT,
WELL STOCKED WITH NOVELTIES.

125 pieces clothes Carmelite Cloth, reduced to 50 cents a yard.

50 pieces Balzarine Mohairs, reduced to 25 cents a yard.

50 pieces 36-Inch Japanese Poplins, reduced to 25 cents a yard.

Every piece of Dress Goods in the store reduced from 25 to 50 per cent.

STRIPED SHAWLS,
PLAID SHAWLS,
BROCHE SHAWLS,
BLACK SHAWLS,
All at Greatly Reduced Prices.

100 Two hundred Reversible Cashmere SHAWLS, selling at 2 yards wide and 4 yards long.

BLANKETS,
BEDSPREADS,
SHEETINGS,
All at Reduced Prices.

TABLE LINENS,

Grey Blankets, reduced to $2 per pair.
Large Size Bedspreads, reduced to 75 cents.
Sheetings, 12 yards for $1.
Large Size Linen Napkins, $1 per dozen.
Linen Towels, reduced to $1 a dozen.
Scotch Cloth, 12 yards for $1.
Heavy Bleached Flannel, reduced to 25 cents a yard.
Fine All Wool Flannel, reduced to 50 cents a yard.
Hand Loom Table Linen, reduced to 50 cents a yard.
Extra Double Damask Flannel, reduced from 75 cents a yard, to 50 cents.

CORSETS, and GLOVES,
All
Genuine

FANCY GOODS,
Choicest Qual
Prices.

200 dozen Linen Collars and Cuffs, reduced to 25 cents per dozen.

100 dozen Ladies' Hemstitch and Marseilles Handkerchiefs, reduced to 25 cents each.

Ladies' and Misses' Kid Gloves, reduced to 50 cents per pair.

THE GREAT
Removal Sale
NOW ON AT
J. J. O'BRIEN'S,
606 MARKET STREET,
NEAR MONTGOMERY.....SAN FRANCISCO.

Samples and Prices list sent free, on application.

MULLAN & HYDE,
806 Jackson Street, San Francisco,
Attorneys for Land Claimants.
Dealers in Land Warrants and Scrip.
Agricultural and Grazing Lands for Sale.

B. C. DUFFY,
Cigar Manufacturer,
AND DEALER IN
Cigars and Tobacco,
660 and 662 Market St.,
(Opposite Sixth Lessher Church)
No complaints only white help.

RUSS HOUSE COACHES.
Nos. 27, 45, 47, 97 and 109.
McNALLY & SLATTERY.....Proprietors.
Orders left at the Russ House will be promptly attended to. Rates moderate. apl8

DR. ABORN, OCULIST, AURIST, Catarrh, Throat and Lung Physician,
No. 218 Geary Street.
DR. AB who have suffered for years or a lifetime, and who have been unsuccessfully treated by many modes of treatment, are hereby informed that Dr. Aborn has a successful method of treating all such cases.
OFFICE HOURS—10 A. M. to 3 P. M., 6 to 7½ P. M. ap18-3m

MARVELOUS CURE.
GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.
ALFRED PAT, a Resident of San Mateo County, Sheltered on Health after being Bed-ridden and Helpless for 12 Years, and whose case Pronounced Incurable by Eminent Physicians.

I HAVE BEEN AFFLICTED FROM BOYHOOD with a chronic complication of diseases—so by the doctors—Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Piles, Headache, Sciatica, and all Derangements of Liver, Stomach and Bowels. After [illegible] I became a helpless cripple.

I formerly resided in Redwood City, San Mateo County, but now live on my own farm, near Woodside, in the same county. I am 50 years of age, and have been afflicted for over twenty years. For the last twelve years, up to last July, I have been unable to work. For a long time, during the last two years, I was confined to my bed. Death would have been a relief to me, as I had to endure the most excruciating pain. Every joint in my body was generally supposed I was in a dying state. Had I been a horse or dog, I would have been killed to end my mis

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

IRELAND.

An Unjust Landlord.

The Earl of Erne, a noble of wide possessions in the county Donegal, has drawn upon himself a great deal of public [illegible] by a circular which, it is said, proceeded from Crom Castle, last month, only. It is for the late election for Lisnaskea county, addressed to his support they gave to the Conservative candidate, and Mr. Cecil Saunderson, "the triumphant return of the two Conservative candidates," declares that Lord Erne can never forget "the prompt and unhesitating manner in which his tenantry acted, to his regret," and "trusts that the same happy state of feeling between landlord and tenant — the same identity of interest — may ever prevail upon his estate." The time has passed during which steps might be taken to cancel the election referred to in this circular on the ground of the evidences afforded by it, and of the proofs to which it gives a clue. It is too late to unseat the gentlemen for whose triumphant return Lord Erne is so deeply grateful, but, happily, it is not too late to call Lord Erne himself to a stern and strict account for his conduct. — Weekly News, March 28.

Irish Self-Reliance.

Who will deny after all that has been stated to abuse Ireland about the pretended want of self-reliance in her, as did some time ago a great but deluded Minister? How many times has she been taunted in this subject by many scoffers, among whom it is sad to find enlightened and liberal statesmen! Self-reliance! Truly, in these days when we have to look to every odium and ridicule contending with each other, Ireland, it seems to me, resembles pretty much an individual who, bending and lost having been loaded with measures is blessed with fine speeches about the duty and advantage of self reliance in earning his livelihood, and after so much rain eloquence, is reproached with his slowness and want of self-reliance. Self-reliance! but in the right of self-reliance which Ireland claims, when, by the organ of her most patriotic and enlightened citizens, she asks for self-government; for self-government and self-reliance, is it to be well remarked, are two terms if not synonymous at least intimately correlative—the latter is but the offspring of the former. Self-reliance presupposes in a people, as well as in an individual, the possession of a complete free will. Until Ireland possesses it — that is to say, until she is not denied its exercise—in virtue of the right of Home Rule, let those idle objections have an end.—Le Bastier.

The Cause of Defeat.

A striking result of thorough party organization was seen last week in the return of Colonel Taylor, a minor Minister of Mr. Disraeli's, by a very large majority, on a rather extensive vote. The number of electors on the Dublin County Register is 4,338; of whom 3,418 made use of the franchise in the contest between Mr. Parnell and Colonel Taylor. The votes for Colonel Taylor were 2,169, and for Mr. Parnell 1,249. In short, the Tory candidate polled a majority of the entire constituency, and even if the 250 electors who stayed away had voted for the Nationalist candidate, he would still have been 128 behind the Tory. On the register, as it stands, was not possibly to be beaten; but on the condition of the register we have one or two observations to make. The names inscribed upon it, as we have said, are 4,338 in number. Now, there are some five thousand other men entitled to be on the register also. If they could send the names in to which they are entitled, a Home Rule candidate could be carried in Dublin county as certainly as in Wexford and Westmeath. — Dublin Weekly News, March 28.

An Unenthusiastic Member.

The only member returned on Home Rule pledges in Ireland whose present position appears to be quite unexceptionable, is Colonel Charles White, the member for Tipperary county. He is the only one of the fifty-eight who has done nothing except give Lustrous pledges. He was not present at the Dublin Conference, and he has not attended the recent Conference of Home Rule members held in the City Hall. He has also not voted or even paired in this division. What assurance, except as to the pledge which he gave before the election, could we ever since taken one step to follow up, can Colonel White expect from the electors of Tipperary to feel in his political fidelity? The question is one for his constituents to take up and deal with, especially if it be, as is stated, that he was in London at the time of the first Home Rule division.—Dublin News.

ENGLAND.

Organization of the Irish in England.

London, March 25.—Active steps are about being taken to complete the organization of the Irishmen in England, which had to be suspended during the elections. It will be recollected that the deputation appointed for that purpose at the conference held at Newcastle-on-Tyne in the autumn—consisting of Professor Galbraith, Mr. John Martin, M.P., Mr. John Ferguson, of Glasgow, and Father Sherlock, of Birmingham—had all but completed the work of organization when the dissolution drove such gentlemen stirred them up to more immediate duty. The work they began is now to be completed under the guidance and advice of Mr. Butt, who will act in the name of the deputation. A series of the most metropolitan constituencies the Irish power to large and important, but they have been sufficiently directed, owing to want of organization. In each of the districts the services of the "old hands" will be immediately directed by a committee, having charge of the general political interests of the Irish in London, the whole forming a district of the Confederation of Great Britain. To-morrow (Wednesday) the first meeting of this committee will be held, when, by the organ of Mr. Butt's guidance, the business of organization will be [illegible] Regarding the election contest, the activity on the part of the Home Rule party is not out of Parliament. The Irish members of the Parliamentary body are divided into groups of [illegible] in King-street, which a few yards of the residence in the House of Commons. After the recent meeting of the Irish party, held to the presentation of an earnest and vigorous Parliamentary campaign. — Dublin Freeman.

The Home Rule Debate.

One incident of the Home Rule debate remains to be noticed. Near the close of the discussion, Mr. Butt, from prudential reasons, intimated that he would not press the matter to a division. Immediately afterwards, he, doubtless, he pointed to have the last word, the reputable politician who by virtue of [illegible] to the echo by representing the Irish Tories around him, that he regarded the announcement to say the memorable debate had been got up to embarrass Irish politics. Imputations of thereby thrown by such a person might well have been left, in any assembly in which his political career was known, to answer themselves. But the member for Youghal deemed it wise to pursue a different course in the House of Commons, and, accordingly, immediately The O'Donoghue had resumed his seat, spoke a few words which more than puzzled the renegade's attack.—Dublin Nation, March 28.

Death of the Oldest Man in Scotland.

There has just passed away at an advanced age a religious lady, whose name is may, perhaps, be worth while to record here as having been the first one to be "confessed" in Scotland since the time of the Reformation. We refer to Mrs. Margaret Wemyss Laing-Meason, whose death occurred last week at the Greenhill Convent, near Swanes. She came of a good old Scotch family, and was "clothed" by the late Bishop Carruthers, then vicar-apostolic of the western district of Scotland, as far back as the year 1834 or 1835, the late Bishop Gillis, of Edinburgh, preaching the sermon on the occasion. She was obliged to go abroad on account of ill-health [illegible] having spent many years by way of probation in the Ursuline Convents at La Rochelle and other places, in 1850, at the request of the Bishop of New-port and Menevia, Dr. Brown, she brought over to England a band of religious ladies with whom she had been associated, and over whom she presided as the reverend mother and superioress for fourteen years. She devoted herself to the most indefatigable labors among the poor, the sick, and the neighborhood, by whom her loss is deeply lamented.

Legislation for Ireland.

The taunt of Mr. Gladstone and Sir M. H. Beach to the Irish members, that if Ireland had had grievances they should have brought in bills to remove them, was singularly cool piece of impudence, considering that, during the last five years, at least a score of such bills have been introduced into the House of Commons, and have all been either shelved or rejected by that assembly. However, the Home Rule members seem determined to leave Mr. Gladstone and Sir M. H. Beach no ground for uttering such a taunt again this session. Already Mr. Butt has re-introduced his bills for nominating the municipal franchise in Ireland to that of England, and for giving the Irish municipal bodies the same privileges as similar bodies enjoy in England. Mr. Bryan has introduced a measure for extending household franchise to Irish boroughs. And a Land Bill or Land Bills are to be brought in by Mr. A. M. Sullivan, and by Captain Nolan, Mr. Maldon and Mr. McCarthy Downing.—Dublin Nation, March 28.

FRANCE.

St. Patrick's Day in Paris.

Paris, March 18.—If anything were necessary to prove how far leading the love of country is in the human heart the fact that countries after their fathers had left their country, sons of Irish descent still meet and celebrate the National Festival in foreign lands, which have been their homes since their birth, would remove all doubt on the subject. For the last century, at least, these dinners, though sometimes interrupted by great events, have taken place in the Irish capital. The one of yesterday is the last celebrated by those ancien Irlandais, and was not the least remarkable of them. A few years since the number of those present was larger, for death has swept away many of the former guests. Count O'Donnell, Chevalier of the Sash, Count Augest Dillon, Mr. MacCarthy Downing, Rev. Mr. O'Connell, Rev. Mr. Meehan, Lieutenant MacDermott, etc., are no more, and we has thinned the little [illegible] ranks. Age, loss and illness, or some unexpected obstacle or important business, kept a few away from their accustomed seats, and letters expressing regret at not being able to assist at the dinner were received from the following persons: Count Setaccio, heroic ancestors; Count Walsh, Viscount Oliver Walsh, Viscount E. Walsh, Count O'Donnell, Colonel MacDermott, etc., and from two young soldiers of the Military School of St. Cyr—Patrick MacMahon, son of Marshal MacMahon, and G. Tufin, who were prevented from assisting at the festival meeting on account of their approach examinations, to their great regret.

The dinner was presided over by the brave old soldier, Commandant Corbet, of the Staff. Sixty years ago, in 1814, he received from the hands of Napoleon the Great the Cross of the Legion of Honor, for deeds of valor performed in the presence of the modern Cæsar. Three years ago he drew reserve, during the seige of Paris, from the command of a battalion, and was several times under heavy fire from the Prussian batteries. At his right sat another heroic soldier, who was a distinguished lieutenant in 1816, and who won promotion with his sword in many a hard-fought battle in Spain, Algeria and at the Crimea, where he commanded the brave 82th Regiment of the line—Colonel O'Shea. On the left of the president, there was an officer of the same regiment, who, when young and active, was a brave Captain Plunkett. Commandant Corbet was brother of the late General Corbet, who was also colonel of Marmont, and one of the bravest soldiers in the grand army. He (the present) left Ireland after 1792, with Lawless, O'Connor, Mac Sheehy, Adèle Hamer, etc. Viscount O'Neill de Tyrone, the last descendant of the kings of Daria are as well known as Mr. O'Kelly, the eminent musical composer; Mr. E. O. Kerrian Ryde and his cousin Mr. Eugene Ryde, whose ancestors figured so honorably in the Irish Brigade, supported the president. Viscount O'Neill acted as Vice-President, and gave, with great feeling, his toast "Assimil

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

"Sin and its Consequences" is the title of a work recently published by Archbishop Manning. It is spoken of as an able work by theologians and the press.

Archbishop McCloskey recently administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to four hundred children at Brigham, N. Y.

Bishop Laughlin is President of the Catholic Orphan Asylum Association of Brooklyn. He was chosen to fill the position March 21.

Bishop Gibbons will lecture in Bohemian in May, for the benefit of the Bohemian Catholic Church, subscription of Cathedral, in need. Subject—

Bishop Gilmour favors the proposed pilgrimage to Rome, and will be one of the party. His diocese, Fort Wayne, heads the pilgrim van as far as numbers are concerned.

The Princess Marie Czartoriska took the veil at Posen on the 18th March, in the Order of Carmelite nuns. The ceremony was performed by Monsigner Janiszewski, coadjutor to Archbishop Ledochowski.

Father Meller, of the Congregation of the Mission, has been named Vicar-General of the Congregation, until a general assembly can be convened to elec. a successor to the lamented Father Etienne.

At Oconto, Mich., on the Feast of Saint Joseph, the Bishop of Detroit dedicated a beautiful new church under the patronage of St. Joseph. He confirmed on the same day and at the same place sixty-one persons.

The Countess de Montalembert has just placed her Chateau de Maubo, in the department of Doubs, at the disposition of a community of Ursulines sent from Switzerland by the Grand Federal Council.

The Superior-General of the Order of the Sacred Heart and the Superiores-General of the Good Shepherd having recently died, a meeting to fill their places will be held in May, at Paris, France, to elect their successors. All the Mothers Provincial of the world will attend the meeting.

Right Rev. Louis De Goesbriand, D. D., Bishop of Burlington, Vt., arrived home recently from his native France. Bishop Goesbriand, we believe, has two brothers in the line of Franco-German war. They were officers in the French army.

A Church and State conflict is impending in Quebec. Recently, at a political banquet, the Minister of the Interior declared that the Government shared the desire of the ex-prime minister of Quebec, and promised that measures in this sense would be submitted to Congress next session.

A splendid gift has just been presented to his Holiness by the Rev. Father Augustine Vidal, of Salon, in the name of the Catholic ladies of Palma, the capital of Majorca. It consists of a beautiful palm branch, of pure gold, in the centre of which the Pontifical arms are exquisitely wrought.

Rev. Peter Spieker, D.D., died at the residence of the Sacred Fathers of St. Ann's Church, Buffalo, N. Y., on the 5th April. Father Spieker was well known among our fellow-citizens of the German Catholics of Buffalo, in whose service he has labored so long and faithfully.

The Rev. Theophile Chabrez, S. J., Superior General of the Jesuit Mission in Canada, has addressed a forcible and just protestation for the restoration of the property belonging to the society, unjustly sequestrated by the Government. The petition is signed by the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor of the Legislative Assembly of Quebec.

At the close of a mission given in Montreal, Canada, a few weeks ago by Mgr. Bruchesi, Bishop of Cleveland, he administered the temperance pledge to 2,000 men and 2,500 women. Mgr. Bruchesi was elected President of the Father Mathew T. A. B. Society of St. Albans, Vt.

The Catholics of New Haven, Kentucky, and others, have requested Dr. J. J. Barry, the well-known author of a true and very valuable life of Christopher Columbus and other works, to prepare and present them in the coming pilgrimage to Rome. They are to be collected by him with a view of raising the amount required to defray his necessary expenses on the pilgrimage.

Several Sisters of the Most Holy Name departed from Portland, Or., last week for their new mission at Grande Ronde Indian Agency, where they intend opening a school for the benefit of Indian children. The Indians here long expressed a desire to have the Sisters among them, and the present step entertained for some considerable time previous to their undertaking it sooner.

Hon. William S. Caldwell, now residing in New York, has presented the Right Rev. James Gibbons, Bishop of Richmond, with a handsome house and lot in Richmond, together with the furniture in the house. The deed of gift is without conditions, but it is understood to be the intention of Mr. Caldwell to devote the proceeds to some charitable and religious object.

The meeting of loyal Romans, who gathered round the imprisoned Pontiff to express their sympathy with insulted Piedmont and its tyrant, was something at last in the right direction. It was noisy, "Viva il Papa! Mentebonbeni!" "Viva Pio nono for soldiers, and we give him pamphlets." We are told that the meeting "left the Quirinal to accompaniate the usurper was remarkable for the absence of the nobility. Naturally—they are not all of them at the Vatican, with their lawful sovereign.

His Grace Archbishop Manning has signified his intention of joining the pilgrimage to Rome. Bishop Ullathorne, of Birmingham, will also be present, and Archdeacon Allnatt, of Pontigny, France, which is arranged, with his party, to take place in the month of May. The Rector of Saint St. Edmund's College and a committee, whose names we will in due time publish, have the matter in hand. Pontigny, in the archdiocese of Sens, is doubly interesting to English Catholics as being the last resting place of Thomas of Canterbury during two years of his exile, as well as the native place of St. Edmund for 600 years. It is only accessible from Paris.

On Tuesday, April 7, Rev. Patrick McCaffrey, after over two years of patient suffering, breathed his last in Toledo, Ohio. The deceased was born in New York State in 1842, leaving him at the time of his death 32 years of age. Father McCaffrey commenced his preparatory studies for the priesthood in Cleveland, and at the age of 20 entered St. Louisville, ever there to perfect his qualifications for entering the Priesthood. Ordained in 1868, he was ordained priest by Bishop Hallen, Bishop Rappe being chosen in Rome.

The crowds that lately filled the Church in Detroit, Michigan, to hear Rev. Father Langenderfer, of Toledo, preaching morning to late at night, were not without fruit. Father Langenderfer, one of this talented scenic and singer, very high order. Father Langenderfer, Englishman and a convert to the faith, and is pastor of the Cathedral Langenderfer.

Rev. W. D. O'Carrol, O. P., formerly well known and beloved in Kentucky, now of Trinidad, West Indies, has been exceptionally honored, and taken a prize worthy of his merits. A patent has recently been obtained by him, from the Master and Doctor in Theology. This is the highest title conferred on the Order. And, to add to his honors, the last packet brought the official intimation of nomination to be Consultor of the Archbishop of Port of Spain, Trinidad. Doctor O'Carrol goes to Ireland to be consecrated in June.

A pilgrimage from Ireland to the Shrine of Percy-le-Mondial is in arrangement to take place next summer. The pilgrimage is under distinguished ecclesiastical patronage, and will be, it is expected, an imposing demonstration of the religious fervor for which Ireland has been always so distinguished among the nations. Among the preparations in progress for the occasion it is contemplated to provide a banner for presentation on behalf of Ireland to the Shrine. This pious project will, we feel certain, receive the enthusiastic co-operation of Irish Catholics.

The so-called Old Catholicism is dwindling to pitiable dimensions throughout the German Empire. A Congress has been appointed by Government in Bavaria to determine whether the request of the Old Catholics for the official recognition of Bishop Reinkens should be complied with. The Congress accordingly decided that such a recognition was inadmissible according to Bavarian law. The disappointed sectarians may probably obtain the boon sought by means of the German Empire, but their hope may be postponed sine die.

According to the New York World 252 members of the British Parliament are Freemasons—fifty-six in the House of Lords and seventy-seven in the Commons. Fifteen of those in the Lower House are noblemen. The Prince of Wales heads the list of Freemasons who have seats in Parliament, and Mr. Whalley brings up the rear. The Protestant Bishop of Peterborough is a Mason, and several dukes, eight marquises, seventeen earls, four viscounts and seventeen lords make up the list of Masons who wear the apron and have ridden the goat." Neither Mr. Gladstone nor Mr. Disraeli is a Mason.

In the last number of the New Orleans Star there was a pastoral letter from his Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop, in reference to the approaching Jubilee to be celebrated Heart. The solemn consecration of the Province and Archdiocese of New Orleans to the Sacred Heart will be made on Sunday, the 14th of next June, on the completion of a spiritual pilgrimage, which has been specially blessed with indulgences by the Sovereign Pontiff. The pilgrimage will also take the form of a novena of Sundays, and will be performed by visiting nine different churches on nine Sundays, one on each Sunday for nine consecutive Sundays.

On the evening of the 10th March a protest meeting of Catholics was held in Victoria to protest against the new Ecclesiastical bill. Seven Bishops were present. The meeting was largely attended by the party, among them being the Prince and Princess Metternich, two Princes Leichtenstein, Count Apponyi, the Count de Zichy, and the leading Catholic party in the Reichsrath. Cardinal Antonelli sent the Pope's blessing by telegraph, and numerous dispatches, expressing sympathy with the object of the meeting, were received from foreign countries—England among others. Speeches were delivered in German, Greek and Italian.

The mission to the colored people began by Dr. Vaughan in 1871, seems to be flourishing. Two of the priests of St. Joseph's Society of the Sacred Heart, Fathers Noonan and Gore, conduct St. Francis Xavier's church in Baltimore. It is a mission only for the negroes, and two others are in Louisville, Kentucky, engaged in the same labor. There have been a congregation of almost 250 souls, a parochial school for boys and girls with sixty pupils, and a school for girls taught by colored Sisters of Providence, who have a convent on Richmond street. The congregation depend for their support upon the charity of their flock, and those in Louisville are said to be living and doing their church in a working order on an average income of six or seven dollars a week.

The Month's Mind of the late Rev. Mr. Mahoney was held in the Franciscan church, Drogheda, March 26th. In the choir was placed a pall of catafalque, surrounded with a number of lighted lights. The high altar and sanctuary were dropped in black. The ceremonies commenced at eleven o'clock with Solemn Office for the Dead, at which the Very Rev. Archdeacon Gonne presided. The sacred music was given with two Gregorian choirs in the choir of priests, Rev. J. Moonan and Very Rev. P. V. Meade, O. P., officiating as chanters. At the conclusion of the Office, High Mass for the repose of the departed was celebrated being Rev. J. J. Farrelly, of Drogheda; Rev. M. J. McManus, of Dublin, deacon; and Rev. J. L. Hendy, Waterford, sub-deacon; Very Rev. M. A. Cavanagh officiated as master of ceremonies, and at the termination of the High Mass, the last absolution having been pronounced, the ceremonies concluded.

We spoke lately of the great temperance work done by Father Nugent, of Liverpool. His attention is not given solely to drunkards, and we propose his example to another department of charity as one which ought to be laid well to heart by managers of Protestant institutions. He has established in Liverpool for the little street arabs, and has persuaded some hundreds of working men to abandon from the public house on Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays, and give him a penny each on each of his Home. Over a million pence have been thus bestowed. Since the institution was opened some hundred little men and sappers have been given to destitute boys, and ten thousand have been provided with a night's lodging. Over one thousand have been placed in permanent situations. He has at present 167 boys in the refuge.

A. O. H.—On the 8th inst. the following gentlemen were elected officers of Division No. 1, A. O. H., of Stockton: James A. Morrissey was reelected President for the third term; Peter Mahon, Vice President; Daniel Smith, Financial Secretary; Peter Garvin, Recording Secretary; J. Berna, Treasurer; John Ward, County Delegate (third reelected to fill).

Sustain the Sinking System.

The flashes of excitement produced by the stimulants in ordinary use, are followed by a reaction that is always more or less injurious. Just as the darkness succeeds for a moment by the lightning's glare, becomes apparently blacker than ever after the flash is over, so the mental gloom and physical debility that vitiate temporarily under the influence of a dram, return with a ten-fold intensity when the first transient effect ceases. Yet physicians habitually prescribe the liquors or some medicine dissolved in them boldly, when the only cause is a pure stimulant. The effect of such a course is to destroy the vital energies of the system. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the only preparation at present known which thoroughly meets the emergency. The effect of this popular restorative is continuous. Every dose taken invigorates the vital energies and the brain, and its prolonged use will unquestionably cure any case of dentisty, hypochondria, or mental torpidity that does not arise from organic disease, and is past the reach of medicine. It is, in the estimation of the world, an invigorating and vigorous tonic. If the nerves are tremulous and regular, it knows them to be weak, and it strengthens them; if the digestion is torpid, it promotes activity in the organs; if the mind is gloomy, it clears away the clouds; if the appetite is poor and dyspepsia a sure and painful operation, it creates a relish for food and endows the stomach to correctly take healthful aliment. Moreover, it is a specific for a larger number of ailments, some of which are particularly prevalent in the damp and chill weather which we so often experience in mid-winter. Among these may be mentioned rheumatism, colds and fever, and all the no-fever conditions of the digestive and nervous organs superinduced by sudden changes of temperature and the inclemency of the season.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, April 23, 1874.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export the inquiry has been moderate. We quote—Extra at $5 50 @ 6, and superfine at $4 @4 87½, in sacks $ 100 lbs.

WHEAT—The market has ruled firm and all steady rates the past week. At the close the market is quotable at $1 90@1 95 100 lbs.

BARLEY—The demand has been very good for feed, and the supply has been ample. We quote at 82½ @ 85 for choice brewing at $1 00@1 05 @ 100 lbs.

OATS—There was a fair demand, at unchanged prices, during the past week. We quote the close at $1 50@1 62 @ 100 lbs.

HAY—The receipts have been light during the past week, with a good demand. Quotable at the close at $17@20 for Wheat, and $15@17 for Oat.

CORN—Yellow quotable at $1 10@1 15 @ 100 lbs.

RYE—Nominal at $1 10@1 15 @ 100 lbs.

BUCKWHEAT—Quotable at $1 50@1 75 @ 100 lbs.

Bags, $2 87½@3; Peas, $3 50@3 75; Peas and Red, $3 50@3 75; Mixed, $3 25@3 50; Butter, $1 75@2 @ 100 lbs.

ONIONS—We quote at $1 10@1 25 @ 100 lbs.

VEGETABLES—Cabbage, $1 25 @ 1 50 @ 100 lbs; Green Peas, 10@12½c @ lb; Tomatoes, 10@12½c @ lb; Sweet Potatoes, 2½@3c @ lb; Rhubarb, 2½@3c @ lb; Asparagus, 5@6c @ lb; Beets, $1 50@1 75 @ 100 lbs; Turnips, $1 50@1 75 @ 100 lbs; Carrots, $1 50@1 75 @ 100 lbs; Parsnips, $1 50@1 75 @ 100 lbs; Green Corn, 10@12½c @ ear; Lima Beans, 10@12½c @ lb.

BRAN—$16 @ 17 @ ton at the mill.

MIDDLINGS—We quote feed at $27 50 @ ton from mill.

RYE—Quotable at $1 70@1 75 @ 100 lbs.

BUCKWHEAT—Nominal at $1 50@1 75 @ 100 lbs.

OATS—We quote Flat at 3c; Cluster, 6@6½c; Mexican, 6@6½c; Alfalfa, 6@6½c; Timothy, 6@6½c.

HIDES—We quote California dry at 15@16c, and salted at 13@14c.

TALLOW—Quotable at 6@6½c @ lb.

OIL-CAKE MEAL—We quote at $31 50 @ ton from mill.

WOOL—We quote Spring, short staple, at 15@16c; medium, light grades, 18@20c @ lb.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh roll, extra, 35@37½c; do fair to good, 30@32½c; do pickled, 25@27½c; do firkin, 22½@25c; Oregon, 30@32½c; Eastern, 30@35c.

CHEESE—California, 15@16c; Eastern, 20@25c.

EGGS—California, 20@22½c @ dozen; Oregon, 18c.

CURED MEATS.

HAMS—California, 12 @ 13c; Oregon, none; Eastern, none.

BACON—California, no sales; Oregon, none; Eastern, none.

DRY SALTED—California, 10c for clear, 11@11½c.

PICKLED—California, 11@11½c for clear, 11@11½c.

LARD—California, 11@11½c; do in tins, 13@13½c; Eastern, 11@12c; do in tubs and tins, 13@13½c; do in cauldrons and kegs, 11@11½c; Oregon, 10c.

FRESH MEATS.

BEEF—For first quality, 5@6c; other grades, 4@5 @ lb.

VEAL—At 6@8c @ lb.

MUTTON—At 5@6c @ lb.

LAMB—None @ lb.

PORK—Corn-fed, grain-fed, 6@6½c on foot, grain-fed, 7@8c @ lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

FOWLS—Hens, large, $7 50@8 00; Broilers, $7@8; Roosters, $5 50@6 00 @ 100 lbs.

TURKEYS—Live, 18@20c @ lb.

HARE—$1 50@2 @ dozen.

RABBITS—Cottontail, $1 50@2 @ dozen; Mallard, 50@75c; Teal, 50@75c; Canvas-back, $2@2 50.

CHICKENS—Large, $7@8 @ 100 lbs.

DUCKS—Tame $1@$1 50 @ each; Mallard, 50@75c; Teal, 50@75c; Canvas-back, $2@2 50.

GEESE—$2@2 50 @ each.

TURKEYS—Live, 18@20c @ lb.

HARE—$1 50@2 @ dozen.

RABBITS—50@75c @ each.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

WE HAVE NOW A FULL AND COMPLETE assortment of Spring and Summer

DRESS GOODS

Which we offer the public at very

LOW PRICES,

Consisting, in part, of Black and Fancy

SILKS,

IRISH POPLINS, SHAWLS,

And a full supply of

Fancy Goods.

We invite special attention to our supply of

BLACK GOODS.

Table Linens & Housekeeping Goods

To Hotels and Boarding-houses at Wholesale Prices.

RIBBONS

A Specialty, at buyers' rates.

BRADFORD SERGES, in Black and White, manufactured expressly for the use of the Sisters and Fathers of the Coast.

IRISH TATTING and Lace in the trade at a liberal discount.

Orders from the country promptly attended to at lowest prices.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

706 MARKET STREET,

OPPOSITE THIRD.....SAN FRANCISCO

ap11

SALOON FRONT SAN FRANCISCO CAL.

PRINTING

Paper Ruling and Book Binding.

Neatly. Promptly. Cheaply.

PERFORMED BY

Bacon & Company,

Corner Clay and Sansome Sts.

Country Orders will receive equal consideration with those from our city patrons.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

FRATINGER & NOLL

WILL EXHIBIT RARE NOVelties during the coming week in handsome

LINEN SUITS,

NEW STYLES,

Embroidered and Braided in all the new Shades and Designs.

NEW STYLE CLOAKS,

CONSISTING IN—

Drap d'Ete, English Walking Jackets, Dolman's Talmas, and Redowas,

Trimmed and Inserted with YAK LACE and PASSEMENTERIE, both Plain and Beaded.

HOUSE WRAPPERS!

A Large Assortment, consisting in French Calico, Cashmere and Silk.

STREET SUITS,

In all New and Desirable SPRING GOODS, made up stylish and handsomely trimmed in two colors or with silk.

SPRING SILKS

Can be found in all Shades and at all Prices.

PASSEMENTERIES!

PASSEMENTERIES!

The Largest and Best Assortment of

BEADED GIMPS,

ORNAMENTS,

BUCKLES,

SLIDES,

FRINGES

AND BUTTONS.

YAK LACE AND INSERTIONS,

Both Plain and Beaded, in large variety.

FRATINGER & NOLL,

Leading Cloak and Suit House of the City,

10 Montgomery Street.

mch1-tf

SAVE YOUR MONEY!

DRY GOODS!

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES AT

E. SUPPLE'S, 838 Market Street,

NEARLY OPPOSITE FOURTH

FOLLOWING IS A LIST OF PRICES WHICH defy competition:

A lot of Stripped Poplins, 36 cents, worth 37½.

A lot of Stripped Poplins, 40 cents, originally 50.

111 pieces Poplin Empress, 37½ cents, worth 62½.

50 pieces Velour Empress, 50 cents, value 75.

50 pieces Balzarine Cloth, 37½ cents, worth 62½.

75 pieces Balzarine Cloth, 50 cents, reduced from 75.

45 pieces Satin de Chene, 50 cents, value 75.

50 pieces Striped Poplin, 50 cents, worth 75.

Black Alpacas of all grades and prices.

Black Mohairs, 50 cents and upwards.

Black Cashmeres at a great reduction.

75 pieces Japanese Poplin, 25 cents, worth 50.

75 pieces Japanese Silk, 37½ cents, originally 75.

French Poplins, $1 25, usual price $1 75.

Plain Silks, Poplins, $1 25, reduced from $1 50.

16 pieces Black Silk, $1 50, usual price $2.

22 pieces Black Silk, $1 75, worth $2 25.

36 pieces Black Silk, $2, good value $2 50.

Black Gros Grain Silks, all grades, worth $2 75.

700 striped Shawls at $1 worth $1 50.

500 Striped Shawls at $1 50, worth $2 50.

A Great Reduction in Black and Brocho Shawls.

Brocho Shawls, $15, was $20.

Brocho Shawls, $20, usual price $30.

Brocho Shawls, $25, good value $35.

Beauty Shawls, $10, reduced from $15.

118 White Spreads, $1 00, value $2 25.

White Spreads, $1 50, worth $2 50.

300 White Spreads, a special lot, $2 50, worth $4.

White Wool Blankets, $5 per pair.

Lonsdale Muslin, 10 cents a yard.

Lonsdale Muslin, 12½ cents a yard.

Hope (unbleach) Longcloth, 12½ cents a yard.

Hope (unbleach) Longcloth, 15 cents a yard.

2,000 Corsets, worth 75.

Corsets, Naples, $1, reduced from $1 50.

A lot Well Corsets, worth $2 50.

A full line of Ladies' Underwear at a great reduction.

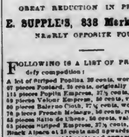
Gents' Furnishing Goods at a discount of 25 per cent.

Curtains, Hosiery, Notions, etc., at a corresponding reduction.

E. SUPPLE,

838 Market street.....Nearly opposite Fourth.

ap11-3m



CASH TEA STORE.

GEO. T. HANLY & CO.,

DEALERS IN

TEAS

COFFEES AND SPICES,

928 MARKET STREET,

Between Stockton and Powell.....SAN FRANCISCO.

ap18

E. O'REILLY,

Importer of, and Dealer in

Mirrors, Chromos, Engravings

LITHOGRAPHS—Plain and Colored,

PICTURE FRAMES, &c

CORNER OF MARKET AND FIFTH STREETS, San Francisco.

CORNER OF MARKET AND FIFTH STREETS, San Francisco.

GOODS SOLD ON EASY WEEKLY OR MONTHLY INSTALLMENTS

Who would have a DULL AND GLOOMY HOME, when it could be cheered by A BRIGHT AND PLEASANT Chromo, Engraving or Lithograph, costing no more than A FEW DOLLARS, at E. O'REILLY'S!

Who would fail to evoke the FONDEST MEMORIES of this world, when for A FEW DOLLARS can be bought of E. O'REILLY a beautiful picture representing, with fidelity, "The Lakes of Killarney," "The Groves of Blarney," "The Vale of Avoca," etc., etc.?

Who would not be constantly reminded of the DEAREST HOPES of the HEREAFTER, when for a FEW DOLLARS, E. O'REILLY supplies a fine picture of "The Crucifixion," or "The Sacred Heart," "Madonna," "St. Bridget," "St. Patrick," "St. Cecilia," "St. Joseph," etc., etc., many of which are also published in chromos?

GOODS CAREFULLY PACKED AT LIGHT CHARGE FOR LAND OR SEA

COUNTRY ORDERS FILLED WITH CARE AND PROMPTITUDE.

RE-FRAMING and RE-GILDING.

E. O'REILLY,

Corner Market and Fifth Streets, San Francisco.

IMPORTATION DIRECT

M. SHORT,

PIONEER TAILOR,

COMMERCIAL STREET, - - Corner of Leidesdorff

THE FINEST GOODS ever introduced in this market, including CAMBRIDGE, MELTONS, CHEVIOTS, TAPIER, OXFORD, WHITNEYS, LEGANZA, WEST of TWILLS

An inspection of THIS SPLENDID STOCK is respectfully invited. A perfect fit guaranteed.

Remember, my Prices to those are—

Pants.....$ 5
Vests.....3
Business Suits.....15
Dress Suits.....20
Plated French Beaver Pants.....7

M. SHORT,

627 Commercial Street,

SAN FRANCISCO.

GREAT BARGAINS

IN

BOOTS AND SHOES,

AT THE

RED HOUSE,

848 MARKET STREET, (OPPOSITE FOURTH)

REDUCED FULLY FROM 25 TO 75 PER CENT.

The most complete assortment of BOOTS AND SHOES ever offered to the public is now at the RED HOUSE, and for sale at from 25 to 75 per cent. less than usually charged in the city. Read my List of Prices:

Twenty-five cases Children's Fancy shoes, with [illegible] and spring heels.

Ladies' $3 50 Scalloped (fluted) Gaiters.....$ 1 75
Ladies $3 Scalloped (fluted) Gaiters.....1 75
Ladies $3 Scalloped (plain) Gaiters.....1 75
Children's Fluted, Elastic-sided, Scalloped.....1 50
Children's Extra quality, Scalloped.....1 50

In great Variety; and all other goods in proportion. I am getting Goods D. S. Root Sewed Boots for $4 worth $15; Brown Men's Prize Boots, $4 50 and upward, and

Now or Never will you buy as Cheap Shoes as will be Sold for the Next 30 Days

at

REALY'S RED HOUSE,

848 Market Street.

GRAY'S

Music Stores and Music Publishing House,

982 and 984 Clay Street, San Francisco, and 181 First Street, Portland, O.

STEINWAY PIANOS and ORGANS.

GUILD, CHURCH & CO. PIANOS AND MELODEONS ORGANS.

CARL HENTZIG, KRAKUCH & BACH, HENRY GIBLER, AND M. GRAY Squares and Uprights.

The Largest Stock of Music on the Pacific Coast.

Pianos for Rent at from $5 to $10 per month.

GRAY'S MUSIC STORES.

mch21

KENNEDY, O'NEILL & BRENNAN,

MERCHANT TAILORS.

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRY GOOD

116 and 118 Third Street.

Corner of Minna.....SAN FRANCISCO

ONE PRICE ONLY.

$25 For Dry Guaranteed Well Assorted Suit.

mh7-6mos

THE MONITOR:

The Only Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

LYONS & BARRY, - - - Publishers.

DENIS LYONS. JOHN L. BARRY.

RICHARD O'SULLIVAN, EDITOR.
DENIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—826 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts., (Rooms 2, 3 and 8, up stairs.)

☞ All communications should be addressed to LYONS & BARRY.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):

Served by Carriers, per week.....10c
Mail subscribers, per year.....$ 10 00
" " six months.....5 00
The Monitor and Catholic World, one year.....7 00
" " Sentinel of the Lake.....6 00
" " Democrat's Fashion Magazine.....3 50
" " Peterson's Ladies' Magazine.....3 50

ADVERTISING RATES:

1 square, 1 time.....$1 50
" 1 month.....5 00
" 3 months.....7 00
" 6 months.....10 00
" 12 months.....15 00

1 square, 4 months.....$10 50
" 5 months.....12 00
" 6 months.....13 50
" 1 year.....25 00

☞ The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

VOL. XVII. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1874. NO. 30.

PASTORAL LETTER,

To the Clergy and Laity of the Province of San Francisco.

Health and Benediction!—Venerable Brethren and dear Children in Christ Jesus! In accordance with the mind and ordinances of Holy Church, (as expressed in several of her Ecumenical Councils, but specially in those of Nice, Ephesus, Chalcedon and Trent, we have assembled in Pontifical Council for the discharge of those duties imposed upon us by our Episcopal office. This is, as you are aware, the first time, since the creation of this Ecclesiastical Province, that a provincial assembly of Bishops has been held. Circumstances over which we had not control have not prevented us meeting at an earlier date. The object of provincial or local councils is to take counsel in the language of the Fathers of Trent. Treating of the necessity of reform, they ordained in their twenty-fourth session, as follows: "Let Provincial Councils, as often as shall seem expedient, be assembled in the circumstances of the times, especially in that same and there shall be a great calm. Meantime, it is the duty of all to be steadfast in their allegiance to principle, not suffering themselves to be withdrawn from a practical observance of their religious duties by the indifference of the slothful, or the sneers of the unbelieving. And this brings us, dearly beloved, to the consideration of the tumultuous waters of man's passions, which, suddenly, in a storm of persecution shall roll by, tranquility and shall succeed

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

"Sin and Its Consequences" is the title of a work recently published by Archbishop Manning. It is spoken of as an able work by theologians and the press.

Archbishop McCloskey recently administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to four hundred children at Brighton, N. Y.

Bishop Laughlin is President of the Catholic Orphan Asylum Association of Brooklyn. He was chosen to fill the position, March 31.

Bishop Gibbons will lecture on Bohemian in May, for the benefit of the Catholic Church, authority of Conshohocken.

Bishop Luers favors the proposed pilgrimage to Rome, and will be one of the party. His diocese, Fort Wayne, leads the pilgrim van as far as numbers are concerned.

The Princess Marie Czartoriska took the veil at Posen on the 18th March, in the Order of Carmelite nuns. The ceremony was performed by Monsigner Janiewski, coadjutor to Archbishop Ledochowski.

Father Meltier, of the Congregation of the Mission, has been named Vicar-General of the Congregation, until a general assembly can be convened to elect a successor to the lamented Father Etienne.

At Oconcia, Mich., on the Feast of Saint Joseph, the Bishop of Detroit dedicated a beautiful new church under the patronage of St. Joseph. He confirmed on the same day and at the same place sixty-one persons.

The Orestese de Montalembert has just placed her Chateau de Maleba, in the department of Doubs, at the disposition of a community of Benedictine nuns, who had left Prussia, and called from Switzerland by the Grand Federal Council.

The Prussian Minister General of the Order of the Sacred Heart and the Superioress-General of the Good Shepherd having recently died, a meeting of the Provincials will be held in May at Paris, France, to elect their successors. All the Mothers Provincial of the world will attend the meeting.

Right Rev. Louis De Goesbriand, D. D., Bishop of Burlington, Vt., arrived home recently from his native France. Bishop Goesbriand, we believe, has two brothers in the Franco-German war. They were officers in the French army.

A Church and State conflict is impending in Cuba. Recently, at a political banquet, the Minister of the Interior declared that the Government shared the desire of and encouraged the dismissal of Priests. He promised that measures in this sense would be submitted to Congress next session.

A splendid gift has just been presented to Mr. Redmond by the Rev. Father Augustine Vidal, of Salem, in the name of the Catholic ladies of Palma, the capital of Majorca. It consists of a beautiful palm branch, of pure gold, in the centre of which the Pontifical arms are exquisitely wrought.

Rev. Peter Spieker, S.J., died at the residence of the Jesuit Fathers of St. Ann's Church, Buffalo, N. Y., on the 8th April. Father Spieker was well known and esteemed by the German Catholics of Buffalo, to whose service he has labored so long and faithfully.

The Rev. Theophile Charaux, S. J., Superior General of the Jesuit Mission in Canada, has addressed a fruitful and most pastoral letter to the missionaries of the province, urging the necessity of adhering to the society, unjustly sequestered by the Government. The petition is addressed to the Legislative Assembly of Quebec.

At the close of a mission given in Montreal, Canada, a few weeks ago by Mgr. Bagnet, formerly Bishop of Cleveland, he administered the temperance pledge to 40,000 men and 1,000 women. Mgr. Bagnet has been elected President of the Father Mathew T. A. B. Society of St. Albans, Vt.

The Catholics of New Haven, Kentucky, and elsewhere, have requested Dr. J. J. Barry, the well-known author of a true and very valuable life of Christopher Columbus and other cavaliers work, to represent them in the coming pilgrimage to Rome. They are forming a collection with a view of raising the amount required to defray his necessary expenses on the pilgrimage.

Several Sisters of the Most Holy Names departed from Portland, Or., last week for their new mission at Grande Ronde Indian Agency, where they intend opening a school for the children of Indian children. The Indians have long expressed a desire to have the Sisters among them, and, at present, but circumstances have prevented them from undertaking it sooner.

Hon. William S. Caldwell, now residing in New York, has presented the Right Rev. James Gibbons, Bishop of Richmond, with a handsome house and lot in Richmond, to be used as the Bishop's home. The deed of gift is without conditions, but it is understood to be the intention of the Bishop to devote the property to some charitable and religious object.

The meeting of loyal Romans, who gathered round the imprisoned Cardinal Antonelli and hissed every suggestion of Piedmont and its tyrant, was something at last in the right direction. It was noisy, and full of enthusiasm, which, we look for soldiers, and we give him pamphlets.* We are told that the meeting broke up at the Cardinal's command, to complete the temper was remarkable for the calmness of the nobility. Napoleon the Great was one of them at the Vatican, with their lawful sovereign.

His Grace Archbishop Manning has signified his intention of joining the pilgrimage to the Sanctuary of Canterbury as soon as that of France, which is arranged, with his sanction, to take place in the second week of August. The Archbishop of St. Edmund's College and a committee, whose names will be shortly published, have the matter well in hand. The Archbishop of Canterbury during two years of his exile, as well as the coming year of his, blessed for all the coming years of his, blessed for all the coming years, to receive the homage of numerous pilgrims from Paris.

On Tuesday, April 7, Rev. Patrick McCaffrey, after over two years of patient suffering, breathed his last in Toledo, Ohio. The deceased was born in New York State in 1842, having him at the time of his death 32 years of age. Father McCaffrey's remains will be temporary resting in the receiving vault of Calvary Cemetery, Cleveland, and will be removed to Toledo, where he will be buried by the Bishop Holden, Bishop Hoppe being absent in Rome.

The crowds that lately filled the Church in Detroit, Michigan, during the morning to late at night, testify to the devotion of that true Father Langeder, one of this talented scale and size. Very high order. Father instructions Englishman and a convert missionaries, and is pastor of the Cathedral Langentrost.

Rev. W. D. O'Carrol, O. P., formerly well known and beloved in Kentucky, now of Trinidad, West Indies, has been exceptionally honored, and taken a prize worthy of his merits. A patent has recently been awarded him from Rome of Master and Doctor in Theology. This is the highest title conferred on the Order. And, to add to his honors, the last packet brought the official intimation of nomination to be Consignor of the Archbishop of Port of Spain, Trinidad. Doctor O'Carrol goes to Ireland to be consecrated in June.

A pilgrimage from Ireland to the Shrine at Paray-le-Monial is in arrangement to take place next summer. The pilgrimage is under distinguished ecclesiastical patronage, and will be, it is expected, a imposing demonstration of the religious fervor which Ireland has been always so distinguished among the nations. Among the preparations in progress for the occasion it is contemplated to provide a banner for presentation on behalf of Ireland to the Shrine. This pious project will, we feel certain, receive the enthusiastic co-operation of Irish Catholics.

The so-called Old Catholicism is dwindling to pitiable dimensions throughout the German Empire. A commission was specially appointed by Government in Bavaria to determine whether the request of the Old Catholics for the official recognition of Bishop Reinkens should be complied with. The commission has unanimously decided that such a recognition was inadmissible according to Bavarian law. The disappointed Old Catholics probably will look to Prussia and Bavaria by means of the German Empire, but their hopes may be postponed indefinitely.

According to the New York World 193 members of the British Parliament are Freemasons—fifty-six in the House of Lords and seventy-seven in the Commons. Fifteen of those in the Lower House are noblemen. The Prince of Wales heads the list of Freemasons, and has been made Parliament, and Mr. Whalley brings up the rear. The Protestant Bishop of Peterborough is a Mason, and several dukes, eight marquises, seventeen earls, four viscounts and seventeen lords make up the list of noblemen who wear the apron and have ridden the goat." Neither Mr. Gladstone nor Mr. Disraeli is a Mason.

In the last number of the New Orleans Star there was a pastoral letter from his Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop, in reference to the approaching of the solemn feasts of Easter and Pentecost. The solemn consecration of the Province and Archdiocese of New Orleans to the Sacred Heart will be made on Sunday, the 14th of next June, on the completion of a splendid pilgrimage, which has been especially blessed with indulgences by the Sovereign Pontiff. This pilgrimage will take the form of a novena of Sundays, and will be performed by visiting nine different churches, named in the pastoral, one on each Sunday for nine consecutive Sundays.

On the evening of the 10th March a monster meeting of Catholics was held in Vienna to express opinion against the new Ecclesiastical bill. Seven Bishops were present. The meeting was largely attended by the gentry, among them being the Prince and Princess Metternich, two Princes Leichtenstein, Count Appony, the Countess Zichy-Ferraris and the whole Catholic party in the Reichsrath. Cardinal Antonelli sent the Pope's blessing by telegraph, and numerous dispatches, expressing sympathy with the object of the meeting, were received from Catholics in England and various other countries. Speeches were delivered in German, French and Italian.

The mission to the colored people begun by Dr. Vaughan in 1871, seems to be flourishing. Two of the patients of St. Joseph's Society of the Sacred Heart, Fathers Nocens and Gore, conduct St. Francis Xavier's church in Baltimore, which is exclusively for the negroes, and two others are in Louisville, Kentucky, engaged in the same labor. There has been a congregation of almost 120 souls, a parochial school for boys and girls with sixty pupils, and a school for girls taught by colored Sisters of Providence, who have a convent on Richmond street. The missionaries depend for their support upon the charity of their flock, and those in Louisville are said to be living and keeping their church in working order on an average income of six or seven dollars a week.

The Month's Mind of the late Rev. Mr. McAuley was held in the Franciscan church, Drogheda, March 26th. In the choir was placed a raised catafalque, surrounded with funeral wax lights. The high altar and sanctuary were draped in black. The ceremonial commenced at eleven o'clock, with Solemn Office for the Dead, at which the Very Rev. Archdeacon Goonan presided. The sacred music was given with fine devotional effect by the choir of priests, Rev. J. Moncada and Rev. P. V. Medill, O. P., officiating as chanters. At the conclusion of the Office, High Mass for the repose of the soul of the deceased was sung by Rev. J. J. Farrelly, of Drogheda; Rev. M. J. McManus, of Dublin, deacon; and Rev. J. E. Brady, Waterford, sub-deacon; Very Rev. M. A. Cavanagh officiated as master of ceremonies. At the invitation of Father Mass, the last absolution having been pronounced, the ceremonies concluded.

We spoke lately of the great temperance work done by Father Nugent, of Liverpool. His attention is not given solely to drunkards, and we propose his example in another direction. Parents of charity as one which ought to be laid well to heart by managers of Protestant institutions. He has established a sort of provident fund for the little street arabs, and has persuaded some hundreds of working men to subscribe a penny each per week, on Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays, and give him a penny each in behalf of his House. Over a million pence have been thus bestowed. Since the institution was opened over one hundred thousand copper have been given to destitute boys, and ten thousand have been provided with a night's lodging. Of these five hundred have been placed in permanent situations. He has at present 167 boys in the refuge.

A. O. H.—On the 5th inst. the following gentlemen were elected officers of Division No. 1, A. O. H., of Stockton: James A. Morrissy was reelected President for the third term; Rose Martin, Vice-President; Daniel Sexton, Financial Secretary; Peter Garvin, Recording Secretary; J. Barns, Treasurer; John Ward, County Delegate (third successive term).

DRY GOODS, ETC.

FRATINGER & NOLL

WILL EXHIBIT RARE NOV-elties during the coming week in handsome

LINEN SUITS,
NEW STYLES,

Embroidered and Braided in all the new Shades and Designs.

NEW STYLE CLOAKS,
—CONSISTING IN—

Drap d'Ete, English Walking Jackets, Dolman's Talmas, and Polonaise,

Trimmed and Inserted with YAK LACE and PASSEMENTERIE, both Plain and Beaded.

HOUSE WRAPPERS!

A Large Assortment, consisting in

French Calico, Cashmere and Silk.

STREET SUITS,

In All New and Desirable SPRING GOODS, made up stylish and handsomely trimmed in two colors or with silk.

SPRING SILKS

Can be found in all Shades and at all Prices.

PASSEMENTERIES!

PASSEMENTERIES!

The Largest and Assortment of

BEADED GIMPS,
ORNAMENTS,
BUCKLES,
SLIDES,
FRINGES
AND BUTTONS.

YAK LACE AND INSERTIONS,

Both Plain and Beaded, in large variety.

FRATINGER & NOLL,

Leading Cloak and Suit House of the City,

10 Montgomery Street.

mch1-tf

SAVE YOUR MONEY

DRY GOODS!

DRY GOODS!

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES AT

E. SUPPLE'S, 838 Market Street,

NEARLY OPPOSITE FOURTH

FOLLOWING IS A LIST OF PRICES WHICH defy competition:

A lot of Striped Poplins, 20 cents, worth 37½.
87 pieces Poplins, all colors, 25 cents, originally 50.
118 pieces Poplin Empress, 37½ cents, worth 62½.
66 pieces Poplin Empress, 50 cents, value 75.
60 pieces Buttercup Cloth, 37½ cents, worth 62½.
50 pieces Buttercup Cloth, 50 cents, reduced from 75.
85 pieces Satin de Chenes, 50 cents, value 75.
50 pieces Satin de Chenes, 62½ cents, worth 1s.
Black Alpacas, 25 cents and upwards.
Fancy Alpacas, 20 cents and upwards.
Black Mohairs, 25 cents and upwards.
75 pieces Japanese Poplin, 75 cents, worth 87.
65 pieces Japanese Silks, 37½ cents, originally 75.
French Poplins, $1 26, usual price $1 75.
Fine French Poplins, $1 50, originally $2 00.
10 pieces Black Silk, $1 50, cost by $2.
20 pieces Black Silk, $1 75, worth $2 25.
30 pieces Black Silk, $2 25, good value $3 50.
1,000 yards from French Manufacturers, worth $3.
700 striped wheels at $2, worth $3.
500 Striped Shawls at $1 50, worth $2 50.

A Great Reduction in Black and Brocho Shawls.

Brocho Shawls, $15, worth $25.
Brocho Shawls, $20, usual price $30.
Brocho Shawls, $25, good value $35.
Shawls, $30, reduced from $45.
118 White Spreads, $1 50, value $2 25.
200 White Spreads, $2, value $3.
200 White Spreads, a special lot, $3 50, worth $4.
Fine White Marseilles, $4, worth $5.
Lancaster Marseilles, 12 cents a yard.
Hope Cotton, 12½ cents a yard.
Hope (compact) Longcloth, 12½ cents a yard.
Table Linen from 37½ cents per yard.
Table Cloths, 4-4 wide, $1 25.
Fine Table Damasks, $1, reduced from $1 50.
All Wool Flannels from 25 cents upwards.
Full line of Ladies' Underwear at a tremendous reduction.
Gents' Furnishing Goods at a discount of 60 per cent.
Corsets, Hosiery, Notions, etc., at a sweeping reduction.

E. SUPPLE,
838 Market street.....Nearly opposite Fourth.
mch21-tf

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

WE HAVE NOW & FULL AND COMPLETE assortment of Spring and Summer

DRESS GOODS

Which we offer the public at very

LOW PRICES,

Consisting, in part, of Black and Fancy

SILKS,
IRISH POPLINS, SHAWLS,
And a full supply of
Fancy Goods.

We invite special attention to our supply of

BLACK GOODS.

Table Linens & Housekeeping Goods

To Hotels and Boarding-houses at Wholesale Prices.

RIBBONS

A Specialty, at Importers' rates.

BRADFORD SERGES in Black and White, unsurpassed for economy for he use of the Sisters and Fathers of the Coast.

IRISH LINENS sold to the trade in Bleached and Unbleached.

Orders from the country promptly attended to at lowest prices.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.
706 MARKET STREET,
OPPOSITE THIRD.....SAN FRANCISCO
mch14

PRINTING
Paper Ruling and Book Binding.
Neatly, Promptly, Cheaply,
PERFORMED BY
Bacon & Company,
Corner Clay and Sansome Sts.
Country Orders will receive speed attention. Station as those from our city patrons.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

WE HAVE NOW & FULL AND COMPLETE assortment of Spring and Summer

DRESS GOODS

Which we offer the public at very

LOW PRICES,

Consisting, in part, of Black and Fancy

SILKS,
IRISH POPLINS, SHAWLS,
And a full supply of
Fancy Goods.

We invite special attention to our supply of

BLACK GOODS.

Table Linens & Housekeeping Goods

To Hotels and Boarding-houses at Wholesale Prices.

RIBBONS

A Specialty, at Importers' rates.

BRADFORD SERGES in Black and White, unsurpassed for economy for he use of the Sisters and Fathers of the Coast.

IRISH LINENS sold to the trade in Bleached and Unbleached.

Orders from the country promptly attended to at lowest prices.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.
706 MARKET STREET,
OPPOSITE THIRD.....SAN FRANCISCO
mch14

E. O'REILLY,

Importer of, and Dealer in

Mirrors, Chromos, Engravings

LITHOGRAPHS—Plain and Colored,

PICTURE FRAMES, &c

CORNER OF MARKET AND FIFTH STREETS, San Francisco.

CORNER OF MARKET AND FIFTH STREETS, San Francisco.

GOODS SOLD ON EASY WEEKLY OR MONTHLY INSTALLMENTS

Who would have a DULL AND GLOOMY HOME, when it could be cheered by a BRIGHT AND PLEASANT CHROMO, Engraving or Lithograph, costing no more than a FEW DOLLARS, at E. O'REILLY'S!

Who would fail to evoke the FONDEST MEMORIES of this world, when for a FEW DOLLARS can be bought of E. O'REILLY a beautiful picture representing, with fidelity, "The Lakes of Killarney," "The Groves of Blarney," "The Vale of Avoca," etc., etc.?

Who would not be constantly reminded of the DEAREST HOPES of the HEREAFTER, when for a FEW DOLLARS, E. O'REILLY supplies a fine picture of "The Crucifixion," or "The Sacred Heart," "Madonna," "St. Bridget," "St. Patrick," "St. Cecilia," "St. Joseph," etc., etc., many of which are also published in chromos?

GOODS CAREFULLY PACKED AT LIGHT CHARGE FOR LAND OR SEA

COUNTRY ORDERS FILLED WITH CARE AND PROMPTITUDE.

RE-FRAMING and RE-GILDING

E. O'REILLY,

apl1-6m Corner Market and Fifth Streets, San Francisco.

IMPORTATION DIRECT

M. SHORT,

PIONEER TAILOR,

COMMERCIAL STREET, - - - Corner of Leidesdorff

THE FINEST GOODS ever introduced into this market, including MELTONS, CAMBRIDGE, CHEVIOTS, NAPIER, OXFORD, WITNEYS, RAGLANS, WESTMILLS, Etc....Etc....Etc.

An inspection of THIS SPLENDID STOCK is respectfully invited. A perfect fit guaranteed.

Remember, my Prices to the Trade are—

Pants ..... $ 4 50
Business Suits ..... 18 00
Summer Suits ..... 15 00
Finest French Dressy Suits ..... 25 00

M. SHORT,
527 Commercial Street,
SAN FRANCISCO.

GREAT BARGAINS IN

BOOTS AND SHOES,

AT THE

RED HOUSE,

848 MARKET STREET, (OPPOSITE FOURTH)

REDUCED FULLY FROM 25 TO 75 PER CENT.

The most complete assortment of BOOTS AND SHOES ever offered to the public is now at the RED HOUSE, and for sale at from 25 to 75 per cent. less than usually in the city. Read the List of Prices:

Twenty-five cases Children's Fancy Shoes, with 11 and upward.
Ladies' Kid Scolloped Oxford Gaiters..... 1 75
Ladies' Kid Scolloped Oxford Gaiters..... 2 00
Ladies Kid Scolloped (plain) Gaiters..... 2 50
Children's Scolloped, Double-sealed, Scolloped..... 1 25
Children's Extra quality, Scolloped..... 1 50

In great variety; and all other goods in proportion. I am selling Good's B. S. Hood Sewed Boots for $2 50; Women's Dress Boots, $4 50 and upward, and

Now or Never will you buy so Cheap Shoes as will be Sold for the Next 30 Days at

HEALY'S RED HOUSE,
848 Market Street.

GRAY'S
Music Stores and Music Publishing House,
933 and 935 Clay Street, San Francisco, and 121 First Street, Portland, Oregon.

STEINWAY PIANOS AND SUBORDINATE MAKES.
GUILD, CHURCH & CO. PIANOS AND ESTEY ORGANS.
AND SOLE AGENTS FOR
CARL PRINCE, KRAKICH & BACH, BENT, GIBLER, AND M. GRAY Squares and Uprights.

The Largest Stock of Music on the Pacific Coast.

Pianos for Rent at from $6 to $10 per month.

Pianos on Time Payments.

GRAY'S MUSIC STORES.

KENNEDY, O'NEILL & BRENNAN

DRY GOODS OF.....

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRY GOODS

116 and 118 Third Street.

Corner of Minna.....SAN FRANCISCO

ONE PRICE ONLY.

$25 Per Day guaranteed to Agents Everywhere. Outfit free. Address P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

CASH TEA STORE.

GEO. T. HANLY & CO.,

DEALERS IN

TEAS

COFFEES AND SPICES.

928 MARKET STREET,

Between Stockton and Powell.....SAN FRANCISCO.
6d20

THE MONITOR.

The Only Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

LYONS & BARRY, - - - - Publishers.
DENIS LYONS.....JOHN T. BARRY.
RICHARD DOLLITTAN.....EDITOR
DENIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—532 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 2, 7 and 8, upstairs.)
☞ All communications should be addressed to LYONS & BARRY.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):
Served by Carriers, per week..... 10c
Mail subscribers, per year..... $ 4 00
" " six months..... 2 00
" Monitor and Catholic World, one year..... 7 00
" " Hardy's Lady's Book..... 3 50
" " Demorest's Fashion Magazine..... 3 50
" " Peterson's Ladies' Magazine..... 3 50

ADVERTISING RATES:
1 square, 1 time.....$1 50 | 1 square, 6 months.....$10 00
" 3 months..... 5 00 | " 9 months..... 12 00
" 6 months..... 7 00 | " 12 months..... 15 00
" 9 months..... 9 00 | 1 Page..... 25 00

☞ The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

PASTORAL LETTER,

To the Clergy and Laity of the Province of San Francisco.

Health and Benediction! — Venerable Brethren and dear Children in Christ Jesus! In accordance with the mind and ordinances of Holy Church, as expressed in several of her Ecumenical Councils, but specially in those of Nice, Ephesus, Chalcedon and Trent, we have assembled in Provincial Council for the discharge of those duties imposed upon us by our Episcopal office. This is, as you are aware, the first time, since the creation of this Ecclesiastical Province, that a provincial assembly of Bishops has been held. Circumstances over which we had not power to control prevented us meeting at an earlier date. The object of provincial or local councils is the application to the particular wants of the Fathers of Trent. Treating on the subject of reform, they ordained in their twenty-fourth session, as follows: "Let Provincial Councils, if anywhere fallen into disuse, be revived for the regulation of morals, the correction of abuses, the alleying of controversies and the accomplishment of such things as are enjoined by the sacred Canons. Besides XIV., in his instructions to the Chief Pastors of the Church, points out the importance of a prudent legislation, accommodated to the circumstances of the times, "Customs and examples," he observes, "of the illustrious Bishops, who have constantly flourished in the Church, ought diligently to be observed, and, if anything, so as to make what was once useful afterwards profitless, and even pernicious, it is, therefore, the part of a prudent Prelate to so accommodate himself to time and circumstance, in those things in the government of the people placed by the Holy Ghost to rule the Church of God, one of the most prominent duties to be found in the assembly of Bishops held during the time of the Vatican Council, and which, we are sure, will be fully carried out in the practice of the Church.

We take this opportunity, then, to congratulate you, Venerable Brethren, on the happy issue of the Vatican Council, and to express our joy at the glorious triumph which the Church of God has gained over the enemies of religion seem to them and to the world, to have prevailed against the power of the Church. But this institution was opposed over one hundred years ago, and many have been given to doubting people, and to-day we see the Church, with a mightier power than ever, more firmly established than ever, and more united than ever. The words of the enemy have gone into the void, and their cities then destroyed. Their memory hath perished with a noise, but the Lord remaineth for ever."

It is nothing new in the history of mankind for the sword of persecution to have been drawn against the faithful followers of Christ. The antagonism ever existing between the world and religion necessarily led to this: "And you shall be hated by all men for my name's sake. . . . If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more them of his household."

Be not alarmed, then, at the troubles, some aspect of the times. If some of the chief rulers of the earth have forgotten their duty and abused their power, that is no reason why we should fail in our filial obedience and dutiful allegiance to God and his Church. Armed hosts and opposing measures are at least but feeble weapons in the hands of men against the cause of Christ. The interests of religion may indeed suffer, the faithful may have to mourn, the shepherds may be stricken and the flock in part dispersed, but we ever have before our eyes the promise the Church is never in danger; for Christ our Lord has given us His pledge that no power shall ever prevail against it. "And I say to thee that thou art Peter: and upon this rock I will build my Church: and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."

Who would not be constantly reminded of the DEAREST HOPES of the HEREAFTER, when for a FEW DOLLARS, E. O'REILLY supplies a fine picture of "The Crucifixion," or "The Sacred Heart," "Madonna," "St. Bridget," "St. Patrick," "St. Cecilia," "St. Joseph," etc., etc., many of which are also published in chromos?

GOODS CAREFULLY PACKED AT LIGHT CHARGE FOR LAND OR SEA

COUNTRY ORDERS FILLED WITH CARE AND PROMPTITUDE.

RE-FRAMING and RE-GILDING

E. O'REILLY,

apl1-6m Corner Market and Fifth Streets, San Francisco.

IMPORTATION DIRECT

M. SHORT,

PIONEER TAILOR,

COMMERCIAL STREET, - - - Corner of Leidesdorff

THE FINEST GOODS ever introduced into this market, including MELTONS, CAMBRIDGE, CHEVIOTS, NAPIER, OXFORD, WITNEYS, RAGLANS, WESTMILLS, Etc....Etc....Etc.

An inspection of THIS SPLENDID STOCK is respectfully invited. A perfect fit guaranteed.

Remember, my Prices to the Trade are—

Pants ..... $ 4 50
Business Suits ..... 18 00
Summer Suits ..... 15 00
Finest French Dressy Suits ..... 25 00

M. SHORT,
527 Commercial Street,
SAN FRANCISCO.

The Monitor.

FIDES. PATRIA. UNITAS. CARITAS.

VOL. XVII. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, MAY 16, 1874. NO. 30.

bub, how much more them of his household."

Be not alarmed, then, at the troubles, some aspect of the times. If some of the chief rulers of the earth have forgotten their duty and abused their power, that is no reason why we should fail in our filial obedience and dutiful allegiance to God and his Church. Armed hosts and opposing measures are at least but feeble weapons in the hands of men against the cause of Christ. The interests of religion may indeed suffer, the faithful may have to mourn, the shepherds may be stricken and the flock in part dispersed, but we ever have before our eyes the promise the Church is never in danger; for Christ our Lord has given us His pledge that no power shall ever prevail against it. "And I say to thee that thou art Peter: and upon this rock I will build my Church: and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away."

Who would not be constantly reminded of the DEAREST HOPES of the HEREAFTER, when for a FEW DOLLARS, E. O'REILLY supplies a fine picture of "The Crucifixion," or "The Sacred Heart," "Madonna," "St. Bridget," "St. Patrick," "St. Cecilia," "St. Joseph," etc., etc., many of which are also published in chromos?

GOODS CAREFULLY PACKED AT LIGHT CHARGE FOR LAND OR SEA

COUNTRY ORDERS FILLED WITH CARE AND PROMPTITUDE.

RE-FRAMING and RE-GILDING

E. O'REILLY,

apl1-6m Corner Market and Fifth Streets, San Francisco.

IMPORTATION DIRECT

M. SHORT,

PIONEER TAILOR,

COMMERCIAL STREET, - - - Corner of Leidesdorff

THE FINEST GOODS ever introduced into this market, including MELTONS, CAMBRIDGE, CHEVIOTS, NAPIER, OXFORD, WITNEYS, RAGLANS, WESTMILLS, Etc....Etc....Etc.

An inspection of THIS SPLENDID STOCK is respectfully invited. A perfect fit guaranteed.

Remember, my Prices to the Trade are—

Pants ..... $ 4 50
Business Suits ..... 18 00
Summer Suits ..... 15 00
Finest French Dressy Suits ..... 25 00

M. SHORT,
527 Commercial Street,
SAN FRANCISCO.

ANNE...
...STREET.....SAN JOSE

Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

CATHOLIC BOOKS

PICTURES AND ORNAMENTS,

Miscellaneous Books and Stationery.

AGENT FOR STEINWAY & SONS' PIANOS;
CHICKERING & SONS' PIANOS;
HAYNES BROS. PIANOS;
BURDETT CELEST ORGANS;
MASON & HAMLIN'S ORGANS.

Always on hand a large assortment of the above named celebrated instruments.

☞ Liberal discount to the Rev. Clergy and Catholic Schools. Orders promptly attended to. my23-1y

MAY FESTIVALS.

At the Sacred Heart Convent.

On Monday, May 4th, the pupils of the Sacred Heart Presentation Convent, Taylor street, held their May-Day festival. Although the morning looked cloudy, from the number of children in attendance and their light and gay attire, it was evident that they rightly anticipated nothing but sunshine throughout the day. The school rooms presented a very pleasing aspect, being tastefully decorated for the occasion, and a niche over the children assembled, and a half an hour later the Queens, attended by their Maids of Honor, entered. Then the procession was formed, a little girl, bearing a cross, led the way, and following her were the children of the different classes, each with their respective queens, numerous maids of honor and train-bearers. A banner was also carried before the pupils of each grade. Miss Fl. Barry, the Queen of the Sacred Heart School, served as Queen of the Blessed Virgin, and bore a statuette of Mary in the right hand, whose modest, polite and affable demeanor throughout the morning of the festivities evidenced her good taste of the pupils in selecting her as their Queen.

The procession passed through the rooms and balcony, and around the garden, during which time hymns were sung in honor of the Queen of May. After the procession of a poetical address of the Queen. As time and space will not permit a description of the proceedings in the lower classes, it will merely name the Queens: Saint Mary's room, Miss B. Cooper; Saint Joseph's room, Miss M. McCloskey; Saint Agnes's room, Miss M. Higgins; Infants' school, Miss F. Hichins.

When the exercises were finished, Mrs. Judge Hager treated the Junior class to ice cream, which she had kindly previously provided, all were interested and pleased, and to see the children spend such a happy day.

A GRADUATE.

At St. Peter's Church.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings of last week, two literary exhibitions were given by the young ladies of St. Peter's Sunday school, in Mayeberry's Hall. The programme of Monday evening was the "Crowning of the Blessed Virgin." The Rev. Father Scannell officiated, and the whole school was present. Before the exercises were closed with the recitation of a poetical address by the Queen. As time and space will not permit a description of the proceedings in the lower classes, it will merely name the Queens: Saint Mary's room, Miss B. Cooper; Saint Joseph's room, Miss M. McCloskey; Saint Agnes's room, Miss M. Higgins; Infants' school, Miss F. Hichins.

When the exercises were finished, Mrs. Judge Hager treated the Junior class to ice cream, which she had kindly previously provided, all were interested and pleased,

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

"Rio and Its Consequences" is the title of a work recently published by

THE FRANC-TIREUR.

A Tale of the Franco-Prussian War.

CHAPTER LXXVIII.

A BLACK MARK.

Those who saw M. Damarest hastening through the streets of the Faubourg St. Germain on that Sunday evening would have perceived a difference from the same man as we first introduced him in our readers. He was still shabbily dressed, but his air was cheerful, his step was jaunty, his spirits evidently light. He still, however, preserved the habit of muttering to himself the thoughts which were uppermost in his mind, and those who were curious enough to watch him might often observe an oratorical gesture, as if he were in the act of addressing an assembly of his countrymen. "Yes," he rattled on, "it was a glorious time. I accomplished it completely. Though I shut my eyes when I pulled the trigger I saw them fall, and I know it was my bullet—my grand, my historic bullet—that carried death to the tyrant Tuomas. Henceforth my career is free. The wretched nervousness with the musket has passed off, and the only drawback to my power over the multitude has disappeared. I can shoot as well as speak; I can execute as well as denounce. Hitherto I have spoken with effect—to-night I will cheerily then—

Hallo!"

"Hallo, you! Why the devil don't you look before you?"

M. Damarest, plunged in anticipated oratory, had bounced up against a soldier behind whom the gate of a large mansion just closed.

"Injection!—what, I have seen you before—"

"You are the soldier with the cruteh!"

"I still two-soldier without the crutch now, and let me tell you my name are in excellent order for kicking."

M. Damarest thought to himself, "Ah, it is lucky I only had the beloved with me—my mistress!" He had not, however, he deemed it more prudent to moderate his tone a little, and remarked in a less commpinous way, "You hurt me by the manner in which you jostled me."

"Ah, you shouldn't walk through the streets with your eyes shut. It is enough to do that when you are drug a-sleep."

There was a lamp-shining over the gateway, and Mike, for he was the speaker, perceived that the face of the man whom he addressed had become livid with rage.

"You," he said, "are one of those servile tools of the aristocracy who affect to believe that patriots are cowards. You have just sneaked out of one of their manholes of luxury."

"Yes," replied Mike coolly, "it is a mansion where I had the luxury of getting a broken leg mended."

"No doubt; they affected philanthropy while the people were perishing in defence of the country or dying of starvation."

"Look here, my good friend," answered Mike calmly, "you are an orator, I see. I have heard you. DO YOU KNOW I HAVE went as a private soldier into the ranks, and was slain in battle; her husband, the Marquis de Mirecourt, is paying down the effects of a shot received in the siege; she herself is dying with grief and trouble. Is that consoling for you to make a speech against?"

"If what you say were true," shrieked the elder, "I would believe it all to be an infernal scheme to discredit the patriotism of the people. It is not true—I will not—it is the abode of luxury and aristocratic oppression."

"You do?"

"I do," yelled in a shrill accent the Communist; "I do, and this day will come when I shall visit it in punishment."

M. Damarest found himself suddenly caught by the collar, and a stern face looking into his. "Look, monsieur communal, or blackguard, or whatever you are—I know you to be a scamp, I think you are an assassin—Providence would reward me, I think, for shaking the wretched life out of you this minute. But mind, if you ever dare to lay a finger on that house, or on any one in it, as sure as you have two eyes in your head that look as if they might have been two presents from the devil, your master—I'll know you, and—and—" here the French vocabulary failed Mike for a word sufficiently terrific, and he was obliged to wind up with a bellow—"I'll massacre you!"

Flinging the startled Communist from him, Mike slaked away without casting a glance behind.

The interview left boiling passions in the breast of M. Damarest. Rage accompanied him to our lodgings, and gave augmented bitterness to his denunciation of tyrants. It still swelled his heart when the next day he marched through the streets at the head of a vast rabble, composed partly of National Guards, now called Federals, partly of all the non-uniformed scum of the city. It received little solace until the day was well advanced, when a strange rumour ran through the city, bringing exultation to its rascality and terror to all that was honest or reputable within its walls.

"It cannot be true," said M. Damarest to his informant.

"It is. Behold the news in all the journals."

"All the troops gone to Versailles!"

"There is not a lingard left within the walls of Paris."

Glorious intelligence! Shout, citizens, patriots, brothers and sisters of the Commune! Terrified by your valour and resolution, the hirelings of a corrupt Government and a perfidious aristocracy have fled from before you."

The citizens, male and female, shouted and yelled. The terror of the orator's enthusiasm was increased by the diligent distribution of wine and spirits, which were freely given round by women decked out in imitation of vivandières.

"Now is the time for decisive action!" cried the orator.

"What shall we do? Whither shall we go?" was cried from the crowd. There were many who feared for the "Hotel de Ville," the "Ministry of War," and several other places.

"To Versailles!" cried one, "and let us out to piece the flying hirelings."

M. Damarest disapproved of this suggestion, which was not in his vein. "Citizens," he exclaimed, "there is in this city an institution which holds the plunder of the people."

"Down with it!" was called by a thousand voices.

"No, we shall not destroy it——" Here there was a tremendous interruption. The orator, however, continued: "We shall not destroy it, but we shall hand its plunder back to the people."

Yells of ardent approval were mingled with cries of "What is it?"

"The Bank!"

Here a deafening shout rose up, and immediately the ragged mob were on their way. The tumult of their approach was audible a long distance off, and many people left the threatened building. Wise: men had retired before it; they were those who had foreseen the event, and were prepared for resistance. Behind the doors of a strong party of armed men were waiting, prepared for resistance. It was plain that the plunder of the people must for the present remain in its chest, and the cry which rose up from the crowd was that of loveless rage.

The cross Church

"But, my friends," cried the voice of the orator, "there is yet a task before us to be performed in the name of outraged humanity."

The appeal to humanity was always successful with this humane crowd, and it shrieked approval.

"My brothers, my sisters, I speak to you in the name of our languishing brethren. Through my feeble accents France calls upon to restore to her bosom her suffering children. Friends of the people, I cry, 'To the prisons!' to the prisons!"

"To the prisons!" was redshoed in the myriad voices of the crowd, and once again the disorderly procession set forth. In their new mission they found little or no difficulty. Whether through cowardly compassion the authorities imposed little or no obstacle. If their conduct appears cowardly compared with that of the bank clerks, it may be admitted they were justified in considering what little force of guard was left in Paris was but the last practicable step to take before the Bank had its custody.

Out from the prison trooped every form of criminality, and the army of liberation with its new accessions was formidable indeed. Even an effort to produce civilians as moral was conceived. For the present, however, they did not satisfy themselves with that; they did not consider it good to lose game. They carried on the procession,

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

"Its and its Consequences" is the title of a work recently published by

THE MONITOR:

THE ONLY

Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....MAY 16, 1874.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We would earnestly and respectfully request our subscribers who are in arrears with the office to remit the amount of their indebtedness as soon as possible. There is a great deal of money owing to us, as shown by our books, in sums varying from four to thirty dollars—all of which should be paid without delay. While THE MONITOR can boast of very many subscribers who are exceedingly prompt in settling their accounts, and never run behind, it also enjoys the patronage of not a few who are rather negligent in that most important matter. It is for the special benefit of these latter individuals that our remarks are intended. They are excellent friends in their way—they mean well, and are generally ready when called upon; but unfortunately it is necessary to make that call occasionally, and so it is necessary to make that call occasionally, and so it is necessary to make that call occasionally, and so

CA[illegible]

"In a shameful manner," sends us a statement of a character which we prefer to give ourselves to adopting the version published to us. If all the facts be accurately stated, a case of proselytism of a very brazen and grating kind has just occurred in the last spot in Ireland where we should have expected to see such a thing. A boy named Warwick, the son of a Protestant father and Catholic mother, was, it appears, up to the age of ten years allowed to grow up in his mother's faith. He was educated at the schools of the Christian Brothers; he has been thoroughly instructed in Catholic doctrine; he had frequented the sacraments, and he had served at the altar. No objection apparently ever to have been made to this until his mother was employed as laundress at Lismore Castle, where the father was also employed as coachman. It was only then a resolution was taken that the boy should be sent to a "child's home"—in his father

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

Father White of Manson, Wis., is a most zealous priest, and energetic worker in the cause of temperance. His recently organized society among whom he ministered for the past three years prior to his late illness, numbers 1,200. The population consisted of some of the most respectable and influential residents of the town.

Montgomery Guard Prizes.

The following distribution of prizes of the Montgomery Guard took place at their armory on Tuesday evening, 12th inst.:

First prize—Handsome tapestry rug, gift of Hardie & Frederick—won by John Sweetman, second individual. Second—Handsome silver tankard, gift of Wm. B. Rowe—won by Private H. F. Keeler; also second company medal. Third—Silver chronometer watch & Waverly portfolio, gift of Lieut. Smith & Waverly portfolio, gift of Lieut. Smith—won by Joseph Smith. Fourth—Silver goblet, gift of Thomas Mathews, won by Maurice Langfeldt. Fifth—Silver tea-pot, gift of John O'Brien, won by M. Ryan. Sixth—A 150 pair of pants gift of H. Vincent and A. Morris, won by Patrick Power. Seventh—A $10 gold piece, gift of Thomas McNamara, won by Peter Bischoff. Eighth—Sporting coat, gift of Martin Dillon, won by Patrick Masterson. Ninth—Silver pitcher, gift of A. Austin, won by Malone). Tenth—Piano cover, gift of John Kemp, won by Patrick Hayes. Eleventh—Silver cake basket, gift of George H. Munro, won by John Mackey. Twelfth—Basket, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Corporal Dunn. Thirteenth—Silver pitcher, gift of Judge Baldwin, won by Jacob Dalsky. Fourteenth—A $10 gold piece, gift of M. D. Jordan, won by Sergeant J. B. Duffee. Fifteenth—Under fur pair of pants, gift of A. Donnelly, won by Bernard Cluskey. Sixteenth—Silver goblet, gift of Hayes & Jackson, won by Denis Kane. Seventeenth—Silk hat, gift of Judge Devlin, won by James Harrington. Eighteenth—Under fur pair of boots, gift of Noble & Gallagher, won by R. Fegan. Nineteenth—Handsome sword, gift of James Shore, won by Patrick Mullin. Twentieth—Copy of Fisher. Twenty-first—Copy of Fisher. Twenty-second—Copy of Fisher. Twenty-third—Copy of Fisher. Twenty-fourth—Copy of Fisher. Twenty-fifth—Silver cup, gift of Lieut. Gallagher, won by Corporal J. O'Brien. Twenty-third—Under fur pair of pants, gift of M. Walter, won by Lieut. Lacey. Twenty-fourth—Order for $10 hat, gift of Thomas Mathews, won by Maurice Langfeldt. Twenty-fifth—silver cup, gift of Wm. Gorman, won by John Sweetman. Twenty-sixth—Silver goblet, gift of M. Heffernan, won by Edward McCoy. Twenty-seventh—Silver goblet, gift of Lieut. Gallagher, won by Private Twenty-eighth—Ladies' locket, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Miss Lizzie Hall. Twenty-ninth—Silver goblet, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Order for pair of boots, gift of Noble & Gallagher, won by Private Thirty-first—Order for vest, gift of Nicholas Walsh, won by Private Thirty-second—Silver goblet, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Thirty-third—Silver goblet, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Thirty-fourth—Diamond pin, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Thirty-fifth—Silver cup, gift of Mr. Templeman, won by Private Thirty-sixth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Thirty-seventh—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Thirty-eighth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Thirty-ninth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Fortieth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Forty-first—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Forty-second—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Forty-third—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Forty-fourth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Forty-fifth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Forty-sixth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Forty-seventh—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Forty-eighth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Forty-ninth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Fiftieth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Fifty-first—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Fifty-second—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Fifty-third—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Fifty-fourth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Fifty-fifth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Fifty-sixth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Fifty-seventh—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Fifty-eighth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Fifty-ninth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Sixtieth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Sixty-first—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Sixty-second—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Sixty-third—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Sixty-fourth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Sixty-fifth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Sixty-sixth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Sixty-seventh—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Sixty-eighth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Sixty-ninth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Seventieth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Seventy-first—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Seventy-second—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Seventy-third—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Seventy-fourth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Seventy-fifth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Seventy-sixth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Seventy-seventh—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Seventy-eighth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Seventy-ninth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Eightieth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Eighty-first—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Eighty-second—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Eighty-third—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Eighty-fourth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Eighty-fifth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Eighty-sixth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Eighty-seventh—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Eighty-eighth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Eighty-ninth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Ninetieth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Ninety-first—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Ninety-second—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Ninety-third—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Ninety-fourth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Ninety-fifth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Ninety-sixth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Ninety-seventh—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Ninety-eighth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private Ninety-ninth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private One hundredth—Order for hat, gift of Lieut. Sweetman, won by Private

The British Vice-Consul at San José de Guatemala, J. Magee, a native of the North of Ireland, was grossly outraged by the Government of the town, Col. Gonzales, on the 25th April. It appears that Magee gave some affront to Gonzales, who had him arrested, and without trial sentenced him to receive 400 lashes on the bare back. 200 lashes were given, when Magee fainted, and when recovering, (removed, Gonzales was dispatched by President Barrios from San Salvador, on learning of the threatened outrage—arrived in time to release Magee and Gonzales, who paid the penalty of his life for his cruelty; and Great Britain will demand an abject apology and an indemnity from Guatemala for the indignity offered to its representative.

The Stricken Mines.

The Salt Lake Tribune has been shown a letter from the Nickson mines, which gives this information: The mines are situated up the Nickson river, and are reached by canoe travel, a distance of a 180 miles, and 90 miles of land travel through a country timbered an marshy country. There is but little known at Fort Wrangel of the mines, which he discovered late last Fall. About 800 miners are congregated at Wrangel, awaiting the opening of the Nickson river, which (now the 20th of April) frozen over. It is anticipated that the river will be open in time to allow miners to ascend which (prevent the aforementioned 800 will wait for 10 miles. Fremont Salt Lake will divert all not to act hastily about putting out "Stickeen; they should await further developments."

Miss Nellie Grant is said to have met her affianced on board a steamer when her father was thinking of the horse, she was most probably dreaming of the bridal. Who's she who will take kindly to the bit.

Liver and Blood Diseases.

AT A. WALL'S.

Every liver sickness each day about two and a half pounds of bile, which contains a great deal of waste material that must be thrown from the body. When the liver becomes torpid or congested, it fails to throw off this waste matter, which is then absorbed into the blood, and thus poisons the blood and the whole system, causing every part of the system. What must be the effect of this poison? It is the cause of nearly all existing sickness in a and a vast amount of poisons of poisons? Nature has provided the liver with ducts or channels and organs—the kidneys, lungs, skin, etc., to throw off these waste materials and in performing this labor in addition to their natural functions, and these lungs, stomach and bowels are overworked and greatly diseased. The brain, which is the great electrical center of all vitality, is weakened by poisoned blood, the unhealthy blood which passes to it from the heart, and it sends out a weak nervous fluid to the nerves, and these nerves, thus poisoned, are unable to perform their functions properly to keep the blood up and to the surface, and the result is a feeling of weakness, gloomy forebodings, and frequently all symptoms of insanity. The most terrible of all is the formation of tumors upon the surface of the skin. It is irritating and poisonous. Still it produces discolored brown spots, pimples, blotches, and other eruptions, and sometimes a carbuncle and scrofulous humors. The stomach, bowels and other organs cannot escape or remain healthy when the liver is torpid. Every stage of consumption, dyspepsia, diarrhœa, dysentery, and all forms of bad blood are caused by torpid liver. Dyspepsia is not an disease, but the great depositing organ of the system, and when it is diseased, the blood remaining organ of the system, and when it is diseased, the blood remaining organ of the system, and when it is diseased, the blood remaining

C FRANC-TIREUR.

Cix

Father of the Franco-Prussian War. Jealous pride.

CHAPTER LXXIV.

The Year of Deliverance.

The Year of deliverance again, the most an autograph letter of fresh year in the ending in the. Versailles palace in another magnificent grandeur stared down the long disgrace. Walks and over the stately fountains, through the great alleys of poplars which were now clothed in glorious green. But there had been few holiday visitors here for many a day. During the past autumns and winter German hordes trampled the elegant turf, and German infantry paraded the grounds into a barrack. Monplerian too had contributed to the disarray, and plowed up the verdure with some of its monster shells. The Germans had all disappeared from that side of the city, but the change was only to substitute the kept for the helmet. The royal grounds still swarmed with soldiers, as if the palace was once more the headquarters of an army. This time it was a French force and MacMahon was at its head. The Generals had a busy and a gloomy time of it. They had to capture the city and yet to spare it. They had to treat it like an armed madman whom it is necessary at once to overpower and to win.

There was no deficiency of intelligence as to what was going forward within. Day by day many came in all forms. Evasions of the guard upon the ramparts were not difficult, for the watch was kept in a loyenly style by soldiers, some of whom were drunken and many unwilling. Desertions were of constant occurrence, too. The journals came to hand almost as regularly as if there were open communication, and the debates of the Commune were carefully and systematically read at Versailles. Those broad sheets were indeed interesting in many ways, according, as they did, a steady downward progress. The suppression of every print of respectability, the abrogation of every law for the protection of life and property, the perpetual incitement to the assassination of obnoxious honest men, and that augmenting ribaldry of language which is one of the most infallible signs of a decaying moral condition, were all observed. The feature, however, which excited most comment and probably most indignation was the series of proclamations which turned defeats into victories, and sought to persuade the dupes or prisoners —whichever they might be called—of the Commune—that the grip of punishment was not so close upon its crimes.

"Heh, Vou," said one of a group of noncommissioned officers, "you were at the taking of issey?"

"I was,"

"And you, Irlandais?"

"Well, yes, I lent a hand."

"Ah, what romance you must be telling. Here I have a hole in the authority of one of those honest messieurs of the Commune that the gaine were spaned to you for so soo."

"Par mon ame, then, I'm sorry to say that I couldn't those gendarmes, instead of opening the gates, took the liberty of opening my skull with their carbines, jam whose rap, you see, the plaster here, injuring, I'm afraid, the delicacy of my countenance."

"Dis donc, Irlandais, you're absolutely comical," said Michel briefly.

"I walked over Federals."

"Did they, then, really fight well?"

"Most did not—a few did, but they were deserted by the rest. It was serious, however, while it lasted. Our party was heavily cut up."

"At all events, you will not assist in taking any more of the forts or assailing the city?"

"We will not! Why so?"

"Le monsieur in this journal quotes an appeal of the gentlemen of the Commune, and says that after you have read it it will not be possible to fight them any longer."

The soldier spread out the paper with an affected air and read with a smirk: "It is now two months since, on the 18th March, your brothers of the army of Paris, with hearts alcerated towards the cowards who had sold France, fraternized with the people. Imitate them."

"Curse them!" interrupted a listener, "I only for them we should not have to do this infernal siege."

"Soldats!" continued the reader, "our sons and our brothers, hearken, and let conscience decide! When the command is famous, disobedience is a duty."

"These are very grand words," remarked Mike, "though I can't say I quite get at the meaning."

"Well," said the reader, "perhaps this would help your comprehension," and he proceeded to declaim again from the journal. "The Citizen Cantonalize, at the head of a hundred braves, will bear to the unprotected houses and mouconsete of the left bank. The Citizen Dumoulin, with a hundred fusiliers, is charged with the first and second arrondissement. The Citizen——"

Here the reading was interrupted by the sound of a bugle.

"Hallos, that is to fall in. Something's up."

"And quite time that we were at those ruffians," said Mike Mahoney as the group dispersed, each going to his own place. "Don't you thiuk so, Michel?"

"Think so!" groaned the latter. "Oh, it is frightful to fancy what may be occurring in Paris under the reign of those demons. It is were not for the necessity of obeying orders and doing my duty as commanded, I would make my way into that city by myself, and watch over my poor darling imprisoned within it."

"And a very foolish thing you would be doing, mon camarade. There is but one place of safety for her and for every decent soul in Paris, and that is the capture by the troops and posting a real government in place of those beggars that have it the reins."

Michel sighed as he confessed the truth with bitterness of assent.

"Keep up a good heart. It's a grand thing to remember that when you're fighting for your country you are, as it were, doing courting the girl you are so long proud from."

I a few minutes the speakers formed portion of an advanced party in the trenches.

"I, is," said Michel to his companions, "deserving torture to be here, selfpiscidoin nothing—and to think of the perils of my poor love. If we were even Spirit-light!"

"I doubt," said Michel gravely, "when a fellow is in trouble there's nothing like a good gut to ease his mind; you didn't feel half its uneasiness when we used to be out on the sharpshoots—that's going after the Prussians."

"It is quite true."

"By jabers, I don't see why we mightn't revive it a bit. To be sure, I'd rather be shooting Prussians than French, that seem about like my own countrymen; but it's a droit to me if these thieves aren't worse than the Prussians themselves."

"Do you mean that we should go forward to the walls and try to get in?"

"Just that."

"Allons. No need to say, be cautious."

"Not the least in life."

The two men crept out of the entrenchment, and, proceeding in the manner with which they had once been familiar, advanced for a great distance, until they got to the moat of the ramparts. The spot they reached lay between Asnieli and the Porte du Jour. The wall had been knocked about a great deal by the bombardment, and the gate, the Porte du Jour, was quite. They ascended the valley, but still there was a height above them and a depth below. "Up on my back, Michel," whispered Mike. Without a moment's hesitation Michel ascended like a man scaling a ladder, and looked carefully around. "There is not," he said, "as much as a sentry on either bastion or ramparts here. I can make my way into the city at last."

"Better have a regiment or two at your back when you're going in," replied Mike. "Couns down and we'll call them."

Michel yielded to the counsel of his friend and descended. In a moment their keps were waving on the top of their bayonets. For a while the signal seemed to be misunderstood, and while they were waving a shell whistled close past them. "It's hard on a fellow," muttered Mike. "They're like quit Flannery, the dispensary doctor at Cappagh, that used to try a new physic on his family, to see how 'twould act. To be practistin' on two of their own that are going to show the other the way in."

At last the signal seemed to be comprehended, and about a hundred men with a couple of officers left the trenches and advanced to where the comrades stood together on their scarp and perilous elevation. As the reinforcements came nearer they understood more clearly the opportunity they afforded to them.

"Now then, Michel," said Mike, "is your leg right they come, Up with you."

"For what?"

"To be first in!"

"And you?"

"Oh, I'm content to be second. You're a Frenchman, and I only say you're a Frenchman, and I'm a bashful Irishman, and I'll like to have some one to introduce me. Up you go!" and Mike mentioned that there's a distinguished hero all the way from Ireland—hold hard; steady—coming here to——" but he was cut short by a blow on the wind out of a fellow—to pay his respects to the gentlemen in the field and flag."

As he spoke the last words Mike stood on the ramparts where his comrade had preceded him. Indeed the latter had passed some few of the soldiers who had hastened to their aid were alongside, and gradually all the whole band had mustered. The senior officer, who suddenly found himself actually within the beleaguered city which he had besieged for the magnitude of his own achievement, though in a brief time he was able to take possession of the city, by suggestion of coffee, he simply exclaimed, "Disgusting." The fish was not to his taste, and he would admit no plea on the score of the siege. It might do well enough for the canaille to obtain on that account, but their wretched establishment ought to be prepared to give suitable entertainment to a person of his class. Grumbling in a high, arrogant tone, trifling with a journal which lay on the table near him, eating, and dipping pretty heavily into the champagne bottle, he at last accomplished his elegant meal. Having done this he rose with a lazy air, and called for his bill. The bill was brought. A slight start of surprise was manifest as he looked at the amount, but he immediately seemed a gentleman air, drew sparingly embroidered purse from his pocket, and from it took a billet de banque which he flung upon the table. "Seventy-five francs," he said, "is too much for a wretched meal like that you have given me, but no matter. There is a note for a hundred—keep the change." The astonished waiter bowed with a reverence that was perfectly genuine. His magnificent paymaster threw his head in the air, and cast his eyes across the room as if it were beneath him to notice the homage of the servitor. Then he drew on his hands a pair of straw-colored kid gloves, which suited in lightness a generally staring costume, placed upon his head and carefully oiled locks a shining hat, and took into his right hand a sanby umbrella. With his left he took up a huge bouquet of the gaudiest flowers, and strutted from the apartment.

This elegant personage was M. Damarest, whom a short time since we introduced to the reader under very different surroundings. He was no longer a workman discontented because out of employment and hungry. His tawdry orations and his ferocity of disposition suited the temper of the time, and he had soared to a leading place in the Commune. He was one of the pets of the mob around the Hotel de Ville, especially since he had contrived to get it listed that he resembled Robespierre. It was to favor this notion he constantly provided himself with a bouquet, and of late he contrived to make all his public appearances with flowers in his hand. His fortune had also strengthen the resemblance by personal denunciations and by sweeping demands for the execution of aristocrats and priests. The abstemiousness of the original was not, however, so much to his taste, and none of his colleagues had contrived to secure a larger share of the proceeds of the requisitions by means of which the private property of the capital was placed at their disposal.

M. Damarest proceeded at a leisurely pace to the Hotel de Ville, which was, as usual, surrounded by a purposeless rabble. Within the walls of the building a private council was being held in one of the apartments of the building. The affair, however, rest penetrated without difficulty and look his place. There were some eight to ten persons already present. Two of these were in gorgeous military apparel—the rest were in civilian costume. One or two seemed to be of some distinction, and were decorated with proper elegance, but unfortunately the time for it he past."

It was curious to see how the fierce, ruthless monsters of the 20th, especially had acted, contempt of the boyish creature who spoke.

"Powder!" exclaimed the young Pole, raising his eye-brows with gentle wonder. "Does my friend want to go back to the age of bows and arrows, or catapults? Powder! Why, it is a coarse and clumsy material, utterly unsuited to our task."

"What do you mean—speak out!"

"Powder!" repeated the soft voice with a sort of feminine shudder. "Surely my gallant colleague, you do not make allowance for the march of science. You base your barrel of powder—your ten barrels of powder—what you will. You dig under the wall of a house, put in your barrel, set fire to it, up goes the house, and perhaps the next to it, and there is the whole of your achievement. To carry on this work simultaneously all over Paris you want some two hundred thousand men."

"Well, then?"

"Well, then, my courageous friend, have you not heard of the new forces—the pétrole, nitro-glycerine, and others of that class?"

"I have heard of these things, but we do know much about them."

"Ah," with a soft cressing smile, "you will hear of them, and I hope witness some of their effects, which are the perfect triumph of modern science. We put aside your slow-coaching powder, fit to make fireworks for boys, and proceed on the scientific plan."

"Curse your science," growled the General, "come to the point."

"Do not allow yourself to be emporsted, dear General, your clear, good sense will, I am sure, thoroughly approve my plan when you hear it."

"Speak it out then."

"There is no necessity for haste in delivering it," said the soft voice with mild deprecation, "though once adopted it must be carried out with vigor. First, there is petroleum, with which," he said, with a sinning smile, "to decorate the police buildings and the mansions of the aristocrats so that they may send a graceful, artistic blaze up in that direction in which the pious ones lift their eyes."

"We understand all about the petroleum," struck in the General. "Do we not?"

"Yes, all, all," was the answer of several voices.

"I do not dwell on that, then," observed the General, sullily. He was jealous of the originality of the inventor evinced by his fragile looking colleague.

"Patience, dear friends. The rest does not need such explain. You know that the city is permeated in all directions by sewers."

"Well, yes."

"Very well. There are your mines ready made. Tank these with the explosive—put the nitro-glycerine into the cellars—into the subterranean spot. Apark from the burning buildings—the fall of a brick—the rumble of a cart—and away then goes Paris into flame, into ashes, into smoke and dust and ashes, into perpetual shudder over the name of the Commune which has destroyed her in the interests of humanity."

A unanimous shout of "bravo!" arose. "And the money?"

"To-morrow will do for them. They ought to be up until we can celebrate their sacrifice with a noble funeral pyre."

Again there was a burst of approbation so unanimous as to make the room ring. Then the soft voice spoke in a private council was being held in one of the apartments of the building. The affair, however, rest penetrated without difficulty and look his place. There were some eight to ten persons already present. Two of these were in gorgeous military apparel—the rest were in civilian costume. One or two seemed to be of some distinction, and were decorated with proper elegance, but unfortunately the time for it he past."

It was curious to see how the fierce, ruthless monsters of the 20th, especially had acted, contempt of the boyish creature who spoke.

"Powder!" exclaimed the young Pole, raising his eye-brows with gentle wonder. "Does my friend want to go back to the age of bows and arrows, or catapults? Powder! Why, it is a coarse and clumsy material, utterly unsuited to our task."

"What do you mean—speak out!"

"Powder!" repeated the soft voice with a sort of feminine shudder. "Surely my gallant colleague, you do not make allowance for the march of science. You base your barrel of powder—your ten barrels of powder—what you will. You dig under the wall of a house, put in your barrel, set fire to it, up goes the house, and perhaps the next to it, and there is the whole of your achievement. To carry on this work simultaneously all over Paris you want some two hundred thousand men."

"Well, then?"

"Well, then, my courageous friend, have you not heard of the new forces—the pétrole, nitro-glycerine, and others of that class?"

"I have heard of these things, but we do know much about them."

"Ah," with a soft cressing smile, "you will hear of them, and I hope witness some of their effects, which are the perfect triumph of modern science. We put aside your slow-coaching powder, fit to make fireworks for boys, and proceed on the scientific plan."

"Curse your science," growled the General, "come to the point."

"Do not allow yourself to be emporsted, dear General, your clear, good sense

The Comic Gospel.

It appears that for some months past such excitement has been produced in Edinburgh and other towns in Scotland by the singular exercises of a couple of Americans—Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey. For a very long time no entertainment has been so popular in Edinburgh as that which goes by the name of these gentlemen. It is attended by overflowing audiences. Crowds of enthusiasts follow the performers from one place to another, for it is part of their system to have as much variety as possible, and to hold their meetings in all sorts of different buildings—in town-halls, lecture-rooms, and churches of all denominations. The meetings are held at all hours of the day, and scores are no young men, some for mothers, some for sisters, others for young women, clerks, students, or little children. Curiosity is gratified by huge placards on the walls, and several periodicals are published a large sale by describing the performances. The price of the exhibition is stated in the following announcement: "At 6.30 P.M., Mr. Moody will preach the Gospel, and Mr. Sankey will sing the Gospel." Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey are Americans from Chicago, and we learn from one of their organs that their visit to Scotland was prompted by a feeling that the churches there stood especially in need of the application of those methods which are the invention of the Yankee mind. It is hard to say whether the treatment of religion in this manner does more harm by bringing it into contempt or into ridicule, by affiliating some feeble minds with idle agency, or by making the orgodless with the infusion of self-righteous arrogance and conceit. There is not the slightest doubt that the whole affair is a spiritual elevation in Mr. Moody's business transaction. Mr. Moody is a mere gabble of texts, interspersed with

GROTESQUE OR SENSATIONAL ANECDOTES,

And spiced with vulgar American slang. The effect upon many minds in the audience is that it should be connived at and patronized by the clergy of Edinburgh and other towns. The fact is, that Mr. Moody and Sankey are right in their mode of proselytizing the people, and if the success of these performances is really a "great awakening" and the "power of the Holy Ghost" that is manifested in the conversion of people, we must be a mistakenly fare. Everybody who has been in Scotland must have been struck with the extreme indifference and fortitude with which a Scotch congregation will endure the dullest of sermons, and how but a series of prayers which are the worst sort of sermons in disguise; and it is not to be wondered at that the Scotch people are thankful for a little relaxation. But that the excitement should come to be connected in the minds of many with religious exercises is a serious matter. Everything hangs on the manner in which the system is a failure and a terrible one. Many people, and those persons who are apt to "think they are pious when they are only bilious," as Pope says of the critics, and who are always prey to all sorts of charlatans of what may be called the psychological type. In this connection we may mention that the report of the chorus to Pabe's piping, venting groans when he pointed to the damned, and cachinnating laughter at the jokes and the roast-beef and plum-pudding philosophy of the Almighty.

The chief was in the midst of one of the most harrowing confessions of murder and adultery, when he said: "Why, I see a New Zealander whatsomedever; no, not by the powers—not at all."

This interruption of Pabe's solemn harangue was followed by the instant arrest of the offender, who was promptly arraigned before a magistrate on the charge of disturbing a religious meeting. The prisoner was fined in the sum of £5, which he contented to divine worship." The charge was and must affect those who are her children. Religion does not foster barbarity, nor do her children rejoice in it or feel indifferent when the monster is loose and doing his bloody deeds in a community. We, of today, then, are unfeeling, heartless, barbarous, because we do not practice religion, and because we read too many stories of blood and carnage.—Toledo Revive.

A young English lady and gentleman arrived at the St. Petersburg Hotel, Paris, April 21, and committed suicide the same evening by prussic acid. Their names are unknown.

Kinds of Theft.

Thefts may be divided into two classes—vulgar thefts and genteel thefts. Vulgar thefts are those wherein one man's goods are taken by another from his premises and possession unknown to the owner. These thefts are generally punished in the common way by a devoted Council. Genteel thefts are quite of another class, and comprise all cases of overreaching in buying and selling —all sharp practice in obtaining land or money, and are sometimes done by due process of law. These are often taken from and the perpetrators thereof are not only not sent to prison, but are looked upon as smart men of business, and walk about the world clothed in purple and fine linen, and are accustomed to look upon thieves as belonging only to the poorest class of society —as the rag, bone, and bottle men, who get forty stood up as zealous to be found, and were found to be rather more reprieved by the poor for stealing from the rich. In innumerable passages denounces the thefts of the rich—and Dives' brethren appear to have no fellowship with the rich, the book of Ecclesiastes says, "Have no fellowship with the rich, lest they rob thee." What agreement shall the earthen pot have with the kettle? If they knock one against the other it shall be broken. The rich man hath done wrong, and yet he will fume; but the poor man is wronged, and yet he must hold his peace. If he have lived of thee, he will deceive thee, and smiling upon thee, will put thee in hope, he will a ask thee fair, and will say, What wanteth thou? . . . What fellowship hath a holy man with a dog, or what part hath the rich man with the poor? As the wild ass is hunted by the lion, so the poor are devoured by the rich." This is a dark picture, Christian soul, and explains to us the terrible crimes that come to light daily. "It is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter heaven."

The thefts of the poor have been committed by unfortunates pressed hard by the bees; the thefts of the rich to that of the bear. If the bees, wandering over the neighboring country in search of honey, rob bees, they are so only in an innocent manner, since they take from the flower only what is no longer required—as, if you will in light things. But the bear, when he finds the hive, is not content to takes little, but takes all, in spite of the complaints of a whole colony. Yes, Christian soul, as the bear, at one full swoop, destroys the hard labors of thousands of bees, so the rich man, by the strength of his position and riches, is capable of destroying the labors of innumerable poor. Do you ask me how? Do you ask me to point out to you these genteel thefts? Do you ask me to show you the bears of our human colony? Attend, for I will unfold to you the chief-

Indications.

The newspapers of the country are filled with accounts of murders and atrocious deeds, which are anything but indicative of a high sense of morality in the people. Deeds the most flagorious are done and recited, and the people read the accounts, express a little surprise and pass on. We see none of that expression of horror which, in more civilized times, was manifested by the doing and recounting of such deeds in times past. No person seems to be affected; the present and its concerns are too engrossing; and thus the world moves on, heedlessly, negligently and carelessly. There are reasons for this. First, the people are called upon to read the accounts of these horrible deeds too often. Newspaper reporters make it a point that the story shall lose nothing in passing through their hands. They exaggerate, color, add a little romance, and their work is done. Another reason is, a want of religion occasions a want of feeling. Religion mellows the heart, sharpens the sensibility, and its effects on the soul are such as to make it love mercy and expand in its presence like a flower in the sunshine. It also makes the soul shudder and shrink from bloody deeds, and dislike even the recital of them. Blood, human butchery and cruelty cause religion to weep,

BUSINESS CARDS.

JOHN M. BURNETT,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
632 Montgomery Street,
Between Washington and Merchant streets,
SAN FRANCISCO.

MULLAN & HYDE,
606 Jackson Street, San Francisco,
Attorneys for Land Claimants.
Dealers in Land Warrants and Scrip.
Agricultural and Grazing Lands for Sale.

P. CUMMINS,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Rooms 14 and 15 Court Block,
626 Clay street and 621 Merchant street.

M. COONEY,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law.
Office, Room No. 7, Court Block,
636 CLAY and 633 MERCHANT STREET

JOHN McKEE. ED. DURKIN.
McKEE & DURKIN,
Produce and Commission Merchants,
615 CLAY STREET,
Between Front and Davis streets, up stairs, SAN FRANCISCO

J. W. FARREN,
WAGON MAKER & BLACKSMITH,
191 BEALE STREET,
Between Mission and Howard——San Francisco.

Carts and Trucks made to order and kept constantly on hand. Repairing of all kinds promptly attended to, and all work guaranteed to give satisfaction.

The Grand Art
PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY,
Corner Third and Jessie Streets,
P. J. SULLIVAN.....PROPRIETOR.

JOSEPH A. HARRINGTON,
ARTIST AND PORTRAIT PAINTER.
Pupil of the Academy of St. Luke, Rome.
STUDIO—Room No. 1 Mercantile Library Building, 628 Sansome street, between Montgomery and Sacramento, SAN FRANCISCO.

Of Lessons given in Drawing, Painting, etc. 3d11

C. A. MINDEOK & CO.,
BOOK AND JOB PRINTERS,
NO. 539 CLAY STREET,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Society Printing, Tickets, Etc.,
EXECUTED IN FIRST-CLASS STYLE.
my21

B. C. DUFFY,
Cigar Manufacturer,
AND DEALER IN
Cigars and Tobacco,
946 and 950 Market St.,
(Opposite Santa Ignatius' Church.)
Cigars of his employes only white help.
ap24

REMOVAL.
McNALLY & HAWKINS,
HAVE REMOVED THEIR STOCK OF GAS FIXTURES
AND PLUMBING MATERIAL
TO
332 AND 334 PINE STREET,
BELOW MONTGOMERY.
Plumbing, Gas and Steam Fitting attended to Orders solicited. ly14-3m
C. McNALLY. W. S. HAWKINS.

MORAN & McBRIDE,
Produce Commission Merchants,
AND DEALERS IN
Grain, Flour, Beans, Onions, Ground Feed, etc.,
626 Front Commercial and Davis sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.

JAMES O'CONNELL,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN
Wood and Coal,
LARUE'S WHARF,
Near Market-street Wharf.....SAN FRANCISCO
Hotels, Boarding-houses and Families supplied at the shortest notice and at the lowest market rates.
All orders promptly attended to. 81

JOHN MOLLOY,
PRODUCE COMMISSION MERCHANT,
AND DEALER IN
GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS
24 Clay st., bet. Drumm and Sansome,
SAN FRANCISCO.

FRANCIS BUCKLEY,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Between Fifth and Eddy.....San Francisco

All kinds of Carpenter and Jobbing Work done at the shortest notice. my22-1f

REMOVAL.
THE EXCELSIOR IRON WORKS
Have Removed from Sansome street to 181 and 183 Beale st. and 300 Howard st,
SAN FRANCISCO.
JAMES J. GALLAGHER, manufacturer of all kinds of Architectural and Ornamental Iron Work, Bargler and Fire-proof Vaults and Safes, Doors, Shutters, Hoses and Gymnasic Rollings, Chairs, &c. Job Iron attended to with dispatch. Orders from the country promptly executed. 81

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQUORS

P. H. McGOVERN,
(Late of Murphy's Camp),
Cor. Twenty-third and Columbia sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
GROCER,
AND DEALER IN
Flour, Provisions, Hay, Grain, Wines, Liquors, etc.
fe28

FAMILY TRADE WANTED.
T. P. WALL,
Cosmopolitan Sample Rooms
50 THIRD STREET,
Between Stevenson and Mission sts., San Francisco
HAS REFITTED HIS SAMPLE ROOMS IN THE NEW STYLE, and has on sale the very finest brands of WINES AND LIQUORS, imported direct by for himself, and intended specially for family use, which he offers for sale at the following low rates:
Good Bourbon Whisky, $1 75 per gallon, or 50 cents per bottle.
Fine Bourbon, $2 50 per gallon, or 75 cents per bottle; Superfine, $3 50 per gallon, or $1 25 per bottle.
Wines of all varieties at proportionate rates.
Attention! The Sample Rooms is a large room for Society and Club meetings; also a Reading Room, where all the daily and principal weekly papers are on file.
T. P. WALL, 50 Third st.

JOHN McCULLY,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in
Fine Wines and Liquors, Ale & Porter,
S. W. corner Mission and Second sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
N. B.—Oysters in Every Style. fe14-3m

JOHN T. KELLY'S
BAR AND BILLIARD ROOMS,
610 Market Street,
Opposite Fourth street.....SAN FRANCISCO.
Finest quality of Ales, Liquors and Cigars. 61

DUFFY BROS'. SALOON,
621 Merchant Street.....San Francisco.
N. B.—Best Wines, Liquors and Cigars. 6

LYMAN, RAFFERTY & CO.,
IMPORTERS AND
WHOLESALE LIQUOR DEALERS,
416 BATTERY STREET,
Corner of Merchant.....San Francisco.

J. H. DOUGHERTY & CO.,
Wines, Liquors and Cigars,
410 California Street,
Above Montgomery.....Next California Market.
my22

K. S. RYAN. JOHN EGAN.
Kelly & Egan,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN FINE WINES AND LIQUORS
No. 604 Battery Street,
Near Jackson. SAN FRANCISCO.

H. Commins & Co.,
(Successors to P. Riley & Co.,)
WHOLESALE LIQUOR MERCHANTS
my5 No. 506 FRONT STREET.

F. & P. J. CASSIN,
Importers and Wholesale Dealers in
WINES AND LIQUORS,
No. 522 FRONT STREET,
SAN FRANCISCO.

SACRAMENTO ADVERTISEMENTS

P. J. HOPPER,
Attorney-at-Law and General Land Agent.
OFFICE—In U. S. Land Office Building, southwest corner Fifth and K streets, SACRAMENTO.
Township Maps of United States Surveys in this State.
Particular attention given to business in United States and State Land Offices. Soldiers' bounty, back pay and pension claims collected.
Go No charge for information, either by letter or otherwise. d16

J. W. ARMSTRONG. A. G. SIMPSON
ARMSTRONG & SIMPSON,
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW,
Office, corner Seventh and K streets, Sacramento.

DR. TYRRELL,
Licentiate Royal College of Surgeons and Ring and Queen's College of Physicians, Ireland.
Office—Sacramento Savings Bank Building, corner Fifth and J streets, Sacramento. d16

ARBOR SALOON,
214 K Street.....SACRAMENTO
MARTIN HYNES.....PROPRIETOR.
The very best Wines, Liquors and Cigars always on sale. 6m6

COYNE'S SALOON,
DEALERS IN WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS
132 K Street (opp. Pacific Hotel), Sacramento.
Household Liquors of the very best quality. 6m6

CENTRAL SALOON,
80 K street.....Sacramento.
DUNN & O'HALLORAN, Proprietors.
MARTIN DUNN. THOS. E. O'HALLORAN.

BLUE WING SALOON,
Corner Fourth and K streets.....Sacramento
M. HALLAHAN.....Proprietor.
None but the very best Wines, Liquors and Cigars.

BARNEY CLARK,
Central Exchange Saloon, Oyster and Chop House,
Southeast corner Seventh and K streets, Sacramento
Open day and night. 6m

P. H. BREEN'S
BAR & BILLIARD ROOMS
10 and 12 Ninth street, bet. J and K, Sacramento.
Always on hand Finest Bottled Liquors for family use. 6m6

CITY HOTEL,
No. 71, 73, 75 and 77 K street, bet. Third and Fourth. Near the National Depot and Steamboat Landing.
SACRAMENTO.
P. CONLAN.....Proprietor.
Board, per week.....$4 00 | Meals.....25 cts.
Board, per month.....15 00 | Lodging.....25 cts.
One Hundred and Fifty Well Furnished Rooms.
Family Rooms and Suite of Rooms.
Free Coach to and from the House. Coach will always at the Depot and Boat Landing to convey passengers to the House Free of Charge.

UNITED STATES HOTEL,
48 Front street, between J and K opposite Railroad Depot and Steamboat Landing, Sacramento.
Board, per week.....$4 | Meals.....25 cts
Good accommodations for Families. House open all night. Coach to and from the House. Headquarters of Ind. Hose, and information given to travelers in regard to the city. Free Coach to and from the House.
M. FITZGIBBON, Proprietor.

JOSEPH A. CONBOIE,
UNDERTAKER,
166 J street, bet. Fourth and Fifth, Sacramento.

J. C. DEVINE & BRO.,
Capital Marble Works,
916 and 918 K street,
SACRAMENTO.
Premiums by the State Agricultural Society, for the years 1867, 1868, 1870, 1871 and 1872; also, Gold Medal for 1871.
Manufacturers and dealers in Italian and Vermont Marbles, Monuments, Headstones, Tomb Stones, Mantels, Grates, Table Tops, Wash Stands, Flooring, Stairwork, etc., at the lowest cash prices. m31

WHYTE & NICHOLL,
IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN Foreign and Domestic
DRY GOODS
N. W. corner J and Seventh Sts.,
SACRAMENTO.
A Large Stock of MOURNING GOODS always on hand. m31-6m

MERCHANT TAILORS.

N. SWEENY,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
NO. 42 SECOND STREET,
Opposite Tennis Street.....San Francisco.
Constantly on hand a choice assortment of Cloths, Cassimeres, Doeskins, Beavers and Vestings, which will be made to order on reasonable terms.
Particular attention given to Military Uniforms. ap18

P. S. MOLONY,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
916 BUSH STREET,
Mercantile Building, above Kearny.....San Francisco.
MR. MOLONY begs leave to inform the public that he is now prepared to cut and make up the most stylish suits at the most reasonable prices. He is in constant receipt of the Finest English and French Cloths, from the best factories. Those in search of reliable garments will do well to give him a call. my23

T. CANTY,
Merchant Tailor
27 Sutter street, near Montgomery
SAN FRANCISCO.
Suits of California cloths made in the latest style & the reding prices. 406-1

CANDIES! CANDIES!
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
Of all descriptions and of the best materials, freshly manufactured every day by CANTY & WAGNER
Wholesale and Retail
Confectioners
107 MONTGOMERY ST.,
Between Bush and Sutter.....San Francisco

$10 to $20 PER DAY. JOSEPH WANTED everywhere. Particulars free. H. E. BLEIN & CO., St. Louis, Mo. o16

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 30.
May
24—Sunday—Pentecost, or Whit-Sunday.
25—Monday—Whit-Monday.
26—Tuesday—Whit-Tuesday.
27—Wednesday—Ember Day.
28—Thursday—Of the Octave.
29—Friday—Ember Day. Fast.
30—Saturday—Ember Day. Fast.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SATURDAY.....MAY 23, 1874.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We would earnestly and respectfully request our subscribers who are in arrears with this office to remit the amounts of their indebtedness as soon as possible. There is a great deal of money owing to us, as shown by our books, in sums varying from four to thirty dollars—all of which should be paid without delay. While THE MONITOR can boast of very many subscribers who are exceedingly prompt in settling their accounts, and never fail behind, it also enjoys the patronage of not a few who are rather negligent in that most important matter. It is for the special benefit of the latter individuals that our remarks are intended. They are excellent friends in their way—they mean well, and are generally ready when called upon; but unfortunately it is necessary to make that call occasionally, and oh we ask it now. Yet we should much prefer if it could be dispensed with, and our friends paid up of their own accord. It would be more pleasant for all concerned.

THE KILLING OF MR. STEPHENS.

A considerable time has now elapsed since the news of the slaying of a Presbyterian minister, named STEPHENS, at Abasuleo, in the province of Guadalajara, Mexico, reached our city. The murder was, of course, made a pretext for a series of very violent attacks upon the Church of Rome, and upon the priesthood and people of Mexico. The influence of the teachings of the Church was declared to be the cause of the assassination; the fanaticism of the priesthood and the barbarity of the people were alleged to be the immediate provocations to the outrage. We thought it wiser to make no remarks concerning the matter —although we were satisfied that there was no proper justification for the outcry against the Catholics of Mexico—until we were in possession of all the facts, and could come to a fair and equitable conclusion. We have now read several different accounts of the killing of the unfortunate missionary, from Catholic and Protestant, American and Mexican sources, and we unhesitatingly affirm that a careful balancing of all testimony convinces us that MR. STEPHENS brought death upon himself by his own most injudicious behavior. In fact, if he wanted to throw away his life, he could not possibly have gone any surer way about it than he did.

He was not contented with expounding his own peculiar tenets, whatever they were, and recklessly throwing down the gauntlet of the people; but persisted in using most extravagant language in denunciation of Catholicity in the public streets and in the midst of the populace. This did not even stop at this point, but went to the extreme of abusing his auditors, showering upon them such incomplimentary epithets as "ignorant," "superstitious," and "barbarians." It must be admitted by every one that such conduct was in the highest degree calculated to produce a breach of the peace and endanger his life at any moment. It would do so in any part of the known world, and among the most patient and peaceful population existing. If a man were to traverse the streets of San Francisco declaiming against Protestantism, and calling them around him as "heretics," "barbarians," etc., he would certainly run a good chance of losing his life before he spent many hours at his work, if the police did not save him by arresting him as a nuisance.

The correspondence which we annex to our remarks will also show what sort of a missionary MR. STEPHENS was, and how he proposed to convert the Mexicans to Protestantism from the errors of "Popery." It has not, so far as we know, been the habit of "missionaries" engaged in spreading the gospel of peace to carry deadly weapons; yet, MR. STEPHENS was not only armed with a revolver, but displayed a readiness to use it which would reflect credit, or rather discredit, upon a Texas desperado. The man who would deliberately turn round and discharge the barrels of his "six-shooter" at a lot of children because one of them threw a pebble at him, would, in all probability, be lynched in California, and public opinion would be in favor of the man who rid the world of such a savage brute. Yet, the "evangelical" MR. STEPHENS, who sought to scatter the blessings of the "Reformation" in MEXICO, did not think it interfered with his character as a preacher of the gospel to behave in that manner.

An effort has been made by the secular and anti-Catholic press, both here and in Mexico, to attach responsibility for the slaying of J. STEPHENS to the Curé of Abasuleo, Padre RHINOSO, because sometime previous to the murder he preached from the text, "Every tree that bareth not fruit shall be cut down." The allegation is that he added with peculiar significance, "You may interpret these words as you please," and that thereupon a portion of his hearers assailed the house of MR. STEPHENS, and ended the assault by murdering its owner. Padre RHINOSO could hardly have much influence over his flock seeing that he was a perfect stranger to them, having been in the town only a few days. Moreover, the people who took part in the killing of the Presbyterian minister were Indians and soldiers, who probably never entered a church at all, and who certainly are not likely to be influenced one way or another by anything a priest would say. It must be borne in mind, too, that there is no proof that the Curé of Abasuleo used the words attributed to him beyond the assertion of MR. WATKINS, STEPHENS' comrade, who was sixty miles off at the time.

We give a couple of extracts from the Protestant press disclosing the kind of conduct indulged in by MESSRS. STEPHENS and WATKINS. The Pacific says:

"At Guadalajara, MR. WATKINS and MR. STEPHENS had printed in handbill form over against each other and Ten Commandments respectively, the Old Testament, and the same decorated in the Papist catechism. Also, texts as appropriate heading, and also passages of the Scriptures denouncing those who pervert the word of God. These were posted all about, and some darling young Luther nailed a copy of them upon the very gate of the Cathedral. The people read them, and opened their eyes: the magistrates protected the missionaries, and the priests were in a rage. Six men, it was affirmed, were hired by the priests to kill the missionaries. But nothing came of it save a stoning in the street, which laid up MR. WATKINS for a few days."

As Colima a riot was nearly caused by the infamous words of one of those "evangelicos," who openly declared that the Mother of our Lord was no more pure than a well-known woman of immoral life in that town!

The Boston Weekly Journal, commenting on the above extract, says:

"At Abasuleo, MR. STEPHENS probably worked in precisely the manner adopted at Guadalajara. A more prudent course might possibly have saved his life. Had his mission been laid more upon an inductive system, the result he aimed at would doubtless have been as surely, if not as swiftly reached, and his life spared for much usefulness."

The Christian Union, referring to the same extract, declares:

"His zeal in attacking the errors of the Homish Church led to his acquiring the reputation of a bitter bigot, and already reported. Probably a more prudent course would have made his life; and it is a fair question whether missionary efforts in these days cannot be conducted as effectively with reasonable moderation as by heroic methods."

Now we maintain that the plain English of these very cautious and guarded admissions is that the plan to "convert" the inhabitants of Abasuleo adopted by MR. STEPHENS was not such as would be approved by tolerant and peaceful men. Furthermore, there can be no reasonable doubt that the conduct pursued by this extraordinary and ill-fated missionary was unfit for decent or even civilized people. The fanatic who endeavors to convert persons with a religion which is worthy of the name by stoning their brutes, barbarians, and so forth, and who illustrates the spirit of Christianity by fusillading a crowd of children, deliberately puts his life in jeopardy, and it is not surprising, nay if he loses it. As long as human nature remains what it is now, it is folly to expect that men will tamely stand by and listen to opprobrious epithets hurled at themselves and insults flung at the religion they profess. There is no country in the world, Catholic or Protestant, situated as this country is, without any of any creed, be having as MR. STEPHENS did, would not be likely to lose his life. It is the height of injustice, therefore, to stigmatize the Mexican people as either intolerant or bloodthirsty, because the great provocations they received inflamed their anger and resulted in the death of the man who outraged their feelings, and uttered sentiments, they said, of course, to be deplored. It is a melancholy illustration of the lengths to which unbridled passion will urge men who are not animated with the meek spirit of religion.

The Catholic press of Mexico has, as in duty bound, denounced the murder of MR. STEPHENS as an atrocious crime against religion, humanity and civilization. The press of the assassins have, according to the telegraphic dispatches, already been executed. Padre RHINOSO is indicted for his alleged provocation to the fatal assault, but we feel convinced that his case will receive no any participation, immediate or remote, direct or indirect, will be fully and completely established. The MEXICAN GOVERNMENT, as far as it is to be considered responsible in the priesthood, can hardly succeed in distorting facts or ignoring truths so far as to secure his conviction of a crime of which he never even dreamed. If the Presbyterian body desire it, they are welcome to continue their "missionary efforts" in MEXICO, where they are not appreciated, and pass by the work of conversion of infidels and unbelievers which awaits them in their country, they ought at all events to take care that their "evangelicals" are not so unscripturally bellicose and so indecently abusive as was the late MR. STEPHENS. Courtesy, politeness and the spirit of Christian meekness are the very best preventatives of lamentable tragedies like that perpetrated at Abasuleo.

GUADALAJARA, March 21, 1874.

MY DEAR MR. ——: I have been disagreeably surprised at the idea of Mr. John L. Stephens being a martyr, which some of the San Francisco newspapers are attributing to him, the object of his coming to this country, the means of carrying out his views, and the proofs he gave us of his violent temper, render him unworthy of the glorious title of martyr.

Mr. Stephens and his companion, Mr. Watkins, came to this city in the early part of the year, to bring us the light of Protestant civilization, which we "Romanists," as they call us, are not willing to receive. We have never had any sympathies for such an enlightenment; and in past years, when our Government was what it should always have been, exclusively Catholic, we had never considered the hostile or bearing the most horrible blasphemies against our holy faith and our dearly beloved mother, the Blessed Virgin Mary, as we have suffered from the hands of such lurches and pirates. I am speaking of. Our present Government, however, wants us to be anything but Catholic, and has opened a wide field that the sectarian ministers may come and teach their errors to our people, whilst our Jesuits and priests are calumniated, persecuted, imprisoned and banished out of the land.

I pass over the delusion of Mr. Stephens—that is, to teach error, as is that of all his fellow-ministers; neither will I complain of the object of his coming to this country, for although I could never persuade myself that these apostles of error are men of good faith, I will suppose for a moment that Mr. Stephens was a sincere man, and heartily desired to do us some good. I will only call your attention to the manner of his carrying out his work, that you may be able to judge for yourself of the prudence and gentlemanly behavior of this sort of teachers.

Mr. Stephens went to Abasuleco, a town about seventy miles to the southwest of this city, and established himself there; probably because he thought he should have a perfect success, Abasuleco being one of the places wherein the last impious revolution against the Church remained longest and received means and assistance to subdue. There he used to send his pamphlets to the neighboring towns, and look for disciples who certainly did not appear. He also preached publicly, and grievously offended his hearers by the frequent reproach of their ignorance, and uttered sentiments, they say, against the Blessed Virgin Mary, mother of God.

But he was not satisfied with all I have said; he desired to have a church of his own without building it, and accordingly he asked the local authority for a little Catholic chapel which they call the hospital, and as the request was granted, as they say, the Indians became alarmed and showed their displeasure. Mr. Stephens went on with his protestation, and as the Indians began to cry against the Protestant minister, or heretic, as they called him. Things continued so until the morning of the 23d inst., when the Indians could suffer no more; they made a pronunhunciamento, and went to Mr. Stephens, crying and muessing him, with the intention, as it seems, of making a prisoner of him in order to bring the Protestant padre, full of apostolical zeal, and fanatical defend, to the tribunal of sus communistico non loctum est." It is true that a person may go to early Mass and afterwards sing in a Protestant church without any one saying anything to disturb their own faith, whereas they do continually employ Protestants and Jews. They seem to me to look hardly upon and to censure attacks of their own faith who accept and fulfill engagements outside of the Church. But the question is, can an artist be expected to refuse $50 or $75 monthly for his professional services as a singer in any church whatsoever, as long as he or she knows that no part of the money for his or her salary is to be obtained in a Catholic church? A very talented German lady friend of mine said to me at a late concert: "I have sung twice for my own Church, but each time seasonet" (or nothing).

I know the ready answer that will be given to these assertions: "The Church is too poor, and cannot afford it." It is not a true answer. Here lately Brother Justin, with admirable energy, raised, in eight days, the sum of $3,000 for his new college, and has been the first to engage artists at their own prices to sing in a Protestant public concert for the same object. The result justified his expectations, and an immense audience got a dollar's worth of music and a thing certainly rare in an entertainment for a Catholic purpose. There are scores of very rich Catholics who could support choirs in this city, in which the grandest music ever written, sacred and profane, could be magnificently sung. To hear Haydn and Mozart murdered by half-a-dozen amateurs is not pleasant, nor is it creditable to so rich a Catholic city as this is. The music is as bad as represented. Many of the best singers should defend their choirs, all that I can reply is, go to the Protestant churches and hear the Choir at Trinity Church, or at Howard Presbyterian, or at Grace Church, or any of the best Protestant churches, and then listen to the music that is performed in them.

I have put my ideas hastily into a rude form, and hastily laid myself open to a good deal of censure. If I have implied that I think the Church is right in the mercy it is not done in a spirit of disrespect. The remedy is easy to apply, and will be followed by the most fervent Catholics who up a monthly subscription of say $250 (it is hardly any thing) for all the artists, collected by one artiste of the Cathedral to engage first class artists; and then there will be at least one choir, one where it is good music, and the reproach will be taken away that Catholics always want to have the money, and are perpetually pleading a poverty that does not exist. My opinion, dear Editor, is always your dear friend. I remain, yours obediently,

CANTOR.

Sacred Heart College Bazaar.

The Grand Bazaar in aid of the Sacred Heart College has been eminently successful, both from a social and a pecuniary point of view, and it is no exaggeration to say that every evening during its progress the fair presented all the features of a most enjoyable social reunion. So far as pecuniary results are concerned, we are informed that nearly upwards of ten thousand dollars were realised, which we make upon the best authority, will be a sufficient assistance that they were all that could be expected in the present financial state of the college. The Concert, which took place last Monday evening, was similarly successful, and was pronounced such as is not often enjoyed in San Francisco. The programme was of a very attractive one, was splendidly carried out, so that when the immense audience left Union Hall each and every individual was highly pleased with the evening's entertainment.

Below we give the winning numbers at different tables:

St. Patrick's Table—Brussels rocker, raised to Upstairs, J. H. McDermott; Marble clock, Alexander Grant; French bedstead, $20; silver cake basket, $5; Gough; 1000 envelopes, $10; silver cake basket, $5; Mrs. Dr. Bell; Bible, $5; Mrs. Dr. Hughes's Table—Rocker, $25; Mrs. Dr. Bell; Bible, $5; Mrs. Dr. Hughes; Gentleman's dressing case, $5; Mrs. Dr. Hughes.

French Table—Ottoman, $15; Mrs. Dr. Hughes; embroidered sofa cushion, $5; Spanish Table—Cross, 7; clock, $5; Stranger, 127.

Table No. 3—Rocker, $25; Mrs. Dr. Hughes; silver cake basket, $5; silver cake receiver, $12; Life of Daniel O'Connell, $5; gold-headed cane, $5; Mrs. Dr. Hughes; Bible, $5; Mrs. Dr. Bell; Bible, $5; Mrs. Dr. Hughes; silver cake receiver, $12; Mrs. Dr. Bell.

Mission Table—Silver gold watch, $5; silver cake basket, $7; silver card receiver, $; silver cheese dish, 72.

St. Mary's Table—Silver cake basket, $7; bracket vase, $5; silver cake basket, $5; silver card receiver, $4; cigarette, $5; watch, $5; John's Table—Silver cake basket, 106.

106; chair, 20; Table—Silver cake, $5; Father Burke, $5; St. Peter's Table—Silver cake, $5; baby chair, $36.

ARRIVAL OF ROCHFORT.—By the steamer Micado, which arrived on Thursday from Kandavau, via Honolulu, comes Henri Rochefort, the notorious Frenchman who has been for so long a time ejected in this city by his fellow-countrymen. We have not had the opportunity to call upon and interview the distinguished foreigner; but his doom is already sealed, and, perhaps, even while we write, some fellow Bohemian is pumping him dry. He has not announced his future movements.—Evening Examiner.

Catholic Music and Catholic Artists.

To the Editor of The Monitor—SIR: It is not without hesitation, or without considerable thought, that I venture to broach a subject which is an unpleasant one to handle, may also create in the difference of opinion, and, above all, lay the writer open to suspicion of attempting to dictate to those who are certainly and avowedly riper in judgment than himself. To plunge at once in medias res, let me state my grievance. There are fourteen or fifteen Catholic churches in San Francisco, and there is not even fairly tolerable music to be heard at any one of them. The best Catholic singers in this city are all engaged at Protestant churches, because they cannot obtain a respectable remuneration for their art in their own Church. I know at present seven of the best singers in this city, five of whom are highly esteemed operatic artists, and all of whom are practical Catholics, who would gladly accept engagements in Catholic churches were they obtainable. I know of no instance where a Jew has long been employed and paid to sing in a Catholic church; and it is a well-known fact that for years the chief singers in the Cathedral were particularly anti-Irish and anti-Catholic in sentiment.

To be still further explicit, it is forbidden in the diocese for Catholics to assist (by singing or otherwise) in heretical worship. I believe my quotation is correct: "Nullus sis communionis non locutum est." It is true that a person may go to early Mass and afterwards sing in a Protestant church without any one saying anything to disturb their own faith, whereas they do continually employ Protestants and Jews. They seem to me to look hardly upon and to censure attacks of their own faith who accept and fulfill engagements outside of the Church. But the question is, can an artist be expected to refuse $50 or $75 monthly for his professional services as a singer in any church whatsoever, as long as he or she knows that no part of the money for his or her salary is to be obtained in a Catholic church? A very talented German lady friend of mine said to me at a late concert: "I have sung twice for my own Church, but each time seasonet" (or nothing).

I know the ready answer that will be given to these assertions: "The Church is too poor, and cannot afford it." It is not a true answer. Here lately Brother Justin, with admirable energy, raised, in eight days, the sum of $3,000 for his new college, and has been the first to engage artists at their own prices to sing in a Protestant public concert for the same object. The result justified his expectations, and an immense audience got a dollar's worth of music and a thing certainly rare in an entertainment for a Catholic purpose. There are scores of very rich Catholics who could support choirs in this city, in which the grandest music ever written, sacred and profane, could be magnificently sung. To hear Haydn and Mozart murdered by half-a-dozen amateurs is not pleasant, nor is it creditable to so rich a Catholic city as this is. The music is as bad as represented. Many of the best singers should defend their choirs, all that I can reply is, go to the Protestant churches and hear the Choir at Trinity Church, or at Howard Presbyterian, or at Grace Church, or any of the best Protestant churches, and then listen to the music that is performed in them.

I have put my ideas hastily into a rude form, and hastily laid myself open to a good deal of censure. If I have implied that I think the Church is right in the mercy it is not done in a spirit of disrespect. The remedy is easy to apply, and will be followed by the most fervent Catholics who up a monthly subscription of say $250 (it is hardly any thing) for all the artists, collected by one artiste of the Cathedral to engage first class artists; and then there will be at least one choir, one where it is good music, and the reproach will be taken away that Catholics always want to have the money, and are perpetually pleading a poverty that does not exist. My opinion, dear Editor, is always your dear friend. I remain, yours obediently,

CANTOR.

Giving Way.

The Dublin correspondent of the New Orleans Morning Star and Messenger has not a high opinion of The Flag of Ireland, lately "warned" by the British authorities. Writing under date April 21st, he says:

The Government, through two or three of their Castle friends here, have "warned" The Flag of Ireland—the penny utter rag of the Irishmen—for, as they allege, two seditious and treasonable articles. This is in accordance with the notorious Coercion Act, and in accordance with the same atrocious Act if they chose to obtain any future article in the paper treasonable or seditious, they may send the police to seize everything in the office, and pass no apology to any one. Such is British law in Ireland. As to the two "treasonable and seditious" paragraphs in question, one of them consists mainly of extracts from Froude showing how the Irish fought in '98, and the only thing in it that can bear a treasonable construction is the description of the Queen as "the foreign lady who rules this country against the will of its inhabitants." That is, perhaps, seditious, but it is more stupid and clumsy than seditious. The other paragraph demanded that the Home Rule agitation should be brought to a close and hence the useless sacrifice of men in the face of the enemy. Whether this is seditious or treasonable I don't know; but perhaps it is a fair inference that a conspiracy or force is suggested by the words "other means." And that is the only thing now in the power of the Irish Parliamentary party of the United States would laugh at instead of threatening to close the agitation and publish such a thing. Apart from the unconstitutional act of the executive in thus assuming to be the judge of treason in Ireland except, perhaps, the maker of the Queen's speech, and the Lord Commons to-night by Mr. H. O. Lewis, the Home Rule M. P. for Carlow.

The correspondent of the Irish Ecclesiastical Record on the same subject four days later, tells how The Flag was lowered without any further proof. He says:

The Flag of Ireland, on this day's num ber, has come out with the "warning" it received from the Government some days ago. It is a most extraordinary document, explanation of what it meant by its reference to the adoption of "other means" by the Irish people.

"We left it to the Irish people to determine whether they should continue the present peaceful parliamentary agitation for Home Rule, or have recourse to other means to accomplish the same object—the united expression of the opinion of the people of Ireland by means of a plebiscite in favor of the separation of Ireland from the popular representatives from the English Parliament—the declaration of Ireland against the incapacity of the English Parliament to legislate for our country, or the adoption of some other means of getting more defined basis, such as Repeal of the Union, or any other means that would suit the views of the Irish people in the matter, and that the judge at Saverne has sentenced him to imprisonment for two years in a fortress. This may be only a flash in the pan. Let Bismarck give the word to lay hold of the fleshpot, and France will have no alternative but to stand between her son and danger.—Dublin Weekly News.

THE GREEN AND GOLD.

Who quail at the frown of power, who table of a throne?
There's hope for the daring ever, and strength for the willing hand!
There's light in our grand old banner, and glory in the green!
Then down with the might of tyrants and up with the green and gold!

The scorn of the stronger nations—you're long in the dust you're down!
You've bent in the lash with patience, and looked through your tears in blood;
You whine to the Lord of Armies, who smiles on the brave and bold,
But strike, and His strength will aid you to raise up the green and gold!

Work, work, for the days are dawning—it's now may be never!
Up from the night to right!
And the scattered bands are folded, how swiftly the wrath of the victor never was seized by the dint of gold—
The ceaseless and strong endeavor must raise up the green and gold.

Up, up, for our grand old Island! On, on, with the world advancer!
Bear high in the van her fetters—she'll leap from her death-like trance!
Bring forth the banner long dreary, and hope is the hero's sole gold—
Then down with the might of tyrants, and up with the green and gold!

O men of your hearts are earnest and true as your hands are strong,
Bring out the bard around you the knell of the reign of wrong.
Brave hearts and the same-tongued cannons, on their list the knell be tolled—
Down, down with the might of tyrants, and up with the green and gold!

THOS. DAVIS.

Letter of His Holiness Pope Pius IX.

The following is the formal answer of his Holiness to the address of the girls of England, Scotland and Ireland:

To the esteemed and well beloved daughters in Christ, Mary Elizabeth Herbert, Cecil Lothian Elizabeth Londonderry, and to the whole girls of England, Scotland and Ireland.

PIUS P. P. IX.

Beloved daughters in Christ—Health and Apostolic Benediction. You have considered our tribulation, and your indignation has risen against those who impiously attack the Church of God. You have sorrowed also with us in our trials, and have sought to comfort us by showing your love and your faith, and by the fruits of your generosity. Your letter has been presented to us. The expression of love and fidelity is especially dear to us, for it shows that the fierce storm of difficulty, neither difference of social position, nor the wickedness of the times, neither the long continuance and severity of the war which is waged against the Church can hinder you from being the Pope, will be despoiled in the search in connection with the Diocesan Library.

The Paulist mission at the church of the Holy Trinity, on Second avenue, between Second and Third streets, New York, Rev. Father Deed, pastor, was a grand success. No less than 3,000 persons received holy communion. The mission was conducted by Fathers Isaac Hecker, Deyer, Baldwin, Brennan and Finlay.

Many Catholic papers approve the suggestion that a monument to Archbishop Hughes ought to be erected in Central Park, New York. No name is more endearing among Catholic Americans than his, and his American services deserve such a memorial. He rendered greater service to his own country and to civilization than any other prelate who has ever resided in the country and to civilization than any other prelate who has ever resided in the country and to civilization than any other prelate who has ever resided in the

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

IRELAND.

The Secrets of the Orange Society.

A man named Charles Dogherty was charged at the Magherafelt Petty Sessions (county Londonderry), with some thirty others, with taking part in an unlawful and riotous assembly on St. Patrick's Day. One of the witnesses against him named John Martin was cross-examined as follows by Mr. McErlean, solicitor for the defendants, Mr. Heid, Sessional Crown Prosecutor, appearing for the prosecution: How was the defendant dressed? He had what we call a sash. Mr. McErlean—What do you mean by "sash?" Witness—We Orangemen. Mr. McErlean—Then I am to take you to be an Orangeman? Witness—Yes, and a good one, too. In our lodges it was decided not to interfere with the Roman Catholic procession on the 17th. The resolutions were put into writing. There were fourteen or fifteen in the lodge when this was agreed to. Tell me, now that I have gone so far, do you get in by giving this? Mr. McErlean here gave three raps on the desk]. Witness gave no answer. Now, upon your oath, is not this the password—"Ark and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you?" No answer. The question was repeated, and the witness swore that he would not tell, as it belonged to the secrets of the society. Mr. Reid said he was not bound to answer such questions. Mr. McErlean thought the proceedings of Mr. Reid were unprecedented. Mr. Reid said that he only objected to the witness being cross-examined, as he did not see how it touched the credibility of the witness. Mr. McErlean read from a law authority, showing that he might cross-examine the witness on any subject, even remote from the case. The defendant persisted in refusing to answer the question.—Daily Herald.

Home Rule Criticised.

Mr. F. J. Smyth's letter to the Marchioness of Queensbury on the Home Rule programme has been published. He objects that the scheme adopted at the Conference is not a restoration of the rights enjoyed by the country before the Union; that it will not give Ireland legislative independence and the rank of an independent State, and declares that it will not satisfy the national aspirations, or be a settlement of the old standing feud between the two countries. The latter is really the only question worth the trouble of debating at this stage of the movement, and on this vital point Mr. Smyth was against even the deliberate and unanimous decision of a conference which went as near as the law allows to being an assembly representing the whole of the national party in Ireland. Mr. Smyth, M. P., has written an answer to Mr. Smyth's objections, in which he harangues the point pm by Mr. Butt to the Conference that Federalism is likely to be obtained without a revolution, and that Repeal is not. The Nation also dissents from Mr. Smyth's view.

The Press Warning.

The Nation has united its voice to those of the other Liberal organs in Ireland in censuring the warning addressed by the Lords Justices to the Slog of Ireland. There has been much anxiety to know what was the nature of the articles at which their lordships took offense, and at last the Nation has obtained possession of the law, our contemporary has given a sufficient outline of them to satisfy public curiosity on that subject. One of the paragraphs quoted with great satisfaction a few words from Froude bearing testimony to the bravery with which the Wexford "rebels" fought in 1780, and was absolutely harmless, save in one clause, in which, after a reference to the Irish soldiers in the British service, the Queen is described as "the foreign lady who holds their country against their wishes."

ENGLAND.

Colliers and Cake.

The following comes from the neighborhood of Leeds:

"Bill, what's that stuff I'" said one pitman to another, pointing to a bride cake in a confectioner's window. "Don't know what is a grand cake o' some kind, covered wi' sugar and things." "Hast iver tasted it?" "No, lad." "What is there inside on 'em?' "O, there's currans and raisons, and th' like." "Would'st loike to have a taste?" "Shouldna' moind, lad." "Come toth' shop, then." The two pitmen go in, and issue the following conversation: First Pitman—Want some o' that cake? (to the waiter. Confectioner—Yes, sir. (Brings out buns and cakes.) Bill—Nos, not them; shap wants yon big un wi' sugar and things on it. Confectioner—Eh? Why, that's a bride cake. First Collier—Ole reight, bring it out. Do you make a pound on it? Confectioner (endeavoring to look serious)—No, we do not cut such a cake as that. First Pitman to Bill (pensively)—They don't cut it. Bill—So I' chap says. Ax him i' prolee o' t' lot. First Pitman (to confectioner)—What's price o' t' cake? Confectioner (smiling)—Two guineas. First Pitman—Its reight; I'll take it. Confectioner (more serious)—Very well, sir; and where shall we send it to? First Pitman—Two pond ten shillings there's the money, Confectioner—And what we send it for? Bill—Nowhere; we'll tak it wi' us; we're only gein' to "Feathers" next door to have a pint o' yale. They took the cake next door and put it over their "pals." And why should they not, if they could digest it?

FRANCE.

Bismarck Conspiracy.

The patronage and protection which Prince Bismarck has extended to the Kingdom of Italy appears to have inspired the statesmen of the latter country with the hope of being able to recover Savoy and Nice from France. An agitation with this object has been already set on foot, and an extraordinary sensation seems to have been caused by a speech, evidently deliberate, made at Nice by M. Pacon, the member for the Department of the Maritime Alps. M. Pacon said—"In presence of these days of Italian conspiracy my heart beats with joy, and I feel all my old Italian aspirations and sentiments revive. I am confident that before long beautiful Nice, this lovely Ligurian, the victim of Italian Independence, will be restored to her true country. To that end I am prepared to sacrifice all my interests and those of my beloved family. If when the desired day comes, I should not be here, my electrified ashes will, I am sure, rise in rejoice in the general fete." This language bears an ominous resemblance to the utterances which preceded the offensive invasion of the Austrian dominions in Italy and the possession of the Holy See. —Cork Examiner.

The Communne Active.

Letters from Paris assure us that the Commune is not dead, nor even sleeping. Stealthily but steadily its awful work is going on, of preparation of another carnival of lawlessness, blood and crime. Secret steps towards this and are the same which were before taken. Secret societies are being formed among the workmen, the poor, the ignorant and the turbulent, in every arrondissement of the cities and wherever throughout the country enough of the bad elements of society, or of the miserable, may be aggregated together to form organizations. These are controlled by District and Central Committees, to whom is rendered implicit obedience. Members who have employment are taxed for the support of those who have none and for the accumulation of a fund to be used when the outbreak, which is deemed inevitable, shall occur. Everywhere the leaders of the Internationals are jubilant, and avow that after the September, which they expect soon to come to an end, there will be another Commune.

ITALY.

Protestant Controversialists in Rome.

After the departure of Monsignor Capel, the Protestant agents in Rome got up some meetings and lectures with a view of answering the arguments of the Catholic preacher. Gavazzi was employed to deliver a course of sermons and to take part in the Biblical conferences, and used a bitterness and coarseness of language in his harangues of which offended many of the Protestants. The termed Pius IX. the reptile of the Vatican. The managers of the Scotch Presbyterian Church soon found that the efforts were much annoyed by this offensive style of controversy, and the Elders of the Diritto explaining that the committee, when granting the use of their church to the Italian Bible Society, stipulated that no violent language should be employed against any individual.

SWITZERLAND.

The Revision of the Swiss Constitution.

The vote which took place on Sunday last, on the proposed revision of the Swiss Federal Constitution, has put an end to all hope of the persecution being confined to the Protestant and Liberal Cantons. The popular vote was 335,000 for and 200,000 against the Constitutional change. And in Catholic Lucerne the vote was divided. By this act the central power will be so enormously strengthened that the Cantons automatically so curtailed, that the imposition upon the Catholic Cantons of all the measures destructive of the Church's existence, which the authorities at Berne and Geneva have already applied where they were unhampered masters, will be rendered possible. Even the Journal des Debats admits that the religious or "confessional" article of the new Constitution are inconsistent with a full idea of religious liberty. The Jesuits are excluded from the whole of Switzerland —this, however, was the case already—all other societies supposed to be "affiliated" to them—we need not say there are none—are equally banished; no new convents of any order may be erected, and existing communities are condemned to extinction through a prohibition to receive novices. But this is nothing to what follows; the Church is forbidden to inflict any, even spiritual, censures, and the Bishops may not exclude from their communion one guilty of heresy, schism, or of having revolted priest from his ecclesiastical functions.

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The Bishop of Mantua has excommunicated the priest Giovanni Leonardi, who was recently elected, by a handful of socialists, parish priest of St. Giovanni del Dosso, without leave of his bishop. Monsignor Ineloche in this excommunication priests Padrini, Colvalti and Benelli, who aided the man Leonardi in his act of rebellion against his legitimate superior.

His Holiness has addressed a letter to the Bishop of Perigueux approving his pastoral letter, the publication of which led to the suppression of the Univers. The Pope says, "Far from your letter containing anything which could offend us, we find ourselves obliged to applaud yourself, and the manner in which you introduced our encyclical letter into your diocese."

There was a pilgrimage, not long since, to the shrine of St. Philomena at Mugnano, Naples. The church of this glorious virgin and martyr is now completely restored, and her shrine, thanks to the generosity of Ossuna Duke, is now one of the finest in Italy. It is placed beneath a kind of triumphal arch made of yellow marble. The relics are contained in a superb golden case, elaborately embellished with precious stones.

Large numbers of interesting curiosities from Abbadee were brought home by the soldiers. Among them is a miniature, in pure gold, of the Sacred Heart, with the image of the Blessed Virgin irradiated with four seven swords of sorrow, and the words "Maria" and "Roma" in distinct characters. The modeling of these ornaments is excellent, but the workmanship as rude as can well be imagined. Some Catholic missionary—probably murdered—must have left behind a reliquary, from which these ornaments were undoubtedly taken.

The Pope conferred, on the 12th April, the young Prince Maximilian Tour and Taxis and the Princesses Elizabeth and Louise, daughters of the Princess Helene, of the above title, and of the late Prince of Austria. The godfather of the first was the Emperor Francis Joseph, represented by the Count de Paar, Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to the Holy See; while the godmothers of the young ladies were the ex-Queen of Naples and the Countess de Trani, represented by the Princess Minister, née Lucchesi Pali.

The Paris correspondent of the London Guardian, alluding to the good attendance at the various services of Holy Week, says that on the evening of Good Friday the congregation present at the services in Notre Dame, where the Père Monsabré, of the Society of Jesus, afterwards preached, reached the almost incredible number of 9,000. On Easter Sunday morning at the Communion des Hommes took place, the Cardinal Archbishop officiating from half-past seven to half-past nine, when the communion of all ranks are stated to have approached the Sacred Table.

The following beautiful passage, in which the Pope called down the blessing of the Most Holy Trinity on those who were humbly kneeling round his throne, on a recent reception we give below verbatim: "May God the Father, Eternal and Almighty, bless you with the power that can make you valiant soldiers of the faith; may He watch over you, and strong to break the pride of His enemies. God the Son, Eternal and All-wise, bless you with the wisdom of meekness, that you may subdue the temper and arms to the battle against error and false science. May the Holy Ghost, Eternal and All-good, bless you with light and with love to the conversion of sinners, and to the chasing away of interior darkness."

In order to illustrate the benefits derived from the labors of the Catholic missionaries among the Indians, we cite the following extract from the Missionary Record, which we glean from the Orphan Asylum school at Fort Colville, now under the charge of the Catholic Sisters, is reported to be in a very prosperous condition. Quite a number of Indian pupils are in attendance, and are making rapid proficiency in the branches pursued. The school has been in progress about six months, and the pupils can now spell in words of two or three syllables, and read fluently in the first and second readers. They can also converse tolerably well in English, and many of them can write a legible hand. When the school commenced not one of these pupils could speak a word of our language. The writer states that he recently attended an exhibition given by the school, and expressed his surprise at the marked proficiency manifested by the pupils."

The large number of resident Catholics will rejoice to hear of the establishment of the "Hongkong Catholic Club," says the Hongkong Times of February 12. As its title indicates, the union is confined to Catholics—without, however, any restriction of nationality—and its object is to furnish its members with the means of reading, study, debate, recreation and social intercourse. The inauguration of the Club took place on Monday evening under happy auspices and with large attendance—among the visitors being the Right Rev. Lord Bishop of Honan and Very Rev. Father Bourghigni, Pro-Vicar Apostolic of Hongkong). The Chair was occupied by the President of the Union, who congratulated the members upon having secured such central, suitable and comfortable quarters for the purpose of the Catholic Union.

We learn from the St. Paul (Minn.) paper that a general meeting of the Catholic Union of Minnesota was held in St. Paul, April 14, at which the committee on the "Liberty of Conscience" question reported the passage of the bill by the Legislature. Father Ireland stated that he had visited the State Reform School under the new regulations, and found some thirty Catholic children who had heretofore been deprived of their religion. A room was set apart into which he was permitted to take these children, instruct them and hear their confessions. He stated also that arrangements were being made for the regular celebration of the Mass at the School for the benefit of the Catholic inmates. After reporting a thousand dollars subscribed for the Catholic Industrial School of Minnesota, the committee discussed at length the importance of procuring and publishing the Catholic history and statistics of the State, for which work committees were appointed.

PROPHECIES.—F. S. A." writes to the London Weekly Register, in connection with the letter of the Bishop of Orleans regarding prophecies, allow me to say that I read lately in a Catholic magazine, of about thirty years ago, a letter from a French bishop to another bishop, saying that one of his priests had owned to being the fabricator of the so-called prophecy of Orval. I think it was the Edinburgh Catholic Magazine of 1838 or thereabouts."

Professor Phillips died recently from injuries received through falling down a flight of stairs at All Souls College, Oxford.

Introduction of Catholicity into Nova Scotia.

The Maritime Catholic of Halifax, N. S., republishes the following sketch from pamphlets that appeared twenty-six years ago, and which were written by the late Archbishop Walsh:

The introduction of Catholicity into Nova Scotia was coeval with the occupation of the colony by the French in 1604. The materials at our disposal for giving a satisfactory account of the progress of our early missions are necessarily scanty, the documents preserved in the archives of Rome having been destroyed in those frequent conflagrations between France and England, of which Nova Scotia was the theatre.

Father Baudre, according to Haliburton, was the first missionary that landed on the shores of Nova Scotia. This clergyman sailed in one of the ships commanded by De Monts, from Havre de Grace, and landed at Liverpool, N. S., on the 16th May, 1604. A desire to examine the productions of the country, rather than to discharge any missionary duty, impelled Father Baudre to leave his home. Shortly after the settlement of Fort Royal, or Annapolis, under Poutrincourt, two missionaries, Fathers Jessé and Masle, whose express object was the conversion of the Indians, were conveyed to the colony from France, and immediately after their arrival they actively employed themselves in cultivating acquaintance with the natives. The dispersion of Membertou, the Indian chief, must have greatly facilitated the labors of the missionaries among the other savages of the tribe, and it is quite probable that there was but few Indian settlements within reach of the priests that did not soon confess the Catholic faith. Owing to some disagreement between Poutrincourt and Champlain, the missionaries were compelled to leave the colony for Canada. Accompanied by two priests who came in the same vessel, they took them away. Fathers Heart and Masse proceeded to the Huron nation, and for twenty-five years, through two successive generations, they labored with unwearied assiduity, and they had found his efforts crowned with success, when they were both murdered by the Iroquois. Father Ireland stated that he had visited the State Reform School under the new regulations, and found some thirty Catholic children who had heretofore been deprived of their religion. A room was set apart into which he was permitted to take these children, instruct them and hear their confessions. He stated also that arrangements were being made for the regular celebration of the Mass at the School for the benefit of the Catholic inmates. After reporting a thousand dollars subscribed for the Catholic Industrial School of Minnesota, the committee discussed at length the importance of procuring and publishing the Catholic history and statistics of the State, for which work committees were appointed.

The Pope has nominated Lord Granard a Knight of the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Gregory the Great.

The Pope's Allocutions.

The Pope was compelled, by the attacks made upon his published speeches some time since by the Italian Government, to make arrangements for true and perfect reports being made of them. The Journals, which are the avowed enemies of the Papacy, published anything they chose as an allocution, and then made use of it for their own purposes. This little game has been stopped; for, although his Holiness very frequently—indeed, more frequently than otherwise—speaks without written preparation, he deemed it necessary to have an accurate report made, for his own perusal, of every allocution he might be to be published with such corrections of the text as set the stenographer right afterwards. For this purpose the Holy Father appointed Rev. Father Francesco reporter, and he receives notice of every occasion on which he is required at the Vatican for his duty. He proceeds there and takes down accurately the speech of Pio Nono as a stenographer, and returning to his convent, writes out his notes carefully. After which they are sent to the Vatican, where they are left for the inspection of His Holiness. His Holiness then corrects them, and they are returned to Rev. Father Francesco for publication, in the middle of the duties of his Holiness this takes some time, and some of them, which he has not leisure to correct, are left in the hands of Father Francesco. These are not for present publication, and constitute the valuable store of data for some of the unedited allocutions of his Holiness. There will be much more than any of us now have to be learned from that publication when it shall be given to an expectant world.—Baltimore Mirror.

At the Nanagh Land Session, April 16th, held before Judge Lynch, Q. C., two cases were tried. In one, John Ryan, of Ballyea, had been ejected from a small farm situated from his rented, Mr. R. Read, £167, for disturbance and improvements. The Chairman allowed the claimant £87, but a further sum of £10 was added by the Government reduced this to £92 8s. In another case, a mud and wood man named Toher claimed £57 for eviction from a farm on Lord Rosse's estate. It appeared that Toher held on the farm about three years ago. The Chairman dismissed the case, but recommended Lord Rosse to give Mrs. Toher ten guineas, to enable her to pay her husband.

Joselyn Gray Johnson, of Fiskville, Abbocy, has been appointed to the commission of the peace for the county of Meath.

APPLETON'S AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA

COMPLETE LIBRARY IN THREE

IT IS THE KNOWLEDGE OF THE CENTURY, brought down to the present time. In fact it stands on the shelves ready to answer briefly and clearly every question that may arise. It is also a work that every one almost every possible subject to save our children from the necessity of searching through the whole range of literature in order to find out something in the family circle an instructive work of reference is indispensable. Each subject is treated in brief paragraphs the result of other men's labors, and is complete in itself.

The First Volume of the Revised Edition of this work leaves us very little to say. It is a wonderful amount of painstaking industry, fidelity and research. The articles on Agriculture, Astronomy, Art, Biography, Chemistry, Commerce, Engineering, Geography, Geology, Literature, Mechanics, Medicine, Music, Natural History, Philosophy, Physics, Politics, Theology, and the like, are all of the most exhaustive character. For further particulars apply to

REV. A. CAHILL, S. J., President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

MARYSVILLE.....CALIFORNIA

THIS INSTITUTION IS INCORPORATED according to the laws of the State of California, to confer academical honors. Its course of studies will be found complete in every thorough education.

TERMS PER HALF SESSION,

(Payable in advance.)

Board, Tuition, and Washing.....$125 00
Music, with use of instrument.....15 00
Drawing and Painting.....15 00

No charge for the French, Spanish and German languages, nor for Plain Sewing and Fancy Needlework.

Payments are required to be made half a session in advance. Pupils can enter at any time.

Vocal and instrumental music, drawing and modern languages, extra charges. The French accent is taught gratuitously. Fancy embroidery requires only an additional charge for materials.

For further information address the secretary.

Rev. FATHER ANTHONY, or
Very Rev. P. HENNEBERRY, Superior.

NOTRE DAME ACADEMY,

MISSION DOLORES, SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS ACADEMY IS A BRANCH OF THE Notre Dame College at San Jose, under the care of Instruction, which embraces the Primary as well as the Elementary and higher departments of education, comprises all the branches, both useful and ornamental, required in the best Academies for young ladies.

The first term of the Eighth Annual Session will commence August 8, 1873.

For further particulars apply to the Superior at the formation of classes.

BOARDING PUPILS.

Per quarter (payable in advance):

Board, tuition, washing, with use of bedding.....$75 00
Music, with use of instrument, per month.....1 50
Vocal Music.....2 50
Drawing and Painting.....2 50
Vocation spent at the Academy.....25 00

DAY PUPILS.

Per quarter (payable in advance):

Select Day Schools—Rhetoric, first and second Grammar Classes.....$15 00
Third and fourth Grammar Classes.....12 00
Preparatory and Primary.....10 00
Parental Schools, per month, throughout the year.....1 00
Music, per month, with use of instrument.....2 00
Plain and Ornamental needlework.....1 00

For further particulars apply to the Superioress.

1938 SISTER OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THE SEVENTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the first Monday of August.

The object of the Institution is to give a good English, Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical Education, at the lowest possible cost, a want long felt in this country and thereby bring the advantages within the reach of all.

TERMS.

Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....$15 00
Entire Fee, to be paid half-yearly, per session, of about ten months.....150 00

Music, French and German form extra charges. Those who spend vacation at the College will be charged $60.

Payments are to be made semi-annually in advance. Parents will pay for clothing, medicines, and any particularities, etc.

Money will not be advanced by the College; for the convenience of students a sufficient sum must be deposited.

For further particulars apply to 1978 REV. J. J. ULKERF, O. S. F.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

DEGREES CONFERRED

Rev. JAMES MACGILL, C. M.
President.

EDUCATIONAL.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a Thorough Education, Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the especial benefit of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible. While proper care is bestowed upon the moral training of pupils, the Faculty pay particular attention to the literary and scientific progress of the students.

The Academic year is divided into two sessions of five months each, commencing on the first Monday in August and the first Monday in February.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually, in advance.)

Matriculating Fee, to be paid but once.....$10
Board, Lodging, Tuition, Washing, and Medical Attendance and Medicine, Baths, Use of Library, per month.....$30 00
Modern Languages, Drawing and Music form extra charges. For Clothing, Books, Pocket-Money and the like, no advance made by the Institution.

For further particulars, address the 1st REV. A. CAHILL, S. J., President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

MARYSVILLE.....CALIFORNIA

THIS INSTITUTION IS INCORPORATED according to the laws of the State of California, to confer academical honors. Its course of studies will be found complete in every thorough education.

TERMS PER HALF SESSION,

(Payable in advance.)

Board, Tuition, and Washing.....$125 00
Music, with use of instrument.....15 00
Drawing and Painting.....15 00

No charge for the French, Spanish and German languages, nor for Plain Sewing and Fancy Needlework.

Payments are required to be made half a session in advance. Pupils can enter at any time.

Vocal and instrumental music, drawing and modern languages, extra charges. The French accent is taught gratuitously. Fancy embroidery requires only an additional charge for materials.

For further information address the secretary.

Rev. FATHER ANTHONY, or
Very Rev. P. HENNEBERRY, Superior.

NOTRE DAME ACADEMY,

MISSION DOLORES, SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS ACADEMY IS A BRANCH OF THE Notre Dame College at San Jose, under the care of Instruction, which embraces the Primary as well as the Elementary and higher departments of education, comprises all the branches, both useful and ornamental, required in the best Academies for young ladies.

The first term of the Eighth Annual Session will commence August 8, 1873.

For further particulars apply to the Superioress at the formation of classes.

BOARDING PUPILS.

Per quarter (payable in advance):

Board, tuition, washing, with use of bedding.....$75 00
Music, with use of instrument, per month.....1 50
Vocal Music.....2 50
Drawing and Painting.....2 50
Vocation spent at the Academy.....25 00

DAY PUPILS.

Per quarter (payable in advance):

Select Day Schools—Rhetoric, first and second Grammar Classes.....$15 00
Third and fourth Grammar Classes.....12 00
Preparatory and Primary.....10 00
Parental Schools, per month, throughout the year.....1 00
Music, per month, with use of instrument.....2 00
Plain and Ornamental needlework.....1 00

For further particulars apply to the Superioress.

1938 SISTER OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

CONVENT OF THE IMMACULATE HEART OF MARY

FOR THE

EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES

GILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS:

Board, tuition, washing and mending, per annum.....$300
Entire fee, to be paid but once.....10
Tuition on piano, per annum.....60
Use of piano.....10

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

TERMS FOR DAY SCHOLARS:

Primary, per month.....$1 00
Elementary and Senior, per month.....2 00
Use of Piano.....2 00

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

Gilroy, May 11, 1872. 1938

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE,

SANTA CLARA.....CALIFORNIA

Under the management of the Fathers of the Society of Jesus.

THE SANTA CLARA COLLEGE WAS FOUNDED in 1851, and in 1852 was incorporated, with privileges to confer degrees. Pupils are received at two degree—Academic and Scientific.

The College buildings are three in number, and are commodious, a swimming pond, reflecting telescope, for scientific purposes.

The College possesses a very complete philosophical apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has also, practical schools of Engineering, Photography and Surveying. A complete gallery is taught in a thoroughly fitted chemical laboratory.

The Scholastic Year, which is divided into two sessions of five months each, commences in August, and closes towards the beginning of June.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually, in advance.)

Matriculating Fee, to be paid but once.....$10
Board, Lodging, Tuition, Washing, and Medical Attendance and Medicine, Baths, Use of Library, per month.....$30 00
Modern Languages, Drawing and Music form extra charges. For Clothing, Books, Pocket-Money and the like, no advance made by the Institution.

For further particulars, apply to

1st REV. A. CAHILL, S. J., President.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

BENICIA.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED BY THE Sisters of St. Dominic, and is situated in the most desirable part of Benicia. The plan of education embraces the various branches of instruction suitable to the wants of refined society. The young ladies, pupils of any religious denomination, are received. The terms will be found moderate. For particulars apply to the Sisters at the regular relapsing of classes.

The Academic year will commence on the first Monday in August, and ends about the middle of June. Pupils are received at any time during the session, except during the last month. Parents who wish their children to enjoy home, the few to remain home from date of entrance.

TERMS:

(Payable in advance.)

Per annum (payable half-yearly in advance).....$250 00
Board and Tuition.....$125 00
Washing.....10 00
Physician's Fee.....10 00

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged $60.

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges. There is no extra charge for the French or Spanish languages, nor for Needlework.

Parents will be notified when their children are absent from the Academy.

Parents are requested to make their visits to the Academy as brief as possible, as the presence of visitors interferes with the regularity of the school.

Parents will be required to withdraw their children from the Academy, unless the terms of entrance are complied with.

For further particulars apply to 1978 SISTER SUPERIOR.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORated according to the laws of the State, is empowered to confer academical honors, with commencement exercises, in the month of June, 1873, and in June, 1874, and annually thereafter.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once.....$15
Board and Tuition, per quarter.....62 50
Washing, per quarter.....12 50

Physicians' fees (unless it may be preferred to have a private physician) per quarter.....2 50

Piano, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges. Use of Piano, $2 per month. French, Spanish or German Languages, per month, $2.

Payments are required to be made half a session in advance. Pupils can enter at any time.

For further particulars apply to
1931 REV. A. CAHILL, S. J., President.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE,

Rohnerville, Humboldt County, Cal.

Conducted by the Priests of the Congregation of the Most Precious Blood.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR:

(Payable half-yearly in advance.)

For board, lodging, tuition, washing and mending.....$225 00
Entrance fee, to be paid only once.....10 00
Graduation fee.....10 00

DAY PUPILS.

Senior class.....$40 00
Junior class.....30 00

Vocal and instrumental music, drawing and modern languages, extra charges. The French accent is taught gratuitously. Fancy embroidery requires only an additional charge for materials.

For further information address the secretary.

Rev. FATHER ANTHONY, or
Very Rev. P. HENNEBERRY, Superior.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN SANTA Rosalia valley, one mile from the sea, in the most delightful and healthy part of the city. The buildings are large and well adapted to the purpose.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches taught in thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS:

(Invariably half-yearly in advance.)

Board, tuition, bed, bedding & washing, per annum.....$200 00
Washing and use of instrument, per month, $1 50 to $2 25
Guitar, per month, $1.
Use of Harp or Violin for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.

The academic year of ten months and a half commences on the first Monday in August, and ends the first Monday in June.

For further particulars apply to
1938 SISTER OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THE SEVENTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the first Monday of August.

The object of the Institution is to give a good English, Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical Education, at the lowest possible cost, a want long felt in this country and thereby bring the advantages within the reach of all.

TERMS.

Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....$15 00
Entire Fee, to be paid half-yearly, per session, of about ten months.....150 00

Music, French and German form extra charges. Those who spend vacation at the College will be charged $60.

Payments are to be made semi-annually in advance. Parents will pay for clothing, medicines, and any particularities, etc.

Money will not be advanced by the College; for the convenience of students a sufficient sum must be deposited.

For further particulars apply to 1978 REV. J. J. ULKERF, O. S. F.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

DEGREES CONFERRED

Rev. JAMES MACGILL, C. M.
President.

EDUCATIONAL.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a Thorough Education, Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the especial benefit of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible. While proper care is bestowed upon the moral training of pupils, the Faculty pay particular attention to the literary and scientific progress of the students.

The Academic year is divided into two sessions of five months each, commencing on the first Monday in August and the first Monday in February.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually, in advance.)

Matriculating Fee, to be paid but once.....$10
Board, Lodging, Tuition, Washing, and Medical Attendance and Medicine, Baths, Use of Library, per month.....$30 00
Modern Languages, Drawing and Music form extra charges. For Clothing, Books, Pocket-Money and the like, no advance made by the Institution.

For further particulars, apply to

1st REV. A. CAHILL, S. J., President.

LATE NEWS ITEMS.

On April 21, at the Windsor election petition, Mr. Gardiner, sitting member, acknowledged having given Holderness money, to make good defect in parish notice.

The death of Dr. Peter Francis Diamond, of Dr. C. Diamond, of Rosharkin, Co. Antrim, is announced. Deceased was distinguished alienist of the Catholic Society.

The late William Murry, of Northampton House, Kinvara, county Galway, left his will £2,000 for a Christian Brothers' or a convent at Kinvara; £1,000 for erection of a chapel in Kinvara; sums also for various pious and charitable purposes connected with the town of that way; to the Catholic University and £200 to Mater Misericordiæ Hospital.

The Dublin Northern Police Office, recently a dairy woman named Smith was charged with having supplied to the Royal Barracks at Arbour Hill, milk which was found to contain one part of water to five parts of milk. She was fined £9 for the offense, and was informed, in addition, to pay the costs, amounting to 3 more. The entire penalty could, therefore, amounted to £15.

It was stated at a meeting of Irish Home Rulers recently held in Grafton Hall, Soho, that a communication had been received from the Home Secretary to the effect that, unless those engaged in the Irish ball contended for at Ardsalla in that ball contended for at Ardsalla in propagating sedition against the constitution, they would be prosecuted. The meeting declined to close the ball promptly.

On Sunday, April 19th, a meeting, convened by his Grace the Archbishop of Dublin was held in Clarendon street Church, Dublin, on Thursday, for the purpose of taking into consideration the best means of arresting the progress of intemperance. It unanimously resolved that each person should pay going into the benches, 6d. and that a collection be made at the door on the dollar bill, adopt the truthful entries, and the Archbishop would be in the middle of the reverse, in the same green disk, express the real contract: "This bank is exchangeable for a sovereign at the counter of Boughmore, in Queen's county, Republic of the Donaghmore United Confederacy."

Dr. Wilson has been lodged against the claim of Mr. F. H. O'Donnell, M. P., for libel, by Mr. Joyce, the unsuccessful candidate for the mastership of Galway, the late Mr. O'Donnell, as an agent, though legally qualified to vote for Galway, was debarred from holding any such office further.

A incident occurred on the 17th April at Alexandra Palace, Muswell Hill. The fall of some scaffolding on which workmen were engaged in completing the building. About forty men were precipitated to the ground, and more than twenty received injuries of more or less importance. One man was killed, and two were admitted at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, but it is hoped that they will recover.

It has been presented to Parliament the persons detained in prison on the late Fenian warrants signed by the Lord Lieutenant under the authority of the Habeas Corpus Suspension Act, 1866, and 29 Victoria, chapter 1, and 30 Victoria, chapter 9, and 31 Victoria, chapter 1, and 32 Victoria, chapter 1, and 33 Victoria, chapter 1, and 34 Victoria, chapter 1, and 35 Victoria, chapter 1, and 36 Victoria, chapter 1, and 37 Victoria, chapter 1, and 38 Victoria, chapter 1, and 39 Victoria, chapter 1, and 40 Victoria, chapter 1, and 41 Victoria, chapter 1, and 42 Victoria, chapter 1, and 43 Victoria, chapter 1, and 44 Victoria, chapter 1, and 45 Victoria, chapter 1, and 46 Victoria, chapter 1, and 47 Victoria, chapter 1, and 48 Victoria, chapter 1, and 49 Victoria, chapter 1, and 50 Victoria, chapter 1, and 51 Victoria, chapter 1, and 52 Victoria, chapter 1, and 53 Victoria, chapter 1, and 54 Victoria, chapter 1, and 55 Victoria, chapter 1, and 56 Victoria, chapter 1, and 57 Victoria, chapter 1, and 58 Victoria, chapter 1, and 59 Victoria, chapter 1, and 60 Victoria, chapter 1, and 61 Victoria, chapter 1, and 62 Victoria, chapter 1, and 63 Victoria, chapter 1, and 64 Victoria, chapter 1, and 65 Victoria, chapter 1, and 66 Victoria, chapter 1, and 67 Victoria, chapter 1, and 68 Victoria, chapter 1, and 69 Victoria, chapter 1, and 70 Victoria, chapter 1, and 71 Victoria, chapter 1, and 72 Victoria, chapter 1, and 73 Victoria, chapter 1, and 74 Victoria, chapter 1, and 75 Victoria, chapter 1, and 76 Victoria, chapter 1, and 77 Victoria, chapter 1, and 78 Victoria, chapter 1, and 79 Victoria, chapter 1, and 80 Victoria, chapter 1, and 81 Victoria, chapter 1, and 82 Victoria, chapter 1, and 83 Victoria, chapter 1, and 84 Victoria, chapter 1, and 85 Victoria, chapter 1, and 86 Victoria, chapter 1, and 87 Victoria, chapter 1, and 88 Victoria, chapter 1, and 89 Victoria, chapter 1, and 90 Victoria, chapter 1, and 91 Victoria, chapter 1, and 92 Victoria, chapter 1, and 93 Victoria, chapter 1, and 94 Victoria, chapter 1, and 95 Victoria, chapter 1, and 96 Victoria, chapter 1, and 97 Victoria, chapter 1, and 98 Victoria, chapter 1, and 99 Victoria, chapter 1, and 100 Victoria, chapter 1, and 101 Victoria, chapter 1, and 102 Victoria, chapter 1, and 103 Victoria, chapter 1, and 104 Victoria, chapter 1, and 105 Victoria, chapter 1, and 106 Victoria, chapter 1, and 107 Victoria, chapter 1, and 108 Victoria, chapter 1, and 109 Victoria, chapter 1, and 110 Victoria, chapter 1, and 111 Victoria, chapter 1, and 112 Victoria, chapter 1, and 113 Victoria, chapter 1, and 114 Victoria, chapter 1, and 115 Victoria, chapter 1, and 116 Victoria, chapter 1, and 117 Victoria, chapter 1, and 118 Victoria, chapter 1, and 119 Victoria, chapter 1, and 120 Victoria, chapter 1, and 121 Victoria, chapter 1, and 122 Victoria, chapter 1, and 123 Victoria, chapter 1, and 124 Victoria, chapter 1, and 125 Victoria, chapter 1, and 126 Victoria, chapter 1, and 127 Victoria, chapter 1, and 128 Victoria, chapter 1, and 129

LATE NEWS ITEMS.

Dr. J. R. Minette has been elected doctor of the Nenagh workhouse.

There was a Home Rule meeting at Killinaan on Sunday, the 10th May.

Mr. Justice Lawson fixed the 18th of May for the hearing of the Galway petition, before himself, at Galway.

A branch office of the Ulster Banking Company will shortly be opened in Lisnaskea, county Fermanagh.

His Eminence Cardinal Cullen administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to a large number of young people in Saint Kevin's church, Dublin, on 27th April.

The Corporation of London have decided to present Sir Garnet Wolseley with a sword value one hundred guineas, and the freedom of the city.

At a meeting of the London Corporation it was decided on the occasion of the Czar's visit to present him with an address in a golden casket.

There was a meeting at the Mansion House, Dublin, to consider a proposal for the commemoration of Michael W. Balfe, the Irish musician and composer.

The gardians of the Carrick-on-Suir Union elected at their last meeting two infirmarian nuns to the union hospital as nurses.

At the annual meeting of the Waterford Harbor Commissioners, held April 27, Mr. Nevins, secretary, informed the Board that they had overdrawn their banking account by £6,000.

A special meeting of the Limerick and Clare Farmers' Club is to be held on an early day, to consider the several Land Acts about being submitted to Parliament by the Irish members.

A meeting of the City of Dublin Tenants Defence Association was held April 30, to consider the amendments of the Land Act introduced in a new bill by Sir John Gray, M. P., and other Irish members.

Writs of supersedeas have been personally served on Mr. Thomas McEvoy, Drogheda and Balmoral, Berwick, restraining him from the Commission of the Peace for the counties of Galway and Meath.

At the Limerick Petty Sessions, April 30, two fishermen were convicted for illegally fishing for eels in the Shannon during the close season. They were fined £10 each, the full penalty, which the magistrates intimated could be inflicted in subsequent cases.

On 2d May a meeting of the county Waterford Teachers' Association was held in Waterford for the purpose of advocating the claims of the Irish national teachers to a just remuneration for the services they have rendered to the State and to Williamsy.

The following gentlemen have been appointed to the Commission of the Peace for the county of Cork: John Francis Sugrue, of Cork; John Thomas Reardon, of Ballincurrig House, Douglas.

At Tramore Petty Sessions, April 27, Constable Sweeny reported that cattle disease had broken out in his district. A widow woman, named Walsh, holding a farm, lost four cows during the week. In every case reported the animal has died.

A memorial signed by all the gentry, clergy and respectable inhabitants of Ballinasloe, has been forwarded to the Postmaster-General, praying for the extension of the telegraph wires to that town, and also for better postal communication with the North of Ireland.

The remains of John Robinson, who was killed by the falling roof of the Gas Works, Dublin, were interred April 26th. The deceased had been a district visitor of the Protestant Order of Shoeberds, and his remains were viewed by a number of persons who took place in a sad concourse, including a large number of the members of the guild in the full insignia of their order.

A deplorable accident occurred on Saturmorning, April 25th, at the Wexford-row Terminus of the Kingstown Railway, by which a porter named Bryan was crushed to death. It appears that as the return engine was proceeding out of the station, the deceased became jammed between the platform and the locomotive, and was crushed to death instantaneously.

A correspondence has just taken place between the Commissioners holding the Great Seal of Chancery and Mr. Thomas McEvoy, of Ballinasloe, county Meath, calling on that gentleman for an explanation of certain observations attributed to him in reference to Fenianism and other matters, alleged to have been used during a Sunday meeting at the recent census in the country South.

An awfully sudden death occurred in Longford on April 30th, under the following circumstances: A man named Michael Behan died and was placed into the workhouse hospital. Feeling somewhat relieved he got his discharge, and took lodgings in one of the yards. The landlord's keeper, feeling surprised at the length of his sleep, went in his room and found the man dead in his bed.

The annual meeting of the Irish Permissive Bill Association was held in Dublin on April 28th. Mr. A. M. Sullivan, M. P., presided. The United Kingdom Alliance was represented by Mr. Ferard and Mr. J. H. Raper. The British Association sent Baillie Dick as its delegate, and the Irish Temperance League Mr. John Pyper. Mr. Whittaker, of Scarborough, who has been in Ireland for a month addressing crowded meetings, also took part, with other sad well known local friends.

An attempt was recently made to murder a bailiff, named Henry Coyle, in the shop of a pleasant of the Marquis of Drogheda, at a place called Clonegash, near Monasterevan. It appears that Coyle was sitting in his house when he was fired at through the window. The intended assassin fortunately missed his mark, and at once fled. The Marquis of Drogheda's estate is generally regarded as one of the best managed properties in Ireland, and both landlord and agent enjoy the high reputation of being great peacemen and kind towards the industrious tenant.

An extraordinary story reaches us from Tipperary. It is that on Saturday evening, April 25, a land agent went to the house of a small—and while there as an alternation took place between the agent and the son of the tenant. The—ding a revolver and fired at the young man, but did not strike him. The young man ran away, and took refuge in a house. The—ding then fired in the direction of the house, striking a bystander in the leg as he passed. The agent was subsequently arrested, brought before magistrates, and remanded, bail being refused.

In compliance with a resolution adopted at a meeting of the Down and Connor members of the Catholic Union of Ireland, held under the presidency of the Most Rev. Dr. Dorrian, Lord Bishop of the Diocese, on the 23d April, a meeting of Catholics was held on the Royal Hotel, Belfast, for the purpose of establishing a diocesan branch of the Union. The chair was occupied by Bernard Hughes, a member of the Central Council, and R having been received Thos. Hughes, a member of the Central Council, and R having been received "That a branch of the Catholic Union of Ireland be formed and established in Belfast," the following gentlemen were unanimously elected the lay members of the Council: Dr. Fagan, Arthur Hamill, Bernard Hughes, Edward Hughes, Edward Keegan, Joseph Magill, P. J. Mooney, Dr. McDonnell, Constantine O'Neill, Alexander O'Rorke, Daniel O'Rorke, Edward Kelly, and William Ross.

At the final meeting of the King's county Harriers on Friday, April 24, William Hussey Walsh, Esq., J. P., of Kilduff House, met with an accident of so serious a nature that he died on the 27th. It appears that the horse on which Mr. Walsh was mounted was but an indifferent jumper, and while crossing a stiff country near Edenberry the animal fell while crossing a fence, rolled over the rider, and bruised his body in a frightful manner. Drs. Clarke and Ridley were sent for, but although they were soon on the spot, they could render no assistance.

Mr Garrard applied for a writ of habeas corpus to bring before the Court Patrick Casey, who had been arrested by the constabulary in December, 1871, and who was still detained in custody. Counsel proceeded to read an affidavit made by Martin Casey, of Carrickeephogue, near Moynalty, in the county Meath, the father of the prisoner, who stated that when his son was arrested he was lodged in Naas jail, where he remained till the end of October last, when he was removed to Kilmainham prison. He stated that when his son was arrested he was a strong, healthy young man, but was now in a laughable state. Mr. Justice Barry—How long is he in prison? Mr. Garrard—Since December, 1871. Mr. Justice Barry—Since December, 1871! It occurs to me the arrest may have taken place under an Act which prohibits the granting of a habeas corpus. You can bring the matter before the full Court.

The Census Commissioners have furnished another instalment of the result of the census of Ireland which was laid three years ago. The last issued contains notices the census for the county of Waterford. The population of the county and city stood at 196,187 in 1841, and at 123,310 in 1871, a formidable falling off, but not so large as that in other southern counties. The city of Waterford (including the Liberties) has a population of 29,078 (consistency 1,406), and the borough of Dungarvan 7,700 (constituency 317). The other chief towns are Portlaw, with nearly 5,000 inhabitants, and Tramore and Lismore, with about 2,000 each. Nine males and fourteen females are returned as centenarians. The religious census states that in the county and city of Waterford in 1871, 116,839 Catholics, 5,090 Protestant Episcopalians, 380 Presbyterians, 259 Methodists and 624 of all other denominations. This latter head includes a Jew, 2 Secularists and 3 Christian Israelites. Education in both county and city is on a backward state, nearly half the population above five years being illiterate. In the ten years ending 1861, Waterford lost 36,000 by emigration; in the ten years ending 1871, 19,000.

Youthful Petitioners.

There is a truly remarkable and promising infant living down in the Kilkee direction. He, or she—we are not informed as to the sex, and we give the benefit of the doubt accordingly—pays the Queen £1 a year, is one old, and therefore not likely to have formed any settled views on difficult theological questions, was not expected to interfere with the proceedings of the Protestant Synod now in session at Lower Abbey street. The infant, however, has stepped to the front, in the character of a religious reformer, and has declared to the Protestant Archbishop of Dublin in no measured terms the views which the principle on revision questions was altogether unprecedented, and that laws founded on such anomalous principles could never be respected or obeyed by the Church in Ireland." What a proud and happy woman the fortunate mother must be! How the matrons of Kilkee must envy her the possession and proprietorship of such a prodigy! To be exact, we ought to state, in addition, that the infant does not stand alone in this spirited protest against clerical domination. Thirty other infants have joined the Disestablished Church in that enlightened diocese of Killaloe—the oldest of the lot being a patriarch of thirteen—but gone in with him of the cradle against the anomaly of a two-thirds vote, and a few adults of the same precocity have been likewise drawn into the movement; but the fact to be chiefly dwelt upon is the goodly harvest reaped from the right of private judgment in the case of this grave and reverend infant of Killaloe, who, so far from wasting his time in his nurse's arms, mulling and pulling like Shakspeare's baby, "dressed up" beside Lord James Butler, Mr. Bloodgood and their allies, to "fight the good fight of faith."—Dublin Weekly News.

Means what he Says.

Though disinfectants strong as Proofs of Holy Writ and as numerous as the seeds of sin, are cheap, we presume it proves that the proprietor of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is in earnest, and means what he says when he offers $500 reward for any case of Catarrh which he cannot cure, yet there would be some stupids and fogies who would confine to above statement "Business" it cannot be, because Dr. Hoosegog says catarrh cannot be cured. Now, Dr. Hoosegog is the inventor of a good-natured old fellow who honestly believes and preaches that catarrh is the result of a cold in the head, which, if neglected, settles on the lungs, and if not stopped at the spread of disease through the system. But scientific science has positively demonstrated and proven that Dr. Hoosegog is wrong in supposing the cold to be fat and stationary, and medical science is daily proving that catarrh is a low humor in the blood, and he filled to relief "Sage" is the remedy for catarrh, and it has been promptly upon the numbers of moves, and that medical science is pretty scientific. Consequently, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will cure catarrh. That Dr. sage's Catarrh Remedy will cure catarrh. That Dr. sage's Catarrh Remedy will cure catarrh.

[From the Catskill Recorder, November 21, 1872.]

SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY.

We would call the attention of the advertisement of Sage's Catarrh Remedy in another column. Many people think there never is anything worth noticing in patent medicines, and a large portion of people in this class may be right; but we have frequently witnessed the beneficial effects of Sage's Remedy in chronic cases, where all other remedies had failed, in catarrhal cases, we have found it to possess the desired effect. Catarrh is fearfully prevalent in this section, the proprietor could generally obtain in Catskill some certificates of its merit.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

FRATINGER & NOLL

WILL EXHIBIT RARE NOVELTIES during the coming week in handsome

LINEN SUITS.

NEW STYLES.

Embroidered and Braided in all the new Shades and Designs.

NEW STYLE CLOAKS,

CONSISTING IN.....

Drap d'Ete, English Walking Jackets, Dolman's Talmas, and Polonaise,

Trimmed and Inserted with YAK LACE and PASSEMENTERIE, both Plain and Beaded.

HOUSE WRAPPERS!

A Large Assortment, consisting in

French Calico, Cashmere and Silk

STREET SUITS.

In all New and Desirable SPRING GOODS, made up stylish and handsomely trimmed in two colors or with silk.

SPRING SILKS

Can be found in all Shades and at all Prices.

PASSEMENTERIES!

PASSEMENTERIES!

The Largest and Best Assortment of

BEADED GIMPS,

ORNAMENTS,

BUCKLES,

SLIDES,

FRINGES

AND BUTTONS.

YAK LACE AND INSERTIONS,

Both Plain and Beaded, in large variety.

FRATINGER & NOLL,

Leading Cloak and Suit House of the City,

10 Montgomery Street.

ap11-6m

E. O'REILLY,

Importer of, and Dealer in

Mirrors, Chromos, Engravings

LITHOGRAPHS—Plain and Colored,

PICTURE FRAMES, &c.

CORNER OF MARKET AND FIFTH STREETS, San Francisco.

CORNER OF MARKET AND FIFTH STREETS, San Francisco.

GOODS SOLD ON EASY WEEKLY OR MONTHLY INSTALLMENTS.

Who would have a DULL AND GLOOMY HOME, when it could be changed to a BRIGHT AND PLEASANT CHROMO, Engraving or Lithograph, costing no more than a FEW DOLLARS, at E. O'REILLY'S?

Who would fail to evoke the FONDEST MEMORIES of this world, when a FEW DOLLARS can be bought of E. O'REILLY a beautiful picture representing it, with fidelity, "The Lakes of Killarney," "The Groves of Blarney," "The Banks of Avoca," etc., etc.?

Who would not be constantly reminded of the DEAREST HOME of the HEREAFTER, when for a FEW DOLLARS, E. O'REILLY supplies a fine picture of "The Crucifixion," or "The Sacred Heart," "Madonna," "St. Bridget," "St. Patrick," "St. Cecilia," "St. Joseph," etc., etc., many of which are also published in chromos?

GOODS CAREFULLY PACKED AT LIGHT CHARGE FOR LAND OR SEA.

COUNTRY ORDERS FILLED WITH CARE AND PROMPTITUDE.

RE-FRAMING and RE-GILDING

E. O'REILLY,

Corner Market and Fifth Streets, San Francisco.

IMPORTATION DIRECT

M. SHORT

PIONEER TAILOR,

COMMERCIAL STREET, - - Corner of Leidesdorff.

AN INSPECTION OF THE FINEST GOODS ever introduced into this market, including MELTONS, CAMBRIDGE, CHEVIOTS, NAPIER, OXFORD, WITNEYS, RAGLANS, WESTWILLS, &c., &c., &c.

THIS SPLENDID STOCK

Is respectfully invited. Perfect fit guaranteed.

Remember, my Prices are Strictly Cash.

Please Present Drawer Number.

M. SHORT,

527 Commercial Street,

SAN FRANCISCO.

E. SUPPLE,

838 Market Street,

HAS NOW A FULL AND COMPLETE Assortment of Spring and Summer

DRESS GOODS

Which we offer in the public at very

LOW PRICES.

Consisting, in part, of Black and Fancy

SILKS,

IRISH, POPLINS, SHAWLS,

And a full supply of

BLACK GOODS.

TABLE LINENS AND HOUSEKEEPING

To Hotels and Boarding-houses a Specialty, at importers' rates.

RIBBONS

A Specialty, at importers' rates.

GRAND SERGES, in Black and White, manufactured expressly for the use of the Sisters and Pupils of the Convent.

IRISH TATTINI sold to the trade at a liberal discount.

Orders from the country promptly attended to, at lowest prices.

E. SUPPLE,

838 Market street, opposite Fourth

until 3rd

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

WE HAVE NOW A FULL AND COMPLETE assortment of Spring and Summer

DRESS GOODS

Which we offer the public at very

LOW PRICES,

Consisting, in part, of Black and Fancy

SILKS,

IRISH POPLINS, SHAWLS,

And a full supply of

Fancy Goods.

We invite special attention to our supply of

BLACK GOODS.

Table Linens & Housekeeping Goods

To Hotels and Boarding-houses at importers' prices.

RIBBONS

A Specialty, at importers' rates.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

706 MARKET STREET,

OPPOSITE THIRD.....SAN FRANCISCO.

BACON & COMPANY'S ART PRINTING OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO.

PRINTING

Paper Ruling and Book Binding,

Neatly, Promptly, Cheaply,

PERFORMED BY

Bacon & Company,

Corner Clay and Sansome Sts.

Country Orders will receive equal consideration as those from our city patrons.

CASH TEA STORE.

GEO. T. HANLY & CO.

DEALERS IN

TEAS

COFFEES AND SPICES

928 MARKET STREET,

Between Stockton and Powell.....SAN FRANCISCO.

BOOTS AND SHOES,

AT THE

RED HOUSE,

848 MARKET STREET, (OPPOSITE FOURTH)

REDUCED FULLY FROM 25 TO 75 PER CENT. Now at the RED HOUSE, and for sale at from 25 to 75 per cent. less than usually sold elsewhere.

The most complete assortment of BOOTS AND SHOES ever offered to the public.

Over cases Children's Fancy Shoes, with

Lace Boots, Button Boots, Balmorals, Gaiters, Slippers, Etc., Etc., Etc.

Ladies' Serge Polish Top Boots, Kid and Cloth Top Boots, Kid Button Boots, Kid Balmorals, Kid Opera Slippers, Kid Serge Polish Gaiters, Kid Scalloped Gaiters, Kid Scalloped Balmorals, Kid Scalloped Slippers

THE FRANC-TIREUR.

A Tale of the Franco-Prussian War.

CHAPTER LXXXII.

THE HOSTAGES OF THE COMMUNE.

The shades of evening fell quickly in a prison, and it was no wonder that the grave elderly man who sat in cell No. 21 of La Roquette should at half-past seven of a May afternoon be compelled to put aside his breviary. The fading light rendered it impossible for him to pursue his task further. It was not difficult to see he was an ecclesiastic, and by his air one of dignity. The color and shape of his robe proclaimed the bishop, and the knowledge of recent events in Paris made it easy to guess that here was the illustrious hostage whose life the Commune thought it fair to offer for that of one of its own rascals. The Archbishop sat thoughtful in the gathering twilight. His fine features were overcast with a sad expression, and his usually erect figure was somewhat bowed as if by the weight and gravity of the thoughts that came over him. Through the grating over the cell there floated as almost imperceptible smoke, which, however, did not fail to catch his watchful sense. "Ah," he murmured, "it is as I feared. That is smoke, and he is not of the prison nor from an accident. The very peculiar disposition shown by the crowd as we came hither bodes ill."

In the corridor heavy steps were heard; the key grated in the lock, and the door was flung open. Beside the ordinary warder stood a man in civilian clothes, but armed. Even in the gathering gloom the scintillation of his dark, fierce, nervous eyes might be remarked. Behind him were two Federals in the uniform of the National Guard, and fully armed likewise.

Taking a book from his pocket and affecting to look up a list of names, the leader called in an insolent tone—

"Darboy."

"Present," said the Archbishop mildly, as he rose from his seat.

"I am Dauntesel, Delegate of general safety."

The Archbishop bowed slightly.

"Have you it paid heard of me?" he asked.

"No," was the reply.

Something that seemed like the shadow of wounded vanity passed over the face of the Communist. He turned his back rudely upon the prisoner, with the single word "Follow!" and passed down the corridor. The Archbishop took up the breviary he had laid aside and placed it under his robe. Then putting the biretta upon his head he said to the warder and soldiers near him, "I am ready."

A party of them conducted him all over the stone floor and broad walk which encircles the "rondo." As they got into the open air the Archbishop looked up, with that involuntary glance in seeing the sky which even the briefest detention in prison ensures. But his mood was not that gloomy of the sun fixed across the expanse; lurid flashes lit up their edges here and there. Small black particles fell in more or less dense showers.

"What conflagration is that?" he asked of one of the guards.

"Sacking the aristocrats and priests," brutally replied the man.

"Has the city been set on fire?" mildly continued the interrogatory of the Archbishop.

"Only part of it to day—the rest to-morrow, and to night we cut the throats of the enemies of the people." As he spoke he looked into the face of the Archbishop with a stare in which insolence and ferocity were equally blended.

"And what good do you hope to do yourselves or your cause by that?" returned the prisoner calmly.

"Devil!" he roared. "We want no good. We are sick of that cant about good. We are done with good forever. We want evil—evil!" he shrieked on in an ascending key; "give me evil! give me Satan, if you can!"

The conversation was interrupted by new arrivals, each under a separate party. The first was a tall figure in the sombre of a priest. He was far advanced in life, but his handsome face preserved all the manhood and much of the freshness of youth. As he marched in the rank of his guards his erect figure, taller by nearly a head than most of those around him, scarcely challenged all his more than three days' hardship, and it was in an impressive tone the priest, as he raised him, said, "Welcome, Abbé Bigourdy—we meet, it seems to me, for the last time."

"A bas les prêtres!" was shouted from the outside of the circle which had been enlarged by by the new accession of Federals.

"Silence!" said a sergeant gruffly. "They are to be shot, not scolded." The speaker was an ill-looking fellow enough, but there seemed a air of manliness about him when compared favorably with that of his companions.

Further attention was diverted by new arrivals. The Abbé Allard came. He had during the war, as a member of the International, grossly abused and insulted the sucour the sick and wounded, and had won high consideration by his zeal. There was not the slightest trace of emotion on his pale face as he bent before the Archbishop.

"I suppose you guess our destination at last, Abbé?"

"O Death, Monsignour, I have been waiting for it. But can it be possible that they will have the fury to exalt your Eminence?"

"Do you doubt it? Do you forget my office? It is part of my inheritance."

Yet another priest was added to the ranks of the doomed in the person of Père Ducoudray, Superior of the Saint Geneviève school. He was gravely and kindly received by his prelate, whose bearing was as composed and dignified as if he were holding a reception in the salon of the Archevêché. As a fifth arrived the Archbishop said to him, with a smile, "Ah, Père Clere, you at least cannot be surprised at being brought into the company of death—you terrible Jesuits have done such evil things to these people!"

"Monseigneur, they make death less formidable by making our lives one long calumny."

"Excellent Père Clere, a life of sorrow endured for His sake is a good preparation for the final hour."

The delegate came forward and cried, "Change the guard!"

The ecclesiastics were placed side by side against the wall, and Dauntesel scowled a moment on

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
THE TIME WHEN ENDED JUNE 1.
May 31—Sunday—Trinity Sunday.
June
1—Monday—B. V. Mary, Help of Christians (May 24.)
2—Tuesday—St. Gregory VII., Pope, Confessor. (May 25.)
3—Wednesday—Dedication of Church (May 24.) St. Marcellinus, Peter and Erasmus, Martyrs.
4—Wednesday—St. Philip Neri, Confessor (May 26.)
5—Thursday—Corpus Christi.
6—Friday—Of the Octave.
7—Saturday—St. Norbert, Bishop and Confessor.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....MAY 30, 1874.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We would earnestly and respectfully request our subscribers who are in arrears with this office to remit the amounts of their indebtedness as soon as possible. There is a great deal of money owing to us, as shown by our books, in sums varying from four dollars to one dollar, of which should be paid without delay. While THE MONITOR has been of very many subscribers who are exceedingly prompt in settling their accounts, and never run behind, it also enjoys the patronage of not a few who are rather negligent in that matter. Sometimes, indeed, it is for the special benefit of these latter individuals that our remarks are intended. They are manifestly friends in their way—they mean well, and are generally ready when called upon; but unfortunately it is necessary to say that, as a rule, promptness is not what we do it now. Yet we should much prefer if it could be dispensed with, and our friends paid up of their own accord. It would be more pleasant for all concerned.

"THE GUARDIAN'S" EXPLANATION.

The gilded Jade will wince. Our revelation of The Guardian's method of manufacturing leading articles has been punished, as we knew perfectly well it would, by a fierce shower of abusive language. That is the only kind of reply our courteous and refined contemporary can make to any charge, either well or ill-founded, and as in most cases, it prevents respectable journals from venturing upon a retort, The Guardian is satisfied with the apparent victory it has gained. Whether its readers are equally well pleased with the style of argument, or equally proud of its seeming triumphs, are questions not interesting enough to secure debate in these columns.

But our contemporary is, it alleges, extremely unwilling that "the reputation for honorable journalism "should be sullied by the noisome breath of the envious creatures" who assailed it; and, therefore, it condescends to give us an explanation of the manner in which the strange leader on "The Jesuits," that we were so audacious as to criticise, found insertion in its columns. We are gravely informed that the article in question was inserted not merely as an "editorial," but that, owing to some mistake, or accident, which could not be foreseen, it was printed as original matter. This explanation of indemnation we cheerfully publish for the exclusive benefit of those easy-tempered individuals who may feel disposed to credit it, although we hope there are few if any such to be found among the readers of THE MONITOR.

To the charge of plagiarism The Guardian makes reply by declaring that Mr. N. A. KNOX, who wrote for the Irish-American, was not the real author of the "magnificent colony upon the Jesuits," inasmuch as he copied it from the writings of the late Rev. Father Maguire, better known by the nom de plume of "Father PROUT." It was from the famous "Reliquiæ" of the latter that The Guardian "selected" the article of which we are speaking. We completely fail to comprehend how this explanation improves the position of our contemporary. Sad enough, in all conscience, would it be to interpolate upon Mr. KNOX; but it is a great deal worse to garble the productions of poor Father PROUT. It is felony to steal from the dead. It is sacrilege to steal from the dead. Our contemporary insists that it has not been guilty of felony, but only of sacrilege; and, as it is duly bound, we give it the benefit of the correction.

The Guardian seems to think that the article on "The Jesuits" could not be objectionable to the Catholic reader, because, with the exception of the senseless interpolations of its contributor, it was written by Father MAHONEY. Our contemporary is, we fear, altogether ignorant of the brilliant half-Irish genius and lamentable career of him who sang so sweetly of "The Bells of Shandon." We do not want to recall the mistakes of a life which were, we sincerely hope, atoned for by a most penitent and edifying death; but we must say that Father PROUT's writings are hardly the source whence a Catholic life would seek to draw a eulogy upon an order of religious men. It is true that The Guardian's "splendid" leader praises the Jesuits, but it depreciates, unfairly and untruthfully, the other monastic communities, as we proved two weeks since by the quotation of a single sentence.

Our contemporary upbraids us with having given insertion to Mr KNOX's plagiarised lecture, shortly after its publication by the Irish-American, and asks, triumphantly, whether it was not a sin-Catholic thing so to do? Is it true we committed the error of putting it in our columns without previous scrutiny, believing that nothing inimical to holy faith would be found in the pages of our highly-respected New York contemporary, and we have regretted the oversight ever since. But the editor of The Guardian, according to his own account, read it. He must, therefore, have seen its scandalous insinuations against the character of the founders of monastic communities, and yet he deliberately hands it to the compositors for insertion! Here we find no mistake, no oversight, no accident, but gross ignorance of the duties of a Catholic editor, or else willful intention to outrage the feelings of his readers. There is no possible way to avoid this alternative.

We would have alluded to the fact of this false lecture having appeared long ago in THE MONITOR; but, let me frankly own it, we thought The Guardian would deny the plagiarism, and we kept back the revelation to serve as a final and conclusive argument. As, however, our contemporary, while denying stealing from Mr. KNOX, confesses to stealing from Father PROUT, we relate the circumstance now merely to show that we have no desire to conceal it.

Whether written by Mr. N. A. KNOX or by Rev. FRANCIS MAHONEY—a matter in which the public can have little interest—the article on "The Jesuits" was unquestionably not fitted for the columns of a Catholic journal, because it contained mischievous libels upon men who are now, and ever will be, venerated by the Church. Consequently, the editor who acknowledges that he read it, made himself acquainted with its contents, learned all its sentiments, and yet could discover nothing wrong in it, nothing to prevent its insertion, either as original or selected, writes his own condemnation and exposes his own incompetency more mercilessly than his bitterest enemy could do it. This is precisely what the editor of The Guardian has done in his article of last week entitled "THE MONITOR'S CRITIC CRITICISED." We pity him sincerely.

A KNOTTY QUESTION SIMPLY DECIDED.

Most of our readers will, we feel sure, be extremely sorry to learn that a difference of opinion, amounting to a serious misunderstanding, exists at present in the highly-aristocratic circle of the British Royal family. As we do not know how the sun, moon and stars are going to behave, we are unable until this dreadful matter is amicably arranged, we deem it our duty to explain it to our friends so that they may recognize its vast importance. It is all about a question of "precedence"—that is to say, upon its solution depends which one of two very exalted personages shall be first at a feast or last at a funeral. To come to particulars—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, as everybody in the least acquainted with court etiquette must be aware, takes "precedence" of his worthy brother, His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, for the good and sufficient reason that he is older, and is heir apparent to the throne upon which the majesty of Britain sits. The Duke of Edinburgh, being a second son, must naturally play second fiddle to his brother—he does occupy a little on the edge, we believe, but we mean no joke. In any community where virtue, intellect or true manly worth would be taken in account, no average garroter would, indeed, be so clothed infinite precedence over both these illustrious individuals; but with that issue we do not want to deal upon this occasion, and we merely state it as a matter of profound conviction on our part.

Well, this par nobile fratrum, to their own domestic felicity we suppose, and, beyond doubt, to the great expense of the British taxpayers, are married, and hence we find the origin of the deplorable difficulty we have hinted at. The Prince of Wales married a very pretty girl, daughter of the King of Denmark; and Denmark, we need hardly say, is a kingdom of insignificant dimensions and of uncertain tenure of existence. The Duke of Edinburgh married a very large girl, daughter of the Emperor of Russia; and Russia, as geographies tell us, is the colossal empire of the globe. Now, if the Princess of Wales died into the dinner-table along with her husband, as every good wife should, it is clear she would be making her way through the substantials before the Duchess of Edinburgh would have a chance of looking at the soup. Of course, the question of the eldest having to follow the lead of a lady whose papa only governs such a scaly little affair as the kingdom of Denmark, is quite sufficient to make the choicest "train-oil and candles" disagree with Czar ALEXANDER.

The Princess ALEXANDROWINA—we devoutly hope the name is spelled correctly—inherits some of her father's proud spirit, and will not consent to words and rules unbecoming to a lady of such lofty lineage—that she won't be led into a dining-room, or ball-room, or any other room, by such plebeian nobility as the impoverished and of late somewhat disreputable Danish aristocracy can produce. Accordingly, true to her determination, she refused to put in an appearance at the last "reception" given by Her Most Gracious Sovereign and August Majesty Victoria, Queen of England, Great Majesty Victoria, Queen of England, Defender of the Faith, Empress of India, etc. Of this most significant and momentous fact we were quickly informed by telegraph; for which promptness and activity we earnestly wish the wires success.

We have now clearly defined the difficulty and mentioned the first of its many direful consequences. The question, then, is for those who love the peace and prosperity of mankind to propose an equitable solution which will not ruffle the "back hair" of either of the illustrious ladies concerned. A strong desire to prevent another war in Europe urges us to suggest the following methods, which—not out of pride or egotism, but out of pure, unadulterated philanthropy—we beseech the cableman to telegraph instantly to London. Should any of our suggestions be acted upon we shall never seek pecuniary recompense; the consciousness of having performed a good deed is all the reward we look to. First, Wales and Edinburgh might settle the matter by a friendly bout with the gloves on; or they might have a quiet game of euchre in a corner by themselves; or yet they might toss up a shilling and trust to the settlement of "heads and tails." If it be objected that the dispute is not between them, but between their wives, then we would say, "Give the girls a show." Start them fair at a hundred yards from the palace door—any door will do, in fact—and let the first in have the privilege of "precedence" upon all imaginary occasions. These plans have all the simplicity of republicanism about them, but we trust they will not be less acceptable on that account. However, masters of heraldry or court functionaries are allowed to meddle with this most delicate basis, the probability is they will only aggravate its difficulty and bring about a protracted war. Let prudent councils, then, prevail, so that mankind may be saved from the awful calamities that must follow an injudicious treatment of this momentous matter of "precedence!"

SECRET SOCIETY INFLUENCE.

We find the following paragraph among the local items in Tuesday's Call:

Judge Dwinelle, in the case of John Berry against Hannah L. Hopkins, yesterday, stated that he had received an unpropel letter from the plaintiff, asking him to decide the case in his favor, he and the plaintiff are members of the same secret society. He considered himself disqualified to try the case, and transferred it to the Twelfth District Court for trial.

This incident illustrates very clearly the wisdom of the Catholic Church in warning her children against becoming members of secret oath bound associations, whatever may be their ostensible object. People sometimes cry out against the Church for discountenancing societies established, as far as outward appearances can indicate, for purposes of benevolence, for the promotion of political reform, or else for the establishment of national freedom. Can it be possible, they ask, that the Catholic have no liberty of association, and will not be permitted to combine for the carrying out of objects which in themselves are highly meritorious? Where, they exclaim, is the gift of visiting the sick, or burying the dead, or protecting the fatherless, or promoting mutual friendships, or remedying unjust legislation, or lifting up an oppressed people to the enjoyment of political independence? We answer, none whatever. The Church not only has no objection to those things, but encourages and blesses the men who try to accomplish them. But a good thing may be done in a wrong way, and then all is merit is destroyed. The Church is only anxious for the spiritual and moral welfare of society, and has nothing to gain from restricting the legitimate liberty of man. But long experience has taught her that the influence of secret associations, no matter how laudable the purpose for which they are organized, is pernicious and destructive of the best and dearest interests of society. The very primary step in all these associations is to bind the applicant for membership with an oath not to disclose anything he may hear or see. The Church declares that no man has a right to fetter his conscience in this way, and that he must always hold himself free to act according to circumstances and to [illegible] merit his own moral independence. [illegible]ate to Parliament the [illegible]men were exposed, and [illegible] appalling illustration thereof [illegible]ever, that it produced either indignation or surprise among the British people. Let us not, then, ever seek to break out in Ireland many Englishmen would probably think the insurgents wicked and criminal!

A very fearful case occurred recently. A tenant lived on an estate where it was prohibited to give a lodging to a stranger. A poor old man, who had walked all night for a night's lodging, but was refused by one tenant, at last found shelter and compassion in him, but in the evening the other tenants came to her and told her she must send him away, or she herself would all be evicted, and that they must go and inform the agent against her. Well, this lady had to go away, or else lose again to the limit of the door, and in the morning was found dead in the ditch, and this did not occur on the estate of a landlord said to be harsh, but on the estate of a landlord thought to one of the best managers in Ireland.

"THE GUARDIAN'S" MORAL CODE.

From the columns of our able and highly respected contemporary, the Cincinnati Telegraph, we copy the annexed sharp but well-merited criticism of The Guardian's very peculiar moral code. It will, we trust, serve to draw the attention of the reckless and unscrupulous writer in the Catholic name to the pernicious character of the heretical and anti-Catholic doctrines constantly preached by this pretensious "defender of the faith," and tend to bring about some improvement. The Telegraph remarks, in the smoothest, most gentlemanly, and yet conscious doctrine," as our Cincinnati contemporary forcibly calls it, is only a "selection" which by mistake got insertion in the leading columns. Accidents of this nature unfortunately happen rather frequently to The Guardian. We must say that we have passed unnoticed even worse mistakes or accidents, lest we should be charged with egotism and self-feeling. But if "editorial papers" are allowed to preach "atrocious doctrines," what are we to expect from the secular press?

We find the following false and atrocious doctrine in an article of the San Francisco Guardian headed the "Honor of Woman!"

"The nation of American gentlemen have pronounced a judgment of their own, and no jury has yet been found to disagree with it. That is, that the male friends of the injured woman may slay her seducer on sight. It is not a judgment which is enforced on the law. It is a decision which the Judge Supreme, above all, has never yet reversed.

As the paper professes to be Catholic, the infamous assertion that God holds any "unwritten" gultless, not only deserves, but demands censure. The judgment, that any one has a right to slay a seducer, was reversed by the Supreme Judge on Mount Sinai in the fifth commandment: "Thou shalt not kill." The Guardian would do well to distinguish between the moral code of the decalogue and the Pagan maxims of Western life.

THE STATES OF Charity of Santa Barbara gratefully acknowledge the receipt of gifts from Messrs. Ryland & McLaughlin, of San Jose, as a donation towards the rebuilding of their institution recently destroyed by fire.

M. ROGAN, Esq., of Suffol Valley, called on this week, and informs us that the crops never looked better in that district than at present.

APPLETON'S CYCLOPEDIA.

We have been for some weeks publishing an advertisement of APPLETON'S Cyclopedia, which is now being issued in parts, and will be completed within a year. The work is one of such great importance, and contains so many excellent features, that we feel impelled to recommend it strongly to our readers. Of course the Cyclopedia is quite a library in itself, containing the latest and most accurate information in almost all branches of human knowledge. The feature which we wish to bring immediately under the notice of our readers is its admitted historical impartiality, its desire to do justice between contending sects and parties. A number of narrow-minded bigots in the East recently raised a howl of indignation against the Cyclopedia because it did not renew the old slanders upon Catholics and Catholicity which have long been connected with prejudiced versions of certain historical events. It was even asserted that "Isaiah Influence" had been brought to bear upon some of the large staff of writers, and that in consequence the articles on the Inquisition were spreading the "horrors of Popery" in a most remarkable fashion. It was shown, however, that the writers of the articles impugned were all staunch Protestants, and men not at all likely to favor Catholicity. The instructions given to contributors were to tell the truth frankly and honestly, without caring whom the facts hurt, and, from what we have already seen of this excellent Cyclopedia, they have been rigidly adhered to. Messrs. APPLETON have the honor of publishing the very first Cyclopedia wherein accuracy and justice are set down as the main objects to be strived at.

Sacred Heart College.

The first annual Commencement of Sacred Heart College took place Wednesday evening. The large hall of the College was crowded to excess. His Grace the Archbishop and quite a number of clergymen being present. The entertainment consisted of vocal and instrumental music, the reading of essays and declamation. The music was good, the essays better, but the declamation was first-class. If some of the pupils of Sacred Heart College do not make their mark as orators we are very much mistaken. After the exercises the Archbishop conferred certificates of merit on the leading boys. The following programme was observed:

| | |
|---|---|
| March.....St Mary's College Band | |
| Song, "Shakespeare's Ode".....George Bennett | |
| Duet, "Wandering in the May Time".....Misses Sheridan and Dunne | |
| Vocal Solo, "Ave Maria".....F. P. Ludovico | |
| Violin Solo.....Master Frank Sheridan | |
| Vocal Solo, "We love, we love forever".....Jas. Gelwix | |
| Essay, "Progress".....Miss Mary Dunne | |
| Violin Solo.....F. Cadogan | |
| Essay, "Labor".....Miss Mary Sheridan | |
| Music, "Father's at Sea Polka".....College Orchestra | |
| Declamation, "Marco Bozzaris".....Master Frank Sheridan | |
| Dialogue, "Home and Husband".....Geo. Touchard and J. Barry | |
| Essay, "Music".....Miss Mary Touchard | |
| Declamation, "Hohenlinden".....Master Frank Sheridan | |
| Vocal Duet, "Beautiful Dreamer".....Eugene Sheedy and Jas. Gelwix | |
| Essay, "Beautiful Dreamer".....First Graph Class | |
| Distance Song and Dance.....Master Frank Sheridan | |
| Music, "Rosina Polka".....College Orchestra | |
| Vocal Solo, "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean".....Jas. Gelwix | |
| Vocal Solo, "Whether my life be short".....Miss Mary Dunne | |
| Music.....St Mary's College Band | |
| Grand Chorus, "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean" | |

Sacred Heart College Bazar.

The following comprise the amounts returned by the various tables connected with the late Bazar in aid of the Sacred Heart College:

| | |
|---|---|
| St. Patrick's Table—Mrs. J. A. McGlynn | $1,850 00 |
| St. Joseph's Table—Miss Josie Sullivan | 1,400 00 |
| St. Mary's Table—Mrs. C. P. Huntington and Mrs. Crocker | 1,900 00 |
| John's Table—Mrs. M. J. Dooley and as | 1,164 75 |
| Francis' Table—Mrs. Robert J. Tobin | 720 50 |
| Table—Mrs. Jas. B. Kelly and assistants | 773 75 |
| Table—Mrs. Charles Crocker and assistants | 709 00 |
| Table—Mrs. J. Brooks and assistants | 612 00 |
| Table—Mrs. Cleary and assistants | 531 00 |
| Table—Miss Pearson and assistants | 527 00 |
| Table—Miss Thompson and assistants | 525 00 |
| Table—Mrs. Keogh | 384 00 |
| Table—Mrs. Hopkins | 300 00 |
| Total receipts | $10,996 00 |

The Executive Committee, in submitting their report of the proceedings of the Bazar in aid of the Sacred Heart College, avail themselves of the opportunity of returning their sincere thanks to the ladies and gentlemen who so kindly and generously assisted to make it a pleasant as well as a grand success.

BROTHER JUSTIN,
Chairman of Executive Committee.
P. J. SULLIVAN, Secretary.

Publications Received.

The Catholic World, June number. The contents are as follows: Introduction. The articles on "The Principles of Real Being," "Public Worship" and "Charles X. of Holyrood" are particularly noteworthy.

How to Cure a Drunkard. Music and words. Gray, Clay street. Another of the attractive 15ngard songs and sketches.

The Young Ovasculer is full of good matter as usual.

My Honey Jane and I. Song with music. M. Gray, Clay street. One of those light trifles that please and become popular in a short time.

WALDTEUFEL'S GRANDSHORE.—We have often said that Mr. Waldteufel of the Grand had the finest orchestra in the musical world of San Francisco. We now reiterate the assertion, and will say further that there are not more than two sports in our San Francisco that equal it. His music at home is perfect, and when he goes out of doors for a few days' recreation, as well as its correct interpreter of the "Beautiful Blue Danube," he has the knack of getting up from cheap writing paper to the finest music note paper in the land, and will assert for one of the best musical instruments manufactured in the United States, such as Sherman's and Clickering's pianos. Burdett's Cabinet Organs and the Standard organs, and Burdett's Cabinet Organs and the Standard organs. His stock of Catholic books is unequaled in California, and his prices are reasonable.

ST. CECILIA CHORAL SOCIETY.—The first complimentary concert given by the St. Cecilia Choral Society was held in the basement of St. Mary's Cathedral Thursday evening. We regret our inability to give a notice of the performances in our present issue, the hour at which we go to press rendering insertion impossible.

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

Archbishop Manning is lecturing in London on Sunday evening on the doctrines of Roman Catholic Church. His discourses are attended by large numbers of persons. He has just been left a legacy by the Dowager Duchess of Leeds.

Father Feroe, one of the vicars of Cathedral, New Orleans, was drowned lake Lourdelarrain, at Minneburg, 28-3, while bathing. He was thirty-years of age, and went to Shreveport, the epidemic, and was the only priest recovered from the attacks of fever.

Archbishop of Tuam, the Most Rev. MacHale, has written to the Earl of asking for an investigation of the prevailing in the West of Ireland, to argue the granting of Home Rule and, which he contends would relieve the English Legislature and give justice Ireland.

May 31d the sacred ceremonies incident to the dedication of the two new altars took place in the church of St. Broad lane, Cork. One of the was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, the other to St. Francis. The novel ceremony was performed by Rev. Boone, Superior, assisted by Father and Father Nash.

We have just discovered in a state of preservation, in the Rue Bonaparte, Paris, a beautiful little Gothic chapel built by Queen Margaret of Navarre, (grandmother of Henry V. of course Margot) for its occupations. It is to be restored his own expense, and will be opened under it is done upon two centuries.

Archbishop of Paris has ordered a to be celebrated in the Church of Denis, in honor of the discovered bodies of Saints Ambrose, Gervase Protasius. Our readers will remember the relics of these great saints in the Basilica of St. Ambrose, ago, and they their identity by the inscriptions on the Pope.

Meagher Guard, Company D, Captain John Egan. Number of men shooting, 77; number of hits, 1,017; sentences upon put in 3 shots each, 20 put in 2 shots each, and 13 put in 1 each. Percentage, 59. Best shot, 1's, inches. Best string 12.

MacMahon Guard, Captain J. A. McGuinness. Number of men firing, 81; 17 number hit 3 times, 33 twice, 13 once; and 18 missed three times. Number of hits, 138, percentage, 67.7.

Wolfe Tone Guard, Captain John Leddy, 60 men; 140 hits. Percentage, 77.7.

Emmet Guard, Captain Robert Cleary, 57 men; 109 hits; 19 hit 3 times, 20 twice, and 15 hit once. Percentage, 63.7.

Shields Guard, Captain Keegan, 66 men; 151 hits; 23 hit 3 times, 16 twice, and 14 hit once. Percentage, 86. Best string 2's.

When the Regiment returned to the city line of march was extended up to Pine street the residence of General Thowson, whose health was drunk, and a salute was given General in military style.

The Fenian Prisoners.

Following is a list of prisoners suffering imprisonment for the Manchester affair, for treason-felony, for offense against the articles of war (appearing armed), and for felony, with the date and nature of the sentence, the court before which they were convicted, the nature of the charge, and the mode in which the sentence is carried out: *

Edward Shore (Condon), murder; accessory to the murder of police sergeant Brett at Manchester, 1867; Manchester Special Assizes, in October, 1867; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; Western Australia.

Patrick Maloney, murder; Lancaster assizes, March, 1868; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Michael Davitt, treason-felony; supplying arms to the Fenian organization; Central Criminal Court, July, 1870; 15 years' penal servitude; is an English convict prisoner.

John Wilson, treason-felony; supplying arms to the Fenian organization; Central Criminal Court, July, 1870; 7 years' penal servitude; in an English convict prison.

Charles McCarthy, breach of the peace; was convicted, in consequence of his being found mixing in her Majesty's troops, and giving information to his commanding officer, etc.; court-martial in Ireland, May, 1866; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Thomas Chambers, same offense; mutinous conduct, desertion, etc.; court-martial in Ireland, June, 1866; penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

John O'Brien, same offense; mutinous conduct, desertion, etc; court-martial in Ireland, June, 1866; penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Thomas Darragh,* same offense; coming to the knowledge of an intended mutiny, and not giving information, etc.; court-martial in Ireland, June, 1866; penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Michael Harrington,* same offense; coming to the knowledge of an intended mutiny, etc.; court-martial in Ireland, June, 1866; penal servitude for life; Western Australia.

Patrick Kestinge,* same offense; mutinous conduct and desertion; court-martial in Ireland, August, 1866; same sentence; Western Australia.

Thomas Hassett,* same offense; mutinous conduct and desertion; court-martial in Ireland, August, 1866; same sentence; Western Australia.

Thomas Delaney,* same offense; mutinous conduct; court-martial in Ireland, August, 1866; 15 years' penal servitude; Western Australia.

John Shore (Condon), murder; accessory to the murder of police sergeant Brett at Manchester, 1867; Manchester Special Assizes, March, 1868; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Michael Larkin, murder; Lancaster assizes, March, 1868; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Michael Gleeson, murder; Lancaster assizes, March, 1868; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Patrick Maloney, murder; Lancaster assizes, March, 1868; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Thomas Wilson, murder; Lancaster assizes, March, 1868; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Thomas Gould, murder; Lancaster assizes, March, 1868; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Thomas Maguire, murder; Lancaster assizes, March, 1868; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Thomas Gallagher, murder; Lancaster assizes, March, 1868; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Thomas Gleeson, murder; Lancaster assizes, March, 1868; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Thomas Darragh,* same offense; coming to the knowledge of an intended mutiny, etc.; court-martial in Ireland, June, 1866; penal servitude for life; Western Australia.

James Wilson,* same offense; mutinous conduct and desertion; court-martial in Ireland, August, 1866; same sentence; Western Australia.

Patrick Kestinge,* same offense, mutinous conduct and desertion; court-martial in Ireland, August, 1866; same sentence; Western Australia.

Thomas Hassett,* same offense; mutinous conduct and desertion; court-martial in Ireland, August, 1866; same sentence; Western Australia.

Thomas Delaney,* same offense; mutinous conduct; court-martial in Ireland, August, 1866; 15 years' penal servitude; Western Australia.

John Shore; same offense; mutinous conduct; court martial in Ireland, August, 1866; ten years' penal servitude; Western Australia.

* These convicts were transported in October, 1867, and the Home Office is not in possession of any information respecting themselves the date of their release.

Edward Shore (Condon), murder; accessory to the murder of police sergeant Brett at Manchester, 1867; Manchester Special Assizes, in October, 1867; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Patrick Maloney, murder; Lancaster assizes, March, 1868; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Michael Davitt, treason-felony; supplying arms to the Fenian organization; Central Criminal Court, July, 1870; 15 years' penal servitude; is an English convict prisoner.

John Wilson, treason-felony; supplying arms to the Fenian organization; Central Criminal Court, July, 1870, 7 years' penal servitude; in an English convict prison.

Charles McCarthy, breach of the peace; was convicted, in consequence of his being found mixing in her Majesty's troops, and giving information to his commanding officer, etc.; court-martial in Ireland, May, 1866; death, commuted to penal servitude for life; is an English convict prison.

Thomas Chambers, same offense; mutinous conduct, desertion, etc.; court-martial in Ireland, June, 1866; penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

John O'Brien, same offense; mutinous conduct, desertion, etc; court-martial in Ireland, June, 1866; penal servitude for life; is an English convict prisoner.

Thomas Darragh,* same offense; coming to the knowledge of an intended mutiny, and not giving information, etc.; court-martial in Ireland, June, 1866; penal servitude for life; Western Australia.

James Kelly,* same offense; coming to the knowledge of an intended mutiny, etc.; court martial in Ireland, June, 1866; same sentence; Western Australia.

Michael Harrington,* same offense; coming to the knowledge of an intended mutiny, etc.; court martial in Ireland, July, 1866; same sentence; Western Australia.

Martin Hogan, same offense; mutinous conduct and desertion; court-martial in Ireland, August, 1866; same sentence; Western Australia.

James Wilson,* same offense; mutinous conduct and desertion; court martial in Ireland, August, 1866; same sentence; Western Australia.

Patrick Kestinge,* same offense, mutinous conduct and desertion; court-martial in Ireland, August, 1866; same sentence; Western Australia.

Thomas Hassett,* same offense; mutinous conduct and desertion; court-martial in Ireland, August, 1866; same sentence; Western Australia.

Thomas Delaney,* same offense; mutinous conduct; court martial in Ireland, August, 1866; 15 years' penal servitude; Western Australia.

John Shore; same offense; mutinous conduct; court martial in Ireland, August, 1866; ten years' penal servitude; Western Australia.

* These convicts were transported in October, 1867, and the Home Office is not in possession of any information respecting themselves the date of their release.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

The stage fare between Santa Cruz and Watsonville is only fifty cents.

The Hibernian Savings and Loan Society has been incorporated in Portland.

The price of flour in Virginia City, Montana, has advanced to $1 per sack.

The local optimists were defeated at Mission San José on Monday.

The fishermen are doing a good business at mackerel catching in Monterey Bay.

The Utah Northern Railroad has reached Blackfoot, two and a half miles into Idaho Territory.

The Navarro river in Mendocino county, near its mouth, is literally filled with barges, and loads are being caught daily.

Portions of the remains of a large animal supposed to be a mastodon have been found in New York Flat, Yuba county.

If the telegrams from Mexico are to be believed, a man and woman have been burned alive in Sinaloa "for sorcery."

Reports from the Amador quicksilver mine still continue to be more favorable as the work of development goes on.

Hollister is improving rapidly, several new houses have been erected recently, and a number are in contemplation.

Hon. Robert McBeth is announced as a candidate for Governor of Nevada, subject to the decision of the Democratic Convention.

The Indians in the neighborhood of Camp Warner are threatening the settlers, and the latter are naturally much alarmed.

The crops and grass in the vicinity of Susanville, Lassen county, are looking better this season than for ten years past at this time of the year.

E. P. Welch has been found guilty of murder in the first degree for killing Frank Quinn, on the 31st of October, at Bishop Creek, Inyo county.

There was filed on Saturday, in the office of the Secretary of State, the certificate of incorporation of the Bank of Healdsburg, with a capital of $200,000.

The "Visalia Delta of May 16th says: "The fruit prospect is better than we have ever observed, be a very bountiful one this year."

Fifty Saints were cut off from the Mormon Church recently and turned over to the bushwhackers to be "dealt with according to Enoch and the "Profit."

Mr. Cutler, whose pig caused the San Juan difficulty between the United States and Great Britain, in 1859, died at Swissomish, W. T., on the 7th inst.

The large bed of indigenite has been discovered in Tulare county. It has been found of great efficacy for rheumatism, by those applying it to the affected parts.

Masons in the vicinity of Jape, Mendocino county, are very desirous and of having a Lodge established there, and of effecting an organization at an early date.

A report reaches here from Round Valley, Mendocino county, of the murder of Jo. O'Mears, and the burning of the house, said to have been by Indians. [illegible]

On Sunday a number of Modoc Indians, [illegible] Lake county, had a quarrel concerning the possession of a horse. During the fight a man named [illegible] was severely injured.

A telegram of May 27th, from Hanford, Tulare county, says: "The Kings River Canal Company vs. The Morgan Bank, et al. Decree of foreclosure and sale has been granted, and the cases are to be consolidated.

The Carson Tribune says that a tremendous land-slide occurred on Monday last, at the head of Ash Cañon, taking with it at least half a mile of Yerington's flume, and burying up one hundred cords of wood.

Returned passengers say the Stockton mines are the worst. "Hell" over gotten up to it in the Comstock Mines; two hundred men in the mines without a dollar or a pound of provisions, and that great suffering must consequently follow.

Out of fifteen elections thus far under the Local Option law, eleven have resulted in favor of granting licenses. Seven more Friday elections will be held in several townships in Sonoma county. At Santa Rosa the question will be decided in Oakland and Vallejo; and in Rio Vista, Silverville, Suisun, Benicia and Fenimore in Sonoma county.

The Idaho statesman says that a Mr. Millard, who has been engaged for the past two years in building a road from Rock Creek to Idaho City and Placerville, was run over by the wagon and instantly killed. The wagon, which was mounted, with the bride's monogram, from which projected a solid silver service, antique, in walnut and satin-covered case; complete dinner service, with an exquisite Japanese piece; large solid diamond finger ring; a large silver bowl, silver fruit dish and spoons; a Venetian mirror; silver sets a number of other articles. Several cases with service of silver; also numerous valuable articles of personal apparel; elegant silver vases, fruit dishes, point lace handkerchiefs, lace, and many other valuable presents. The young couple have left for England.

A Strange Case.

A very remarkable case is now at trial in Dublin, in which a large amount of real and personal property is in dispute. A Mr. Thomas Modgens married privately, in 1865, a young lady named Ellen Keogh, aged thirteen and a half years; and possessed of a large fortune. He was twice imprisoned for contempt on account of this proceeding, but finally ran away with his wife and lived happily together. The original marriage having been annulled, a legal marriage was afterwards solemnized, but the marriage settlement prepared by the Court of Chancery was never executed, as Modgens' wife afterwards eloped with an artillery sergeant, with whom she lived for a number of her life, and to whom a daughter, one of the defendants in the suit, she sought to leave all her fortune. The sum of Modgens, born after his legal marriage with his wife, married at Brussels a lady named Walker. He has since died, and his wife, the plaintiff in the suit, claims the property on behalf of his and her children. For the defense it is asserted that at the time of Young Modgens' marriage to Miss Walker, a lady named Rosetta Taylor to whom he had been previously married was still alive, and that, therefore, his children were not legitimate. One of the witnesses to the alleged marriage between Modgens and Miss Taylor bore the singular name of Count de Ravagh O'Shaughnan. One of the witnesses examined yesterday, named Henry Taylor, stated that he had acted as guard at St. Helena, under Sir Hudson Lowe, over Napoleon. He described the dethroned Emperor as a jolly little gentleman, with whom he had many glasses of wine. The "Little Corporal" was then but little for religion, but as witness was about to leave the island he received a visit from two French priests.—Cork Herald, May 7.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS.

The trial of John J. Marks has been set June 11th, in the Municipal Criminal Court.

The pupils of St. Vincent's School on Jessie street had a very pleasant floral festival this week.

A. O. H., Division No. 2, will hold their annual picnic at the City Gardens, on Thursday, June 18.

Henri Hoehefert, the noted communist, who arrived here last week from Australia, will be landed after his escape, left on Friday for New York.

The picnic excursion of the Knights of the Red Branch to Belmont last Sunday was largely attended, and was a most orderly gathering.

A gold badge has been presented by the members of St. Joseph's Total Abstinence Benevolent and Literary Association, to the Rev. A. Oulmet, Chaplain to the Society.

The Calavaras Association held a meeting last Tuesday, at the Fourth District Court room and decided to hold a reunion and picnic on June 11th, at Badger's Park, Oakland.

The fifteenth annual commencement exercises and exhibition of St. Ignatius' College, will take place on Friday, May 29, and be continued on Monday June 1st, and Tuesday, June 2d. It will be a literary treat.

Judge Belden of the Sixteenth District Court has decided that the San Pellipo mine in Inyo county is the property of the Union mine. The property is said to be worth nearly $2,000,000. The Union people have appealed.

Sailors are very scarce in port, and not only is bounty being paid for any sort of man who can steer a ship, but an increase of wages to $30 per month is under consideration. For deep-water sailors the wages run from $20 to $25.

The first annual picnic of Division No. 6, A. O. H., will take place at Badger's Park, Oakland, on Sunday, May 31st. The committee of arrangements are leaving nothing undone to make the affair worthy of the excellent reputation of the society.

There will be a general reunion of the A. O. H. of Alameda county, at Schuetzen Park, Alameda, on 12th July. The prevailing hospitality and liberality of the gentlemen of the Order in Alameda county, is a guarantee that the occasion will be a grand one.

On Tuesday the Southern Pacific Railroad commenced running on the schedule that prevailed up to within two months ago. The 9:40 A.M. train will run through to Soledad. The accommodation 5:30 train on Sundays will run further south than San José. The last train south leaves San Francisco at 5:30, five minutes later than it has heretofore.

Mr. P. Lyman, of the firm of Lyman, Hafferty, & Co., won the 1st man's prize in the Father Mathew 24 miles 16 hour walk at Woodward's Gardens on Thursday, 21st last week. Daniel O'Brien, on the same day won the prize for running and standing jumps and the best display in standing jumps and the best display in standing jumps. The points were: Height, 5 feet; 1 foot and back 10½ 3 feet long. My whole jump, 16 feet 6 inches. Daniel O'Brien's twenty-ten and fifteen pounds shot 1 foot 2½ inches. Daniel O'Brien's twenty-ten and fifteen pounds shot 1 foot 2½ inches. Daniel O'Brien's twenty-ten and fifteen pounds shot 1 foot 2½ inches. Daniel O'Brien's twenty-ten and fifteen pounds shot 1 foot 2½ inches. Daniel O'Brien's twenty-ten and fifteen pounds shot 1 foot 2½ inches. Daniel O'Brien's twen

THE WARFARE BETWEEN THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD.

A Lecture by His Grace the Archbishop of Westminster.

His Grace the Archbishop delivered a lecture at St. Anne's Hall, Spitalfields, on Monday evening, April 27, to a very numerous and attentive audience. We find the following report of the lecture in the London Weekly Register:

His Grace rose amidst loud and prolonged applause. He said: My subject to night is so large that I do not know where to begin or where to end. I think, perhaps, a lecture on the warfare of the world against the Church may not be out of place just now, because evidently at this moment the warfare is becoming very fierce and unmeasuring, and is spreading very wide. And it may be that some of us—some of you—may at times be a little scared by the prospect—the outlook which is before us. Well, now, I think it is very good for us from time to time to take courage a little, and to do that we have only to look back to what has been the history of the Catholic Church from the beginning. You know that sometimes when we are trying to prove what is the true Church and where it is to be found, we go to our catechism, and there we learn that the Church has four notes. I will say there are five. The Church is One; it is Holy; it is Apostolic, and it is Catholic. These are four notes; but there is a fifth, and that is that the world calls it Antichrist. I never yet heard that anybody call the Kirk of Scotland Antichrist. I never yet heard the Wesleyan Methodists called Antichrist. We might go all the way round. They all call us Antichrist; therefore, it is the Church of Christ that they do exactly what they did to Him. When the true Christ came they called Him Beelzebub. And it is true the disciple is not above his Master, nor the servant above his lord—if they have called the Master of the house Beelzebub, how much more them of the household." And, therefore, the thing I should like for the Church, which is the body of that Divine Head, is that she should have the very same—the same given to her which he had Himself. If the world should begin to speak well and fairly, and call the Church by fair names, then I should be perplexed; but when it calls the Church by the same name by which it called her Divine Master, then I rejoice. And next, if ever I found the Catholic Church not in warfare, and if ever I found it was then it would lose one of its signs. It was foretold from the beginning that it should be so, and those very things which are so dishearten to many, and particularly to those not of the faith, are the pledges of our confidence, and the fulfillment of the prophecy which our Divine Master spoke of. Well, now, what is the world? Preachers to the pulpit, and you pious people, in your homes, are in the habit of talking a great deal of the world—that it is very wicked—that is taits lies, and is very serious. What do you mean by the world? Let us see what the world is. The world seems to me to be this—man without God; man lapsed without God; the intellect of man without the knowledge of God; and the will of man without the few of God. That seems to be the world, and ever since the world, began —ever since Adam—the race of mankind has been more or less in this state. More or less, it has lost the knowledge of God, and the faith in God and the law of God, and therefore it has become sinful, corrupt, lawless, rebellious and murderous—always against God—always warring against Him. Now, the world is made up of many things, but the world once more after the flood—just as man was before so man became agnic; and such it is, as this moment, wherever the knowledge of God, and faith in God and the law of God are not out of the hearts of men. Mankind is just the same, and so it always will be to the end of time. And, therefore, by the world I mean this—I mean mankind separated from God, and without the light and love of God, and therefore in the state of human pride, human willfulness, human passion, human concupiscence, rebellion against the Divine law, and full of envy and jealousy and conflict and contradiction—

A MILITANT CHURCH ON EARTH,

MAN AGAINST MAN AND NATION AGAINST NATION.

This is what we call the world. There is one difference between the old world before our Lord came into it and the world which is called the Christian world since that day. It is this: The old world before our Lord came into it worshiped stocks and stones. There were idolaters of all sorts and kinds; some of the most intellectual and refined, and others the grossest and the most stupid. We do not see that now, in the Christian world, at least. In the world outside Christendom such things are to be found. We are not talking of the world outside Christianity, but within Christianity itself. St. Augustine, one of the best Doctors of the Church, has said, "Because Satan can no longer draw them away in the worship of false gods; because he can no longer tempt men to multiply false gods; because he cannot draw men into polytheism or into idolatry, therefore he has done this—he has sown the whole Christian world over with a heresies; he has divided it with all his might into schism, and therefore he reigns." says St. Augustine, "which are now in the world, are all the idolatries and polytheisms of the old world—they are the means intended to draw the hearts of men from God." See how in the last eighteen hundred years heretics have gone out of the Church, and schism has been produced; they have divided themselves as Satan as thought good, and set up false churches, and false communions and sects, and how sad of them—and how sad are the sects. All this lived and split into spirit of error in the world is the working of the devil against you; therefore to all heresy or schism you find this mark—it is to

IDENTIFY AGAINST THE CATHOLIC CHURCH,

out of which it came, and from which it fell. Such, then, is the world. And the world may be found at this day in the kingdoms and the empires and the republics of those nations which call themselves Christian and profess Christianity—and oh, I am sorry to say, have for the most part very little public Christianity left among them. What is the Church? There is no need to go into the question in talking to you. I will say, though, that the Church is man united to God. That which began in the Incarnation of God Himself, in which God and men were united in one person, and from the mystery of the Incarnation came the mystical body of Christ; that is to say, all those who being born again by the faith and by the spirit of God are united to the body of the world—to the divine Head of the Church in Heaven. It seems His body. It is one because He is one visible as He was invisible world; only because united to Him; imperishable because He is he life of it, and spread throughout the world according to His promise and by His power. It is carried on perpetually—one, holy, Catholic and Apostolic Church. I need not dwell on that; I only mention it for this purpose, to show you the warfare of the world against the Church ever has been, is now, and ever will be because between man without God and man united to God there is an essential and an unextinguishable antimosity, just as the prophecy foretold, "I will put animosities between thee and the woman, and between my seed and her seed;" so is there an unextinguishable animosity between the Incarnate Lord and His disciples and the world. I have laid down these first general principles in order to bring out clearly the subject I have specially undertaken. First of all, let me remind you how this great warfare between the world and the Church opened. What was the first declaration of war? And what was the first act? Where was the first great battle fought? On Mount Calvary. The first great warfare, and the opening of that warfare (which was continued ever since between the world and the Church) was when God Himself, Incarnate and visible, placed Himself within reach of mankind, and they nailed Him on the Cross; and that when so began on Mount Calvary has gone on ever since, and He has warned us that we must look for it. I will remind you of some of His words. He said: "Think not I am come to bring peace on the earth, but the sword." Therefore, every true disciple of our divine Master will look for in the measure in which he is faithful;

NOT FOR PEACE BUT THE SWORD.

And again he said: "Marvel not, my brethren. If the world hate you; it hateth me before you." Again: "If you were of the world, the world would love you; but because you are not of the world, and I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." And once more he said: "You shall be hated all men for my name's sake." And you remember that awful prophecy when He spoke about the end of the world and the signs of His coming. He said that there should be tribulation of all kinds; that nation would rise against nation, and one family set them brothers should deliver brothers to death, and parents their children; that they did services to God. Do not be surprised at these things. I may say the whole history of the Church is a history of persecution. The history of the Church is a full history of the prophecy. It is there for the seal on our faith, and the more the animosity of the world is kindled against the Church, the more the faith of the world is directed against the Church; and the more menacing and the more apparently on the point of victory the world appears to be, the more our faith is confirmed, because it is the fulfillment of the prophecy.

We will go on to the application of what I have said. The first warfare, after the head of the Church had ascended to his throne, began by the persecution of the Jews against the Apostles against the first Christians. In the time of Saul (afterwards St. Paul) you will recollect how bitter was the Jewish persecution against the early Christians. What was the end of that persecution? Where is the Jerusalem that crucified the Apostles? There is hardly a stone to be found resting upon another of the Jerusalem of that day. The end of the first persecution was the utter and entire

DESTRUCTION OF THE CITY OF JERUSALEM.

The scourging of the persecutors, and the clean sweep that was made of them, of their name and their power. After this began the Pagan persecution, which for three hundred years spread itself through the world, throughout the whole of the great Roman Empire. The suspicions and the hatred which had been stirred up by the Jews, changed into suspicion and hatred been more or less in this state. More or less, it has lost the knowledge of God, and the faith in God and the law of God, and therefore it has become sinful, corrupt, lawless, rebellious and murderous—always against God—always warring against Him. Now, the world is made up of many things, but the world once more after the flood—just as man was before so man became agnic; and such it is, as this moment, wherever the knowledge of God, and faith in God and the law of God are not out of the hearts of men. Mankind is just the same, and so it always will be to the end of time. And, therefore, by the world I mean this—I mean mankind separated from God, and without the light and love of God, and therefore in the state of human pride, human willfulness, human passion, human concupiscence, rebellion against the Divine law, and full of envy and jealousy and conflict and contradiction—

MAN AGAINST MAN AND NATION AGAINST NATION.

This is what we call the world. There is one difference between the old world before our Lord came into it and the world which is called the Christian world since that day. It is this: The old world before our Lord came into it worshiped stocks and stones. There were idolaters of all sorts and kinds; some of the most intellectual and refined, and others the grossest and the most stupid. We do not see that now, in the Christian world, at least. In the world outside Christendom such things are to be found. We are not talking of the world outside Christianity, but within Christianity itself. St. Augustine, one of the best Doctors of the Church, has said, "Because Satan can no longer draw them away in the worship of false gods; because he can no longer tempt men to multiply false gods; because he cannot draw men into polytheism or into idolatry, therefore he has done this—he has sown the whole Christian world over with a heresies; he has divided it with all his might into schism, and therefore he reigns," says St. Augustine, "which are now in the world, are all the idolatries and polytheisms of the old world—they are the means intended to draw the hearts of men from God." See how in the last eighteen hundred years heretics have gone out of the Church, and schism has been produced; they have divided themselves as Satan as thought good, and set up false churches, and false communions and sects, and how sad of them—and how sad are the sects. All this lived and split into spirit of error in the world is the working of the devil against you; therefore to all heresy or schism you find this mark—it is to out of which it came, and from which it fell. Such, then, is the world. And the world may be found at this day in the kingdoms and the empires and the republics of those nations which call themselves Christian and profess Christianity—and oh, I am sorry to say, have for the most part very little public Christianity left among them. What is the Church? There is no need to go into the question in talking to you. I will say, though, that the Church is man united to God. That which began in the Incarnation of God Himself, in which God and men were united in one person, and from the mystery of the Incarnation came the mystical body of Christ; that is to say, all those who being born again by the faith and by the spirit of God are united to the body of the world—to the divine Head of the Church in Heaven. It seems His body. It is one because He is one visible as He was invisible world; only because united to Him; imperishable because He is he life of it, and spread throughout the world according to His promise and by His power. It is carried on perpetually—one, holy, Catholic and Apostolic Church. I need not dwell on that; I only mention it for this purpose, to show you the warfare of the world against the Church ever has been, is now, and ever will be because between

IDENTIFY AGAINST THE CATHOLIC CHURCH,

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

The Kilkenny Dispute.

KILKENNY, May 1.—William Walsh was prosecuted here to day, at Kilkenny Petty Sessions, by a carter named O'Donnell, for presenting at and threatening him. O'Donnell was engaged in removing some of Father Power's furniture to Father Buckley's residence, when Walsh met him at the gateway, and, presenting a revolver at him, threatened he would give him the contents if he did not go away. Two witnesses, who were with Walsh, contradicted this, and the case was dismissed. Walsh then prosecuted Father Power for subborning a multitude to commit a breach of the peace and threatening him. On one of Walsh's men were engaged in removing stones from a celebrated duel that is in dispute, when Father Power, accompanied by Father Buckley, came out and warned them off. Walsh alleged that he heard Father Power state that if they did not go off he would have the parish down on him. He also heard Father Power tell his lieve to go for the parishioners. Three of these men, who were produced, also swore to the same effect. Father Power denied having used any such language. "In a few words of withering contempt he denounced the conduct of those who swore their arrival had no connection whatever with Father Power or any one belonging to him. They were simply because they heard the police were going there. It was shown that Father Power's character was very much insured throughout. The bench found the accused in £100 bail himself, and two sureties of £50 each to keep the peace. Father Power then protested warmly against an allegation made in the course of the proceedings, that reinforcements were required for his parish—that not being the case, he (Father Power) had endeavored to discover and expose the author of such a false report, which was evidently intended to cast a slur on the character of the police in his parish.—Dublin Freeman.

The Late Outrage in Queen's County.

The condition of Mr. George Whitford, of the Church Hill, after the cowardly outrage was reported in the Freeman, has, for the last couple of days, become worse. The physicians in attendance, Doctors T. K. Cornelius and Fisher, of Mountrath, now dread the setting in of mortification, a shocking tragic occurrence in connection with this has taken place. On Monday last the police entered the house of a man named Hegarty, in the neighborhood of Mr. Whitford's residence, searching for arms, and on announcing their business, and the fact that Mr. Whitford had been shot on the previous evening, Hegarty's wife dropped down and expired before they left the house. Mrs. Hegarty was particularly subject to palpitation of the heart. Yesterday evening one of the six men now in jail on suspicion, Patrick Fanning, his second cousin, was sworn by Mr. Whitford, was admitted to bail, the news of his arrest having such an effect on his wife as to be the cause of her death. An inquest was held on the body of Mrs. Hegarty this morning, when a verdict of wilful murder was returned against the six men now in jail. The funeral is to be again brought up before the magistrates of Mountrath on Monday.—Dublin Freeman, May 2.

An Irish Volunteer Corps.

MANCHESTER, May 1.—The interest taken in the projected Irish Volunteer Corps continues to increase. A gentleman to whom I spoke on the subject to-day promised to subscribe generously towards the expenses if the undertaking is once fairly started. There appears to be a general belief that the Government will not forbid the drill. Some difficulty will be experienced in finding officers of experience. The Irish are fond of rank and file, and already several Irishmen in other corps have expressed their determination to have themselves transferred in the event of the new corps being once formed. The surrounding towns—Stockport, Altrincham, etc.—will each furnish a contingent of men, and a well known Irish priest has expressed his willingness to become the chaplain. It may be premature to speculate upon the likelihood of such a movement, but the idea of an Irish Volunteer Corps is merely a project, and I shall not be surprised to hear of it being established in consequence of the Government refusing to accept it.—Corr. Dublin Freeman.

More Persecution.

Bismarck's new law "for the prevention of the undue exercise of clerical functions" was passed by the Prussian Parliament last week. This act, by which a certain portion of the German people are simply outlawed, is but the logical consequence of the policy adopted against the Catholic Church since the resignation of the Ministry under pressure. Any clergymen who has been suspended by a judicial sentence, that is to say, by the finding of judges who have no jurisdiction whatever in the eyes of the Church, may henceforth be sent by the police from one place to another, like a pauper or a vagabond; and, if he refuses to like the rod that strikes him, may be deprived of his civil pensions and expelled from the country. In the names of the discussion of this bill the notorious "Old Catholic," Von Schulte, made a violent onslaught on the Church to which he still professes to belong, but the whole of his sophisms were disposed of in a most telling speech by Dr. Von Buss, the theological faculty of Freiburg, the Nestor of the house, who, in his peroration, showed that it would soon become necessary to pass a law for the total proscription of the Catholic Church throughout the German empire.—London Universe, May 1.

Brigandage.

Notwithstanding the continued endeavor to make out that the Italian Government has done something towards repressing brigandage, instead of being far from even keeping pace with the great increase of it, which results from the discontent and misery, increased prices and pressing taxation have everywhere produced, robberies that cannot be suppressed of the fallacy of such assertions is continually coming to the surface.

The Court of Assizes in Rome has been occupied this week with the trial of the offenders in a most notorious case, which we reported at the time of its perpetration, in February last, when Cavalier Arezzi, lieutenant of the Carabineers, was deliberately shot by brigands, who attacked, in a broad day, the ordinary diligence plying between Valmontone and Genezzano.

No case of equal audacity, in a locality of similar proximity to the capital, could be named during any time of the Papal Administration, when perfect peace prevailed, but under a Government which boasts of an unparalleled taxation, with due express regard of supporting gigantic public forces, and not only that, but exacts a most distasteful compulsory personal participation in the tasks of that force year after year, the paying for it, its population have a right to look for something more of protection and security than under a system in which joining the army was purely voluntary and less stained ill.

In the present case a little more activity than usual seems to have been used in tracking the depredators, as the victim was a member of the force specially employed in the suppression of the brigandage, and the identity of the two prisoners taken with the men who committed the outrage is far from being established. Indeed, at the end of the trial one of them being attacked with ague fever, the proceedings had to be postponed.—Corr. Westminster Gazette, May 2.

The Bishop of Orleans.

The revolutionary journals are amusing themselves with all manner of conjectures as to the reason of the visit of the Bishop of Orleans to the Eternal City. As may be supposed, all of them are erroneous, while many of them are silly and malicious. It is generally thought in Rome that the Prussian Bishop Dupanloup, in his quality of a French statesman, has come to Rome to confer with the Pope on the political situation of France. Our contemporary, The Methodist, is of opinion that the Bishop's visit is an example of its diligences between Catholic Bishops and Protestant Ministers. May I trace a Prussian finger in the lines of this new Swiss Constitution. It was simply framed with a view to coerce the Catholics, the old Constitution not allowing room for the exercise of the persecution. The new parliamental legislation of this nature is command the mind and soul of man in such a manner that it is to be laid aside even in all things as something sacred and awful, as a Chinese mandarin whose final argument is—"Trouble and obey!"—N. Y. Tablet.

APPLETON'S AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA

COMPLETE LIBRARY IN ITSELF.

IT IS THE KNOWLEDGE OF THE CENTURY, in a boiled thing, the essence of all books of reference, and the answer to almost every question; it is never unnecessarily elaborate; it never fails to give the information sought; it is always up to the times; it is the work to which the scholar goes for the latest results of his own study and research; it is the work which the intelligent man of business finds most useful in his every-day affairs; it is the work which the family circle will instinctively resort to for information on all subjects; it is the work to which paragraphs the result of their study and reading; it is the work which the young man will find indispensable in his efforts to improve himself; it is the work which the teacher and professional man will find most helpful in their respective callings; it is the work which the public speaker will find most suggestive of new ideas; it is the work which the writer will find most comprehensive in its treatment of all subjects; it is the work which the clergyman will find most reliable in its statements; it is the work which the lawyer will find most exhaustive in its treatment of legal questions; it is the work which the physician will find most accurate in its medical definitions; it is the work which the mechanic will find most practical in its explanations; it is the work which the merchant will find most valuable in its commercial statistics; it is the work which the manufacturer will find most suggestive in its descriptions; it is the work which the agriculturist will find most instructive in its treatment of all matters relating to the science of agriculture; it is the work which the student will find most thorough in its treatment of all subjects; it is the work which the professional man will find most helpful in his every-day duties; it is the work which the family will find most entertaining and instructive; it is the work which the boy will find most interesting; it is the work which the girl will find most attractive; it is the work which the whole household will find most useful; it is the work which every intelligent man and woman should have in their library; it is the work which every man who wishes to be well informed must have; it is the work which every man who wishes to be well informed must have; it is the work which every man who wishes to be well informed must have

LATE NEWS ITEMS.

The Italian patriot and litterateur, Tommaseo, died on Friday, May 1st, at Florence. He had a stroke of apoplexy the previous day.

The Dreghelis Board of Superintendence on Thursday, May 7th, investigated the recent escape of a burglar, and fined the turnkey in charge of him £5.

At a meeting of the Committee of the Amnesty Association, held in Dublin, May 7th, a resolution was adopted approving of the candidature of Mr. O'Connor Power for Mayo.

During the night of the 4th of May many vines were damaged by frost at Asnieres, Colombe, Sur Seine, Bijon, Clermont, Ferrant and in a portion of the Medoc district.

The French Transatlantic Company have deposited the caution money demanded by the National Seamship Company for the conveyance of the passengers of the Europe to New York.

A motion was made May 7th in the Limerick Corporation to sell the property, as the Corporation is £37,000 in debt. After a discussion, the motion was adjourned to a future day.

The first meeting of the Cavan Independent Home Rule Club was held May 5th in the Old College, Cavan, for the purpose of forming local committees throughout the county.

The French Transatlantic Company's late derelict steamer Amerique left Plymouth on Saturday evening, May 2d, in charge of a crew furnished by the company from Havre.

The following gentlemen have been appointed to the Commission of the Peace—County of Roscommon—J. P. Plunkett Taaffe, of Cuna, Roscommon. County of Mayo—Charles Bingham Jenings, of Mount Jestuge, Hollymount.

At the Ayrshire Agricultural Society's show, held at Ayr, the judges unanimously awarded the silver medal of the society to Mr. W. Kerr, of Dublin, for a new improved safety lamp for stable and farm use.

The steamer Arizona, along the shores of the river Eros and Lough Dughee are in a state of great uneasiness at no appearance of the proposed drainage works being commenced, now that good weather has set in.

On Sunday, May 10, a meeting was held in the Cathedral Church, Marlborough street, Dublin, under the Presidency of the Cardinal Archbishop, for the purpose of forming a parochial branch of the Catholic Union.

Anent the education of medical students a most important matter, the Lancet—the leading organ of the profession—strongly advises students to serve a preliminary apprenticeship at a country practice before going to the metropolis to attend lectures.

On Thursday, May 7th, the Master of the Rolls, London, decided that workmen who did not deliver sheets on the day agreed to were legally bound to pay compensation at the market value at the time the suit for breach of contract was decided, if plaintiff so elected.

On the morning of May 7th, while Mr. Richard Harris, late manager of the Waterford branch of the Provincial Bank, was standing in the stationery establishment of W. Kelly, Lucia Georges street, Waterford, he dropped dead. Mr. Harris was apparently in good health at the time, and was reading a newspaper.

The whole of the plenum on the Earl of Durham's collieries (about four thousand in number) quitted their gate on Friday, May 1st, and refused to work, in consequence of the ten per cent reduction. Other miners in the district collieries in Durham are also struck; and the few who have accepted the reduction are unable to resume work in consequence of the rejection of the terms by the engineman.

Maxims of Cardinal De Rets.

Weak men never yield at the proper time.

There are small steps in great affairs.

I am persuaded that greater qualities are required to form a good party leader than to form an emperor of the universe; and that in the absence of the qualities which compose him, resolution should walk hand in hand with judgment—I mean heroic judgment, the power of mind which is to distinguish the extraordinary from the impossible.

Upon men of small understanding nothing useless so deep an impression as what they do not understand.

When fear rises to a certain height it produces the same effect as temarity. Fear never applies the proper remedy.

We should never play with favor; we cannot too closely embrace it when it is real, nor fly too far from it when it is false.

A man who mistrusts himself never truly confides in any one.

Man does not believe others can do what they cannot do themselves.

The effects of weak times are inconceivable, and I maintain that they are far vaster than those of the most virulent passions.

I have remarked that the self-founded semities are ever the most obstinate. The reason of this is clear. As offenses of that kind exist only in the imagination, they never fail to grow and swell in that receptacle, too fruitful in self-love.

To common pices people the extraordinary appears possible only after it has been executed.

"As the Twig is Bent the Tree is Inclined."

We often hear mothers wondering why their daughters are so indolent, or so ignorant of household matters, or so careless in their habits. They complain, and scold, and fret over it, but they make no attempt to teach them better. The fault lies with the mother themselves; instead of training their girls to habits of industry and neatness, instead of instructing them in household ways, they have allowed them to grow up without any training at all.

Girls are not going to learn these things of their own accord; they must be taught, from the time they are old enough to learn, to be neat and industrious. The teaching of them must be very similar to the giving to their early years; it will not do to train them a month, and then leave them three months to do as they please. Education is, after all the mighty magician that turns everything into gold.

Mothers, educate your girls to be neat and industrious, and you will never have to complain that they are not neat and industrious women. Train them carefully in household ways; teach them how to make puddings and cakes and pickles and preserves; show them how to be tidy about a house, how to do everything in the easiest manner. Teach them both by precept and example; it is worth the trouble; for, instead of having drones and sluts to scold about you you will have well-trained, and useful help.—Mrs Leigh in the Northerner.

First-class fare has been reduced on the Valley Railroad to $6 for the round trip from San Francisco to Sacramento; second-class will be $1 50 each way.

A Ghostly Bombardment.

The Greenville South Alabamian has a correspondent who writes in this style: "On the 13th day of December last, about 4 o'clock P. M., Mrs. Ward, an old lady living with her son, being in the house alone, was surprised to see corn stacks, sticks, etc., strike the door shutter and fall on the floor. She arose, went to the door, but seeing no one, she became alarmed, and called her daughter-in-law, who was some paces from the house in the field, saying to her to run into the house, for the evil spirit was there—or 'the devil,' to use her own words. Mrs. Ward, on reaching the house and observing the phenomenon, was so much frightened that she was immediately seized with an aqua. Mr. Ward, who was some distance from the house with another man at work, were sent for. Pieces of wood, bark, corn stalks and light pine wood striking against the door-shutter still continued. He sent for several of his neighbors, who witnessed it through Sunday, Monday and Tuesday till 8 or 9 o'clock, when it ceased. Pieces of wood eighteen or twenty inches in length and two or three inches in diameter, were brought from the woods, a distance of one hundred yards or more. Wood placed near the fire for lighting purposes for the family was taken up in their presence and sprirted to the same door-shutter. Mr. Ward's daughter, who was washing the table ware, had all the teaspoons forced from her hands by this unseen power, and forced to the same place. A carpenter's chisel was found, which Mr. Ward says he

LATE NEWS ITEMS.

The Italian patriot and litterateur, Tommaseo, died on Friday, May 1st, at Florence. He had a stroke of apoplexy the previous day.

The Brooklyn Board of Superintendence on Thursday, May 7th, investigated the recent escape of a burglar, and fined the turnkey in charge of him £5.

At a meeting of the Committee of the Annuity Association, held in Dublin, May 7th, a resolution was adopted approving of the candidature of Mr. O'Connor Power for Mayo.

During the night of the 8th of May many vines were damaged by frost at Auxerre, Chalons, Sur Saone, Dijon, Usermont, Ferrant and in a portion of the Macon district.

The French Transatlantic Company have deposited the cash ten money demanded by the National Steamship Company for the conveyance of the passengers of the Europe to New York.

A motion was made May 7th in the Limerick Corporation to sell the property, as the Corporation is £27,000 in debt. After a discussion, the motion was adjourned to a future day.

The first meeting of the Navan Independent Home Rule Club was held May 6th in the Old College, Navan, for the purpose of forming local committees throughout the county.

The French Transatlantic Company's late derelict steamer Amerique left Plymouth on Saturday evening, May 2d, in charge of a crew furnished by the company from Havre.

The following gentlemen have been appointed to the Commission of the Peace: County of Roscommon—J. P. Plunkett Trail, of Cams, Roscommon. County of Mayo—Charles Bingham Jennings, of Mount Jennings, Hollymount.

At the Ayrshire Agricultural Society's show, held at Ayr, the judges unanimously awarded the silver medal of the society to Mr. W. Kerr, of Dalside, for a new improved safety lamp for stable and farm use.

The farmers dwelling along the shores of the river Boyne and Lough Neagh are in a state of great uneasiness at no appearance of the progressive dealings now being commenced, now that good weather has set in.

On Sunday, May 10, a meeting was held in the Cathedral Church, Marlborough Street, Dublin, under the Presidency of the Cardinal Archbishop, for the purpose of forming a parochial branch of the Catholic Union.

Anent the education of medical students a most important matter, the Lancet—the leading organ of the profession—strongly advises students to serve a preliminary apprenticeship in a country hospital before going to the metropolis to attend lectures.

On Thursday, May 7th, the Master of the Rolls, London, decided that brokers who did not deliver shares on the day agreed to were legally bound to pay compensation at the market value at the time the suit for breach of contract was decided, if plaintiff so elected.

On the morning of May 7th, while Mr. Richard Harris, late manager of the Waterford branch of the Provincial Bank, was standing in the stationery establishment of W. Kelly, Little George street, Waterford, he dropped dead. Mr. Harris was apparently in good health at the time, and was reading a newspaper.

The whole of the pitmen on the Earl of Durham's collieries (about four thousand in number) drew their gear on Friday, May 1st, and refused to work, in consequence of the non-settlement of the question. Other miners in extensive districts in Durham have also struck; and the few who have accepted the reduction are unable to resume work in consequence of the rejection of the terms by the engineemen.

Maxims of Cardinal De Retz.

Weak men never yield at the proper time.

There are small steps in great affairs.

I am persuaded that greater qualities are required to form a good party leader than to form an emperor of the universe; and that in the order of the qualities which compose him, resolution should walk hand in hand with judgment; mere march judgment, the principal use of which is to distinguish the extraordinary from the impossible.

Upon men of small understanding nothing makes so deep an impression as what they do not understand.

When fear rises to a certain height it produces the same effect as intensity. Fear never applies the proper remedy.

We should never play with fatue; we cannot too often embrace it when it is real, nor fly too far from it when it is false.

A man who mistrusts himself never truly confides in any one.

Men never believe others can do what they cannot do themselves.

The effects of weakness are inconceivable, and I maintain that they are far vaster than those of the most violent passions.

I have remarked that ill-founded sensibilities are ever the most obstinate. The reason of this is clear. As offences of this kind exist only in the imagination, they never fail to grow and swell in that receptacle, too fruitful in evil fancies.

To common place people the extraordinary appears possible only after it has been executed.

"As the Twig is Bent the Tree is Inclined."

We often hear mothers wondering why their daughters are so indolent, or so ignorant of household matters, or so careless in their habits. They complain, and scold, and fret over it, but they make no attempt to teach them better. The fault lies with the mother then—true; instead of training their girls to habits of industry and neatness, instead of instructing them in household ways, they have allowed them to grow up without any training at all.

Girls are not going to learn these things of their own accord; they must be taught, from the time they are old enough to learn, how to be neat and industrious. The teaching of them must be systematic, be given at their early years; it will not do to train them a month, then leave them three months to do as they please. Education is, after all the mighty magician that turns everything into gold.

Mothers, educate your girls to be neat and industrious, and you will never have to complain that they are not neat and industrious women. Train them carefully in housekeeping ways; teach them how to make puddings and cakes and pickles and preserves; show them how to keep tidy about a house, how to do everything in the neatest manner. Teach them both by precept and example; it is worth the trouble; for instead of having drones and sluts-about you will have well-trained and useful help.—Mrs. Leigh in the Southerner.

First-class fare has been reduced on the Valley Railroad to $6 for the round trip from San Francisco to Sacramento; second-class will be $4 50 each way.

A Ghostly Bombardment.

The Greenville South Alabamian has a correspondent who writes in this style: "On the 13th day of December last, about 4 o'clock P. M., Mrs. Ward, an old lady living with her son, being in the house alone, was surprised to see stones, sticks, etc., strike the door shutter and fall on the floor. She arose, went to the door, but seeing no one, she became alarmed, and called her daughter-in-law, who was some paces from the house in the field, saying to her to run into the house, for the evil spirit was there—or 'the devil,' to use her own words. Mrs. Ward, on reaching the house and observing the phenomenon, was so much frightened that she was immediately seized with an ague. Mr. Ward, who was some distance from the house with another man at work, were sent for. Pieces of wood, bark, corn stalks and light pine wood striking against the door-shutter still continued. He sent for several of his neighbors, who witnessed it through Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, till 8 or 9 o'clock, when it ceased. Pieces of wood eighteen or twenty inches in length and two or three inches in diameter, were brought from the woods, a distance of one hundred yards or more. Wood placed near the fire for lighting purposes for the family was taken up in their presence and spirited to the same door-shutter. Mr. Ward's daughter, who was washing the table ware, had all the teaspoons forced from her hands by the unseen power, and forced in the same place. A carpenter's chisel was found, which Mr. Ward says is his, and was missing in the community can be found. A rumbling noise similar to house-top attracted their attention, and on examination a bushel or more of dirt or earth was found there, which had the appearance of having been burned in the fire. Pieces of the earth is still in the house. Mr. Editor, if curiosity should carry you there soon, call on me. A large log, of ordinary capabilities are plenty safe and ably require asking up. All kinds of mechanical and agricultural machinery and evolve it with a new machine power, and he will soon feel like a new man, or rather like a man who has received a new lease of life, and is quite health to enjoy it. Many business men suffer from their fancied ignorance of the value of their specialties to business. Hard students are frequently afflicted with dyspepsia. Many a man of Monday's hard work is suffered to be worn out as a result of study. Many a man of Monday's hard work is suffered to be worn out as a result of study. Many a man of Monday's hard work is suffered to be worn out as a result of study other a man of the world—talk for months of the weather! You don't know, Joseph, a nobleman considers such as we are no more than the dust on his boots. He will pass us by with passing amusement in it his society; when the time comes, he will go away and never think of her again, although she, in tears, will lament the absence of one on whom she has placed her heart's pure and deep affection. Poor Father Rieck! It would be sad to see his old age made miserable by the unhappiness of his daughter."

The fisherman foamed with rage, and caught the vagrant by the arm in so tight a grasp that it seemed almost crushed in his hand.

"Vile wretch!" he exclaimed. "I could trample you under my feet. Prove to me that you have some reasonable ground for suspecting M. de Mival of such baseness. But, beware; if I discover that malice has prompted the cowardly insinuation, I will tear out your venomous tongue by its roots."

"I will not speak a word until you let me go. I was about to give you the proofs you ask, but I have no idea of losing my life in order to tell you a truth which you do not wish to hear. If you do not love Bella sufficiently to listen calmly when the happiness of her life is at stake, it would appear for me to attempt to open your eyes. Let me go!"

"Well," said Joseph, loosening his grasp upon Kolb's arm, "tell me quickly what proof you can produce."

He cast a glance towards the downs to see a path by which to escape, then he said in a whisper:

"I have had many proofs which chance long since threw in my way; but I will relate only what has just passed under my own eyes. About half an hour ago I was crossing the beach. Suddenly I saw M. de Mival seated in a sheltered spot, and near him was your cousin weeping. The sight filled me with anxiety, as it naturally should, having Bella so sincerely at heart. I concealed myself, for I was convinced I was about to learn a painful secret. Do you know what I saw, Joseph? I saw M. de Mival take Bella's hand and clasp it passionately."

"Well, what does that signify? Is that all you know?"

"What! does that not prove that they love each other? I then saw M. de Mival place his arm around your cousin's waist and press her to his heart," added the vagrant, as he ran swiftly down the path to avoid the effect of Joseph's anger. But Joseph, stubbed by the communication, ceased to forget his enemy.

After pursuing modonies for a few moments, he roused himself, shook his head, and walked briskly on the road leading to Admiralty.

"How stupid am I to believe the calumnies of that vile viper! What folly! M. de Mival has a noble heart. He would not have repay the great kindness of my cousin; it is a falsehood invented by the Vagrant of the Beach to make me unhappy. Ha shall not succeed; I laugh at his malice. Would that I had him now in my grasp. Come, come, I will think no more of the matter." Joseph walked with rapidity as if endeavoring to escape the thoughts which pursued him. By degrees he slackened his pace, then stopped; his eyes were bagged, his face pale. He muttered, shaking his head:

"But love, love blinds the mind. I do not believe the vagrant, and yet I cannot shake off the anxiety I feel; and I know how to read the countenance. Bella loves M. de Mival, and he—he—"

Joseph could not bring himself to pronounce the word that would reveal the truth.

"Pshaw! I am a fool to listen to the Vagrant of the Beach. He is a liar, and I will not believe him. If necessary, to escape, I will run."

While he was still speaking, the street resounded with cries of distress, and the people rushed pell-mell into the tavern, exclaiming:

"Fly, fly—the French! They come!"

And the greater part ran precipitately out of the opposite door to regain their dwellings through by-streets. A few only remained in the hall of the tavern behind the counter, and stopped through the windows.

At this moment the French soldiers appeared in the street; they were a military-looking mass. A flowing feather surmounted their caps, their dress was in tatters, and by their sides hung swords in steel scabbards. A tricolored scarf crossed the waist; and about half they were officers. One was older and taller than the other, and the manner and appearance of the younger were marked by timidity.

"Are these route fools!" said the latter to his companion, as they passed before the tavern. "They run like a flock of sheep at the bare sight of a French soldier. Do they suppose we are ogres?"

And a disdainful smile curled his lip.

"Their simplicity makes them fearful," replied the other. "Because they do not know our intentions."

"Say rather that they are the partisans of tyrants, and they cannot endure our presence; and yet France contends against all Europe to give such creatures a liberty they reject!"

"You think so," said the elder, with a smile of bitter pride; "but you are miserable as if persons were born. No people in the world have served more in the cause of liberty than the inhabitants of this country. Its whole history is one long heroic struggle for the preservation of liberty; but long since it has overpowered by numbers, and lost its independence. Therefore, rest assured that if they believed we brought them freedom, the people would receive us with open arms; but they loathe and detest us, because they suppose we merely seek war and conquest."

Items conversing the two officers reached the village cemetery. The elder of the two became unattached, and did not reply to the remarks of his companion. Suddenly he stopped before a wooden cross larger than those surrounding it; he removed his cap and silently bowed his head.

"What are you doing," asked the other in astonishment.

"It is the tomb of my parents," he replied, in a whisper; "my father and mother repose here."

"Your remarks would ridicule you were they to see you bowing before a cross of wood."

"The religion of the heart has nothing ridiculous in it," answered the other in a serious tone. "Let us continue our walk; it will take us at least three-quarters of an hour to reach the sea-shore. I will return here later. The place recalls my childhood and my early life."

They passed through the village, following the road which runs along the coast of Ilchirk and suddenly turns through the surrounding fields into the downs.

The young officer expressed his surprise to see the fields covered with an abundant harvest, while near the sea-coast sand-hills. His comrade explained to him that the decided separation between the arid downs and fertile fields is common throughout a wide extent of the Finnish coast.

"It originated probably," he said, "from the fact that the downs presented the drawing of the land beyond, and thus a sort of safeguard against invasion; a fertile soil and rich earth have been deposited upon the sand; for, ever since digging on a certain depth, sand of the downs is invariably found underneath."

"Thus same contrast," he added, "exists not only in the nature of the soil, but in the language and manners of the inhabitants. Here you say even in the race! for, although the fishermen and the cultivators of the land work incessantly in the most friendly terms, they never unite in marriage."

Thus conversing the two officers entered the downs. The walking was tedious, for at every moment they were obliged to climb a mountain of sand, then descend, only to ascend another and another.

"Is this the right road?" demanded the younger.

"Yes," replied the elder; "I recognize the path."

Too two officers stopped at a certain turn to enjoy the curious spectacle of the surrounding land, which seemed to have been tossed by an earthquake, when the younger said to his companion:

"Some one is behind us; by his dress I take him to be a fisherman."

The appearance of a man in the complete costume of a fisherman seemed to cause great pleasure to the old soldier, for they had met some scores at Admiralty, where all are either inhabitants or workmen.

"Yes," he replied, "he is a fisherman. The lappland jacket and the tar-pot passed under a red jacket such as that. I see myself again in that man."

"What a tread!" said the other. "He steps like an ostrich, and sways from side to side like an elephant."

"Most of the fishermen walk in that manner; it is the rocking of the vessel which gives them the habit. As to his height, it is the height of a Goliath. Ah, the brave Finnish village Vaudeskerk, the fishermen of which are noted for their excessive height, even among the men of the ocean."

"I would not be pleasant to fight with such a man, particularly with the fists. But what is the master with him! Is he afraid of us? He pretends not to see us, and covers his face with his cap."

The fisherman, as he came up to the two officers, sprang to the other side of the road and seemed to rapidly without looking at them.

"May God protect you, comrade!" cried out to him the old soldier in Flemish patois. "You are in a great hurry."

The fisherman, surprised to hear himself addressed in so friendly a manner in his native tongue, paused and looked back; and immediately the thought that the life of a man might depend upon his speed, and the necessity of succeeding in Father Rieck's the arrival of the French, urged him to continue on his way; and, walking still more rapidly, he soon disappeared.

"The fevril spirit possesses him," said the younger officer, laughing. "The fishermen of this country are as rough as wild beasts."

"I am at a loss to understand his conduct," replied the other. "This is not the custom of the Finlanders. On the contrary, the people of the beach of Admiralty are noted for their politeness and affability. Let us continue our walk; I am sure that we shall have time to impart his foolish fear to others. Its few minutes we will reach the end of our journey."

"Say what you please, your countrymen are not heroes; they have the bodies of giants, but the hearts of hares. Nature certainly made a mistake in their formation."

"You are wholly mistaken," replied his companion. "These simple people are capable of the noblest deeds. You see them in time of danger struggling with storm and w. re-cue you even them risking their own lives to save the lives of others, you would be filled with respect and admiration for their heroism. Their spirit of self-sacrifice arises solely from their natural generosity of heart, and never from an expectation of recompense; for their good actions are unknown to its world."

"It may be!" But in that case they seem very much like fools."

"Fool, indeed! Did we see them in time of danger struggling with storm and w. re-cue you even them risking their own lives to save the lives of others, you would be filled with respect and admiration for their heroism. Their spirit of self-sacrifice arises solely from their natural generosity of heart, and never from an expectation of recompense; for their good actions are unknown to its world."

"It may be!" But in that case they seem very much like fools."

"Fool, indeed!" muttered the young officer in his turn, as quickening his pace to keep up with his companion.

(To be Continued.)

---

The point of the following story depends upon a criminal English :—, style perhaps, known to readers generally—namely, that a sentence, when once pronounced, cannot be legally altered or added to by the judge.

The late Chief Baron O'Grady, many years ago, was sentencing a pickpocket in Cork ago, was sentencing a pickpocket in Cork to be whipped—a common punishment in those days. "You must," the Chief Baron said, "be whipped from the Old Gate to South Gate." "Shall luck to you, you old blackguard," said the prisoner, "you have done your work well." "And back again," said the Judge, as if he had been interrupted by the prisoner in the delivery of the sentence.

---

HYDROPHOBIA CURED.—A German forest-keeper has published in the Leipzig Journal a recipe he has used for fifty years, and which he says never failed in several men and a greater number of animals from horrible death by hydrophobia. The bite must, as soon as possible, be bathed with warm vinegar and water, and when this has dried a few drops of muriatic acid poured upon the wound will destroy the poison of the saliva, and relieve the patient from all present and future danger.

BONE AND SINEW AND BRAIN.

To white-skinned nations of the Western Sea,
Thus speaks a dark-skinned nation free:
To sickening age-old lands, cursed to and also
To the last dregs of misery,
Ye are a hideous sight of decks and of the last waves,
Ye are a hideous sight of decks and of the last waves,
As we put in for food that the slow ages grave
Of a race dead perforce ruled.

Cry—Fire in Chicago! and the lone island
With his sinewy hand turns on the land,
He does not look at the fire, but at a sword,
At the sinewy hand.

Cry—Famine in Ireland! and your noble deeds,
Cry your gentle ills in the ears of your needs,
The people forever to the lone island,
Also the gilded vices of the rich!
But the human muscle and not its as still
As the dull Leviathans about it,
But with fire, fear, a war with an artful will,
And reward like gentler thinkers!
For the days are gone when a special race
Took like a lord of a gilded train—and
Ah! the serfs that bowed to the highest place
Must have been a dull slave and brute!

Let the cant of "the march of mind" be heard—
Of the man or no—in this age
Shall lose the use of his arms and beard
In the gentleman's lasting plight.
Tis the dreadful of a solar effeminate,
The wish for an easy fortune;
For to be in no need for the good and great
Is the same thing to relate Dark.

A nation's best is a nation's bone,
As metal is in mightiest mind;
And the picture of either is there alone
In the form of a nation wise.
Not the cast of the nation's school
Unbiased by the hand and eye
Of the workers that by strife and toil
Are the makers of history.
And the nation's best is the nation's bone
Which is ever the last to weak to ride,
Only to struggle and die.
Only to struggle—and by the fatal race,
By the hand of the workers, fall.
Tis the head grown large and the vampire face
Of the gentleman's ideal Dark.

Our women have ceased the abstract fields,
And women with one third our build;
While the iled of works a pleasure yields
To the sinewy hand of the skilled.
And they are the masters of many cares
In their narrow and busy sphere,
While the cunning of the subtle engineer he others
Of the mighty engineer he others.

Ho! white-maned waves of the Western Sea,
Ho! white-maned waves of the land,
Hail strong-winged tides, with your power to free
The lands that ye wash and strand!
Ye are a nobler food of a hoper than nerve—
Ye are a nobler food of a hoper than nerve—
As ye toss to the main the lion of the waves
For bone and sinew and brain.

—Boston Post. JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY.

The Two Camps in Europe.

There is no use in attempting to disguise the fact under specious names, for, stripped of false pretenses, the truth is clear as daylight that in our day society in Europe is divided into two hostile camps. Two diverse ideas in fatal hostility are at the root of true civilization, and to the peace and prosperity of nations. Men are at war with one another. There is no longer a universal law to which the nations are subject, but the right to wage war self-will and the rule of force. It is the sign of a collapse, and betokens a return to barbarism. Among barbarians, who own no higher law than brute force, war is the normal condition. To such a state we are approaching, for Europe is rapidly becoming a vast camp, an arsenal for the preservation of Kruppp guns. At no period in history were the nations under arms as at the time, when, with the exception of the war to Spain, we were not engaged in conflict. There is no end in sight, because there is no security that an armed and powerful neighbor, in a favorable moment of disadvantage, strike an unexpected blow. Hate and revenge, if they still may be called by law and justice.

Upon one subject, the most important which concerns the welfare of the States of Europe to each other, necessarily bind several nations, and the whole world, is also to be found, as is but natural, in the domestic relations of the various countries. The Revolution has taken the place of law founded upon justice, and instead of the right of liberty, insurrection has become the right of every power or of military despotism. Governments and the people regard each other as natural enemies. Today the people rise in their fury and overturn the established Government; to-morrow the military dictator shoots at the people in the streets. Then follows an armed truce, and hostile factions are in permanent array. The Governments are insecure because they are founded upon violence and injustice, and the people are in a state of revolution because they have forsaken justice and made friends with force. Nowhere, then, is not only is that Government secure by turns the victims of popular fury and the avengers of outraged justice. Society, therefore, we are divided into hostile camps. On the one side there are the friends of order, the upholders of law and justice, and on the other there are the lovers, the unconscious of the establishment of the principles of the Revolution, with hands steeped in blood, or blackened with the smoke of conflagration. This is a picture, I grieve further still; it has destroyed what was once the glory of modern civilization—namely, unity of Christendom. Science has entered into the strife of divine law, and divided mankind into two hostile camps. Science is no longer unity in faith, but a frightful diversity of unbelief. Men are in rebellion against God as well as against the principle of human authority. Lawlessness, in one, is the mark of the other, and both are in a state of revolt. The primal evil is preparing the way for the advent of terrible calamities. Governments and people are alike its victims, and in the midst of the confusion, brute force, the last appeal from unscientific justice, claims to be universal arbiter. When law, human and divine, is finally replaced by self-will, and every man is his own master, and despair broke a saviour to deliver them from the curse and sword, the inevitable penalty of their rebellion.

To such a catastrophe revolutionary and infidel European society is hurrying on irresistible whirlwind. In every nation there are signs and tokens of the coming storm. The birth of a "day" calls against the surviving shock of a "day" calls against the surviving shock of a "day" calls against the surviving shock

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING SUNDAY, July 26—Sunday—Ninth Sunday after Pentecost. Saint Anne Mother of the B. V. M.
27—Monday—St. Pantaleon. Martyr.
28—Tuesday—SS. Nazarius, Celsus and Victor, Martyrs, and Innocent, Pope and Confessor.
29—Wednesday—St. Martha, Virgin. sis. Felix and Companions, Martyrs.
30—Thursday—St. Abdon and Sennen, Martyrs.
31—Friday—St. Ignatius of Loyola, Confessor.
August 1—Saturday—St. Peter's chains. The Machabees Martyrs.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....JULY 25, 1874.

JOHN MITCHEL.

In the last number of the New York Irish-American to hand, issue of July 18th, there is a brief leading article with reference to the departure of JOHN MITCHEL for Ireland. We find it stated therein that the veteran patriot sailed from New York on board the steamship "Celtic," Tuesday, July 14th. This would leave him due in Ireland somewhere about the date of the publication of this paper; but if the vessel make a quick passage she will arrive at Liverpool soon enough to have the landing of Mr. MITCHEL announced by us this week. Our New York contemporary alleges that though he declared his willingness to contest for a seat in Parliament and to take his seat if elected, Mr. MITCHEL's chief reason for making the voyage to his native land was a hope that the trip would be beneficial to his daughter, who, we regret to say, is not in the enjoyment of good health. We have before acknowledged our belief that the heroic old rebel can do no good for Ireland in the British House of Commons, and he himself has repeatedly declared that our national grievances are such that no amount of legislation in London can redress.

It is, we think, hardly within the bounds of possibility that any English Parliament will pass an act authorising the withdrawal of Queen VICTORIA's troops from Ireland and the hauling down of the Union Jack from the battlements of Dublin Castle. Yet, according to Mr. MITCHEL and many other honorable and patriotic men, these two proceedings constitute the only real and effectual remedy for the sad and unhappy condition of our fatherland. Other men, equally honorable and equally patriotic, think that the social and political progress of the country is now undergoing an improved without sectional separation from England—which is deemed impossible by some and even undesirable by others—by the obtaining of a Legislature with power to direct purely Irish affairs. A very large proportion, a strong majority we feel certain, of the Irish people are at any rate willing to help the leaders of gentlemen, usually known as Home Rulers, to test the probability of wresting this national Legislature from England. If they see that a struggle—even a peaceful struggle—is necessary to really fall back upon the last appeal of a misgoverned nation—revolution. Peaceably if possible, obviously if necessary, our people will be found ready and willing if they will never confess themselves conquered and abandon the fight. They possess too much manliness and too much love of country to make such a surrender.

We cannot bring ourselves to believe that the constitutional, parliamentary and legal policy is so hopeless that resort should be had to desperate measures. Sensible and intelligent Irishmen, at home and abroad, know the dangers of revolution, and are not ignorant of the disparity of forces existing between Ireland and England. There was a time, indeed, when they would have been urged into rebellion by the false representations of rash or unscrupulous men; but the events of the last twenty years have strengthened their judgment in these matters, and we have a fair conception that no hair-brained young man, who will not pause to think of the sad consequences of indiscretion, can or can be induced to attempt an insurrection. And as the thoughtful and hair-brained, inspired by professional "revolutionists," who work safely at a distance and make a good living out of "the cause," will only succeed in bringing misfortune upon themselves, upon their families and friends, and additional coercion measures upon their country, it behooves all true patriots to guard against their foolishness and treachery, and to counsel and advise intrigues of those who seek to bring about civil disturbance.

Mr. MITCHEL will learn a good deal from this visit to his native land; he will find out the relative strength, respectability and trustworthiness of the political parties into which his countrymen are divided; and, we are sure, he will lend his influence to that which he thinks most worthy of his esteem. He may effect a vast amount of good by removing dissensions, healing up differences, and curing estrangements that have made the people weak and powerless as a body. If he take part with any extreme section or give countenance to wild and impractical schemes, he will disappoint his best friends and only inflict injury on the cause he wishes to promote. But we have not the least fear of him, for we know he is as prudent as he is gallant when occasion requires it. We only hope that the British Government will not lay its heavy hand upon him and reincarcerate him as an "escaped convict." That they will do so if they think it safe or expedient we have little doubt. And, we confess, we do not place much reliance on the protection afforded by his American citizenship. The British Government are now imprisoning American citizens for acts done and words spoken upon American soil, and the Washington officials very tamely submitted to the indignity. It may be so to this invasion, too, though we hope not for Mr. MITCHEL's sake.

"HOODLUMISM."

The city papers are again discussing the social plague which has received the euphonious appellation of "Hoodlumism," and suggesting measures for its abatement. The matter is, indeed, a most important one. It is sad to know that there are so many young lads growing up to man's estate without learning any useful trade—without any desire to make an honest living—totally heedless of the amenities of civilized society and only remarkable for disorder and violence. To annoy and maim unoffending Chinamen, to insult unprotected females with ribald language, to assail storekeepers in their own homes and demolish their property, to get drunk as often as possible and indulge in riotous conflicts, are the glories of the San Francisco hoodlums. An occasional visit to the Police Court will prove to an intelligent observer that much of the crime and lawlessness afflicting this city is due to the wicked turbulence of youths whose ages range from twelve to twenty years. Most of them are the children of industrious and hard-working parents, who were never guilty of an illegal act in their lifetime; and how they came to be so destitute of moral principle, so devoid of honor, so unblushing in wrong-doing, is a problem which is more unpleasant to deal with than difficult of solution. It must be remembered that they are not ignorant or illiterate boys; they all have more or less education, and they cannot therefore be cited as illustrations of the theory that ignorance and ignorance go together. Nor can it be said that they have been led astray by bad example at home, because, in eight cases out of ten, as we said before, they are the offspring of parents who lead blameless and industrious lives.

Where, then, does the blame lie? We assert unhesitatingly that it lies with the manner in which they have been educated. We assert that, and often from immorality, they have been banished from the public schools, and the whole community is paying the penalty of the mistake. Teaching a boy how to read and write and perform some arithmetical processes—which is nearly all that is learned at these overrated institutions—will not make him any the more willing to respect the rights of his neighbors, or to practice that restriction to his impulses which society requires; it will enable him to reap certain personal advantages from those accomplishments, and that is all. He may or may not see them to the detriment of the community; that depends entirely upon the moral training he receives and the natural bent of his own disposition. We are particularly well aware that a kind of conventional or hypocritical morality is enforced by the text-books he reads; but it is quite devoid of authority to his mind, and he imagines himself at liberty to interpret for himself the lessons. Again, the whole tone of the instruction, is demoralising and of a character to injure rather than benefit. The idea running through it seems to be the development of individuality and personal independence at the possible sacrifice of all else. The pupil is encouraged to think for himself, to act for himself, and to set up his own standard of right and wrong, as in time when he is mentally and physically incompetent to do so. Hence the impudence of parental restraint, the domestic insubordination, the preference of self-indulgence to all notions of law, order and decency, which is the leading characteristic of the hoodlum tribe. The issuance of books calculated to undermine authority, of deferential self-denial, of veneration for that which is sacred, things which form a most important element in Christian education, are completely ignored. In short, the system of education pursued in the public schools—and, we are sorry to say, approved by a large portion of the community—renders both boys and girls unnaturally and consequently precocious, unduly stimulates that which is merely animal in their natures, and thus renders them likely to be bad astray by bad example. We know very well that numbers of public school teachers are strictly honorable and conscientious in the discharge of their duties, anxious to all they can for the intellectual and moral well-being of their pupils; hence we freely admit that the blame for failure does not in any attach to them as a class. The fault—it belongs to the pernicious system which a false idea of "liberalism" has forced upon them.

We do not pretend that all boys and girls educated in the public schools, or even any considerable minority, are made vicious by the training they receive therein; for that would be a sweeping assertion, without proof to back it, and, indeed, devoid of truth. It is the naturally weak—those deficient in moral principle—who cannot find there the support and direction they should get, that travel the road from bad to worse. Ill-disposed pupils are not subjected to any reformatory action, but on the contrary they exercise mischievous influence on those who are disposed to do well. The children who are properly looked after at home, who are naturally endowed with an aptitude to seek that which is good, and who can, therefore, discern and reject the temptations to wrong, come safe enough through the ordeal and turn out excellent members of society. It is the unfortunate, whose parents have neither time nor inclination to devote to their religious instruction, who grow up without positive faith of any kind, that cause the community so much trouble, and figure so prominently in the Police Court.

It is some comfort to know that the misdeeds of purely secular education are becoming more potent every year, and are fast producing an intense dislike for it in the minds of the more thoughtful and intelligent Americans. The genuine reason of the objection to the religious system—namely, that it would lead to propagate Catholicity—is almost daily being disowned, just as its co-relative, the genuine fact that he held any particular views respecting Christianity.

The way in which he has endeavored to avoid exposure, and the singular fashion in which he got together his investigating committee, are pitiful evidences that he has a bad case for defense. He himself nominated the committee of his own friends—his own congregation. Can they possibly be impartial judges? Can any rational being attach the smallest credit to their verdict? Suppose, for an instant, that a Catholic prelate were accused of similar misconduct, and that when called upon by public opinion for an explanation, he appointed half a dozen pew-holders, personal friends of his, to conduct an inquiry—what would the world say? Why, there would be a general outcry against such a miserable burlesque upon justice, and no man would pay attention to the sayings or doings of the spurious committee.

But in BECHER'S case the argument against this partiality are incomparably stronger, inasmuch as he is not even a clergyman in the discharge of their duties, anxious to all they can for the intellectual and moral well-being of their pupils; hence we freely admit that the blame for failure does not in any attach to them as a class. The fault—it belongs to the pernicious system which a false idea of "liberalism" has forced upon them.

We do not pretend that all boys and girls educated in the public schools, or even any considerable minority, are made vicious by the training they receive therein; for that would be a sweeping assertion, without proof to back it, and, indeed, devoid of truth. It is the naturally weak—those deficient in moral principle—who cannot find there the support and direction they should get, that travel the road from bad to worse. Ill-disposed pupils are not subjected to any reformatory action, but on the contrary they exercise mischievous influence on those who are disposed to do well. The children who are properly looked after at home, who are naturally endowed with an aptitude to seek that which is good, and who can, therefore, discern and reject the temptations to wrong, come safe enough through the ordeal and turn out excellent members of society. It is the unfortunate, whose parents have neither time nor inclination to devote to their religious instruction, who grow up without positive faith of any kind, that cause the community so much trouble, and figure so prominently in the Police Court.

It is some comfort to know that the misdeeds of purely secular education are becoming more potent every year, and are fast producing an intense dislike for it in the minds of the more thoughtful and intelligent Americans. The genuine reason of the objection to the religious system—namely, that it would lead to propagate Catholicity—is almost daily being disowned, just as its co-relative, the genuine

TILTON AND BECHER.

We publish elsewhere as much of the revelations made by THEODORE TILTON concerning the BECHER scandal as will give a correct idea of the character and extent of the charges brought against the pastor of Plymouth Church. We could fill columns with correspondence between the parties involved, with additional details of all the circumstances; but we are unwilling to sacrifice our space to such revolting stuff, and it is only a sense of responsibility to our readers which induces us to make mention of the matter at all.

We believe that few persons capable of reasoning correctly will rise from a perusal of TILTON's statement without feeling perfectly convinced of the guiltiness of HENRY WARD BECHER. It reads like a legal indictment; time and place are specified accurately, corroborative incidents are fully developed, and altogether a chain of evidence is formed which is not easily severed. Is there, the inquiry arises, any reason why TILTON has not voluntarily come forward with his astounding revelations; they have been literally forced from him by a blind, but persistent persecution, the object of which was to drive him out of the country. He has all along been anxious to clear up the scandal, to keep its disgrace to himself, and to shield those whose conduct had been infamous. The strange policy he carried on in a way to convict himself of the most unmanly and degrading pusillanimity and want of self-respect. We can only be the result of the sham investigation which is now going on, TILTON is bound to come out of it with a ruined reputation.

As to the pastor of Plymouth Church, he is evidently at heart a free-lover, and belongs to the same religious—or rather irreligious—school as VICTORIA WOODHULL and her companions. Nevertheless, he has not thought it dishonorable, or inconsistent with principle, to preach a gospel in which he did not believe, and so lead a life of prolonged hypocrisy. His own sister, who certainly is not disposed to wrong him, and who seems to have labored much to save him from exposure, alleged that of him long ago. The creed he preached from his pulpit in Brooklyn must have been as destitute of practical morality as it was of positive dogma—as much hostile to social order as it was antagonistic to Christian revelation. It was the man's wonderful power of oratory, his great elocutionary powers, his capacity for grasping at the questions of the day and dealing with them in a popular manner, that he held any particular views respecting Christianity.

Let English statesmen abrogate their abominable law of real estate entailment, and, by the encouragement of the many meritorious, prudent and frugal may obtain the ownership, in fee simple, of a portion of their native soil. Inspire the people of Ireland with confidence in themselves and in the Government, by the removal of their oppressive disabilities, and the grievance of the tenantry, which is the real source of their discontent, will soon be removed. Let the landholders and tenants entertain notions alike antagonistical to the interests and welfare of the laboring masses, and join in their efforts to crush out the spirit that dares rebel against any injustice or misusage that the aristocracy may feel inclined to inflict. The strike on the part of the farm hands in the East of England has done more than any recent similar act to draw the general attention of the world to the relations existing between the employers and the employed in that country. English aristocracy and the numerous horde of lickspittles who cringingly fawn upon the "upper crust" of society, affect to look upon the attempt of any laborer to rise above the condition of a serf as a crime altogether of pestilent summary and severe.

An English laborer is not only born in bondage and doomed to a life of toil, but is crushed so far down in the social scale as to be completely bereft of the privilege of obtaining a subsistence by any but the most gigantic bim birth. He literally "begs a brother of the earth to give him leave to toil;" and even then the English laborer seems to prefer a pittance in his own country than a competence in any other. Any seem to prefer starvation at home to a vastly improved condition in a foreign land with financial condition. This tenacious love of home on the part of the laboring masses is a strong argument against the aristocratic class, who have availed themselves of the ignorance of the people to the burdens of oppression from which they are unable, without prompt action upon the poor.

The following letter, which we find in the London Daily News from Vienna says the journals of these countries are unanimous in their condemnation of the recent proceedings at Madrid.

"In the matter of education, I fear we have not kept pace with the reconstruction of the country. Ministers of religion, my teachers, for our sermons, careful and unfailing attendance in the churches, and the observance of the least practical religious duties, are, and the general, for non secretary seeking assistance to a prohibition of teaching of daily practical religion (which is the only religion practically in mine) that no child can be taught who is not taught conformably what the Church says he is to do and how he is to be enabled to do it. I have always thought that the schools in connection with the Church ought to be vigorously supplemented by religious teaching, our children would be the better for it, we can do it

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

Heretical Evictions.

The Rev. Mr. Charlers, Catholic Administrator of Clare Island, has forwarded to us particulars of one of the saddest stories which ever the annals of the Irish poor can afford. We had thought that the bitterness of the ancient code, was dead; but a cry from Clare Island dispels the happy illusion. Twenty years ago the island became the property of the Law Life Society. The rents at that time were high and the people poor. The society raised the rents, and the present proprietor—an absentee—did not lower them. Very steadily the people ran into the gulf of pauperism, and successive failures in the crops completed their misfortunes. Their poverty presented them from obtaining fishing gear, and while food was in sight the wretched creatures were sexually suffering the pangs of hunger. Last year the potato failed, and cats were miserably thin. They did not pay their rents, and at last Quarter Sessions they were decreed. The Sheriff has already discharged his duty. On the 12th of this present month, thirty-six families, penniless and foodless, were made houseless. Possession was quietly yielded; but the pang was none the less bitter. As Charlers tells us that one child died from sunstroke as it lay in its cradle. A delicate woman, whose name he mentions, is not exposed to recover from the effects of exposure to the chilling night winds, and for which the blanket of the dark is but poor protection. The revered gentleman administered the last rites to this hapless creature as she lay under the shelter of a wall! Throughout the night this was her home, and, if she leave it soon, shall we see one cause for lamentation? Mr. Charlers has written a very plain and touching story about these poor people; and he has asked us to appeal to the public for help in this distressful business. Shall we appeal in vain? Shall these islanders, bereft of all that man can take, perish for the simple condition? Wesblink not. We confidently believe that hundreds of Irish men and women who read this tale will give their mite—their shilling or half-crown—to save their fellow-creatures from starvation. No sum is too small. Let help be ready, and if possible, generous. We shall be happy to receive and acknowledge subscriptions; and the Rev. Mr. Charlers is ready to dispense.—Dublin Freeman, June 26.

Germans Catholics and the Government.

The resolutions passed by the Mainz Catholic Association in condemnation of the present state of things in Germany, have been seized upon by the Prussian press and interpreted, as they were sure to be, as a hostile declaration against the Empire itself. The North German Gazette speaks of the Catholics as "a war party, hostile to the Empire and the nation;" and declares that its present action imposes on all the Governments, and especially that of Prussia, the duty of making use of all legal means for maintaining against it the dignity and independence of the State." It is also reported that a fresh note has been addressed to the Italian Government, proceeding to bring its policy in ecclesiastical matters into accordance with that of Germany. It is improbable that this effort, even if really made, will be successful, and the whole affair is only which bear fruit. Italy seems likely to be a battle-ground, and the bad blood which the German Government thinks of so little moment to be poured into the extirpation of genuine Catholicism. The Prussian Bishops, including the Bishop of Mainz, and the Archbishop of Freiburg in Breisgau, parts of whose dioceses are in Prussia, have issued pastoral conference epistles. In the absence of the two Archbishops, who are in prison, the Prince Bishop of Breslau presides, and the see of Cologne, Posen and Tréves are represented by delegates. The Chapter of the Diocese of Posen having, of course, refused to admit that the see is vacant and to elect an Administrator, the Government has appointed lay administrators of the Diocese, and a telegram in the Times of Monday is so far as to assert that it will enforce the decision of the Archbishop's cause from the Liturgy. It would be a singular spectacle if a Protestant Government interfered with the Canon of the Mass; it is, in fact, a revival of the old quarrel about the Gregorian, which was not an unfrequent feature, in the medieval history of the Church and the Empire in particular.—Tablet.

"Address" and "Extradition."

The subjects of a rather embarrassing nature for our rulers have been under discussion this week. The papers have are circulated, or perhaps invented, a "rumour" that an application would be made by the French Government for the extradition of Rochefort and his comrades. Communists if they remained in London; and the other morning an English member actually interrogated the Minister in the House of Commons on a matter of which Her Majesty's Government had been asked to urge on the Imperial father-in-law of Prince Orloff the necessity for his Polish political prisoners. Now, wast on earth could "Her Majesty's Government" do in either case? Even a most awkward events really took place? To refuse to give up the cowardly murderers of the "hostages"—the wretches who fought to lay in ashes a beautiful and populous city, the capital of their own country—to refuse to hand over these men, no say, to French justice on the ground that their offences were political, would be to insult permanently while her Majesty's Government holds in cruel and unfeeling prison for mere trivial political prisoners who drew no fire ages and burned no palaces, though in those their jailers to break them as "communists and incendiaries." And this as to her Majesty's Government appealing to the Czar to grant an amnesty to those lieges of continental ruler—Fenni and of Naples it would England to look at home and cease oppressing Ireland before she assumed to lecture other powers on how to deal with disaffection? Anxiety indeed! The Czar would simply remind England that she has a Poland of her own!—Dublin Nation.

Roelin Progressing.

Even a Czar of Russia is not proof against the contagion of political progress. A telegram from Berlin reports, as the result of deliberation and inquiries during the past two years, that the Emperor Alexander of Russia has resolved, at the new year will, to open next January in St. Petersburg four legislative chambers to aid him in the government of his empire. The first chamber will represent the nobility, the second the merchants, the third the agricultural classes and the fourth the artisans. Members will be deputed, in part by vote, in part by nomination at the heads of provincial or district, and each chamber will be presided over by the Commissioner of the Czar. It is said that some but vaguely hinted at, and that each assembly will be consulted on those matters only which bear directly on his constituents. Three consequences follow—that the chambers will be isolated, so as not to support or clash each other; that nothing can be debated unless on the invitation of the Czar; and that the assemblies will not make laws, but only give advice in the throne. This is far from constitutional rule, but it is also a good way from despotism pure and simple. When the chambers once find out how "advice to the throne" may create and foster public opinion, and when the people discover what public opinion can do, the days of Russian despotism are ended.—Dublin Weekly News, June 27.

The Persecution in the Jura.

The Bernese Government, in a circular conceding to French residents in the Canton who may be in immediate danger of death the sacrament of extreme unction," has been quoting a decree of the Republic of Besançon, as though he had forbidden his priests to give the succors of religion to dying persons across the frontier who are non French citizens. The Cardinal Archbishop has replied, of course, by a direct denial; and it would seem that the misunderstanding, if misunderstanding there is, has received the impetus of the negotiations through the French Ambassador. M. de Chevandard the Bishop of Besançon. What the Archbishop really said was, that he had ordered his clergy not to interfere in the ecclesiastical conflict in Switzerland by assuming any regular pastoral charge; but this appears to have been misconstrued by the Federal Council of the Berne Government as a prohibition against administering the sacrament of religion, even to the dying, unless they were French. What chance the unfortunate Catholics of the Jura have of receiving those succors from any enemies is apparent from the treatment of a Protestant Jew priest, who was refused by the Bernese frontier to give the last Sacraments to a dying person to his parish. The priest, the Abbé Sandoz, a native of Ste. Ursanne, was seized by the gendarmes, threatened with a revolver and carried off bodily by a party of Radicals, the gendarmes looking on; the Blessed Sacrament, the holy oils, his breviary, his stole and rosary were taken from him, and he was stripped and searched, and treated with every kind of personal indignity. He was then dragged on foot the whole way to Porrentruy; kept by the Prefect M. Froid, thirteen days in prison, and then taken in the same way back to the frontier, without having had any trial; and the Blessed Sacrament and other objects which had been taken from him, and retained during his imprisonment, being at last restored to him.—London Tablet.

The Pope's Peace.

At an audience given last week by the Holy Father to Mgr. de la Tour d'Auvergne, Archbishop of Bourges, France, the latter presented to his Holiness the sum of 50,000 francs collected as Peter's Pence among the faithful in that archdiocese. To the Pope, the faithful in that archdiocese. To the Pope, the faithful in that archdiocese. To the Pope,

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

Rev. Father Irwin has been appointed P. P. of Castlegregory, in room of the late Rev. John O'Kane.

Rev. Thomas Doyle, C. C., Dublin, died on the 22d ult., of a virulent fever caught in the discharge of his duty. He was in his thirty-seventh year and the fourteenth of his priesthood.

Rev. Garrett O'Sullivan, P. P. of Parteen and Meelick, died on the 18th ult., at the parochial residence, Ardnacrusha, in the seventy-fourth year of his age and the forty-second of his ministry.

We deeply regret to announce the death of Rev. Eugene O'Rorke, P. P., of Killucan. This venerable ecclesiastic had attained the patriarchal age of eighty-nine years, was greatly loved for his many virtues, and will be deeply lamented by all.

On Saturday, June 27, the beautiful chapel of Drang, situated midway between Cavan and Cootehill, was broken into by burglars, and a box of vestments and some sacred utensils stolen therefrom. The occurrence has caused great indignation in the district.

His Holiness has addressed a letter to the three Austrian Cardinals, cordially expressing his admiration for their firm attitude in opposing the new ecclesiastical laws. The Cardinals in question are the Archbishops of Vienna, Salzburg and Prague.

Rev. John McEvoy, S. J., now stationed at St. John's church, Frederick, Md., is the oldest Catholic priest in North America. He was ordained by Archbishop Carroll, sixty years ago, and has, consequently spent over half a century in the ministry. He is now eighty-eight years of age.

Rev. James Enright, P. P., Ballingary, has been appointed parish priest of Bruree and Kilmallock, in the room of the late Rev. Garret O'Sullivan, deceased, by the Most Rev. Dr. Butler. There has been no appointment as yet to the parish of Ballingary.

We regret to announce, says the Limerick Reporter of the 23d June, the death of Rev. James Healy Roche. The deceased gentleman had been for some years curate of Knockaderry, and subsequently at Ardagh, but during all that time he was unable to perform any missionary duty for many years past.

On the 21st June Very Rev. Thomas N. Burke, O. P., preached in the splendid Roman Catholic church of Rathkeale. The object was to promote a fund for the completion of the spire of the church, and the payment of the debt contracted by Very Rev. Dr. O'Shea. A sum of £150 was realized.

The celebrated Maestro Cappocci, of Rome, has composed a new Mass, which will be performed in the church of Ara Coeli on the feast of the sixth centenary of St. Bonaventure, the great Doctor of the Franciscan Order. Almost all the great musicians in Italy will be present at the first performance of this work.

On Sunday, June 28, the new tower and spire lately erected in connection with the Catholic church, Banagher, was solemnly dedicated by Most Rev. Dr. Conroy. There was an immense attendance of the Catholics of the town and surrounding districts. An eloquent sermon was preached by Father [illegible] on the building fund was taken up, and a handsome sum realized.

At a meeting of the Irish Catholic bishops, held June 26th, it was decided to postpone the holding of the National Council, ordered by the Holy See last December, to July next year. The postponement has been caused by its being found impossible in any shorter period to hold the necessary preliminary meetings through the four provinces for the appointment of the Archbishops and Bishops to be consulted.

The following promotions are spoken of at Rome as likely to take place soon. Mgr. Vannutelli will be sent as Nuncio to the Brazils; Mgr. Bianchi, who is in La Haya, will go as Nuncio to Munich; Mgr. Nina will go as Nuncio to Madrid; Mgr. Pacifici to Lisbon, and Mgr. Cataldi will succeed Nuncio to La Haya. The post which capital have been left vacant by Mgr. Nina is said to be appointed Secretary of Briefs.

At the recent ordinations held at St. Patrick's College, Maynooth, Ireland, the following gentlemen were promoted to Holy Orders during the week ending 24th June: To Priesthood—Rev. John O'Connell, Caahe; Rev. James Walsh, do.; Rev. Daniel O'Leary, Rosscarbery; Rev. Timothy Mc Laughlin, Kerry; Rev. John Hardy, do.; Rev. Philip Pierce Condon, Waterford; Rev. Eugene Geoghegan, Cork; Rev. Edward Dempsey, do.; Rev. Maurice Murphy, do.; Rev. Cornelius Holmes, do.; Rev. Jeremiah O'Hee William Buckley, do.; Rev. John Barry, Limerick; Rev. Denis O'Driscoll, do.; Rev. Denis Riordan, do.; Rev. Timothy Hickey, do.; Rev. Patrick Dooley, Limerick; Rev. Denis O'Hea, Rosscarbery; Rev. James Dooley, Limerick; To Sub-diaconate—Rev. Patrick Cotter, Kerry; Rev. Daniel Kenny, Kerry; Rev. Daniel Cotter, do.; Rev. Patrick Dillon, do.; Rev. Michael Mahony, Killarney.

The Newfoundlander, published in St. John's, Newfoundland, gives an interesting account of the nuptials of Miss Agnes Mary Madeline, Superior of the Presentation Convent in that city. The interesting event was celebrated on the occasion of the profession of the Presentation Nuns in the convent of Galway, in the twenty-seventh year of her age, and received the solemn veil from the hands of Archbishop Mac Evilly, after years of religious life inspired by a burning zeal for the greater glory of God, the ardent wish to labor in the vineyard of the Lord, and the desire to carry the glad tidings of the Gospel to the benighted souls of the Antipodes. The happy bride, accompanied by Father Ambrose, left Galway on the 3rd of May last, and after a long and fatiguing journey, arrived in St. John's towards the close of the year. She was accompanied by three other professed religious of the same Order.

There was a meeting of the Archbishops and Bishops on the 25th of June at the Catholic University, which was attended by the Irish Cardinal Cullen, the new Primate, the Archbishop of Cashel, seven bishops. On the 26th by unanimous election the Cardinal Archbishop of the bishops the University, and the Holy church to will attended in the University for the purpose of conferring, in sacred Theology by degree of Thomas Magrath and Michael Meagher, from the Diocesan Seminary of St. Jerome, Clonliffe. The thesis included no less than one hundred and eighteen propositions, on revelation, on the Church, on Scripture and tradition, and on several subjects of special and secondary theology. The disputation, which was conducted in Latin, lasted for a considerable time, and was listened to with interest by several clergymen as well as many of the students and staff of the University. A large number of students were examined, not alone the civil law students attending lectures in Stephen's Green, but also many from St. Kyran's college, Kilkenny, the French colleges, Blackrock, and Holy Cross, Clonliffe, all affiliations of the Catholic University. These students matriculated at their several colleges, and now came forward, some to pass the scholarship examinations in Trinity, some as candidates for the Bachelorship in Philosophy, and some for the Doctorate in Divinity.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS.

About thirty feet square of Meiggs' old wharf has caved into the bay.

Mrs. Maurice Dore and daughter, who were injured by the running away of their horses on Saturday, are in a comparatively easy state, and will soon recover.

Montgomery Queen's menagerie and circus is expected to arrive on Monday next. Forty vans are required to move the establishment.

Thomas P. Ryan has received his commission as Captain and Aid-de-Camp on the staff of Brigadier-General Cadwalder, commanding the Fifth Brigade.

Denis Jordan has been awarded the contract for building the House of Correction, at a cost of $150,000. Cornelius Holmes was elected Superintendent, at a salary of $200 a month.

Howard G. Homer, Secretary of the Commercial Insurance Company, was drowned in Lake Pularoma, San Mateo county, last Sunday afternoon, while bathing, by the upsetting of his boat.

Mr. J. C. Duncan has paid Moore, Howard and Tessedenscher $110,000, gold coin, as the first instalment on the purchase of the southeast corner of Montgomery and Colorado streets.

The personal property tax is now due, and to accommodate the working classes Tax Collector Austin will keep his office open saturday evenings from 7 to 9 o'clock. He is also notifying taxpayers by postal cards.

Gas mains were last week laid along Santa Clara street westerly from Fourteenth avenue to Harrison street, and thence northerly along Harrison to Sixteenth. The large assemblage of Joseph Sedgley and Richard O'Neill, on Santa Clara street, were brilliantly illuminated on Friday night in honor of the event.

The Supreme Court has at last decided the Sime case, holding that the mining stock in dispute was the property of John Sime & Co., and not of King. The result of the decision will be that all of the creditors of John Sime & Co. will be paid in full, those of B. F. Hastings & Co. of San Francisco will receive about fifty cents on the dollar, and Mrs. Sime will be left with a comfortable competence.

The complimentary ball under the auspices of Division No. 6, Ancient Order of Hibernians, which took place on Friday evening last at Irish-American Hall, attracted a very large attendance. La Salle Band furnished music in the upper hall, and the lower hall was occupied by the jig dancers, a genuine Irish piper furnishing the music. At ten o'clock the prize waltz was danced—won by J. J. Lynch and Miss Daniel O'Connell. The prize, a gold watch, Ticket No. 50, sold by Mrs. Alexander, was in the hands of Miss Dolan. The committee in charge of the ball were: Michael McCormick, Chairman; Committee of Arrangements—John McCann, Peter Burns, James Collins, James Cody; Committee—and Chief Peter Leary, Thos. Daly, Peter Butler, Patrick Thomas Kennedy, Jas. Finnegan, P. Sullivan, P. O'Malley, Patrick Hinchion, Thos. Hinchion, John Riordan, Hugh Lynch, Jerry Sullivan, John Dunphy, Patrick Kennedy, Jas. Brennan, Jr., Jas. Sheehan.

Bishops Conferred in England.

Why could men be made peers, baronets, and Privy Councillors by doing some public service to their country of a public character; because thousands and tens of thousands of men, say millions, are by the labor to get wealth, by themselves doing service to their country, from a humble merchant to the humble deliverer of coal. No man ought to have a title that does not denote some direct public or quasi-public service, or some in direct connection acknowledged service, to his country. The Jamaican rule, though, best of rule but little observed, is good, if you have done eminent service to the country, by your literature or science you may have been done, or strongly suspected and believed to have been done, in rather a question manner. Thus our Tennysons and Brownings sometimes get baronetcies as Sir Tennyson, Sir Browning, but the ordinary course is for literary men to get no title—nothing that is worth having—because they have done it because they have done it—no election contest, no military physical courage, some fine lawyer, gift or money supported their cause, by party unanimously supported them, rightly or rightly, for a long time, rightly, roughly or rightly, many simply because; and many simply because they are eminently qualified. For the same reason Mr. George Elliot, late manufacturer from Dunham, has been made a baronet, Mr. Elliot began life as a printer, and is now a manufacturer of every-the-Navy-military physician, and I know of no good reason why he should not be ennobled by Parliament. Now we have not enough of ennobled aristocracy, whose business was celebrated on that occasion, is now in her seventy-seventh year, was born in the year 1798, in the county of Galway, Ireland. She entered the novitiate order of the Presentation Nuns in the Convent at Galway in the twenty-seventh year of her age, and received the solemn veil from the hands of Archbishop Mac Evilly, after years of religious life inspired by a burning zeal for the greater glory of God, the ardent wish to labor in the vineyard of the Lord, and the desire to carry the glad tidings of the Gospel to the benighted souls of the Antipodes. The happy bride, accompanied by Father Ambrose, left Galway on the 3rd of May last, and after a long and fatiguing journey, arrived in St. John's towards the close of the year. She was accompanied by three other professed religious of the same Order.

Theology in Parliament.

The Church of England synod and two Presbyterian synods have been holding meetings at Halifax, N. S., and have been discussing the feasibility of uniting with one another and with kindred Canadian sects. The result has not been announced, but may easily be conjectured, for the elements of the proposed union are as incongruous as oil and water. It is not in their nature to combine. The agitation of the subject is mainly notable for the evidence it affords of the Church of England's growing weakness, and its desperate desire to give itself a semblance of new vitality by means of odd coalitions. In England there is a strong faction which wants to unite with the Church itself; another section is eager to form an alliance with the Dissenters, and so on. All these negotiations show that "the Church by law established" is considerably split up, and would scatter into a hundred hostile camps if it were not held together by the golden bond of salaries and subsidies. Even this however, the parsons are beginning to sneer under the censorship of Parliament. They begin to see how ridiculous a position is occupied by a so-called "Church" which is absolutely under the control of a lay parliament. Towards the middle of last month a large meeting of the "English Church Union" was convened in London. The members and leaders there present for the established," yet they declared it was high time now that their "Church" should be set free; that the present Parliament, containing Catholics, Jews and infidels, was particularly unfit to make laws for the "Church;" and much more to the same effect. It is certainly curious that Jews, Catholics and infidels should have a voice in the management of England's state religion. Yet such is in fact the case; for any member of the House of Lords is a voice not only in regulating the secular interests of that body, but also in framing its creeds and rituals! Strange that human clergy can be found still enough to pin their faith on a human organization which has evidently so confessedly derived from Luther more than a secular legislature.—Irish World.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, Thursday, July 23d, 1874.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has considerably fallen off for export the market has been moderate. We quote—Extra at $4 25 a 4 75 and superfine at $3 50@3 90 per bbl. In sacks $3 10@3 40 per 100 lbs.

WHEAT—The market has ruled quiet all the week past. At the close there is quotable at $1 37½ for new and $1 70 for old, per 100 lbs.

BARLEY—The demand has been very good notwithstanding the quantity of the crop that is coming in. We quote the range for feed at $1 10@1 20; new, $1 07½@1 12½ per 100 lbs.

OATS—There was a fair demand, at unchanged prices, during the past week. Quotable at the close at $1 30@1 75 per 100 lbs.

HAY—The receipts have been light during the week, with a good demand. Quotable at the close at $20@25 for Wheat; $20@25 for Barley.

STRAW—Quotable at 75c@$1 per bale.

BRAN—Quotable at $20@22 50 per ton.

MIDDLINGS—Quotable at $25@27 50 per ton.

BARLEY MEAL—Quotable at $1 50@1 60 per 100 lbs.

CHICKEN FEED—Cracked corn, $1 50@1 60; Cracked Wheat, $1 50@1 60; Cracked Barley, $1 50@1 60; Mixed Feed, $1 50@1 60; Oats, $1 50@1 60; Whole Corn, $1 50@1 60; Whole Barley, $1 50@1 60; Whole Wheat, $1 50@1 60; Whole Oats, $1 50@1 60; Whole Mixed Feed, $1 50@1 60; Whole Corn, $1 50@1 60; Whole Barley, $1 50@1 60; Whole Wheat, $1 50@1 60; Whole Oats, $1 50@1 60; Whole Mixed Feed, $1 50@1 60.

VEGETABLES—The receipts have been fair for the season, and the market is steady. We quote—Potatoes, $1 25@1 50 per 100 lbs; Onions, $1 50@2 per 100; Cabbage, $2 per 100; Tomatoes, $2 per box; Cucumbers, $1 per 100; Peppers, $2 per box; Egg Plant, $2 per box; Green Corn, $1 per 100; Beans, $2 per box; Peas, $2 per box; Asparagus, $2 per box; Artichokes, $2 per box; Okra, $2 per box; Squash, $2 per box; Pumpkin, $2 per box; Watermelons, $2 per box; Muskmelons, $2 per box; Honeydew, $2 per box; Casaba, $2 per box; Persian, $2 per box; Crenshaw, $2 per box; Cantaloupe, $2 per box; Honeydew, $2 per box; Casaba, $2 per box; Persian, $2 per box; Crenshaw, $2 per box; Cantaloupe, $2 per box.

FRUITS—The receipts have been free with a fair demand. We quote the range at $1@2 per box.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh roll, good to choice, 21 @23c; Brits, 23@25c; packed roll, 20@22c; Oregon, 20@22c; do Brits, 20@21c; Eastern Brits and tubs, 20@22c.

CHEESE—California, 12@13c; Oregon, none; Eastern, 12@13c.

EGGS—California, at 19@20c per d.z.; Eastern sugar-cured, 19@20c; Breakfast do, 20@21c; Eastern pickled, 18@19c; Cumberland, 18@19c; Ham, 18@19c; do do, 19@20c; do in sugar, 18@19c; do in cotton sacks and pickle, 18@19c.

FRESH MEATS.

BEEF—For first quality, 7@8c; other grades, 5@6c per lb.

VEAL—At 6@8c per lb.

MUTTON—At 6@8c per lb.

LAMB—6@8c per lb.

PORK—Dressed, grain-fed, 8½@9½c; do fed, 8@8½c; do fed, 7@8c per lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

TURKEYS—Live, large, 17@20c; Small, 15@16c.

YOUNG ROOSTERS, $7@8 per doz; Broilers, $5 50@6 per doz.

OLD ROOSTERS, $6@7 per doz.

HENS—$6@7 per doz.

DUCKS—$6@7 per doz.

GEESE—$8@10 per doz.

GAME—$4@5 per doz.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

DRESS GOODS

Which we offer the public at very

LOW PRICES.

Consisting, in part, of Black and Fancy

SILKS,

IRISH POPLINS, SHAWLS,

And a full supply of

Fancy Goods.

We invite special attention to our supply of

BLACK GOODS.

Table Linens & Housekeeping Goods

To Hotels and Boarding Houses at Wholesale Prices.

RIBBONS

A Specialty, at importers' rates.

Orders from the country promptly attended to at lowest prices.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

MARKET STREET,

OPPOSITE THIRD..... SAN FRANCISCO

au12

Subscriptions Received.

Oakland—A. McHenry..... $2 00
M. Walsh..... 2 00
John Kearney..... 2 00
Rev. Father Mahoney..... 2 00
San Jose—Peter Dolan..... 2 00
Peter Dolan..... 2 00
Santa Clara—Rev. P. Boyle..... 2 00
Rev. Simon Peter Keefe..... 2 00
Gilroy—Rev. P. Farrelly..... 2 00
Watsonville—F. McAllister..... 2 00
" " 2 00
Abbey Home—Rev. Father Murphy..... 2 00
Second Home—Father M. Murphy..... 2 00
Salem—Rev. Father Murphy..... 2 00
Knights Ferry—Rev. C. Lafrea..... 2 00
Stockton—Rev. Joseph O'Leary..... 2 00
Rev. Father Cullen..... 2 00
Peter Donnelly..... 2 00
Rose & Cottle..... 2 00
O. Sacramento..... 2 00

A Brilliant Record of Cures.

An American humorist tells us that it would have been money in his pocket if he had been without a stomach, and then proceeds to figure up the cost of a chronic dyspepsia, in which he is a martyr, and which he says is impossible to cure. On this point "Josh Billings" (for he is the party referred to) is mistaken. Unless his stomach differs from all other dyspeptic stomachs, Hostetter's Bitters will cure him in less than three months. This it would be safe to guarantee under any penalty. There are a few, very few, actual specifics for disease in existence, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters may be set down as one of them. Persons of indigestion by slower falls. Persons who had suffered for many years, and most every conceivable species of torture from this so-called complaint, have been permanently cured with the Bitters in six weeks. Hundreds of such instances are on record, and—coincidently the testimony of prominent men in every walk in life stamps physicians among the number. But this celebrated vegetable preparation is something more than a remedy for any kind of disease. It is also an invigorating tonic, in every complaint in effect as an direct and immediate stimulant. Debility, nervousness, loss of appetite, rheumatism, kidney complaints, and all diseases originating in disorders of the digestive organs, are its peculiar province. As a safeguard to the malarious districts, it is unrivalled. The new settlements in the West and all other parts of country infested with intermittent fevers should not be without it. Of the various preparations of bitters now in the market, we are pleased with this incomparable analogue, which will have a long career of usefulness before it. Those who have used it will not be induced to try any other, and to those who have not we say, try it, and be convinced that it is the best.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

FRATINGER & NOLL

WILL EXHIBIT RARE NOVELTIES during the coming week in handsome

LINEN SUITS.

NEW STYLES,

Embroidered and Braided in all the new Shades and Designs.

NEW STYLE CLOAKS,

—CONSISTING IN—

Drap d'Ete, English Walking Jackets, Dolman's Talmas, and Polonaise,

Trimmed and Inserted with YAK LACE and PASSEMENTERIE, both Plain and Beaded.

HOUSE WRAPPERS!

A Large Assortment, consisting in

French Calico, Cashmere and Silk.

STREET SUITS.

In all New and Desirable SPRING GOODS, made up stylish and handsomely trimmed in two colors or with silk.

SPRING SILKS

Can be found in all Shades and at all Prices.

PASSEMENTERIES!

PASSEMENTERIES!

The Largest and Best Assortment of

BEADED GIMPS,

ORNAMENTS,

BUCKLES,

SLIDES,

FRINGES

AND BUTTONS.

YAK LACE AND INSERTIONS,

Both Plain and Beaded, in large variety.

FRATINGER & NOLL,

Leading Cloak and Suit House of the City,

10 Montgomery Street.

au22-1f

E. SUPPLE,

638 Market Street,

HAS NOW A FULL AND COMPLETE assortment of Spring and Summer

DRESS GOODS

Consisting of

SILKS,

IRISH POPLINS, SHAWLS,

And a full supply of

Fancy Goods.

We invite special attention to our supply of

BLACK GOODS.

TABLE LINENS AND HOUSEKEEPING GOODS

To Hotels and Boarding houses at Wholesale Prices.

RIBBONS

Orders from the country promptly attended to at lowest rates.

E. SUPPLE,

638 Market street..... Nearly opposite Fourth

mch1 3m

E. O'REILLY,

Importer of, and Dealer in

Mirrors, Chromos, Engravings,

LITHOGRAPHS—Plain and Colored,

PICTURE FRAMES, &c.

CORNER OF MARKET AND FIFTH STREETS, San Francisco.

CORNER OF MARKET AND FIFTH STREETS, San Francisco.

GOODS SOLD ON EASY WEEKLY OR MONTHLY INSTALLMENTS.

Who would have a DULL AND GLOOMY HOME, when it could be cheered by a BRIGHT AND PLEASANT CHROMO, Engraving or Lithograph, costing no more than a FEW DOLLARS, at E. O'REILLY'S?

Who would fail to evoke the FONDEST MEMORIES of this world, when for a FEW DOLLARS can be bought of E. O'REILLY a beautiful picture representing, with fidelity, "The Lakes of Killarney," "The Groves of Blarney," "The Vale of Avoca," etc., etc.?

Who would not be constantly reminded of the DEAREST HOMES of HEREAFTER, when for a FEW DOLLARS, E. O'REILLY supplies a fine picture of "The Crucifixion," or "The Sacred Heart," "Madonna," "St. Bridget," "St. Patrick," "St. Cecilia," "St. Joseph," etc., etc., many of which are also published in chromos?

GOODS CAREFULLY PACKED AT LIGHT CHARGE FOR LAND C[illegible]

COUNTRY ORDERS FILLED WITH CARE AND PROMPTITUDE.

RE-FRAMING and RE-GILDING.

E. O'REILLY,

Corner Market and Fifth Streets, San Francisco.

au11-6m

IMPORTATION DIRECT.

M. SHORT

PIONEER TAILOR,

COMMERCIAL STREET, Corner of Leidesdorff.

An Inspection of THIS SPLENDID STOCK Is respectfully invited. A perfect fit guaranteed.

Remember, my Prices to Order are—

[illegible] $ 15
[illegible] 18
Business Suits 20
Beaver Suits 30
Finest Pure Beaver Suits 40

A Large Assortment of Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, Being the NEWEST FASHIONS, both in material and colors, which is now offered at prices which Cannot be touched by any other house in the city.

M. SHORT,

527 Commercial Street,

SAN FRANCISCO au8

GRAY'S

Music Stores and Music Publishing House,

628 and 630 Clay Street, San Francisco, and 101 First street, Portland, O.

Are the only Engraving and Publishing House on the Coast.

STEINWAY PIANOS AND BURDETT ORGANS.

GUILD, CHURCH & CO. PIANOS AND SHONINGER ORGANS.

CARL RENNING'S, KRAKUER & BACH KRANZ BURDETT, AND M. GRAY Squares and Uprights.

The Largest Stock of Music on the West.

BACON & COMPANY'S PIANO MANUFACTORY SAN FRANCISCO

Paper Ruling and Book Binding.

Neatly, Promptly, Cheaply,

PERFORMED BY

Bacon & Company,

Corner Clay and Sansome Sts.

Country Orders will receive equal consideration at those from our city patrons.

MENEELY'S BELL FOUNDRY,

WEST TROY, NEW YORK.

Established in 1826.

CHURCH, ACADEMY, FACTORY AND OTHER Bells, made of copper and tin, warranted satisfactory, and hung with our Rotary Patent Reversible Mounting, the most recent and desirable Bell Hanger. For prices and catalogues apply to

MENEELY & COMPANY, West Troy, New York

CASH TEA STORE.

GEO. T. HANLY & CO.,

DEALERS IN

TEAS,

COFFEES AND SPICES,

922 MARKET STREET,

Between Stockton and Powell.....SAN FRANCISCO.

au8-6m

KENNEDY, O'NEILL & BRENNAN,

DIRECT IMPORTERS OF

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRY GOODS

116 and 118 Third Street,

Corner of Minna.....SAN FRANCISCO

ONE PRICE ONLY.

au15

PRINTING

Paper Ruling and Book Binding.

Neatly, Promptly, Cheaply,

PERFORMED BY

Bacon & Company,

Corner Clay and Sansome Sts.

Country Orders will receive equal consideration at those from our city patrons.

THE MONITOR:

The Only Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

LYONS & BARRY, - - - - Publishers.

DENIS LYONS. JOHN V. BARRY.

RICHARD O'SULLIVAN.....EDITOR.

DENIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—626 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny, (Up Stairs.)

All communications should be addressed to LYONS & BARRY.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):

Sent by Carriers, per week..... 10c
Sent to Subscribers, per year..... $ 5 00
" " " six months..... 2 75
" " " three months..... 1 50
Single copy (Lady's Book)..... 25
" " (Monitor's Fashion Magazine)..... 5
" " (Peterson's Ladies' Magazine)..... 5

ADVERTISING RATES:

1 square, 1 month..... $ 5 | 6 months..... $30 00
1 " 3 months..... 12 00 | 9 " ..... 45 00
1 " 6 months..... 20 00 | 12 " ..... 60 00

Special rates will be strictly adhered to.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

LINES BY ROBERT EMMET.

[illegible]

VOL. XVII. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, AUGUST 1, 1874. NO. 41.

Recantance of The O'Donoghue.

If The O'Donoghue did not feel what he said, says the London correspondent of the Liverpool Daily Post, he acted the hypocrite to perfection. His voice and gestures were those of a man full of an earnest and conscientious hatred of Home Rule and its advocates. He lashed Mr. Butt with a passionate vigor which suggested something else than political feeling. He ridiculed Home Rule as the "greatest bubble of this day," a bubble which would collapse if, for their own mischievous ends, a few editorial and other fanatics did not keep it ostensibly blown. Naturally enough a speech so slashing greatly excited the House, which by the time was well crammed. The Home Rulers howled at it, and the Tories cheered. When it was ended, about a dozen gentlemen rose together, and the Speaker's nod was given to Mr. O'Connor Power, the young Home Ruler lately sent over by the county Mayo. By an unfortunate mistake, Mr. Power's speech, written in advance, appeared in the Freeman's Journal yesterday, and so the soon-to-be-famous was greeted by ironical cheers of disapproval, which lasted at least a minute. He was not to be put down. He had a rod in pickle for The O'Donoghue, and in spite of cries he proceeded to flay. The O'Donoghue, not very long ago, made speeches in favor of Home Rule; he pleaded to the wildest key of Irish platform oratory. These speeches Mr. Power had unearthed, and he quoted them with great effect, as to the O'Donoghue's confusion. Amid roars of "Order," The O'Donoghue rose to demand of Mr. Power from what source he quoted. Mr. Power replied that he quoted from the Nation newspaper, whereat there was an ameliorating laugh in The O'Donoghue's favor; but the laugh was instantly turned the other way when, prompted by the Nation's editor, who sat in the House, Mr. Power declared he was authorized to say that The O'Donoghue had himself corrected the proofs. This sort of thing was more than the House could stand, and the cheers and counter-cheers almost drowned the voice of the speaker. Never will it be forgotten by those who were present how he tried to drawn out a repudiation of a speech, "the proofs of which were corrected by his own hand!"

Mr. John Martin on the Protestant Objection to Home Rule.

The following letter has been addressed to the Times by the honorable member for Meath:

Sir—In a leading article in your paper of yesterday upon the subject of Home Rule for Ireland, you write:

"The strength of Roman Catholic sentiment in Ireland would be gratefully felt by the Protestants if, in the event of Home Rule, it could be carried out. But, fairly viewing the question, it is impossible to disguise from ourselves that the Imperial Parliament would not, and could not, for the mere purpose of the Irish Legislature, abrogate the Queen's veto and withdraw the Irish Bills from the cognizance of the Imperial Legislature. If there is a surprising negligence on the part of those who ought to be addressed by some Home Rule member."

I am one of the many Home Rule members who were prevented from addressing the House, owing to the smartness of the time allowed for debate and the impatience of the majority last night. Had I spoken it was my intention to offer some explanations upon the passage which I have quoted from your article. I am aware that the reason prejudices and jealousies entertained by the bulk of my Protestant fellow-countrymen against the Catholics are the causes why but few Irish Protestants have joined in the national movement. I should have endeavored to urge against your line of objection to Home Rule such considerations as the following: Neither Ireland nor England, nor indeed Europe, as well as the Crumb or Club. As to the past, we are told that Queen Bertrid has spear as great on high that Patrick Act to the ground as he was aiming his spear at Queen Spanking of Ireland, before the days of Christianity, says—

"What's worth they need to carry out but sparse Ireland has any Irish Monster ever appeared with such intention towards the Scotch or the English residents in Ireland. The universal sentiment of Irish Nationalists at all times since the Union has been of perfect religious liberty and equality, of perfect equality before the law for all races and classes, of equal freedom and right for all Irish citizens.

In spite of Ireland where the Catholics form the majority of the population, no Protestant has ever been injured or affronted on account of his religion. In the few parts of Ireland where the Protestants form the majority—for example, at Belfast, where they are two to one; at Lurgan and Portadown, where they are three to one—there is a shameful contrast. In constituencies where Protestants form the majority, Protestants are frequently elected to Corporations, to Boards of Guardians, to Parliament. In those instances where Protestants are in the majority Catholics are never elected. It is in Protestant England where the Catholics, who number about three millions, have not a single Parliamentary representative, though a tolerant spirit is exhibited in electing about a score of Jews to represent their community of perhaps a hundred thousand souls.

Against any "grievous domination of Catholic sentiment" the Irish Protestants may feel secure if they use their common sense in considering their numbers, their wealth, the prestige given them by their past ascendency, their nearness to Protestant England, and the fundamental articles in the proposed Home Rule constitution in their favor. Persecution in Ireland has always been of Catholics—never by them. And now on the Continent it is only Catholics who are being persecuted and new born Protestants.

JOHN MARTIN.

Ilchester Gardens, July 27.

Interesting Discovery at Scaliery Island.

The following interesting article we find in a late issue of the Limerick Reporter:

We have been favored by James Speight, Esq., with a view of a very curious Danish weapon of war, which has been recently found in Scaliery Island, and which merits a minute description at our hands. Scaliery Island was for a long time occupied by the Danes, who used it for the purpose of commerce and war, until they were finally routed from it in the year 976 by Brian Boroihme, the great monarch of Ireland. Brian was then King of Munster, and at the head of twelve hundred Dalcassian troops, aided by Donaghmill, King of Connaught, he recovered the island from the Danes and defeated Ivimbar, the Norman, and his two sons, Amlaib and Duibheshanas, slaying eight hundred Danes. The weapon under notice is wrought of the best possible kind of which was once highly polished, all except the handle, which is bound about by brass wire. Its blade is inclosed in a sheath, made of twelve hundred and [illegible] as the Irish called it, a "Coughal"—of bone of high-colored bronze, exceedingly tough and characteristically ornamented. The head of the weapon closely represents the head of the [illegible] of the Irish, and is a splendid designation of the Danes, which they were on the rest of their brethren and bore on their standards. It is [illegible] in length—[illegible] lower [illegible] of the [illegible] is [illegible] which is sharpened like the blade. Around the upper part of the socket [illegible] of the blade is a slight ridge, which widens in the middle and towards the head, and which may be [illegible] to the two arms of the letter T. Beside the blade is [illegible] of the [illegible] eye of the raven is represented by a triangle cut through to the proper place. The breadth of the head is 2½ inches; the length of what we may call the neck—which is [illegible] is [illegible] the spar is [illegible] back of the handle, for the protection of the hand is two inches in length. The handle itself is [illegible] long, bound with [illegible] brass wire in the middle part, and [illegible] terminating in a knob. The whole weapon is [illegible] inches in length. The [illegible] is [illegible] and [illegible] part four inches. The [illegible] is [illegible] and [illegible] part [illegible] and [illegible]

"It is Louie, my dear brother. He will live, praised be God!" exclaimed Aunt Clara, throwing her arms around the captain's neck.

"You believed me dead," said the captain; "and yet I wrote in you three times. Did you not receive my letter?"

While he was speaking, he felt his brother passing his hand over his coat in a singular manner, and he noticed his touching his scarf and pistols. He started, and said, sorrowfully:

"Blind, my poor brother blind! Tell me that I am mistaken. That is terrible."

"My sight is so weak that I can scarcely distinguish anything; but all hope is not lost," added the old man, smiling, as if to console his brother's grief. "My eyes may soon be restored. No matter about them, Louie; let me rejoice that God restores you to me as I embrace you for every letter I have received. And you are now a soldier?"

"Uncle Louis is a captain!" cried Aunt Clara.

"Captain! in the service of the Republic! Excellent, let me embrace you again."

The captain disengaged himself from the arms of his niece, saying, joyously:

"That is enough, Bella; give me time to look at you. I assure I undertook the unfortunate voyage to Iceland, you were still a child, but now I am proud of my niece. You are not a fisherer, but I speak only the truth. Since my departure, I have traveled in many countries and seen many beautiful women, but I have never met one more beautiful since Bella."

"Come, dear uncle," interrupted the young girl, "be seated. We have just dined coffee, and in a few moments I will prepare a cup for you and your friend."

She approached the young officer, offered him a chair, and said, gently:

"Sir, be so kind as to consider this house your own."

The soldier smiled, and thanked her in French; then he said, in a low tone, to his old companion:

"Your niece is a charming young girl; she looks like an Italian. What a brilliant complexion! what an enchanting smile! she is here blooming in a desert. It is a pity that none of the family understand French; that is annoying to me."

"I prepared you for this in advance," replied the other; "but you persisted in accompanying me, in order to see my little niece. You must now bear the penalty."

The young officer waited to the window and gazed without, as if in search of some amusement, while Captain Louis conversed with his brother Simon and his sister Clara. Bella occupied herself in making coffee; when she had poured it boiling from the pot, she seated herself by her uncle, and said, gaily:

"Now we will learn in what manner our good God saved our dear uncle, and how it happens that we now see him dressed in a splendid style, and a captain in the French service."

"Ah, my dear niece, it would take me several days to relate in detail the story of my life since I left you. I will then give you only a brief sketch of them. Circumstances require me to remain a long time in this vicinity; in that case, I can see you frequently, and enter into full particulars of my past life."

"After my departure from Dunkirk, we had very foul weather, our voyage, nevertheless, was not impeded by any accident until we neared Iceland, at which time a violent storm arose in the night, and we had the misfortune to lose our rudder. For three days and nights we were tossed about at the mercy of the waves. When the tempest abated our fear was kept alive by the icebergs, which we avoided only by extraordinary exertions. Night came on, and our fervent vows were realized—we were crushed between two mountains of ice, and our vessel sank at once. My poor companions were all swallowed up in the depths of the sea. I heard their cries of anguish ring through the darkness, and then all was still. As for myself, the shock cast me high above the deck, and I found myself upon the ice.

"Do not be impatient, Louis!"

"Is it indeed you, my unfortunate brother?" exclaimed Simon, in a voice of distress, "and you have come to me to announce your death? Father never forgave me my disobedience, and you would regard it as a reproach that you could receive into the sea. I awaited death momentarily, and to my horror I felt myself sinking. I was well!"

"Your uncle!" said Bella, weeping at the thought of so much suffering.

"Your paralytic uncle," exclaimed Aunt Clara.

"Fear not," resumed Uncle Louis; "Providence had ordained that I should not then die. At daybreak I perceived a boat steering under full sail and endeavoring to gain the large boat, and thus we reached the shore; but we had no idea where we were, for the land was barren, and for thirty leagues around we saw no human being. We commenced a weary march across the snow, directing our course towards the south, in hopes of finding an inhabited spot. After having lost three of our companions, half-dead from cold and sickness, starving, and as emaciated as spectres, we reached a place where a score of Danish families dwelt in huts made of the skins of beasts. I suppose you have already heard the awful ravages race called the Esquimaux, for we were shipwrecked on the southern coast of Labrador."

At that moment Bella uttered a stifled cry, arose precipitately, and precipitated herself into the room with increased activity.

"What is the matter, my dear niece?" asked the captain, in astonishment. "Have I said a relative is hardly the cause of your agitation."

"We have a your companion! I do not see him."

"Do not be anxious on his account, Bella. He is weary because he does not comprehend French, and he is also a little embarrassed before the officer. I learned him that he would find no pleasure in visiting the place."

The young girl looked through the panes of the window, and then returning near her uncle, she sought her seat by his side, saying joyfully:

"Your fellow-officer is seated on the little bench before the house, whistling. He seems to be a worthy man."

"Yes, a very worthy man," repeated the captain, in a faltering voice; "a valiant soldier, a noble heart, but excessively severe in what he considers his duty. You have been the treasurer of goodness, virtue and love I committed to Bella's care, you will need nothing more, after ordering so many misfortunes, I could still be happy. My self-love as an angel to assist in the union of my brother and mother my services, I would long since have said under their roofs."

"Where is she?" asked Louis.

"She has gone out a little way, but she will soon return."

"I think I hear her opening the door of the house," said Aunt Clara.

The captain, smiling, turned his eyes in the direction indicated, and saw a young girl entering cautiously, who at last threw herself into the arms of her son Simon, and then her head through the half-open door; then she entered the room, pale with fright, when she gazed upon the captain stupefied, when, suddenly uttering a joyful cry, she knelt before the officer, whose eyes beamed with love and tenderness.

"Can it be true?" said she. "No, it is impossible. Louis is dead!"

"Is it indeed you, my unfortunate Louis?"

"And, wild with joy, she embraced Louis.

"Oh, how often I have wept for you, believing you were dead! Father never forgave me my disobedience; I was very sad. Pardon me, my son, for having shut you out from my heart, and spread, then every day, I am punished."

And it almost causes me also to weep when I see you thus."

"Mother, I am not dead! Not ago; I'm a young man still!"

"And I'm just as strong as I ever was except, perhaps, a little rheumatic."

The officer's face was pale as death, and he could scarcely support himself. He heard the words of his wife, and his deep penitence of his conduct. He was overwhelmed with grief, and he could not utter a word.

"Is it not, Louis?" said Aunt Clara.

"Yes, my dear sister, it is true," replied the captain, in a faltering voice; "I am a soldier, and I am proud of my sword."

"Bella is indeed a beautiful girl," said the old man; "how happy and joyous she will be! She will speak of you."

"But the others?" interrupted the captain anxiously. "Phillip, Nicholas, Peter, John?"

"God has taken them from me," sighed the old man.

"And your wife?"

"She is in heaven with my children."

"Dead—all dead? Poor brother! blind, and mourning the loss of a whole family!"

"Three boats were wrecked," replied the old man, even those which a father from the bosom of his children. Death is the lot of all; in another and a better life, I shall be reunited to my wife and children."

Although the young officer who accompanied the captain did not comprehend what had been said, he knew that the conversation was painfully affected, and he appeared to console him.

"It is terrible," replied Captain Louis to him in French, before the house, whistling for twelve years' absence I return, begging to meet a numerous family, and I find that I have a numerous family, and I find that I have you embraced me for every letter I learned. And you are now a soldier?"

"Uncle Louis is a captain!" cried Aunt Clara.

"Captain! in the service of the Republic! Excellent, let me embrace you again."

The captain disengaged himself from the arms of his niece, saying, joyously:

"That is enough, Bella; give me time to look at you. When I undertook the unfortunate voyage to Iceland, you were still a child, but now I am proud of my niece. You are not a fisherer, but I speak only the truth. Since my departure, I have traveled in many countries and seen many beautiful women, but I have never met one more beautiful since Bella."

"Come, dear uncle," interrupted the young girl, "be seated. We have just dined coffee, and in a few moments I will prepare a cup for you and your friend."

She approached the young officer, offered him a chair, and said, gently:

"Sir, be so kind as to consider this house your own."

The soldier smiled, and thanked her in French; then he said, in a low tone, to his old companion:

"Your niece is a charming young girl; she looks like an Italian. What a brilliant complexion! what an enchanting smile! she is here blooming in a desert. It is a pity that none of the family understand French; that is annoying to me."

"I prepared you for this in advance," replied the other; "but you persisted in accompanying me, in order to see my little niece. You must now bear the penalty."

The young officer waited to the window and gazed without, as if in search of some amusement, while Captain Louis conversed with his brother Simon and his sister Clara. Bella occupied herself in making coffee; when she had poured it boiling from the pot, she seated herself by her uncle, and said, gaily:

"Now we will learn in what manner our good God saved our dear uncle, and how it happens that we now see him dressed in a splendid style, and a captain in the French service."

"Ah, my dear niece, it would take me several days to relate in detail the story of my life since I left you. I will then give you only a brief sketch of them. Circumstances require me to remain a long time in this vicinity; in that case, I can see you frequently, and enter into full particulars of my past life."

"After my departure from Dunkirk, we had very foul weather, our voyage, nevertheless, was not impeded by any accident until we neared Iceland, at which time a violent storm arose in the night, and we had the misfortune to lose our rudder. For three days and nights we were tossed about at the mercy of the waves. When the tempest abated our fear was kept alive by the icebergs, which we avoided only by extraordinary exertions. Night came on, and our fervent vows were realized—we were crushed between two mountains of ice, and our vessel sank at once. My poor companions were all swallowed up in the depths of the sea. I heard their cries of anguish ring through the darkness, and then all was still. As for myself, the shock cast me high above the deck, and I found myself upon the ice.

"Do not be impatient, Louis!"

"Is it indeed you, my unfortunate Louis?" exclaimed Simon, in a voice of distress, "and you have come to me to announce your death? Father never forgave me my disobedience; I was very sad. Pardon me, my son, for having shut you out from my heart, and spread, then every day, I am punished

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK BEFORE AUGUST 8.
August—
2—Sunday—Tenth Sunday after Pentecost. St. Alphonsus Liguori, Bishop, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.
3—Monday—Finding of the body of St. Stephen.
4—Tuesday—St. Dominic, Confessor.
5—Wednesday—Dedication of St. Mary Major.
6—Thursday—Transfiguration of our Lord. St. Xystus II., Pope, and Companions, Martyrs.
7—Friday—St. Cajetan, Confessor. Saint Donatus, Martyr and Martyr.
8—Saturday—St. Cyriacus, Largus and Smaragdus, Martyrs.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....AUGUST 1, 1874.

THE HUMILIATION OF A RENEGADE.

In another part of our present issue will be found a vivid description of a most painful scene which took place in the British House of Commons on the evening when THE O'DONOGHUE, member for Tralee, delivered his fierce philippic against Home Rule and the Home Rulers. The reporter pictured it, as we suppose most of the readers are aware, a perfect master of the art of eloquence; indeed, we should not hesitate to say that he is the most attractive and fascinating speaker in the great assembly of which he is a member. The power of the personal magnetism which enables him to hold his audience spellbound, and to impress upon their attentive listeners his intellectual powers are by no means the least of his claims to distinction. He is, moreover, a ready debater—if they were not so, they could not be reported—but they are so well read in public life as to deal properly effectively with any subject he chooses to handle. Consequently, when he says he would not have said what he did in Mr. Mitchel's absence, and almost certain to be rendered interesting. What, therefore, it was to receive would be to assert the Irish people were not to be trusted, but for the interesting information, and the Home Rule proposals set forth, but for the interesting manner in which he treated the subject. Mr. O'Donoghue had that part of the House with the members of his own party, and whether regular assessment. In verdict, therefore, it was granted on a foregone conclusion, and will obtain respect from no one. TILTON—and he certainly has a right to be—is pleased with his willingness to be judged for libel, and to accept the circumstance if he should prefer it, or to take any steps which his counsel may suggest or whatever require a present at Trinity, but for the interesting presentation of the subject. He is, moreover, a Fenian sympathizer, and as at present it is very much in favor with the Irish people

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

A Terrible Case.

Is there any hope for Patrick Casey? Many Englishmen would not credit that so lamentable a tale as his could be told of any subject of Queen Victoria. It sounds more like what might happen in the dominions of the King of Dahomey. Three years ago this young man, then only about twenty years of age, was seized by the police and cast into jail on a warrant by Lord Spencer under authority of the Coercion Act. No cause is stated for annihilating his liberty. No magistrate examined his case. No writ of habeas corpus could pierce his prison walls, for the first and dearest right of every man in Ireland was and is left in the hands of one man—the Lord Lieutenant—by the man who make our laws in London. Some policeman, it seems, suspected, or said he did, that this poor boy—for he was no more—knew where firearms were concealed; and this fact or pretended suspicion is the only justification for the terrible fate to which Patrick Casey has been consigned by the British Constitution. We know that his health is rapidly giving way. We have reason to believe that his mind is also failing. His distressed family are impotent to give him help. We ask, in the name of heaven, what is to be the end of this? Must the suspicion of one policeman or of a few straying cosmos still Casey is driven to his death or to a lunatic ward? Are the Irish to be jailed and constituting speeches, but we answer them by pressing before us the sad case of a young Irishman accused of nothing.—Dublin Nation, July 4.

The Swiss Heroine.

The rebels against the Church in Switzerland are not letting the grass grow under their feet. A few days ago they held a public meeting on Geneva's public square, at which the engaging title of order met—began by inviting no end of confederates; here to express their sympathy and their love to priests, who are so disposed, (so many) they have ordered that Mass shall be celebrated in the religious manner; and, indeed, they are resolved to arrange that they would be the first to celebrate it. Some of the Catholic clergy executed the transition, but refused unless they had hearts. Of the entire number of votes recorded, only fifteen were rejected as invalid and not to count, for those who have been representing the constituency as largely composed of utterly ignorant persons.—Dublin Nation, July 4.

Dr. Ward, the new member for Galway, says the Dublin Weekly News, is not idle in getting about his duty. On Tuesday, June 30, he was declared elected, and on the next night he made his maiden speech in the house, and went into the lobby with Mr. Butt. The honest lawyer made to him the high honor of the day by shaking of his brother, M. Pouit Ward, a man who honestly tried to win country, and proved his patriotism in the his statement for that seat. The old-fated gentleman was a resolute supporter, and had served a most faithful and very week before his death, and was consequently present to see and. Dr. Ward has the sympathy of the nation in the great affliction so suddenly befallen his brother.

Sacrilegious Robbery.

The English newspapers have suffered another shock in Portsmouth. Mr. Dance, one of the members for Birmingham, and one of the most active and influential politicians in the town, received notice of his bill for securing compulsory education in school, and that the publication of small books through the whole of England. He had also to call upon the police to support him by speech and vote, but the Government took sides against him, and on a division his bill was thrown out by a majority of 220 to 156. Clearly the present House of Commons will not have the secular system for England. The curious circumstance in that it is this very system which it insists on forcing on Ireland.—Nation.

The Fulda Conference.

The Catholic Bishops of Germany have taken a step from which consequences of the last importance may in all probability follow. They have met once more at Fulda. In deliberation over Bismarck's penal laws. Of course all the German prelates were not able to attend, some of them being in prison, but all were present either in person or by deputy, and, after long and earnest consultation, adopted certain resolutions, which were immediately communicated to the Government in Berlin. What the resolutions were, we cannot as yet say, but, for more on the point are plentiful, and it is pretty certain that they are of a highly important nature. One thing is certain, they are not, as it has been industriously circulated by the infidel press in England and Germany, peace overtures to the Cabinet at Berlin. The Catholic organ Germania has been prohibited to say that the question of submitting to any or all of the penal laws, condemned as unjust, was never discussed at the Fulda meeting. Non possumus is the maxim of the Church from which she cannot be talked to betray its trust.—Dublin Nation.

English Friends of Home Rule.

Touching the Irish Home vote, it is not cheering to find that only 11 men out of 549, who represent Great Britain, were found upon the side of Ireland; and it is not calculated to increase our faith in the sincerity of British honor to discover that nineteen out of thirty, supposed to be friendly, shirked the division, or fought against us. But one fact, saved out of this wreck, is full of cheer for Ireland. The two English workingmen who have forced their way in among 549 men of fair, white hands and broadcloth, are spoken of in the Irish camp. Mr. Macdonald parted for the minion, and Mr. Burt by a still better will. He came up purely by vote for it. This counts for little now, but it may soon be of supreme importance. The English working men are the back bone of the land, and his power is growing greater. Already he has a voice in the House of Commons, and when the Ballot Bill shall have passed, he will be the master of the situation. Then the working men will be the majority of the electors, and the majority of the members will be their nominees. Then, and not till then, will the people of England be free. Then, and not till then, will the Irish question be settled. Then, and not till then, will the Irish question be settled. Then, and not till then, will the Irish question be settled. Then, and not till then, will the Irish question be settled.

The Renegade's Speech.

We subjoin a report of The O'Donoghue's speech in the Home Rule debate. Our readers will mutually contrast it with those he used to deliver before he sold himself to the British Government. Perusia is proverbially bitter and vicious against the abuse or greed they abandon!

The O'Donoghue said at a debate of that kind every word should be carefully weighed, for a gross and mischievous delusion was fostered in Ireland. This motion was called a constitutional motion. To him it appeared that it was an abuse of constitutional rights, availed of by men who feared to face the principles of Fenianism. It was as insidious and treacherous assault on the unity of the three Kingdoms, and all tied depended upon it. He proved that the present acts of Parliament as proof that the people of England and Scotland were desirous of healing all old wounds and all reasonable concessions to Ireland. The Church had been struck down and the land freed, in spite of all this—in opposition to common sense and feelings of patriotism—the honorable member for Limerick had brought forward his motion. He considered the Home Rule movement one of the most serious political movements that had ever taken place in Ireland. A Home Ruler was a very tame person in that House, but he was a very different person in Ireland. He (The O'Donoghue) had been delivered by the honorable member for Mayo, and although he got the best of his speech, and did not know any one who had heard it, he should read a portion of it to the House, so that it might have a specimen of the real article.

Captain Nolan—I rise to order (cries of "Order").

The Chair has the honorable member the right to quote from a speech never delivered in the House.

The O'Donoghue said he had not said that. He said he had not met any one who had heard it.

The Speaker ruled that The O'Donoghue was in order.

The O'Donoghue said that he would give the English members a correct idea of the Home Rule at home. The most loyal and inviolable tendency of the polloy was civil war. O'Connell was a real leader, and he was an honestly a man of moral force, but the result of even his teachings was insurrection. Those were the days of Peel and Lord Lieutenancies, when the Constitution was only a Constitution in name, and repeal agitation in the House a sham. O'Connell thought his efforts should be made to get rid of the Parliament which was the cause of the Irish grievances, when the Conservatives and Liberals were both equally powerful

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The Very Rev. T. B. Feian, O.P., a native of Galway, died on the 28th June, in Dublin, in the sixty-fifth year of his age, and the forty-fourth of his sacred ministry.

Rev. Thomas Burke preached in the Cathedral, Carlow, on Sunday, July 5, in behalf of the Presentation Convent building fund.

Miss Mary Anne O'Neill, of Ballinakill, and Miss Bridget Phelan, of Ballyreaget, were on the 26 July received by the Most Rev. Dr. Lynch, at the beautiful Convent of St. Bridget, Abbeyleix.

It is our sad duty to announce the death of another young priest of the diocese of Down and Connor, Thursday morning, June 25, Rev. William Curran breathed his last.

The annual collection for the Pope took place in all the Catholic churches of the archdiocese of Dublin on the 5th July. The contributions were liberal, and in the aggregate amounted to a large sum.

Notwithstanding all the efforts of his parishioner, who fervently and affectionately urged him to the contrary, the highly regarded and well-beloved pastor of St. Mary's, Clonmel, Rev. Thomas English, has tendered his resignation to the Lord Bishop of the diocese.

The sun and hair of Lord Petre has renounced the brilliant position to which he was born and the wealth and honors of his birthright, and was ordained a Jesuit priest, whose good works are endless, and whose charities are boundless. After a life and education so peculiar as the French Emperor, Albert Gate, a few days ago, by the Dutchess de la Rochefoucauld-Bisaccia. It was the most brilliant affair of the season. The Princess of Wales attended the wedding of the cousin by her parentage, and the fete was graced by the presence of all the leaders of London society. There was a banquet, a ball, and each guest had a gallon for their pains. There was a to [illegible] where one had a cup of tea for a five pound note, and a smoking room where you had a cigar for a guinea. As the fete lasted for hours, and as "all the world" was there, the treasury of the good Nature was for once well filled. Marshal Manhihon sent a large subscription to their funds.

An Unwholesome Season.

The closing days of winter and the early days of spring are very apt to be fruitful and severe attacks of [illegible] to effect unpleasantly even the more robust and vigorous. Nothing can be more unpleasant in the [illegible] to have to sprain their [illegible] and [illegible] and of such unwholesome visitors we have a superabundance at the present. Chapped hands, rough [illegible] and [illegible] are the [illegible] of [illegible] the [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The Very Rev. T. B. Foran, O.P., a native of Galway, died on the 26th June, in Dublin, in the 49th year of his age, and the fortieth of the sacred ministry.

Rev. Thomas Burke preached in the Cathedral, Carlow, on Sunday, July 5, in behalf of the Presentation Convent building fund.

Miss Mary Anne O'Neill, of Ballinasloe, and Miss Bridget Phelan, of Ballyragget, were on the 2d July received by the Most Rev. Dr. Lynch, as the humble Convent of St. Bridget, Abbeyleix.

It is our sad duty to announce the death of another young priest of the diocese of Down and Connor, Thursday morning, June 26, Rev. William Curran, assistant to Rev. Dr. Lynch.

The annual collection for the Pope took place in all the Catholic churches of the archdiocese of Dublin on the 31st July. The contributions were liberal, and in the aggregate amounted to a large sum.

Notwithstanding all the efforts of his parishioners, why fervently and affectionately urged him to the contrary, the highly respected and well-beloved pastor of St. Mary, Clontarf, Rev. Thomas Hughes, has tendered his resignation to the Lord Bishop of the diocese.

The present heir of Lord Petre has renounced the heritage of his title, in which he was born and the wealth and honors of his birthright, and was ordained a Jesuit priest in the church of that order in London. He is in his twenty-seventh year. The make the second heir to a British peerage who has become a Jesuit priest, the other one being the brother and heir of Lord Arundel of Wardour. Lord Petre has estates which yield a revenue of £22,000 a year.

The Limerick Mercury announces that all these noble ladies who recently signed an address of condolence to the present Lord Bishop of Meath, will be soon arrested on a charge of high treason, and that several of them have been committed to jail. Gentlemen, It will be remembered that the authority of Limerick who are very high up in the political and military service of Germany.

Correspondence of the Cincinnati Commercial.

Cologne, Sunday.—Cologne was the scene of a very interesting, significant and soul-soothing ceremony. The lofty choice of a high-priest of Mammon was the occasion of a grand display of Catholic pomp and splendor. Cardinal Archbishop Paul Melchers, Lord Bishop of Osnabrück, officiated at the consecration of Dr. Hubert Simar, Bishop of Paderborn.

The learned and eloquent Bishop of Orleans, Mgr. Dupanloup, has been offered the succession and appointment of Archbishop of Auch, vacant by the death of Archbishop Lamazou. The most prominent position in France has, however, declined the elevation, which would remove him from the diocese of Orleans, with the history of which his name is so gloriously identified. The honor of succession to the see of Rheims will most probably be given to Mgr. Freppel, Bishop of Angers.

Rev. Brother Patrick, Assistant Superior-General of the Christian Brothers, has arrived in New York from Paris. He took part in a heavy scholastic examination at Manhattan College, where he laboured arduously for six years as its President. Mr. James H. Mitchell, one of the members of the class of 1874, read an address of welcome, which was listened to very attentively by all present, and to which Rev. Brother responded at length. Rev. Brother Patrick, before his return to Paris, will visit the different colleges and schools in America directed by the Christian Brothers.

It is with deep regret we have to announce the death of Rev. Patrick O'Sullivan, of Kinglas. On the 3d July he opened and holy priest closed his earthly career amidst his people, for whose temporal and eternal good he had so zealously laboured and ever spared a period of thirty years. The reverend deceased, who had attained his 65th year, belonged to the diocese of Ardagh. He was ordained at the Irish College, Rome, and after his consecration he was for some time Archdiocese of Dublin. The coffin and High Mass for the repose of the departed soul were celebrated in the Catholic Church, Fenglas. After the ceremonial the remains of a faithful minister of the Gospel to a true Christian, and a kind friend of the poor were removed for interment.

In the very heart of the very worst part of London—Leicester Square—where vice is almost resident and where degraded humanity in its worst hold, there is a convent of French nuns ("les Clarisses Franciscaines") whose good works are endless and whose influence is boundless. A fete in aid of this convent was given at the French Embassy, during a few days ago, by the Countess de la Rochefoucauld-Bisaccia. It was the most brilliant affair of the season. The Prussian and Wales attended the worthiness of the cause by her patronage, and the fete was graced by the presence of all the leaders of the aristocracy. There was a garden in the Embassy, and each guest paid a guinea for admission. There was a fish-pond somewhere where one had a cup of tea for a five pound note, and a smoking-room, where a cigar cost a guinea. As the fete lasted for hours, and as "all the world" was there, the treasury of the Clarisses was for once well filled. Marshal Mathon de la Cour has subscribed to their funds.

An Unobtrusive Season.

The closing days of winter and the early days of spring are very trying to the feeble and sensitive and are apt in effect unpleasantly even the more robust and vigorous. Medicine is to be the exception and not the rule of good health, and of those remedies which, free and cold raises, and of none more valuable than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in the cases. Diseases produced and given, therefore, the propriety of fortifying the system against the unfavorable influences of health and the employment of more than a quarter of a century past is to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters an established medicinal preparation for the prevention and counteraction. An remedies of vital strength and energy is what is required to meet and overcome the influences to which we are exposed in the transition. The invigorating properties of this wholesome vegetable tonic which are in a state of perfection and not the result of experiment, are fully appreciated by those who have used it for two to three years during the spring months. The nerves of the system are brought in well tuned order, and the entire body is refreshed by an absolutely pure stimulant. It is a thorough and effectual remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness, nervousness, kidney and bowel complaints, rheumatism, fever and ague, and malarial disorders generally. It gives tone to the digestive organs, and thus promotes appetite, and is a specific for all diseases of the stomach. Appetite, if it comes not, will be restored by the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and when all else fails to produce a healthy action of the stomach and bowels, this agent will prove itself invaluable

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 29.
August
28—Sunday—Thirteenth Sunday after Pentecost. St. Felix Benit, Confessor.
24—Monday—St. Bartholomew, Apostle.
25—Tuesday—St. Louis IX., King of France, Confessor.
26—Wednesday—St. Zephyrinus, Pope and Martyr.
27—Thursday—St. Joseph Calasanctius, Confessor.
28—Friday—St. Augustine, St. Hermes, Martyr.
29—Saturday—Beheading of St. John Baptist. Saint Sabina, Martyr.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....AUGUST 22, 1874.

AN IMPRUDENT NEOPHYTE.

The Guardian is at length supremely happy. It has managed to get up the semblance of a controversy with this paper, not, indeed, respecting anything we ever wrote, but merely about a paragraph we copied from the London Universe. The present was rather single, it must be confessed; yet, beaumeh as our contemporary has long been anxious to play its assumed role of "defender of the faith," it was glad to avail of even so much. As the paragraph must of even so much. As the paragraph must have been completely out of the recollection of our readers we here reproduce it for their instruction:

Some time ago Mrs. Woodward, the wife of the Protestant Vicar of Fairwater, was admitted into the Roman Catholic Church with her husband, formerly Miss Caroline Chetwynd, and his sisters. They had clinging fast to the faith of Mrs. Woodward, four children, one boy, who is her favorite. But now the Rev. Woodward has written to the Rev. Father Ryder over his children, and the Father of the Oratory has unfeelingly replied that Mrs. Woodward that her children could only be sent to her husband's sister. Mrs. Polhampton, attended by the Rev. Father Ryder. A few days ago the priest, Mr. Mordaunt, was called away from home, and during his absence another priest, a priest of his, and a stranger, Mrs. Polhampton, attended at the house and carried off Mrs. Woodward—imperfectly instructed Protestant private judge, with some reasonable doubt as to the consent of the children—to the residence of the Passionist Fathers, and the priest, Mr. Mordaunt, returning home, found that Mrs. Woodward had been received into the Church, and he addressed a note to Mr. Woodward, with true English courtesy, made a reply to the effect that the priest was a liar, and that the whole thing was a Popish plot. Whereupon Mrs. Woodward stepped forward and vindicated Mr. Mordaunt, declaring that she acted without his knowledge and against his wishes, and that she considered only by pleasing her entirely for her children.

The "heresy" contained in the foregoing extract is of so subtle a character that it took the ever-watchful Guardian rather more than two months to find it out; but when the terrible discovery was made, our contemporary was certainly mapping in its demonstrations, and made free use of that peculiar language which it believes to be very powerful and impressive. The paragraph, which it pretended was a leading article of ours, was stigmatized as an "infamous libel upon Catholic dogma," contained "abominable heresy," was sure to work "incalculable mischief." Of all these things, of course, the editor of the Guardian was an excellent judge, having spent such a great portion of his life in the study of Catholic theology!

To the ridiculousness and nonsensical attack we made no reply, containing ourselves with correcting some errors into which the Post had fallen when commenting upon the matter. But the Guardian was not to be balked of its "controversy"—not to be deprived of its one chance of showing how deeply it had the interests of Catholicity at heart; so, taking our reply to the Post as its theme, it treated its readers to another article on us, headed "Ignorance and Error." This latter production is a wonderful curiosity. While it really takes back every assertion made in the previous one against THE MONITOR, and acknowledges everything we contended for, it is replete with denunciations of our "ignorance," of our "diabolical" perseverance in error! We informed the Post that the Guardian would a soon dispute a false issue as a genuine one, and never paid the smallest attention to truth when desirous of establishing a point in an argument, and the sublime way alleging to furnishes proof conclusive of what we said. There is a well-known but discreditable rhetorical artifice which consists either in forcibly defending what nobody ever attacked, or in gratuitously controverting what nobody ever asserted; and of this trick, if of nothing else, the Guardian is a perfect master.

The paragraph from the Universe, as our readers can see, is little more than a plain recital of circumstances that transpired in the English town of Folkestone, and was evidently written for the sole purpose of showing how rude a Protestant minister can be to a Roman Catholic clergyman and yet consider himself a gentleman. In only one sentence is there a comment, or even indirectly, to Catholic doctrine or practices, and that one we have properly emphasized. There are just two conditions in it—one, that the Roman Catholic Church recognizes the right of a father over his children; the other, that the priest was compelled to resign because the father was unwilling it should be given. The first the Guardian concedes by saying, "Who doubts it? There is no question about parents' right over their children." But this contemporary made every possible doubt about it in its issue of July 25th, though it has since found convenient to "back down." That the Guardian intelligently asks us to name a single theologian of importance who maintains that it is not lawful to baptize a child at the request of one of its parents who is a Catholic. Here we have the false issue raised. The Universe did not say that such a thing was not lawful; THE MONITOR never said it was not lawful; no Catholic newspaper that we ever saw pretended that it is not lawful.

The Folkestone child, if he believed the children had not been previously baptized, might lawfully have baptized them at the request of their Catholic mother; but he did not think it prudent to do so, and his conduct has the open approval of the editor of the London Universe—no mean authority—and the implied approval of his Bishop, since it nowhere appears that he has been censured. But stronger considerations than those of simple prudence manifestly influenced Father Mordaunt. The children, being the offspring of an Episcopalian minister, were certainly baptized before—then why should the ceremony be repeated, more especially [since there was no reasonable prospect that they would be brought up Catholics?

The Guardian, beyond doubt, confounds the lawful with the obligatory. Because a priest may do a certain thing, it argues he must do it. Now, many things are lawful which are not at all expedient. Prudence often dictates the waiving of a right where its exercise would be accompanied with serious inconvenience. Father Mordaunt must have been well acquainted with the peculiar position of the Anglican minister's family, and no doubt he saw good and sufficient reasons for his conduct. Yet the Guardian, in effect, accuses him of gross ignorance because he wrote a letter of apology to the Rev. Mr. Woodward; accuses the editor of the London Universe of flagrant heresy for indorsing his behavior, and accuses THE MONITOR of something equally as bad for copying the paragraph.

Evidently our contemporary is under the impression that neither the priest nor the editor knows anything whatever about the interests of the baptism of children. But if the parties to such the sacerdotal ministration, either for the sake of convenience, or because they have no intention of bringing up the children in the Catholic faith, request baptism, the priest is bound to administer it, or to keep them in a state to be brought up Catholics. Many religious treatises on the subject have been written and more massively deeds of the kind have been performed, and we do not think it lawful to baptize children, unless the parents or guardians would be bound by sureties for the fulfillment of the conditions of baptism, or by infidelity thereof to follow investigation.

And Dr. Kenrick immediately after cites a decision of the Sacred Congregation, of May 3, 1703, which declares that children of infidels are not to be baptized, unless in the imminent danger of death, if they must be left in the power of their parents. We think we have now shown, with sufficient clearness and upon excellent authority, that, as a general rule, it is not lawful to baptize the children of heretics against the will of their parents, though there may be circumstances to justify such a course; and if the Guardian examines the writings of St. Liguori more closely than it appears to have done, it will find that this is exactly his opinion, too. We have shown that when one of the parents is Catholic, the priest is not bound to administer baptism, but simply may do it if he has reasonable expectation that the child will not be educated in heresy. We have shown that when both parents seek the baptism of their child they must agree to its being brought up within the pale of the Church. We have shown that there is no rigid rule in any of these cases, that the priest must decide according to his conscientious and with knowledge of his responsibility to God. That is precisely what Father Mordaunt did at Folkestone, and his conduct was certainly not open to the uncharitable condemnation hurled upon it by our contemporary.

The zeal of a neophyte is in itself a good and commendable thing, but ill-directed it may prove mischievous and work harm. The editor of the Guardian should be content with studying his catechism for yet a while, and not venture upon giving instruction in theology to Catholic priests and Catholic editors. If he were gifted with a little more modesty, and afflicted with a little less egotism, he would comprehend that the chances are they know a great deal more about these matters than he does. We are highly delighted to discover that he has been looking over the writings of St. Liguori, and we can pardon his anxiety to take the first opportunity of publishing the fact. It is quite as harmless and nearly as amusing as the vanity which urges a small boy to parade his first pair of pantaloons before his friends and companions. But he should not be so silly as to imagine he is the only person who reads the works of that great theologian; he ought give Catholic priests performing missionary work in England, and Catholic editors who are defending our holy faith in the same country, credit for some little scholarship at any rate. We cannot conclude without remarking that we cannot understand, except upon the highly improbable hypothesis that our contemporary has grown honest, why the Guardian should prefer writing bad articles upon theology to stealing good articles upon more popular subjects.

RUBBISH!

A telegram announces that the Carlists have cut the telegraphic wires between Madrid and Saragossa. It is one of their characteristic exploits. They consider it part of their sacred duty to cut wires, to burn railway stations, to tear up railway tracks, and to blow up railway bridges. And the thing that uses steam and electricity is baleful to them on general principles; and they have their hands against the mountainous districts, where dirt, ignorance and superstition are the leading virtues of the populace.

That's from Thursday's Alta, and a nice thing it is! Now, did not the Federal troops, during the late unpleasantness, cut wires, burn railway stations, tear up railway tracks and blow up railway bridges whenever they thought they could embarrass their enemies by so doing? Was there ever a war in which all these things were not done as military necessities? This is the first time within our knowledge that they have been stigmatized as barbarous or even asserted to be unjustifiable. We should greatly fear it next charged against the Carlists that they kill and wound the republican soldiers with rifle-bullets and bayonets. Does the Alta think that hostilities between two armies should be confined to the tinging of roasted apples or snowballs? The unreasoning prejudice against the Carlists betrayed in the last sentence shows why the Alta writes so foolishly.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN A. McGLYNN.

The comparatively sudden death of Mr. John A. McGlynn, who departed this life on the evening of last Monday, at his residence on Minna street, will be a source of grief to his many friends both in this State and in the East. Apparently in excellent health but a few days ago, and in the very prime of manhood, it must be hard for them to realize the fact that he has been called away to another world, and that they have looked upon him for the last time. However, his friends have all the consolation of knowing that a life of piety and labor for society and for his fellow-men by the edifying death of a true Christian, and they may well cherish the hope that he has gone to an exceeding great reward.

Mr. John A. McGlynn came to San Francisco in 1849 in company with Mr. D. J. Oliver and Mr. William F. White, and engaged in the teaming business. In the course of the ensuing year he was chosen City Recorder, being the first elected under the Constitution. He subsequently engaged in street contracts and attained considerable wealth. He was connected in one of the first lines of omnibuses that plied through our city, and when these were replaced by the rail cars he became superintendent of the Central (street) Railroad Company, which he held up to within a short time of his death.

But it was, perhaps, in connection with religion and works of benevolence that Mr. McGlynn won the chief esteem of his wide population. He was an earnest and uncompromising Catholic, manifesting the faith that was in him upon all occasions without heeding the consequences. Indeed it is no well known that the greatest part he took in the Papal Procession of 1871 caused his defeat when he ran for the office of Harbor Commissioner, the anti Catholic sentiment of the party with which he acted then affiliated impelling them to sacrifice him. In 1851 he was President of the Catholic Orphan Asylum, and during the whole course of his life he was a firm and true friend to the fatherless and neglected. In fact, there has been no work connected with faith or charity attempted in San Francisco for a quarter of a century of which he did not perform an important part. He was seldom though not obtrusive, and to his kind office more than one prominent personage owed the inestimable happiness of being reconciled to the Church before death.

His obsequies took place Wednesday morning, in St. Patrick's Church. A Solemn Pontifical Requiem Mass was celebrated, his Grace the Archbishop being priest celebrant; Rev. W. B. O'Connor, of Stockton, assistant; Rev. P. Power, deacon; Rev. E. Morrisey, sub deacon; Rev. T. Lackin, master of ceremonies. The clergymen present in the sanctuary were Rev. M. Accolti, S. J.; Rev. J. P. Harrington, pastor of St. Francis' Church; Rev. H. P. Gallagher, St. Joseph's; Rev. A. P. Gallagher, St. Joseph's; Rev. P. Bermingham, San Rafael; Rev. A. Cullen, St. Joseph's; Rev. T. Gibney, St. Peter's; Rev. J. B. McNally, St. Francis'. The church was thronged to excess, and very many of our most prominent citizens were among the spectators. After the Gospel, Rev. T. P. Gaffney delivered the following appropriate discourse:

"And the dust returneth unto its earth, from whence it was, and the spirit returneth unto God who gave it."—Eccl. xii. 7.

At once the synopsis and whole scope of man's career, destiny, as declared in these words of inspiration. Our bodies are but modelled clay, animated with that divine spirit, that emanation from God, which, while they shall have fled we are but lifeless clay, shall survive the last sad rites of burial. These bodies are controlled, in borne to the final resting place of earth, and down to the kindred dust, but of the Church has consecrated to God's acre. Here the modern sceptic, who has thrown off the yoke of Christ, would consign the remains of their friends, imposed on the Church's practice? Her model is in accordance with human feeling, Christian sentiment and the lights of Revelation.

It is true we see daily—nay, almost hourly—the friends summoned from our side—the circle broken—their bodies borne to the tomb; and yet the clay has not become colored the coffin when we turn around to bury ourselves with the frivolities, the business, perhaps the scandals of the day, heedless of the solemn lessons these visitations were designed to teach. Forgetting that the inevitable end of our own existence is but to follow those we regard the greatest, and in due time, to be numbered with the dead, we are but as children in sport, gathering shells on the sea shore, and building houses of sand, only to be swept away by the returning tide. Thus we live, as though we would die never, and thus we die, as though we had never been born. Such is the sad picture presented by the generality of mankind, even in the presence of sorrow. The Christian philosophy of principle and practice is the very reverse of this. It is the philosophy of faith, of hope, of charity, of prayer, of preparation, of reconciliation, of resignation, of consolation, of edification, of instruction, of sanctification, of salvation, of eternal life. Its votaries meet to pray—to pray for the departed, that their sins may be forgiven them, that they may be admitted to the enjoyment of the beatific vision, that they may be admitted to the enjoyment of the beatific vision, that they may be admitted to the enjoyment of the beatific vision

IRISH LOCAL NEWS.

ANTRIM.

Mr. Frederick Lucas Capron, the new agent of the Hartford estates, has been appointed a Justice of the Peace for Antrim.

There is a new feature in connection with the great Belfast strike. A large number of the workers have left for England. The agent of a factory near Barrow was in Belfast and delayed the passage of a number across the Channel.

Robert Lindsay, Esq., died at his residence, San Souci, near Belfast, on Monday morning, July 13, in the sixtieth year of his age. He took a prominent interest in the affairs of Belfast, and was for many years chairman of the Water Board, and was one of the leading members of the Town Council.

ARMAGH.

A man named John Morton, a weaver, residing at Portadown, committed suicide on Thursday, July 9, by cutting his throat. The deceased had been for some time past laboring under mental difficulties, which, it is considered, were the cause of his committing the rash act.

On Sunday, July 5, in St. Patrick's Church, Lurgan, the Rev. Hugh McConville was ordained to the priesthood by the Right Rev. Dr. Leahy, Lord Bishop of Dromore. He will shortly proceed to Glasgow to enter on the duties of his office.

The assizes for Armagh were opened on Monday, July 12, by Mr. Justice Fitzgerald. His Lordship in addressing the jury said: "From the minute information which he has been supplied to me by the constabulary, I did that general tranquility and good order have characterised the county since the last assizes. I hope that through the good feeling, forbearance and toleration shown by all parties, we shall get through this day without disturbance."

CLARE.

Mr. Justice Barry opened the Summer Assizes in Cavan on the 6th July. His Lordship, in addressing the grand jury, said he was gratified to see by the calendar before him that there was so few cases to be disposed of, and he was sorry to say that even these few cases arose from the crime of intemperance, a crime which he was sorry to observe was on the increase in the county.

CLARE.

The Town Commissioners of Ennis having memorialed the Postmaster-General to do away with the present system of conveying the mails from Ennis to Limerick, and vice versa, by a one horse car, and to substitute a mail by railway.

At a meeting of the North Clare National Teachers' Association, held on Saturday, July 11th, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "That our best thanks are due and be hereby tendered to our worthy member, Mr. Joseph Cantwell, and the Rev. Thomas Costello, C.C., for their kindness in attending Teachers' Conference in London, as well as for accompanying the deputation to the Chief Secretary for Ireland, and the service he kindly rendered at that interview."

On Wednesday evening, July 8th, deep consternation was felt on the announcement of the sudden demise of Mrs. John Tobin, of Milltown Malbay. A few minutes before her death she appeared to be in her usual good health. An inquest was held and a verdict returned in accordance with the testimony of Dr. Hill, that the deceased died from a fall or a blow, as some marks were visible on the face.

The county Clare commission was opened before Baron Deasy on 13th July. After the usual charge had been delivered, his Lordship said: "As far as the official returns inform me, the state of the county has been in all respects very satisfactory since the last assizes. The bills to be sent before you are only five in number. There are two cases of perjury—a very grave offence, but not one which involves the peace of the country. There are two cases of assault only. From the report of the county inspector it appears that only ten offences in all have been committed since the last assizes."

CORK.

We regret to announce the death of Rev. William McCarthy, C.C., Kanturk, who died on the 5th July, at his brother's residence in Dublin. His remains were interred at the parish church of Kanturk.

A destructive fire broke out on Wednesday night, July 8th, in the Victoria Works, Cork, belonging to Messrs. John Steele & Co., and destroyed the engine-room, and spread with great rapidity to the fitting-room and machinery, before it was arrested by cutting the roof. Considerable damage was done, the chief part of the machinery being either melted or destroyed.

At the Ballineen Farmers' Club, on Wednesday, July 8th, Colonel Bernard, who presided, in referring to the fair recently held there would not be so large a quantity as last year, but the quality would be better. They all with regret at the account of the strike among the operatives of Belfast, and of several failures from over speculation, but he hoped that before long they would be ready things would be in a more flourishing condition.

The mill plant & Eagle sold on July 8th, on the lands, the interest in Mrs. Ring's farm known as Ballincora, near Waterfall, containing 152 acres, was sold for nearly eighty-five years, at the yearly rent of £110. The attendance was very large, and there were several bidders for the interest. Mr. Humphry Kelleher, of Coolavoky, was declared the purchaser for £500.

DUBLIN.

At the Spencer Dock Bridge, July 16th, there was a sad and fatal accident. After the passing of a vessel, and as the bridge was being closed, a youth of fourteen was caught between the bridge and the side of the dock. His head was crushed, and death was instantaneous.

Dr. N. C. Whyte held an inquest on the 13th July at Sweets' Hospital, on the body of the child Michael Mooney, who died from hydrophobia, resulting from the bite of a dog two days previously. As the owner was unknown, the coroner dispensed with holding an inquest, at the special request of the parents of the child, Mr. Mooney having been present when the event occurred.

Dr. Whyte, City Coroner, held an inquest at the Morgue on the body of Joseph Anderson, which was found in the Spencer Dock. The deceased had gone with his brother to Dollymount on Saturday, July 4th, and both got under the influence of drink. The brother returned by train, but the deceased was not heard of until his remains were found, as above stated.

A turn issued James McGarry died in the Richmond Hospital on 9th July, from the effect of several fractures and other injuries received on the same day at the Great Southern and Western Railway Works, Inchicore, by falling off a wagon. At the inquest held by Dr. W. White, the jury returned a verdict of "accidental death."

On the night of July 5th a man named Robert Wardrop made a determined attempt at suicide by cutting his throat. From the statement of his poor wife, it appears that the unfortunate man had been drinking hard for a considerable time past, and that on the evening in question he came home under the influence of liquor. He found that a seizure had been made on his furniture, and that a bailiff was in the house. He became exasperated, and said that either he or the bailiff should leave. The wife, fearing there would be an assault committed, induced her husband to leave, and accompanied him as far as Londonbridge on his way, as he said, to the station-house; but there he opened a large pen-knife and committed the rash act.

DONEGAL.

On Tuesday, July 9th, James Gibson, Esq., Chairman of the county Donegal, disposed of the last remaining estate of the bankrupt the Lifford sessions. John Doherty and Philip Grant claimed in compensation from G. R. Harvey, in respect to a house in the town of Malin, and a field of four acres of land, situated in the town land of Carrowmore. Evidence was given to show that the claimants had, by their unreasonable conduct, forfeited the right under the act after which Mr. Martin (for respondent) submitted that the holding came within the definition of "town parks." His Worship refused to award compensation, on the ground that the conduct of the claimants was unreasonable, but dissented from Mr. Martin's view that the holding came within the definition of "town parks."

DERRY.

The following cases stood for trial at the County Assizes, Londonderry, having been loaded firearms in a proclaimed district; William Allen, fraud; John Logan, obtaining goods and money under false pretences; William McGlade, riotous assembly and severely wounding one John McMullan. In addition to the above charges there are also 101 persons returned for trial for taking part in riotous, stone-throwing and disorderly conduct at Londonderry on Saturday, Tuesday, July 23.

On Friday morning, July 10, the stable and hay loft of Mr. Joseph Little's posting establishment, New Market street, Derry, were destroyed by fire. Considerable damage was done, which was, however, covered by insurance.

FERMANAGH.

Mr. N. S. Roberts, the Board of Works Commissioner, who examined the project for the flood drainage and navigation of Lough Erne, has made a favorable and satisfactory report on his plans.

A lot of building stones were lately outside the wall of the Main Barrack, Enniskillen, when two of them ventured beyond their limit by rolling down the hill to the rear of their comrades, some men rowed over to a boat from West Bridge quay, and, waiting till the two escaped their scrapin, dutifully covered the boys at the bottom. They subsequently received commendations and sufficient strength to take them home.

On Wednesday, the 8th July, Enniskillen was enlivened by a public appearance of welcome the arrival of the local regiment from the Curragh. Motoes and devices were conspicuous in some places with "cead mille failthe" to the 27th and 108th. A large crowd awaited the arrival of the train, and the streets of the town were completely blocked during their progress to the barracks. Some shots were fired, and altogether the reception was of a most cordial and enthusiastic description.

Dr. Michael Francis Ward, of Dublin, who has been returned to Parliament as one of the members for the city of Galway, is the place of Mr. O'Donnell, unseated on petition, is the second son of the late Mr. T. Ward, his father being Mr. Joseph Ward, barrister of Mr. John Lynch, of Galway. He was educated at the Jesuit College, Clongowes Wood, and at the Roman Catholic University of Ireland. He is surgeon to the Infirmary for Children in Dublin, and Curator of the Anatomical Museum, belonging to the Catholic University.

The Rev. John Charles has actually weighed the weight of twenty pounds from his Grace the Archbishop of Tuam for the relief of the starving distress on Clare Island. The Law Life Insurance Company, owners of the soil, have allowed the tenants six months to pay their rent arrears, and if that be done within the term their possession will remain unmolested.

Her Majesty's steamship (unsold) Defence, Captain Salmon, now on a cruise on our western coast, anchored off Barna on Sunday, 5th July. She is a fine full-rigged ship of 9,070 tons, carrying 16 guns of large caliber; and, however our coast guardsmen may admire her from the shore, she is still more admired by the tars on board. A large number of visitors proceeded on board during the last few days.

MERRY.

Mr. James Stack has been unanimously elected Master of the Union workhouse, in room of Mr. M. Daly, resigned.

A Ballybunnion correspondent says that the suggestion thrown out a short time since of running a car between Ballybunnion and Listowell, is about being acted on by Mr. Sheehy, of the Atlantic Exchange.

The annual examination of the students of St. Patrick's College, Maynooth, and Trinity College of Maynooth and Paris, was held in St. Brendan's Seminary, Killarney, in the Bishop's palace, recently, by Professor Ingram, of Dublin, six of which were in Maynooth and four in the Irish Colleges of Paris. The result of the examination was as follows: Humphrey O'Sullivan, of Rathmore, first place; Timothy Cronin, Castle Island, second; Jeremiah Bohane, of Lixaw, third; Humphrey Kerrum, Castleisland, fourth; Peter Fitzgerald, Tralee, fifth; Michael Costello, Glynn, near Listowel, sixth; Patrick Hayes, Listowel, seventh; George O'Callaghan, Ballyheigue, eighth; David Donnelly, Castleway, ninth; and Jeremiah O'Sullivan, of Caherciveen, tenth.

On the 8th July a young woman named Ellen Connor, residing at Rosdoe, came by her death under the following circumstances: It appears that she was washing clothing in one of the lakes with which the neighborhood abounds, she fell into the water and was drowned. The body was recovered on the following morning, and every means was had for it. Dr. C. O'Donoghan, coroner. A verdict of accidental drowning was found.

KILKENNY.

On July 11th the enclose for the city of Kilkenny were opened by Chief Justice Monahan. Only two cases were on the calendar. Baron Dowse opened the assizes for the county Kilkenny on July 13th. Only three cases were on the calendar, and only thirteen offences had been committed since the last assizes.

A number of highly important district tenant right meetings are being held throughout the county, under the auspices of the leading tenant-righters, lay and clerical, including W. Keneely, Esq., M. Martin, Esq., and others.

The wife of a man named Michael Costello, from Strang's Mill, gave birth to a child on July 15th, which died in the arms of a woman who was conveying it to the chapel to receive baptism. This was the twenty-first child to which she gave birth since her marriage, but of the lot only one survives. She is not yet married fourteen years.

At the Callan petty sessions recently, Mr. Andrew Granger, of Haggards Green, assistant bursary cess collector, summoned Patrick Neill for assaulting him while in the execution of his duty, on the 26th of June. Mr. Granger, while collecting the county cess, went to where Patrick Neill lodged, and seeing nothing there more handy to distrain than Neill's coat and vest, seized them for the cess. Neill afterward met him and assaulted him as described. Mr. Granger stated that he did not press for punishment, and that he was not hurt. The defendant was let off with a fine of 5s. with costs.

KING'S COUNTY.

At the county assizes of Tullamore, recently, Thomas Mooney was placed at the bar, charged with the manslaughter of James Dignan. He pleaded guilty. It appeared from the informations that on a Sunday, in March, 1872, the prisoner, deceased, and several others were hurling at Annaghbrack, in the King's county. Some altercation took place, which resulted in the prisoner striking the deceased, who was only seventeen years of age, a blow which killed him. He was sentenced to three months' imprisonment from the date of the prisoner's committal.

LEITRIM.

Mr. Justice O'Brien opened the Leitrim assizes in Carrick-on-Shannon, on July 11th. Only six or eight cases were on the calendar, and only fifteen offences had been committed in the county since the last assizes.

Hugh Lyons Montgomery Esq., of Belhavel, Manorhamilton, J. P. County of Leitrim, has been appointed to the commission of the peace for Donegal.

LIMERICK.

On July 8th a desperate assault was made on Mr. Lloyd Apjohn, a landed proprietor residing at Castle Connell, by a tenant named Ryan offered him £40 in part payment of his rent, which was refused, and which the tenant struck Mr. Apjohn with his fist, knocking him down and injuring him. Ryan was arrested and committed to jail.

At the Limerick assizes, recently, Daniel Mahony, Daniel Mahony, jun., and Daniel O'Grady were indicted for riot and unlawful assault at Bruff on Sunday, 18th of January. At the suggestion of the Judge the prisoners plead guilty to the charge, and were allowed to stand aside on their own recognizances.

Justice Lawson and High Sheriff William H. Lyons opened the Criminal Court on the 17th July. Michael John Dwyer, a tenant of the traverser in the Bruff riot case, who did not appear when called on, pleaded guilty to a charge of riot at Bruff. His Lordship ordered that he should stand out on his own recognizance to come up for sentence when called on. Rev. Jeremiah Buckley, Daniel Hayes, Mathew Elliott, David Gleeson, and Michael Sullivan, of Corkery were indicted for riot and unlawful assembly at Ballyneetymurtagh, in the county of Limerick, on the 13th November, 1873, and disembishing the house, etc., of one William Walshe. Judge Lawson charged the jury, who, after three hours' absence, returned, when the foreman stated there was no possibility of their agreeing to a verdict. His Lordship directed them to retire again, but ultimately discharged them without their agreeing to a verdict. Another jury was subsequently impannelled, but disagreed, and were also discharged. Daniel Sinnus, a respectable looking man, and described as a pensioner from the army, was indicted for the murder of his infant seven sovereigns and a quantity of precious stones from a house in Chatterton's lane, on the night of the 24th of May last. The prisoner pleaded not guilty. The jury, before the Judge's charge, returned a verdict, a man stating there was no chance of their agreeing to any verdict, and his Lordship ordered them to be discharged.

MONAGHAN.

The most fearful hail storm within the memory of the oldest inhabitants burst over Aughnakoy and neighborhood on the afternoon of Sunday, July 5th. The sky was cooled by flashes of lightning, accompanied by fearful peals of thunder. This storm lasted about half an hour, and dire were the effects produced. The town suffered: windows were broken, gardens ruined and houses inundated; but it was to the farmers in the country, through whose lands the storm passed, that the real destruction was caused.

QUEEN'S COUNTY.

The Queen's County Assizes were opened on Friday, the 17th ult., by Chief Justice Whiteside and Chief Baron Pallas. Patrick Malone, who was in the garb of an inmate of the District Lunatic Asylum, was charged with an assault with intent to do bodily harm. The jury found the prisoner was insane, and his Lordship ordered him to be imprisoned during the pleasure of the Lord Lieutenant. James Conron was charged with having, on the 12th May, assaulted and wounded Henry Allen, at Cobbler's Castle, near Stradbally. Allen was a bailiff sent to put in the sheriff's baron's property for a debt. He had succeeded in seizing upon a race-horse belonging to Conron with a bill-hook, inflicting a severe wound on his neck. His Lordship sentenced him to four months' imprisonment with hard labor. The Lord Chief Baron, on Saturday, July 11, discharged the grand jury for the county for civil rights—there will be no longer any necessity for it. The national support which has stimulated the people's manliness has withdrawn, their insolent thirst for domination will pass away with it.—New Orleans Morning Star.

Protestantism in Corsica.

Not very long ago the municipalities of Corsica were, it seems, requisitioned for certain sums of money for the support of evangelical ministers. The Messager Corse, commenting upon this subject, says very justly that while these gentlemen are very ready to make a voluntary offering of their evangelical zeal to the Corsicans, it is clear then in return they would like to have an offering in the shape of solid money. It adds, "We fancy, however, that these gentlemen are deceiving themselves as regards their dispositions and their calculations. The Corsicans are relatively poor, and they would find it difficult to defray the expenses of foreign preachers. The Corsicans are attached to their religion, and they deserve something else than gratitude and reward for those who would attempt to deprive them of their faith." That the municipalities were of the same opinion is very evident from a resolution to that effect lately last month by the Municipal Council of Bastia, and which was to this effect—That the Council, considering that nearly the whole population of Bastia belongs to the Catholic, Roman and Apostolic Church, and that the establishment of a new kind of form of worship would outrage the religious sentiments of the population, and create a source of trouble and difficulty; considering, also, on the one hand, the Communes would not be justified in taking upon itself the expenses of furnishing a residence for a Protestant minister who would come to Corsica, rather to make proselytes than to preside over the ceremonies of a worship which has but a few followers in Bastia, is unanimously of opinion that the proposition of creating a fund for a Protestant minister at Bastia is extremely inopportune, and might even hurt the cause of very serious perturbations.

A proposition of the same kind having been made in the Municipal Council of Ajaccio, it was quashed in like manner. Mr. Stephanopolis opposed it with the utmost energy, and demanded that the requests made by the Protestant Consistory of Marseilles should receive a peremptory refusal. He supported his motion by stating that at Ajaccio there were only a very few Protestant families, who were very stationary; and that if in addition there were some English families who belonged to the Protestant religion their wants are supplied by a minister whom they paid out of their own resources. Finally, he said that the town of Ajaccio was eminently Catholic and that whilst admitting liberty of conscience, the Corsicans, if they had not the right to hinder, were, at any rate, perfectly justified in not favoring the introduction of Protestantism into the island. Weare glad to be able to add that when Mr. Stephanopolis' resolution was put to the vote it was carried without a dissentient voice.—Weekly Register.

"Experimental Holiness."

The religious news in most of our "religious" journals is never very edifying reading, and especially when it touches upon what the Sandhills call "sanctification" and the "higher life," "a higher attainment from on high," It is of a character which is so delicately poised between blasphemy and insanity that one scarcely knows whether the laughter it provokes ought rather to be changed into weeping. Some of the religious services held in the evening at the Union Convention at Green Lawn will, perhaps, illustrate our meaning. On one of the last days of the meeting, the impressionable young lady in the audience, when last night's testimony was called for, we have heard variously described as "losing strength," "seeing the bright spot," "getting the power," and "coming into the platform on which the ministers were seated, all informed me of Christ, who had just received the Holy Ghost, and wished to impart the gift to him by laying her hands upon his head. She also informed her that she had done all that was required of her in thus delivering the message, but that he must wait God's time for any such proceeding. Much distressed, the next morning the Episcopalian minister, and desired to impart the Holy Spirit to him by the same process, but again met with a refusal. Shortly after words a Methodist minister announced from the platform that he had just received the gift of healing, and that if there was any one present in any way ailing would present themselves to him they would be healed. A number of sick ones responded, and the minister laid his hands. The camp meeting broke up rather abruptly shortly afterwards, the other books reflecting that "experimental holiness" was getting rather suspiciously common. To Catholics, who reflect on that mystery of sanctity of which these and like things are grotesque and painful travesties, the state of mind in which they are shocking as the bare recital of its results in such instances is irresistibly amusing.—Catholic Review.

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. MARY'S ACADEMY,
SANTA CLARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS ACADEMY, CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME, is situated in the most delightful and healthy part of the city. The Institution from forming taste and habits of neatness, order and propriety, is well calculated for the reception of boarders and especially for those who purpose practising the Normal system of instruction.

Four conclusions on the 15th of August, and terminates about the 25th of July.

TERMS:
Entrance Fee to be paid but once.....$10 00
Board and Tuition, per month.....20 00
Washing, per month.....1 50
Piano, per month.....1 00
Use of Violin.....1 00

For further information inquire of the Sisters of Notre Dame, San José, Santa Clara, or Mission Indians. 1211

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A.B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Uniform Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who do not wish to pursue a Classical education in so short a time as possible.

The Collegiate year commences on the first Monday in August, the Classical and Scientific on the first Monday in September. The daily exercises of the Students in Greek, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly read and corrected in the Class-room.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.
Board, Tuition and Washing.....$300 00
Bed and Bedding.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines.....10 00
Use of Library.....5 00
Graduation Fee.....20 00

Payments will be made semi-annually in advance. Parents will pay for medical attendance, and supply toilet articles, etc.

Money will not be advanced by the College; for the purchase of necessary articles, a sufficient sum must be deposited.

For further particulars apply to
REV. J. J. O'KEEFE, C. S. C.
President.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

DEGREES CONFERRED

Rev. JAMES MAGUIRE, D. M.
President.

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
SAN JOSÉ, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORATED, and enjoys the full powers of the State, is conducted by Religious of the Society of Mary.

The Course of Instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS:
(Invariably half yearly in advance.)
Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, fuel, etc.....$100 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month.....$4 00 to $5 00
Use of Harp, per month.....2 00
No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needle Work or Drawing.

For further particulars apply to
SISTER IN CHARGE,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

1230

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,
SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THE EIGHTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the first Monday of August.

The object of the Institution is to give a good English, Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical Education, and thereby bring its advantages within the reach of all.

TERMS:
Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....$10 00
Tuition, Board and Bedding, per session, or ten months.....100 00
Music, French and Drawing form extra charges.
Washing, at the usual rate.
Payments will be made semi-annually in advance.
Parents will pay for medical attendance, and supply toilet articles, etc.
Money will not be advanced by the College; for the purchase of necessary articles, a sufficient sum must be deposited.

For further particulars apply to
REV. J. J. O'KEEFE, C. S. C.
President.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

DEGREES CONFERRED

Rev. JAMES MAGUIRE, D. M.
President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
MARYSVILLE.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS INCORPORATED according to the laws of the State, and respectfully solicits a share of public patronage. The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough education.

TERMS PER HALF SESSION.
(Payable in advance.)
Board, Tuition, and Washing.....$150 00
Use of Piano, per month.....2 00
Use of Harp.....2 00
Use of Violin.....1 00
Drawing and Painting.....2 00
Washing (extra) at the Academy.....2 00

Terms per month in advance:
Select Day Schools—Rhetoric, first and second Grammar Classes.....$4 00
Third and fourth Grammar Classes.....3 00
Primary and Primary.....2 00
Parochial Schools, per month, throughout the year.....1 00
No extra charge for French, plain and ornamental needle-work.

For further particulars apply to the superioress.
1s-6-17

CONVENT OF THE
IMMACULATE HEART OF MARY
.....FOR THE.....
EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES
GILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS:
Board, tuition, washing and mending, per session.....$200
Entrance fee, to be paid but once.....10
Bedding.....20
Payments to be made semi-annually in advance.
Physician's fee, when required.
No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Piano and Instrumental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

TERMS FOR DAY SCHOLARS:
Primary, per month.....$1 00
Elementary and Senior, per month.....1 50
Music, per month.....2 00
French.....2 00
No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Piano and Instrumental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.
N. B. The above establishment is also in the novitiate of the latter.
For Prospectuses and further particulars apply to SISTER SUPERIOR.
1s-6-17

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE,
Rohnerville, Humboldt County, Cal.

Conducted by the Priests of the Congregation of the Most Precious Blood.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR:
(Payable half yearly in advance.)
For board, tuition, bedding, washing and mending.....$120 00
Vacation, if to be paid only after.....60 00
Vacation at College.....40 00

DAY PUPILS.
Senior class.....$40 00
Junior class.....30 00
Vocal and Instrumental music, drawing and modern languages, each form extra charges. The two months of the scholastic year commence respectively on the 1st of September and the 1st of January.

For further information address REV. THOS. P. O'NEILL, Very Rev. P. HENNESSEY, Provincial.

NOTRE DAME ACADEMY,
MISSION DOLORES, SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS ACADEMY IS A BRANCH OF THE Notre Dame Institution, and is conducted by members of the same religious community. The course of instruction, which embraces the Primary as well as the higher branches, both useful and ornamental, comprises all the branches, both useful and ornamental, that are taught in the best Academies for ladies.

The first term of the Ninth Annual session will commence August 7, 1874.

Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the formation of classes.

TERMS:
(Invariably half yearly in advance.)
Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, fuel, etc.....$100 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month.....$4 00 to $5 00
Use of Harp, per month.....2 00
No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needle Work or Drawing.

For further particulars apply to
SISTER IN CHARGE,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

1230

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
BENICIA.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED BY THE Sisters of St. Dominic, and is situated in the healthy and accessible town of Benicia. The plan of education embraces the various branches of instruction usually taught in the most approved academies for young ladies. Pupils of any religious denomination will be received, but, for the sake of uniformity, all are required to be present at the regular religious exercises of the Church.

The scholastic year, comprising ten months, divided into two sessions of five months each, commences on the first Monday in August, and terminates about the 25th of June. The annual vacation commences during the session, excepts in case of sickness, only when a request to that effect is made by parents or guardians.

TERMS:
Board and Tuition, per session.....$125 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Bedding.....10 00
Physician's fee, when required.....10 00
Washing, per session.....20 00

Payments to be made semi-annually in advance. Parents will pay for medical attendance, and supply toilet articles, etc.

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges. There is no extra charge for the French or Spanish languages, nor for Needlework.

Pupils will be received at any time, but will be subject to the inspection of the Superioress.

For further particulars apply to the Superioress.
SISTER SUPERIOR.
1211

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A.B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Uniform Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who do not wish to pursue a Classical education in so short a time as possible.

The Collegiate year commences on the first Monday in August, the Classical and Scientific on the first Monday in September. The daily exercises of the Students in Greek, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly read and corrected in the class-room.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.
Board, Tuition and Washing.....$300 00
Bed and Bedding.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines.....10 00
Use of Library.....5 00
Graduation Fee.....20 00

Payments will be made semi-annually in advance.

Studies will be resumed on the 5th of August.
1231 REV. B. JUSTIN, President.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL,

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN SANTA Barbara, a most delightful and healthy part of the city. The grounds are extensive, and afford ample room for recreation.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS:
(Invariably half yearly in advance.)
Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc.....$100 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month.....$4 00 to $5 00
Use of Harp, per month.....2 00
No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needle Work or Drawing.

For further particulars apply to
SISTER IN CHARGE,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

1230

The Pope and the Carpenter.

M. Peche, the reporter of the "Work of Nocturnal Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament," relates this touching incident:

Peche, placing his only confidence in Providence who had promised him means for his journey, set out alone for Rome, with an intense desire to see the Holy Father. Having arrived tooclate to participate in the reception of the French pilgrims, no-one known and without friends, there remained for him no other resource than prayer. He went, therefore, to the tomb of St. Peter, his patron, to beg him to procure him the favor of an audience with the Pope. St. Peter, who has always power in Rome, did not delay his answer. Whilst Peche is finishing his prayer a person whom he does not know passes near him. He stops him, and asks him what he must do in order to see the Pope alone. He adds that he has the greatest desire to do so, and that he has just made the desire known to St. Peter, his patron saint.

"What you ask for is very difficult to obtain," answered the personage; "but since you have the protection of St. Peter, I think you will succeed. Give me your address, listen to your beads, and wait in peace."

Two days later Peche received a letter of audience for the 25th of May, at 10 o'clock in the morning. Faithful to the appointment he waited in a chamber full of Cardinals, Bishops and nobles—concealing himself as much as possible in a little brilliant group, thinking to be, in the last recleared—even precisely in the last—door open, and the Pope recalled. He is so bewildered that he has to be called a second time. Save he is the Pope, he sees no one in the apostle, passing first before all these men crowned for virtues and worldly science, and admitted into the presence of him who is, on earth, the august representative of the divine protector of Nazareth.

Very deeply moved, remained kneeling some distance from Lis Holiness. The Pope, looking at him with kindness, said to him:

"Come near me, my son: you are here with your father!" and took him by the hand, he added: "What do you desire?"

"Holy Father, I come to you blessing for my family, and for those who are dear to me; and also a special blessing for the Work of Nocturnal Adoration, which is spreading very much in Paris, where we pay for your Holiness."

"I am very much pleased with the 'Work of Nocturnal Adoration,' and with those who are members of it; it is the work of adoration is the foundation of Christianity. And what about Communion, my son?"

"Holy Father, our rule invites us to go Communion every morning for the intentions of the Vicar of Jesus Christ."

"Ego orabo pro te, my son; the works of all are wonderful, but the prayers of the Pope are for me a great deal. She has always been great love for me. She has been persecuted, calumniated, but she is more joious than ever. To become great it is necessary to be humbled. God will not allow that the Church should perish in its fruitfulness; I bless the Work of Nocturnal Adoration, and I bless you, my son, and all you are doing in it."

"Holy Father, I seek the glory of God the salvation of souls, and I perform Nocturnal Adoration."

"Well, since God desires you to be His servant, I grant you a plenary indulgence, and I will give you a medal in memory of the Holy Father. My dear son, you see that your Pope is very old; he will not live very long, and I will soon appear before Him before me; and, with the help of God, He will triumph. But you, my dear son, who are at my door will likewise fall, but as Pope will stand forever. Farewell, my son, and continue to bless Jesus in the eyes; a small incest agale in heaven."

The kneeling apostle is beyond compare; the saint's blessing shines out through the dignity of the Pontiff and the goodness of the father.—Ami Ecclésiaster.

The Garibaldians.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times gives the following account of the sort of service Garibaldi and his ragabond gangs gave to France in his trials of her struggle with Germany:

"When Garibaldi arrived at Tours in the autumn of 1870 he found that the Vosges, the easy to see that his infirmities disqualified him from leading a real army into the field, and from exercising any effective restraint over the disorderly and dissolute bands which came to him to fight and sought to whitewash themselves by the celebrity of his honored name. There was a battalion of them at Autun by the time he was a woman, who wore the insignia of the Red Cross, and drew 4s. per day. All sorts of disorders were committed at Autun by these strange bands, who were never seen in the least degree under the control of their own chiefs. The Decter conducted the retreat of Bourbaki's army, never failing to take part in the operation, advises and remonstrates with the General, and is listened to with the greatest deference. Garibaldi's two sons, it is to be seen does the Decter make a change in his habits or dress. Even in the midst of battle, the confidence which long experience has given, and the Decter's coolness and courage never forsake him. At all events items do no harm, as for commissions he is more formidable to the French, for they have professed to fight, than to the Prussians, whom they rarely saw."

When Garibaldi was made a citizen of France his two Englishmen would see nothing in them but those in the capital of the capital of freedom, published by the Ultramontanes. It is a chance if they do not selected some time that this disagreeable paragraph was slipped into the correspondence of the leading journal by some "disciple of Ayala."—Dublin Nation.

Price, One Dollar.

Buckingham's Dye
FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard, from any disagreeable or undesirable shade, to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

Manufactured by R. P. HALL & CO., NASHUA, N. H.
Sold by all Druggists, and Dealers in Medicines.

REMOVAL.

R. J. BRODERICK,
HAS REMOVED FROM 68 THIRD ST., TO
NO. 112 THIRD STREET,
Between Mission and Minna.

J. B. begs to acquaint his old friends and the public that he keeps a large stock of

Fashionable Boots and Shoes,
Now ready for sale at the shortest notice.

Repairing done with neatness and dispatch.

H. M. QUINN,
117 FOURTH STREET,
Between Minna and Everett.....San Francisco.

The best and cheapest place in the city. Prices reduced. Please come and satisfy yourself.

Where QUINN is not THE HATTER.

It is Well Known a Hat for use,
Which at once can notice,
Then you'll buy from no other
Is that with QUINN, THE HATTER.

AGENTS FOR "THE MONITOR."

Altamont—W. H. Wright.
Alvarado—John Quigley.
Amador City—M. O. Rooney.
Auburn—James Walsh.
Austin, Nev.—Martin Igo.
Bodie—Thomas Burke.
Bodie—Thomas Burke.
Bodie—Thomas Burke

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

It is announced that Mgr. Sanminiatelli, Monsignor is Mgr. Marodo, will be appointed Archbishop of Lepanto.

The Catholics of Wheeling propose to erect a monumental chapel over the remains of the late Bishop Whelan.

The Benedictine Monks are about erecting a monastery in the diocese of Savannah. They will devote themselves almost exclusively to the education of the colored race.

The pretty little church at Cornlestown was consecrated on Sunday, July 16, by Most Rev. Dr. Nulty, Lord Bishop of Meath, in the presence of a very large congregation.

Fourteen postulants of the Sisterhood of St. Francis of the Poor were admitted to the holy habit, in the Chapel of Santa Clara, Cincinnati, on the 24th of July by the Most Rev. Archbishop.

Very Rev. James Coolon is the oldest priest in the diocese of Cleveland. This reverend hero of the Faith and of pioneer life in Ohio, was seventy-three years of age on the 31st August.

Died, at the Convent of St. Joseph, Bay St. Louis, July 30th, Sister Elder (known in the religious community as Sister St. Pierre), third daughter of J. C. Elder, and niece of the Right Rev. Bishop of Natchez.

The new church of the Presentation, on West Walnut Hills, Rev. J. Kennedy pastor, was dedicated, says the Catholic Telegraph, to the service of Almighty God on Sunday, July 30th, by Right Rev. Edward Fitzgerald, Bishop of Little Rock.

His Grace Archbishop MacHale presided at the solemn ceremony of raising from the sea-shore, at the Convent of Mercy, Westport, on the 16th of July. The religieuse who made her solemn vows on the occasion, was Miss Curr, sister of Very Rev. Dean Carr, Maynooth College.

The Christian Brothers are deserving of great praise for their labors in the cause of Catholic education. While the common schools of that city number 8,697 pupils, the parochial schools of the Catholic Church are educating 5,132—the difference being only 165 in favor of the schools that receive the support of the State.

Work on the steeple of the Holy Family Church, Chicago, Ill., is being pushed rapidly forward. About 90 feet is already built and the work will be carried on to completion as rapidly as possible. Its height when completed will be 235 feet, and the cost will be about $17,000. A splendid chime of thirty-two bells will be placed in the tower.

Mgr. Jankowski, the Suffragan Bishop of Posen was arrested on 26th July, to undergo the term of ten months' imprisonment to which he has been sentenced. The place of his detention is not yet known. Mgr. Pantkowski Suffragan, Bishop of Kuss, was arrested on the same day, to undergo the six sentence of fifteen months' imprisonment.

On the 17th of July, says the Pittsburg Catholic, the Right Rev. M. Domenec ordained the following members of the Benedictine Order, in St. Mary's Church, Allegheny: Priests—Rev. Wenceslaus Kraemer, O.S.B. Deacon—Rev. Cornelius Eckel, O.S.B. Subdeacon—Rev. Willibald Wilde. Students seated—Bruch, Melchior Reicher, John Nepomucene Jaeger, Albert Robrecht, Anton Wirtner and Heinrich Gerdes.

A new (Polish) Catholic Church, under the auspices of St. Albert, is being built at Berea, Ohio. On the occasion of the laying of the corner-stone, Father Kolasinski, the pastor, addressed the crowd assembled in Polish, and Fathers Wesserhoil and F. P. Quigly spoke in German and English, respectively. The priests present on the occasion represented seven different nationalities. There is a regular hotbed of Methodism, but Catholicity is spreading rapidly within its borders.

Stone pious persons are about to build a Carmelite nunnery at Lourdes, over the spot where Our Lady appeared to Bernadette, on the 11th of July last. It will be under the invention of Mount Carmel. Mother Teresa of Jesus, prioress of the Carmelites at Tulle, will be the head of the new convent. On July 11, Monseigneur the Bishop of Tarbes blessed the new foundation—a nunnery which has recently been built opposite the world-famous grotto of the apparition.

The Crusader announces the death of that true child of St. Ignatius, Father Da Fort. It says: "On January 31, Rev. Father Henry de Fort, S. J., died at Ze-kawei, Kiang nan, China. He was born May 17, 1838, and in 1850 entered the Pontifical army. He took a conspicuous part in the defence of Spoleto, and was sent back to France after the capitulation, but returned to Rome and became a Zouave. In 1866, his term of service having expired, he entered the Society of Jesus at Issodun, and in 1868, at his own request, was sent to China, where he has crowned five years of apostolic labor with a saintly death."

Death has stricken another noble soul in the person of Sister Mary Aloysius, Mother-Superior of the Convent of Notre Dame, Boston Highlands, and for many years a religious convened in the midst of the Atlantic Ocean. On the 11th July she left for Europe in the steamship Pavonia, with two others of her Order, returning to the Motherhouse for consultation on various matters, and on Monday, the 18th, she was seized with a sudden illness, consequent on the disease of the heart of which she had for about two years. The steamship stopped while the prayers were said for her departing soul, and her remains were consigned to the waves, far from the home which she had not seen for twenty-five years, and the sympathising hearts among whom she had labored. She was a native of Aix-la-Chapelle, in Prussia, and had passed nearly fifty years of age, thirty of which she spent as a religious.

The Los Angeles and San Pedro Railroad Company held an election for Directors on the 15th, with the following result: Leland Stanford, Charles Crocker, C. P. Huntington, Mark Hopkins, Robert Robinson, Jr., D. O. Mills, S. B. Cohen. These gentlemen appear to be amazingly popular with the stockholders of all the railroad companies in the country. So they are always elected by each company with great unanimity. To read of these railroad elections reminds one of the programme in Mr. Mallett's great show, which ran something like this: "Highland fling, by a real live Highlander. Real live Highlander, Mr. Mallett. Injun war dance, by a real live Injun. Real live Injun, Mr. Mallet." In both cases the "full strength" of the company is clearly disclosed.

A body of Mennonites comprising one hundred families, passed through Berlin on the 14th August, on their way to the United States.

Grand Celebration at St. Mary's.

At St. Mary's pro-Cathedral, yesterday morning, at 11 o'clock, Pontifical High Mass was celebrated by the Most Rev. his Grace Archbishop Polding, O. S. B., with all the pomp and splendor of the Roman Catholic Church. The occasions was one of three-fold interest to the members of the Catholic community, it being the day appointed for the feast of Sts. Peter and Paul; the fortieth anniversary of the consecration of the venerable Archbishop himself, and also the day appointed by him for the decoration of Patrick Alfred Jennings, Esq., (late member for Denilliquin,) with the order of St. Gregory the Great, recently conferred upon him by his Holiness the Pope. Knowing the great love and esteem in which the venerable Archbishop is held, not only by the members of his own flock, but by those who differ from him in his religious tenets, it was not surprising to find that, long before the appointed hour for the commencement of the service, the spacious building of the pro-Cathedral was crowded to excess; every available seat, with extra chairs down by the various aisles being occupied, and numbers of persons having to stand. When the service commenced there could not have been fewer than 2,000 persons present to witness the celebration. The altar was most tastefully decorated after the approved Pontifical manner, by the Rev. Father Colletti, chaplain to his Grace the Archbishop. It was carpeted with crimson cloth, and in addition to the usual altar decorations, bouquets of flowers were placed in tasteful profusion, and pots of evergreen and flowers stood on each side of the altar steps. The sanctuary railing was also decorated from the nave to the altar with crimson, blue and green, over which again hung several banners, the combined effect being very rich, revealing the handiwork of an artist, and doing very great credit to the pro-vestry gentlemen under whose personal instruction and supervision the decorations were carried out. The altar boys, seven in number, as well as the officiating priests, were dressed in bright and rich vestments, in accordance with the nature of the festival they were to celebrate. Pontifical High Mass was commenced at 11 o'clock by the venerable Archbishop, assisted by Fathers Walsh and Bonivento, assistant deacons; Father John Dwyer (rector of Lyndhurst), assistant priest; Father Placid, deacon; and Father Bernard, sub-deacon. Father Cullen (the Church's chaplain) was an usual director of the ceremonies. The musical portion of the service was especially grand and effective. Signor Zellman presided at the organ, and there was a large and efficient choir, principally composed of the members of the church choir. They also included Signors Zenari-Guasco, Mrs. Miles, Miss Clara Lee, and Signors Rosnati, Dondi and Collins. The music for the occasion was by the following masters: Mass, Haydn's No. 4, and Gounod's Mass. The solos were particularly fine, especially Signor Zenari's rendering of Giorza's "God Tellen;" "Ojus Anisum" (Sabat Mater) by Signor Rosnati; the "Ave Maria," by Signor Colva; and Rossini's "Pro Peccatis," by Signor Dondi.

The instrumental music composed of the entire opera band, sixteen in number, under the able leadership of Mr. John A. Heaney, organist of the Cathedral. In addition to the officiating priests, there were nearly twenty members of the clergy present on the altar, besides some five young men in training from Lyndhurst College. We also noticed several members of both Houses of Parliament and other prominent citizens among the congregation. After benediction the ceremony of investiture of Mr. Jennings took place. He, accompanied by his young son, ascended the altar steps, and knelt at the feet of the Archbishop. Father Colletti read aloud the diploma from the Pope, received from him through Cardinal Antonelli, in Latin, which was immediately afterwards read in English by Father Healey. The diploma contains a history of the Order and instructions as to wearing the insignia, and was signed by Pope Pius IX., dated at the Vatican 20th February, 1874, in the twenty-eighth year of his Pontificate. The Archbishop then blessed the sword and cross, and handed them to the recipient, who, after receiving the Archbishop's blessing, faced the congregation and saluted them with the sword. The ceremony then concluded and the choir sang the Hallelujah Chorus, while the congregation slowly left the building. The Order of St. Gregory the Great was founded by Pope Gregory XVI., on the 1st September, 1831, as a reward for zeal and devotion displayed in the cause of the Roman Catholic religion and apostolic authority in an age of religious opposition and indifference." Burke, in his "Orders of Knighthood and Decorations of Honor of all Nations," says: "The badge consists of an octagonal cross, chased and enamelled red. The blue middle medallions on the obverse the effigy of St. Gregory, and on the reverse the words, Pro Deo et Principe. The ribbon (watered, I think) is accompanied by the legend, S. Gregorius Magnus (or, as in the case of Sir Charles Jennings' case), the cross is suspended by a red ribbon with yellow borders, between which and the cross is a green oak-leaved olive branch. There is not any particular costume in connection with the Order; nor do each receive as his Cross or St. Gregory entitle the recipients to prefix the honorific title" to their names. It is simply a religious Order of honor conferred upon a lay member for service rendered in the cause of the Roman Catholic Church. —Sydney Morning News, June 30.

Sir Patrick Jennings is a brother of Mr. John Jennings of this city.

An Unwholesome Season.

The closing days of winter and the early days of spring are very trying to the health and sensitive and are apt to effect unpleasantly even the more robust constitutions. Everything now is more or less unorganized in the nerves or more depressing to the spirits than damp, chilling winds, fogs and cold rains, and such unwelcome visitors are the rule and not the exception at this season. Common prudence suggests, therefore, the propriety of fortifying the system against the influences which are so inimical to health and comfort, and the experience of more than a quarter of a century points to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as the most effectual, safe and agreeable tonic ever introduced. An assurance of vital strength and energy is what is required at most and every time the unhealthy elements now present in the atmosphere. This increase of vital power, no nerve can be more effectually secured than by the use of this celebrated remedy which at once stimulates the digestive organs and the circulation, can be recommended to the public as one of the two to three boons of Providence. It is a thorough and genuine vegetable preparation. The nature of its ingredients is well known to the public. It is composed of an aromatic pure diffusive stimulant, combined with the extract and juices of the most effective tonic, alterative, and diuretic and laxative roots and herbs known to medical science. The combination of these excellent ingredients, in proportions certain in the exhaustion of enfeebled, languid and diseased systems, the great tonic alterative owes its efficiency as a preventative and curative. A course of it, commenced now, will prevent all danger of fever and ague, rheumatism, or other ailments arising from cold and damp peculiar to the spring months, and also prove a safeguard against the causes of dyspepsia and liver complaint. Which no frequently occur at the period of the year.

The war in Cuba is conducted with as much virulence as ever.

The Minister of Public Worship was asked in the Bavarian Chamber of Deputies on Tuesday, July 14, whether he would interfere to prevent Dr. Reinkens, the "Old" Catholic Bishop, from carrying out his contemplated tour of confirmation. The Minister stated he did not intend to do so, and held that the Government was not bound or entitled to lend the temporal arm to the Church in this matter.

The population of Sacramento county is estimated at 36,000 souls.

Subscriptions Received.

Oakland—James Magee.....$12 50
Canmarsh—M. Doherty.....4 00
Benicia—Patrick W. Gillis.....4 00
Redwood City—John McEvoy.....1 00
Virginia City—John B. Orsbond.....4 00
Valley—Patrick McElroy.....4 00
Bethel Church—Thomas Dolan.....4 00
" Peter Hanrahan.....4 00
" John Kennedy.....4 00
" Mr. Bobbett.....4 00
Ione—James Bagley.....7 00
Tomales—P. Kirk.....4 00
French Gulch—Timothy Murray.....2 00
London (England)—Thomas Calnan.....1 00
Ballymacoe (Ireland)—Father P. Sheridan.....1 00

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, August 20, 1874.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export it has been moderate. We quote—Extra at $5@5 50, and superfine at $4@4 25, usual terms.

WHEAT—The market has ruled quiet and at steady rates the past week. At the close the market is quotable at $1 [illegible] for shipping and $1 37½@1 40 for choice milling. 9 100 Sx.

LOCOMOTIVE, August 20.—The Union Line Express is the weekly review of the breadstuffs market, has the following: "Bad weather prevailed throughout the past week, and consequently a sharp look-out was the favored chief crops. There are no reports of spoiling, though in many districts the weather is poor condition, in consequence of heavy winds and low temperature. The harvest has commenced on the continent. This will bring good samples to the front, and increase the value of the old stock. There is little difference to prices since last reports, although the tendency is downward. Wheat crops here and in France are much better, and the dependence of both countries on foreign supplies is less. Flour is in good demand, and prices are rather easier, below the average."

BARLEY—The demand has been very good at unchanged rates. We quote the range for the brewing at $1 70@1 80 for Coast.

OATS—There was a fair demand, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Quotable at the close at $1 60@1 65 @ 100 lbs.

RYE—Sales have been held during the past week, with a good demand. Quotable at the close at $1 [illegible] @ 100 lbs.

CORN—The demand has been fair during the past week, with a good demand. Quotable at the close at $1 [illegible] @ 100 lbs.

BUCKWHEAT—Quotable at $1 [illegible] @ 100 lbs.

BEANS—We quote at 3@3½c @ 100 lbs.

VEGETABLES—Cabbage, 75@1 [illegible] 50 for sack; Garlic, 5@6; Green Peas, 3@4; Rhubarb, 3@—; String Beans, 1½ @ 3c; Lima Beans, 3c; Beets, 75c@$1 per sack; Onions, 2@3c per lb; Peppers, 12½ @ 15c; Tomatoes, 3c @ 1c for 40 and 10@15c; Okra, 10@15c per box; Green Corn, 10@15c per dozen; Marrowfat Squash, 1½@2c per lb; Cucumbers, 10@15c per dozen.

POTATOES—The receipts have been free, with a fair demand. We quote the range at 75c@$1 25 @ 100 lbs.

BRAN—Quotable at $16 @ ton and firm.

MIDDLINGS—We quote feed at $26 @ ton from the mill.

RYE—Quotable at $1 12½@1 17½ @ 100 lbs.

BUCKWHEAT—Quotable at $1 @ 100 lbs.

SEEDS—We quote Flax at $2 @ Canary, 6@4½c; Hemp, 4½@5c; Timothy, 12½@15c; Clover, 15@17½c.

HIDES—We quote California dry at 15@16c, and Mexican at 14@15c.

TALLOW—Quotable at 6@6½c @ lb.

BEESWAX—Quotable at 30@37½c @ lb.

WOOL—The market continues to rule quiet; fair, 3 @12½c; common, 8@9c; Humboldt, 20@22½c @ lb.

HOPS—Are held in light and prices for choice are from 25@30c, where reflective qualities are taken at 20@22½c @ lb.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh roll, good to choice, 32½ @35c; extra, 37½@40c; California pickled roll, 25@30c; Oregon, 25@30c; Eastern, 25@30c; California firkin, 25@30c; Eastern, 25@30c.

CHEESE—California, 14½@15c; Eastern, 15@16c; Oregon, 15@16c; Eastern, 15@16c; Sage, 15@16c; Young Americas, 15@16c; Eastern, 15@16c; Sage, 15@16c; Young Americas, 15@16c; Eastern, 15@16c.

EGGS—Are in good supply and prices have declined. We quote at 25@27½c @ dozen.

FRESH MEATS.

BEEF—For first quality, 9@10c; other grades, 5@8c @ lb.

MUTTON—At 6@8c @ lb.

VEAL—At 6@8c @ lb.

PORK—Dressed, grain-fed, 8½@9c; corn-fed, 8@8½c @ lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

POULTRY—Live Turkeys, 20@22c; Dressed, 18@19c; Young Roosters, 15@17 @ dozen.

Live Chickens, Mixed, 12½@14 dozen.

Geese—Live at 12½@15 @ pair.

Ducks—Live, 12½@15 @ pair.

Rabbits—At 10@12½ dozen.

Wholesale Dealers.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

WE HAVE NOW A FULL AND COMPLETE assortment of Spring and Summer

DRESS GOODS

Which we offer the public at very

LOW PRICES,

Consisting, in part, of Black and Fancy

SILKS,

IRISH POPLINS, SHAWLS,

And a full supply of

Fancy Goods.

We invite special attention to our supply of

BLACK GOODS.

Table Linens & Housekeeping Goods

To Hotels and Boarding-houses at Wholesale Prices.

RIBBONS

A Specialty, at importers' rates.

SF BRADFORD SERGES, in Black and White, recommended especially for the use of the Sisters and Fathers of the Coast.

SF IRISH TATTING sold to the trade at a Sh. cent. discount.

Orders from the country promptly [illegible] to at lowest prices.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

706 MARKET STREET,

OPPOSITE TIMID.....SAN FRANCISCO.

CERTIFICATES OF COPARTNERSHIP. — We, the undersigned, do hereby certify that we have entered into a copartnership and are doing business in the city and county of San Francisco, State of California, where our principal place of business is, under the firm name and style of KELLY & EGAN; that the names and residences of the respective partners are herein signed.

MICHAEL H. KELLY, [SEAL]
No. 15 Hayes street, San Francisco.
JOHN EGAN, [SEAL]
118 Page street, San Francisco.
San Francisco, July 21, 1874.
Acknowledged before Arnold Fuller, Notary Public.
Indorsed—Filed July 23, 1874.
W. W. HARNEY, County Clerk.
By W. SWEENSON, Deputy Clerk.
1733

IMMENSE SACRIFICE
—OF— —AND—
BOOTS SHOES,

CLOTHING AND GENT'S FURNISHING GOODS
AT THE AVENUE AUCTION STORE OF
JAMES O'HANLON,
725 Montgomery Street.

SF GREAT CLEARANCE SALE FOR SIXTY DAYS ONLY.

A VISIT TO THE STORE WILL CONVINCE THE MOST SKEPTICAL THAT WE ARE SELLING goods cheaper than any other house in the trade. Our present stock of Staple Goods is the largest we have ever had, and we intend to make room for a large consignment of Winter Goods—a splendid and well-assorted stock of Men and Boys' Boots and Shoes, manufactured expressly for our own trade and to suit the requirements of customers.

500 cases Men's tap sole Boots at.....$1 50
" The same plus as by the case.]
400 cases Men's Kip and Calf Boots.....4 00
The feeble branch of a childish hand
100 cases Calf Grain Boots.....3 00
And the strong heart, cultivated to all beside,
" Former price $5 50.....3 50
The wisdom of wise clerging.
100 cases Irish Leather Boots.....3 50
100 cases Boys' Boots, size 9 to 13.....2 00
Our own make, and warranted.....2 00

The simplest prayer that was ever I spoke
By a child with its mother kneeling,
Is not the shadowy gulf so broke
In any to the soul to bearing;
The truest book that ever I've seen without
The good book that within is sleeping,
Is not the book of nature, the book of years of Nature's love, forever in keeping.

There are fingers set on the pulse we keep
Life's brittle thread from breaking;
There are hearts whose every throb we feel
Before the throb is made or still
The fairest of kindred are counting,
If in each a secret we may find
The highest touch
We were more of love bestowing,
Some would have in greater measure of love
Where illusions and letters are growing.

The truest hearts hold other hearts—
The truest love is unspoken;
The best gift is the kindest touch
With a soul's deep feeling broken;
A prayer, though in weakness given,
Is more than the gift of angels,
And open the gates to heaven.

IMPORTATION DIRECT

M. SHORT,
PIONEER TAILOR,
COMMERCIAL STREET, - - - Corner of Leidesdorf

SF THE FINEST GOODS ever introduced into this market, including CHEVIOTS, CASSIMERE,
NAPIER, BEAVERS,
OXFORD, DIAGONALS,
KAGLANS, WEST TWILLS,
Etc.....Etc.....Etc.

A Large Assortment of Genuine Irish Frieze.

Being the NEWEST FASHIONS, both in material and colors, which he now offers at prices which

Cannot be touched by any other house in the city.

An inspection of THIS SPLENDID STOCK is respectfully invited. A perfect fit guaranteed.

Remember, my Prices to Ord are—

Pants.....$ 11
Business Suits.....
Dressy Suits.....
Finest French Dressy Suits.....

M. SHORT,
527 Commercial Street,
SAN FRANCISCO. and

GREAT BARGAINS
IN
BOOTS AND SHOES,
AT HEALY'S
RED HOUSE,
848 MARKET STREET (OPPOSITE FOURTH).

SF PRICES TO DEFY COMPETITION.

NEW STORE!---NEW GOODS!

EVERYTHING NEW!

M. CAREY

TAKES PLEASURE IN ANNOUNCING TO the people of San Mateo county that he has opened a

GENERAL MERCHANDISE STORE AT SAN MATEO,

Where he will keep constantly on hand a large stock of first-class

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS,
HARDWARE, CLOTHING,
WOODEN WARE, FURNISHING GOODS,
GLASSWARE, CROCKERY, WINES, LIQUORS,
ALES, TOBACCO AND CIGARS,

Which will be sold at San Francisco prices for cash.

Farmers, what is the use of going to San Francisco to get goods when they may be obtained at home? You can buy just as cheap from CAREY?

Five hundred thousand pounds is taken to San Francisco each year from San Mateo county for the purchase of

GROCERIES

By resident families, when as good qualities and at as cheap prices may be obtained at

CAREY'S.

It is a well-known fact that Carey is now busily preparing all kinds of general merchandise for CASH, on sale from 20 to 30 per cent.

SF Quick Sales and Small Profits! is my motto. au8

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO.,
Northwest corner Pine and Front S
Where they offer for sale
THE LARGEST STOCK OF PAINTS,
OILS,
GLASS
ETC., ETC., ON THE PACIFIC COAST.
AT THE LOWEST MARKET RA
102, 103 and 105 FRONT STREET,
and 110 PINE STREET.

BACON & COMPANY'S ART PRINTERY
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
PRINTING
Paper Ruling and Book Binding.
Neatly, Promptly, Cheap
PERFORMED BY
Bacon & Company
Corner Clay and Sansome Sts.
Country Orders will receive equal consideration with those from our city patrons.

HARP WANTED TO HIRE, for two months; may be [illegible] purchased at the end of that time. Apply by letter to SUPERIOR, at convent of the Sacred Heart, [illegible] 1st.

FRATINGER & NOLL
WILL EXHIBIT RARE NOVELTIES during the coming week in handsome

LINEN SUITS.
NEW STYLES,
Embroidered and Braided in all the new Shades and Designs.

NEW STYLE CLOAKS,
Drap d'Ete, English Walking Jackets,
Dolman's Talmas, and Polonaises,
Trimmed and Inserted with YAK LACE and PASSEMENTERIE, both Plain and Beaded.

HOUSE WRAPPERS!
A Large Assortment, consisting in
French Calico, Cashmere and Silk.

STREET SUITS.
In all New and Desirable SPRING GOODS, made up stylish and handsomely trimmed in two colors or with silk.

SPRING SILKS
Can be found in all Shades and at all Prices.

PASSEMENTERIES!
PASSEMENTERIES!
The Largest and Best Assortment of
BEADED DIMPS,
ORNAMENTS,
BUCKLES,
SLIDES,
FRINGES
AND BUTTONS.

YAK LACE AND INSERTIONS,
Both Plain and Beaded, in large variety.

FRATINGER & NOLL,
Leading Cloak and Suit House of the City.
10 Montgomery Street.

E. SUPPLE,
838 Market Street,
HAS NOW A FULL AND COMPLETE ASsortment of Spring and Summer
DRESS GOODS
Which we offer to the public at very
LOW PRICES,
Consisting, in part, of Black and Fancy
SILKS,
IRISH, POPLINS, SHAWLS,
And a full supply of
Fancy Goods.
We invite special attention to our supply of
BLACK GOODS.
TABLE LINENS
AND HOUSEKEEPING GOODS
To Hotels and Boarding-houses at Wholesale Prices.
RIBBONS
A Specialty, at importers' rates.
Orders from the country promptly attended to at lowest rates.
E. SUPPLE,
838 Market street.....Nearly opposite Fourth mr31-1m

LOW PRICED MUSIC BOOKS.
Attractive, Useful, Very Popular.
CLARKE'S DOLLAR INSTRUCTORS,
—FOR—
Reed Organs, Piano and Violin.
RIVER OF LIFE. 35 cents. Best Sabbath School Song Book.
CANTATA OF ESTHER. Dramatized. 50 cents. Immensely popular.
FATHER KEMP'S OLD FOLKS' TUNES. 50 cts. Much enlarged. Sing forever.
RIVER OF LIFE. 35 cents. Best Sabbath School Song Book.
WINNER'S NEW SCHOOL—For Piano, Cabinet Organ, Guitar, Banjo. Duets, Accordions, Fife, Flute, Flageolet, Clarionet. Price of each Book, 75 cents.
RIVER OF LIFE. 35 cents. Best Book for Sabbath Schools.
WINNER'S BAND OF FOUR. $1. First and second Violin, Cornet or Clarionet, and Bass.
Sent, post-paid, on receipt of price.
OLIVER DITSON & CO., C. H. DITSON & CO.,
711 Broadway, New York. Boston.

Manufactory of all Kinds of Silk and Bunting Flags,
Banners, A. G. H. Scarfs,
ROSETTES AND BADGES, FOR BALLS AND PICNICS.
PASQUALE, 644 Washington street,
SAN FRANCISCO.

THE MONITOR:
The Only Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
LYONS & BARRY, - - - - Publishers.
DENIS LYONS. JOHN T. BARRY.
RICHARD O'SULLIVAN.....EDITOR.
DENIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.
OFFICE—526 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 3, 7 and 8, up-stairs.)
SF All communications should be addressed to LYONS & BARRY.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):
Served by Carriers, per week.....10 cts
Mail subscribers, per year.....$ 4 00
Six months.....2 25
The Monitor and Catholic World, one year.....7 75
" " Godey's Lady's Book.....4 75
" " Demorest's Fashion Magazine.....4 50
" " Peterson's Ladies' Magazine.....4 50

ADVERTISING RATES:
1 square, 1 time.....$1 00 | 1 square, 6 months.....$10 00
" 1 month.....4 00 | " 9 months.....12 00
" 2 months.....6 00 | " 6 months.....15 00
" 3 months.....8 00 | " 1 year.....25 00
SF The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

A BUNCH OF KEYS.

There's a tender spot in every heart—
For hearts, think they have human—
And the keys to set nobody their inner court
Are held by man and woman.
The feeble branch of a childish hand
May a soul's door lift in weeping,
And the strong heart, cultivated to all beside,
The wisdom of wise clerging.

The simplest prayer that was ever I spoke
By a child with its mother kneeling,
Is not the shadowy gulf so broke
In any to the soul to bearing;
The truest book that within is sleeping,
The good book that is nature, the book of years of Nature's love, forever in keeping.

There are fingers set on the pulse we keep
Life's brittle thread from breaking;
There are hearts whose every throb we feel
Before the throb is made or still
The fairest of kindred are counting,
If in each a secret we may find
The highest touch
We were more of love bestowing,
Some would have in greater measure of love
Where illusions and letters are growing.

The truest hearts hold other hearts—
The truest love is unspoken;
The best gift is the kindest touch
With a soul's deep feeling broken;
A prayer, though in weakness given,
Is more than the gift of angels,
And open the gates to heaven.

VOL. XVII. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1874. NO. 48.

The Clopne Bishopric.

Last Saturday information reached Ireland that the Holy Father, in accordance with the wishes of the clergy of Clopne, approved and appointed Very Rev. Canon MacCarthy, parish priest of Mallow, to succeed the truly lamented Dr. Keane as prelate of that diocese. It is over what will be hailed with unfeigned joy throughout the southern province. It is highest praise to say that the new bishop will worthily succeed the late prelate and as patriot. Canon MacCarthy asserted himself not a little to secure the choice of his brother priests and of the Holy See to fill and sainted traditions of the Irish hierarchy. No purer spirit or truer heart ever loved and served God and Ireland. He is brother of the late Canon Justin MacCarthy of Mallow, a man whose grand and massive genius, whose splendid abilities and gentle virtues made him a very shrine-lover of religion and patriotism in the South. Truer MacCaurea both; full of the ancient spirit of their race; holding love of country to be a duty next to the love of God, they were men destined to write their names on the bright records of Catholic Ireland. One sleeps in the little church of Mallow, close by the flowing Blackwater, where he was laid one day amidst the raining tears of a stricken people. The other is now selected by the Apostolic See to wear the mitre of Cloyne. One rests with the Church triumphant, the other is raised to command in the Church militant. To Cloyne and to Ireland a blessing has been given, that, in those days, when more than ever most beersand true are needed in the episcopacy, so one so gentle, so wise and so courageous has been trained in the school of the priest and lamented Dr. Keane. Fervently and reverently we wish the new Bishop length of days, in health and welfare, to rule a faithful and devoted people.—Dublin Nation, August 29.

Bismarck Snubbed.

The court refusal of Russia to recognize Bismarck as a fegreat step in the face to Berlin. He thought to carry all before him, and he very nearly had his way. So ready were the "Christian powers," as Don Juan called them, to fall in at the Berlin command, that in less than a week from the first announcement of Bismarck's fiat, every single Madrid a lift, every considerable power but one had joined him. Russia spoke last, and Russia, after long silence, "No." The three Emperors, William, Francis Joseph and Alexander, had so lately been embraced at Berlin that many people took it for granted they were certain to move together. But here was the accident in the spoke. The Czar will have nothing to say to Bismarck's Spanish pet, and the Czar is quite strong enough to do just what he likes in such a matter, and give nobody, Prince or Minister, any thanks. It is not at all unlikely that the Porte Ribbon story has jarred upon the nerves of the Emperor of all the Russias, and that the natural jealousy of the German lust of territory forbade him to assist any longer. Or it may be that he is weary of the democratic game which has been in vogue at Berlin since the issues of the Franco-German war. The Muscovite big brother is evidently becoming restive, and he is big enough to cause some uneasiness even when he yawns, particularly in his next-door neighbor. Bismarck feels his failure, they say, acutely, and nothing more completely shows the true significance of the falling out than the efforts of the Government press at Berlin to make the people think there is nothing at all the matter. The formal message from St. Petersburg to Berlin, to the effect that the divergence of opinion need not cause a diplomatic misunderstanding between Russia and Germany, is evidence of the straits to which it reduces them.—Dublin Weekly News, August 29.

A Living Skeleton.

Last week we announced the death of an extraordinary being in the Prescott Workhouse. The local newspaper states that the deceased had been exhibited in a caravan in various parts of the country. With a determination worthy of a better object, he had voluntarily gone through a process which had reduced him to nothing but skin and bone. He was enabled to wonderful clodhoppers at country fairs at one penny per head, and there is reason for supposing that, under the influence of misery and wretchedness, the pain and weariness, he suffered, his ambition was satisfied, as wondering public left his caravan absolutely edging that they had never seen anything like it, unlike a prize ox or pig, and left it in. Shut out from the clear light of heaven, voluntarily deprived of the enjoyment of sufficient food and the common kindly human knowledge that his privations would bring him to the grave, the gaunt, wretched creature considered himself rich in the fact he had lived for a purpose. He was "The Living Skeleton," and in that respect had as much out-distanced all competitors as the greatest warriors, statesmen, painters, philosophers, etc., out-distance theirs. With sunken eyes and hollow cheeks, with attenuated legs which were more bones covered with diseased skin, with the grave before him yawning to receive him, it seems impossible to believe that this mere mockery of a man was a man at all. Yet he was, and he would have no wife, no plumes, no pomp but wished the poor to the money which would be saved by an empty parade. Every one had those to his bed side to receive his He bequeathed £50 to be given poor of Wolverhampton, without of religious belief.—Liverpool Mercury.

The Prince of Wales' Debts.

A Bankrupt and [illegible] Peerage.

LONDON, August 22.—There is always plenty of scandal afloat concerning our princes, and the latest yarn is that the Prince of Wales is again compromised in another affair of gallantry. Hitched to royalty of [illegible] he is said "could up" last year, is said to have been the widow of a gentleman once bearing a great name in the banking world of the same which was on everybody's lips that terrible "Black Friday." The present favorite is said to be the most beautiful woman in England—a lady whose husband is well known in the counters of the world and banking. The Prince of Wales owes nearly a million of money. But it must not be supposed that his favorites are ruined by his generosity. The Prince, although of pleasure bent, has a frugal mind. It is probable that the mute-peculiar will combine something handsome. The debts of the Prince were let £100,000 a year. Should now living in a very humble way, possibly on a rate of £30,000 a year. When her establishment was broken up and sold by her creditors there was a great rush of purchasers, and competition for certain stuffs in the house was lively. The three principal creditors of the Prince are the Duke of Sutherland; Mr. Poole, the tailor; and Mr. Lawson, the principal proprietor of the Daily Telegraph. The Prince had about a £1,000,000 saved up for him when he attained his majority. He has ever since had an income of about £120,000 a year. His wife is not extravagant. But now he is in debt in the tune of £650,000 or £1,000,000, and it is a great mystery where the money has gone to. In about twelve years he has managed to spend more than three and a quarter millions sterling, or nearly seven hundred millions of dollars. He is anxious to get out of debt—or at least his creditors want their money. He applied to the late Government for assistance, but they refused to do anything. He has renewed his application to the present Government, and the matter is under consideration. One of the pleas he makes is that much of the money he spent in discharging duties belonging to the Queen. There is something in this, but then if it be so the Queen should pay it and not the people. The Queen, I am told, has occasionally given considerable sums to the Prince, but before the marriage of the Duke of Edinburgh some of the creditors of that young gentleman (who is also in debt) commenced a run on him and threatened to make a row about it if they were not paid. The Queen came to the rescue, and paid £15,000 out of her own purse to satisfy these claims.

At the next session of Parliament a bill of some kind will be introduced for the relief of the Prince of Wales. Most probably it will consist of a vote of money and an authorization for the capitalization of the private debts of the Duchy of Cornwall for a certain number of years. These revenues amount to about £60,000 a year. A capitalist would do well to pay £600,000 down and take the revenues for ten years. By these means the money to pay the debts of the Prince might be raised, but he would in the meantime be deprived of half his income.

There has been a ridiculous story floating about in London for days to the effect that now that the Princess of Wales has gone back to Denmark with her father she will remain there, and that, tired of his constant infidelities of her husband, a quiet separation is about to be effected. I know this story is my foundation for the report.—Cor., of New York Graphic.

A Letter from Bazaine.

NEW YORK, September 13.—The Herald this morning publishes a letter to its editor from Marshal Bazaine, dated at Boisde Boulogne, Thursday, September 4th. The letter is printed both in French and English, and reviews the late war between France and Germany. Bazaine complains that he was a victim of the army, and that the nation had lost two supporters, since the Emperor, who is dead, and Thiers, who has been set aside and replaced by MacMahon. He says he would not have attempted to escape had MacMahon sent him to lessen the severity of his captivity. He considers now that during his trial he should have employed the services of Lawyer as MacMahon, and shows how the latter was defeated and had evacuated Alsace, and was one of the first authors of the grossly dishonest MacMahon had been an unfortunate leader as he (Bazaine) had been at Metz, as Trochu and Ducrot were at Paris, and as Bourbaki and Chanzy were in the East; but he forgot all this when he became President. He says the Court Martial that course to pursue in his case. They condemned and absolved him at the same breath declared him a criminal, and left him to his gratitude towards the Emperor and Empress, Thiers, and says if the latter had not been overthrown he would have found a means to avoid the disgraceful trial to which he (Bazaine) was subjected, but he does not consider his military career ended.

On August 21st Mr. Justice Fitzgerald made an order directing the Rev. Mr. Delouston, who keeps a Protestant orphanage in Kildare, to surrender the three children of Mrs. Catherine Bennett. The father of the children was a Catholic, and after his death the mother was induced by the Protestant clergyman at Clongo to place the

I was more than glad when I sighted your pearly face shining down on me. But tell me, what's put you out?"

Norah's face flushed. "It's just Michael White," she said, holdyt the makes me that wild I could beat him! He's forever after me, and now I take so, and I'd lie in the grave before I'd be wife of his! I hate him!"

"He's a bad man, I'm thinking," said Harry, gravely, and not one I'd like you to anger, Norah. There's no telling what he won't do when he's up. But Norah, dear, why don't you tell him bold, that you've promised to be my wife? Maybe he'd be quiet then."

"That's just what I daren't do," replied Norah, hastily, "for he'd mark you ill, I'm thinking. He's bitter against you now, and says he'll spile both you and me because I were your ribbon yesterday. Harry, he's a bad man; don't you go near him, or let him anger you, or maybe he'll kill you."

Harry Duncan laughed scornfully, but his brow was clouded.

"I'm not feared of him, Norah," he said; "what I wish you'd keep away from him. I'm going a fishing to morrow early, and maybap I won't be back for a day or two; but you won't let him frighten you into giving me up, will you, dear? You'll be true to me, Norah?"

His looked at her wistfully and sadly, a strange foreboding of evil coming over him.

"Harry!" I swear it, Harry Duncan!" cried Norah, passionately. "haven't I said I'll be your wife, and no other's man by the kind heavens above us, and is it doubting me you are? I'll be true to you in life and death, and never a thought will I give to Michael White or the bravest man alive. Why will ye ask me, and when I've told ye makes ye down and mad? Oh, Harry, Harry, I'd die if aught happened to you, my lad, so don't be frightening me with your looks and questions."

She rose to her feet, her blue eyes sparkling with tears, and her pretty mouth quivering, and Harry lifted her bundle, and they prepared to descend.

"Don't see that bold ship, Harry?" she cried, as she looked seaward and pointed to the horizon, on which an ever increasing fog was rising; "she's standing for here, with her sails all set. Look, Harry; she's a brave sight!"

The young sailor turned, and shading his eyes with his hand, looked long and steadily.

"It's a man-o'-war," he said, at length; "and making for here; but she'll tack, you may be sure, for what would she want here?"

"Ah, I must be going home," said Norah, turning reluctantly away. "Aunt Janny will be wondering what's come to me. Come, Harry,"

They proceeded towards the village, pausing now and then to gaze on the moon, which was slowly rising in all her splendor behind the cliffs, but seemed never stood at the little wicket-gate of Norah's home.

"You'll be away early, Harry, I'm thinking," she said, half sadly, as she took her bundle from him. "I'll not see you again for a day or two, will I?"

"I guess not," said the young man, gravely; "but that won't break your heart, Norah." Shake hands, my girl, before I go, and don't let that fellow Michael be threatening you again. You tell him bold you're my promised wife, and he'll let you be, never fear. He's a coward at heart, for all his great bones. Good night, Norah dear, and the good God keep you."

With a busy heart, Harry Duncan left her; and as Norah watched his retreating figure, a terrible feeling of desolation crept over her, and she, for the first time, she would have run after him and begged him not to go, to wait but one day before he started. But she controlled herself, and with a heavy sigh she entered the cabin.

* * * *

There were strange tales whispered of Michael White, and how he lived. He had no apparent trade, but yet never seemed to want money to spend a greater part of his time in lounging about the cliffs, and would carefully avoiding as yet all words of love, that she might have no excuse for repeating her former rebuff. But poor Norah could not endure his presence at a spot that seem-d sacred, in her loving fancy, to her lost Harry. She did not wish to be cheered; she liked to bug her grief, and muse and weep over the happy days of old; and when pleading eyes looked wistfully up, "Oh, Michael, let me be! Sure, I'm too sad to talk to ye. Won't you please leave me alone? It's poor company I am, with my heart bored in the sea."

But Michael was not to be daunted. "It's bad for you, my girl," he would answer. "I know you're grieving sore for him that's dead and gone; but you're young yet; may be you'll smile again when the spring comes, and the winter is over."

"Will I smile when Harry lies dead?" cried the poor girl, with streaming eyes. "Will I be glad that the heavens are blue over his grave? Will I care that the Sowers bloom, again, when he is not here to pick 'em for me? No, no, Michael White; I'll never smile again. My heart is broke entirely."

When she found that he sought her still, she avoided the spot, and wandered instead along the shore beneath the tall cliffs, shuddering as the thought occurred to her that Harry's bones might be whitening somewhere among the crags. Michael White sought her in vain at her accustomed haunt, and lofty cursings her obstinacy, descended into the village, to see if he could find her, or whether she were ill. But Mrs. Grey, who liked but little at best of Norah, did, shirked h s questions, and refused to tell him where Norah was.

"She's ill, I'm wailing you, I'm thinking, Michael White," she answered brusquely. "You poor girl's in bed with a high brain, and she's best alone. She ain't company for none now, poor dearie; the good Lord pity her, and Michael stands away with mutiered imprecations, and all the more determined to gain her love.

The story reader passed slowly away; and one bright afternoon in spring, Norah sat on the cliffs at the foot of the cliff, knitting with rapid fingers, and ever and anon raising her eyes to watch the sail that passed along the horizon. She was sadder than usual that afternoon, for as she came over the beach she had seen all the fishermen putting off their boats to try their luck, and the scene brought back with painful vividness old sunny days when she had gone down to wish Harry good luck, and watch the red sails disappear across the tossing waves that now washed over his whitened bones. She no longer gave way to wild bursts of passionate grief, but as her heavy feet wandered towards her hiding-place, large scalding tears rose to her eyes, and rolled slowly down her and white face, silent witnesses of the bitter grief within. And as the blue wool jerked and flew over her active fingers, deep sighs rose unbidden to her lips, till at length laying down her work, she rested her head upon her hand and gave way to her sad thoughts.

A man was coming along the shining sands towards her, and she dreamily watched him as each first trend seemed to dry the circle of sand around his foot, and again as it was lifted to leave it water-clad before. He was dressed in the uniform of the navy, and with his hands clasped behind his back, and his head bent down, strode rapidly on, as if engrossed in thought. What was it that made Norah turn crimson to the roots of her wavy hair, and then again as pale as ashes, as he neared her, and while her heart beat with a violence that could hear by down her work on the rock beside her, and rise to her feet before the stranger? Was it Harry's the grave give up its dead, or she was in a dream, crying, laughing by turns, and vainly trying to speak to him? Yes, it was her lover sold; how his boat was capsized in a squall, and how he had clung to its upturned bottom until picked up by the very man-of-war that he had sworn to be revenged on the very first opportunity that offered. The captain was short of hands, owing to a fever that had carried off several of his men; and, glad of so stalwart a substitute, had taken poor unwilling Harry to the bosom of Service.

This was how poor Norah through eight long months had mourned her lover's brother-in-law over the dead love that had never been dead. Loud and long were the rejoicings that followed the return of the lost one, for Harry was a general favorite; and the young, as well as the old, declared that his arm was totally useless owing to the severe shakings it had had since he made his appearance. He did not have to beg very hard to induce Norah to promise to be his wife at once; and the banns were put on the following Sunday at the inn church on the downs. But there was one bad heart grieved more than ever by Harry's return, and that was Michael White's. Baffled, foiled his heart with rage and hate. As Michael White, with livid cheeks and clenched teeth heard the two names called (for he was at church, having been told Norah was to be married), he half vowed that while he lived Norah Grey should never be Harry Duncan's wife.

Froude from an impartial English View.

As an historian Froude has been so suddenly crushed beneath the heel of enlightened investigation, that a reference to him in that character would, at this day, be entirely superfluous. But here is an article from the London Saturday Review—which, traveling somewhat out of the customary rut of literary criticism, gives us a painful pen-portrait of the man, and for that reason we reproduce the picture. The Review says:

"Mr. Froude's case is different from that of the most violent and most unfair party writers. He makes some excuse for Irish Papists and Irish Protestants speaking of one another. But here is a writer who, in the temptation, no interest in the matter, without the poor excuse of a national or religious rancour, puts himself forward, in cold blood, to defend the evil deeds of one side and to blacken those of the other. What can be Mr. Froude's motives we cannot guess; the only practical result of his labors can be to make old resentments and present disputes bitterer than they need to be. If Mr. Froude wishes to stir up another Irish rebellion, to find new victims for new torturers, he could not take better means to compass the end. He stands alone in modern English historical literature as having habitually applied no small natural gifts to a purpose which we can only pronounce immoral. The downward course is easy; the panegyrist of Mr. Froude lives to be remembered in another age, it is something to think that they will carry their own moral condemnation with them. If the man who can jeer over the gibbet of Whiting in one age and the gibbet of Crosbie in another is to find any lasting place in men's memories, it is something to think that the character in which he will be remembered will not be as the defender of this or that doubtful historical or political theory, but in the character in which he has chosen for himself—as the champion of evil, the apologist of wrong."

INNISHOWAN.

No wonder I do weep and sigh, as here alone I sadly stray Here among the heather grey, haunted, sadness, On bright days of boyhood's day, bright days long gone.

The waving woods and the rushing floods of Innishowan.

The woe and tears of dreary years have worn away That sterner part which found my heart through manhood's day,
And, like a child, I sit a-moaning the wild and long gone,
I sit and sigh for days gone by in Innishowan.

The mountain streams dance through my dreams in fairy array,
Aspiring pale the liquid bright laughs down among the grass and grass wild where oft, a child, I've wandered through.
Her sorrow gave her poisoned ways for sweeter new.

From h ll and vale the Clans-chiefs have sadly fled;
The cold footfall of Sas on Gall disturbs the dead;
Where must they feel 'neath bonnet heel?—echoes' echoes!
The rose finds rest in the eagle's nest in Innishowan.

Should Cuhir come from his mouldering tomb to Cruinn's Cusagrad
And from the shield looked down beneath, weep
How would he sigh as days gone by came rushing
To find how slaves can tread the graves of lions gone!

Oh Liberty! when shall we see thy smiles again?
Both night and day we watch and pray, and look in vain.
How many years, through woe and tears, we've
In heart and mind we've kept enshrined the secret
Of true that we were born to thee and to the God.
Eae from our birth we've sworn fealty and bound never God—
That, while we've hope, first Ierne's crypt and bound in the chains
Which bind the God of Gaelic blood within our veins.

But Liberty, when Tyranny was at my back,
The blood of the Gaels of Leinster's were at my back
From mother, and girls from stalwart sons, and heart from heart
What foe would dare the wolf-dog's lair to invade our own?

Those were the times when clashing chimes from
Fell on the ears of mountaineers like sweetest words
Of hope, that from the dreary past we'd burst into the breath:
When grown bold, through legends old, did plan with death.

But long ago by wait and woe fond thee were freed;
Thy sons and daughters o'er the waters sought
Driven!
But still they bear through toil and care the stamp and mien
That Freedom bore in days of yore through Innisfail ow'n.

Great Innisfail! one of the Gael, that ne'er may see,
The golden days when thou shalt raise thy proud
head,
Smiling through the shore and sailing o'er the deep, wide wa
This fills the cup of woe love up, and draws in close!

ARE THE IRISH FIT FOR HOME RULE?

Certain doctrinaires maintain that Home Rule would lead to the subside of the Irish race for many reasons. Seeing that the Irish are lazy, incapable of speculation and without enterprise, and only fit to dig, plow, carry the bod, and be thewere of wood and drawers of water," it would be absurd to entrust the legislation of Ireland to their heads. They keep their houses useless, their lands uncultivated, their persons unkempt, and their money idly locked up in banks. Thus, they are as illiterate, wild, uncivilized nation, led by sentiment, whose motto is to defy and to be defied, and uncalculating. Would it be proper to entrust self-government to such a people, and to grant them the privileges of a free State? Would be concession of legislative indepen dence to Ireland would be like giving sharp tools to children and fools, for it would speedily become an anarchy, unhappy and distracted country all the horrors of civil wars, intestine feuds and Irish jealousies. Would not humanity shudder at the deplorable consequence which would ensue? Further, is not Ireland too small, and are not her resources too limited, to support a home government? Would it not be better she should become West Britain, and the Irish, as West Britishers, be elevated to the constantly rising standard of Anglo-Saxon civilization? How could England, by the drawing some motherly influence, allow one of the fairest parts of her empire to become a wide, waste wilderness, in the hands of an impracticable and quarrelsome people? And, lastly, were there nothing else to make Ireland a land of desolation, the war of extermination carried by Cromwell by the strong hand of external authority, would compass that result. What, then, is the remedy? Is there no prudence, justice, humanity, the international comity of nations, the civilization of our country, and the very name, genius, history and interests of the Irish race, forbid the concession of Home Rule?

There lies the bleeding body of Ireland in a common condition, and, as I have said, the whole head is sick, and the whole heart is sad. From the sole of the foot unto the crown of the head there is no soundness in there: wounds and bruises and swelling sores; they are not bound up or mollified, neither mollified with oil. Her country is desolate, her cities are burnt with fire, her country strangers devour before her eyes, and it is desolate as when wasted by enemies." Are Irish lazy? But where is the race so ill-paid for their industry and employment? Her enemies and the absence of home legislation. Yet the same Irish are not lazy in other lands—in America, in Canada, in Oceanica. Besides, the Irish feel that it is easier to remain idle than to work and be robbed of the fruits of their toil. Are the Irish incapable of speculation, without enterprise, and without practical outcomes? Who has reduced them to that condition? Is it fair to deform a beautiful body and then reproach it? Is it just to remove the means of speculation and enterprise from the Irish people, and then upbraid them with its absence? Suppose we were to disarm an army and send it to fight, and then to upbraid it for having no weapons of armor? But where the Irish, as in Ulster, have a fair field, they have proven the Irish to be the most successful fields of the world. It is a calumny and an injustice to brand the Irish with illiteracy and inertitude. Despite the laws which suppressed literature, arts and trades among the Irish, they prosecuted people in the darkest days of history preserved the remnants of its civilization; since the loves of literature and knowledge, and only fit to dig plow, carry the bod, and be thewere of wood and drawers of water," it would be absurd to entrust the legislation of Ireland to their heads. They keep their houses useless, their lands uncultivated, their persons unkempt, and their money idly locked up in banks. Thus, they are as illiterate, wild, uncivilized nation, led by sentiment, whose motto is to defy and to be defied, and uncalculating. Would it be proper to entrust self-government to such a people, and to grant them the privileges of a free State? Would be concession of legislative indepen dence to Ireland would be like giving sharp tools to children and fools, for it would speedily become an anarchy, unhappy and distracted country all the horrors of civil wars, intestine feuds and Irish jealousies. Would not humanity shudder at the deplorable consequence which would ensue? Further, is not Ireland too small, and are not her resources too limited, to support a home government? Would it not be better she should become West Britain, and the Irish, as West Britishers, be elevated to the constantly rising standard of Anglo-Saxon civilization? How could England, by the drawing some motherly influence, allow one of the fairest parts of her empire to become a wide, waste wilderness, in the hands of an impracticable and quarrelsome people? And, lastly, were there nothing else to make Ireland a land of desolation, the war of extermination carried by Cromwell by the strong hand of external authority, would compass that result. What, then, is the remedy? Is there no prudence, justice, humanity, the international comity of nations, the civilization of our country, and the very name, genius, history and interests of the Irish race, forbid the concession of Home Rule?

There lies the bleeding body of Ireland in a common condition, and, as I have said, the whole head is sick, and the whole heart is sad. From the sole of the foot unto the crown of the head there is no soundness in there: wounds and bruises and swelling sores; they are not bound up or mollified, neither mollified with oil. Her country is desolate, her cities are burnt with fire, her country strangers devour before her eyes, and it is desolate as when wasted by enemies." Are Irish lazy? But where is the race so ill-paid for their industry and employment? Her enemies and the absence of home legislation. Yet the same Irish are not lazy in other lands—in America, in Canada, in Oceanica. Besides, the Irish feel that it is easier to remain idle than to work and be robbed of the fruits of their toil. Are the Irish incapable of speculation, without enterprise, and without practical outcomes? Who has reduced them to that condition? Is it fair to deform a beautiful body and then reproach it? Is it just to remove the means of speculation and enterprise from the Irish people, and then upbraid them with its absence? Suppose we were to disarm an army and send it to fight, and then to upbraid it for having no weapons of armor? But where the Irish, as in Ulster, have a fair field, they have proven the Irish to be the most successful fields of the world. It is a calumny and an injustice to brand the Irish with illiteracy and inertitude. Despite the laws which suppressed literature, arts and trades among the Irish, they prosecuted people in the darkest days of history preserved the remnants of its civilization; since the loves of literature and knowledge, and only fit to dig plow, carry the bod, and be thewere of wood and drawers of water," it would be absurd to entrust the legislation of Ireland to their heads. They keep their houses useless, their lands uncultivated, their persons unkempt, and their money idly locked up in banks. Thus, they are as illiterate, wild, uncivilized nation, led by sentiment, whose motto is to defy and to be defied, and uncalculating. Would it be proper to entrust self-government to such a people, and to grant them the privileges of a free State? Would be concession of legislative indepen dence to Ireland would be like giving sharp tools to children and fools, for it would speedily become an anarchy, unhappy and distracted country all the horrors of civil wars, intestine feuds and Irish jealousies. Would not humanity shudder at the deplorable consequence which would ensue? Further, is not Ireland too small, and are not her resources too limited, to support a home government? Would it not be better she should become West Britain, and the Irish, as West Britishers, be elevated to the constantly rising standard of Anglo-Saxon civilization? How could England, by the drawing some motherly influence, allow one of the fairest parts of her empire to become a wide, waste wilderness, in the hands of an impracticable and quarrelsome people? And, lastly, were there nothing else to make Ireland a land of desolation, the war of extermination carried by Cromwell by the strong hand of external authority, would compass that result. What, then, is the remedy? Is there no prudence, justice, humanity, the international comity of nations, the civilization of our country, and the very name, genius, history and interests of the Irish race, forbid the concession of Home Rule?

A Lesson from the "Brooklyn Scandal."

A week or two ago we referred to the distinction which we habitually make between Protestantism and Protestantism. The former, as individuals, as we then said, are generally far better than the system with which they stand professedly connected. Of the truth of the lamentable and filthy "Brooklyn Scandal" furnishes a fit illustration. Not one of the Protestant religious papers which referred to it spoke of the acts imputed to Mr. Beecher in any other way than that of condemnation, and not one of the Protestant ministers that preached about it, so far as we are aware, attempted to justify or apology for such sins. In this they were not consistent Protestants, but proved themselves better than their system. For Protestantism, in its own principles, cannot condemn Mr. Beecher if he is guilty of all that is charged upon him.

The cardinal principles of Protestantism are: The right of any man to adopt and follow his own notions of what the Bible teaches; that man is justified by faith alone, and that there is no merit in good works. If these horrible notions were true, it would follow, first, that there is no fixed rule of morality, but that it is right for every man to do what he conceives to be right in his own eyes; that if he believe by faith, he is pure and good, no matter what his actions are. Apply these principles to the whole body of Protestantism, and they justify all the wickedness imputed to any and every one of the parties concerned in this last scandal. If Protestants do not make this application of the principles of Protestantism it is because they are not virtuous in the logical—because the remnants of man's original honesty, of the truth that is not entirely deprived by sin, still cling to him—because the aspirations after goodness, which are implanted by nature and by God in every man's heart, are deeper and stronger and have more power over him than the principles of Protestants, than do the erroneous principles to which Protestants profess to adhere.

It was not so, however, with the founders of Protestantism. They understood the logical consequences of their principles, and they did not fail occasionally to plainly proclaim those consequences. There is but one distinction, it is the especial boast of all Reformers, from the writings of Wiclif, Huss, Jerome of Prague, Luther, Melancthon, Zuingli and Wesley all express the same impious thesis. Calvin goes even further, and makes God to be the author of sin. He says:

"Satan himself, in tempting us, is the agent of God, and merely acts as God's servant."

And Zuingli, contradicting the promises and assurances of the Sacred Scriptures, declares that a grace is sufficient for us and will enable us, if we faithfully employ it, to overcome temptation. They put themselves in the hand of God and says:

"We know that one _____ moved to a sector or grace, and as it has not been granted to us by God."

Nor did the founders of Protestantism omit to make practical application of their false and wicked principles to sins against the sixth commandment. Luther, in his table talk our columns and suggest thoughts to those of our readers which would prove to be of the most profound interest, of which they had better remain ignorant, we would furnish food for reflection, which would prove to the fond all contradictory. Suffice it to say that some of the principles which we have laid down are used, and some of the principles they avowed, if published in plain English, would be considered too gross for the light of document, under the law forbidding the publication of obscene and demoralizing it a store.

Nor do the Reformers hold those abominable principles as abstractions. They carried them out in their lives, and proclaimed them as truths that cannot be denied, prove beyond all question—facts which are carefully suppressed by Protestant writers, but which we do not mention because the very recounting of them would be unedifying to our readers. We simply allude to the existence of other like actions of theirs, to Luther having violated the vows of chastity, to Luther having induced Catherine, a professed nun, to do likewise to Luther and other Reformers having also done the same, to Melancthon to Philip, Prince of Hesse, to have two wives, and of the numerous characters of the most filthy and unchaste nature which the Reformers, to their consolations, interchangably married and divorced.

If, then, the acts charged against Mr. Beecher are regarded by Protestants as sacred and pure, and their writers and principles of Protestantism or the doctrines of its founders, but by the violation of principles of Protestantism operating upon those who are professedly, but not logically, Protestants, by the influence of the Bible, writing thus we shall surprise and shock and offend many of our Protestant friends; but this we must say that we feel ourselves utterly towards them. We trust we do so. But others, for the purpose of bringing the truth in regard to the matters to which we have referred, but by the following extract:

"At the last Kilkenny (county) Wexford Petty Sessions, before George N. Bagenal, Esq., and other magistrates, who gave his name Christopher Maclain, was brought up charged, on the oath of Mr. Kane, a bailiff in the employment of the sheriff, with having been abroad in the county after sunset. The prosecution was conducted by Mr. Kane, who stated that the prisoner was a leading member of the Land League, and that he was present at a meeting held under the presidency of the Rev. Father Kavanagh, P.P., Ballycanew, on the night of the 4th inst., when the prisoner addressed the meeting. The witness was present at the meeting, and heard the prisoner say that he was a beggar. The magistrate fined the prisoner to one month's imprisonment."

The old man asked for alms; but he was not arrested for begging. He was arrested for not first begging. He was arrested for being 'out of doors between sunset and sunrise." He has been sent to for a month for that offense, and so _____ —Dublin Nation, August 23.

NEW PAPERS.—The following opinion from the Cincinnati Commercial will be interesting to Governor Hayes and his friends: "Any free and independent citizen of this country has the right to start a new party, to get up a platform of principles for it, to declare himself in favor of its being voted for, and to run it. Bailey does not seem to speak for the probably came over with his brother-in-law, Lord Arundel—the family of Herefield. Robert Hiest has been of John of Bath, according to Mr. Malmesbury, had be-n a quack doctor who made his bishopric simoniacally, and married his concubine. Such was the Protestant episcopate of the time. Dr. Osmund is said to be of the Fitz Osmonds of Sc-s, and to have been of Dorset. He was made Bishop of Salisbury, when he was made Bishop of Lincoln, and though he lived beside, and even made bound them, he was, like Bishop of Winchester, blind to the evil principles which he held on the real lines of Church and State. St. Osmund made an attempt to place himself on the right side two years before this, and was absolved by St. Anselm, but he relapsed, and we know not at the most critical moment, unhappily, once more on the side of the King.

The four bishops, when they presented themselves before the Archbishop, were received with the most paternal charity and the primate told them, after reminding them that they were bishops, that he would lay upon them before them the pleasant duty would promise to act as bishops, and, moreover, he said he would follow their counsel. They would give no answer at first, but asked leave to retire and consult each other. They withdrew, but the spirit of counsel was not in them; they sent the Bishops of Winchester and Lincoln to the King to learn his mind and ascertain his will. Having ascertained the King's will, they went back to Archbishop, and addressed him from the following terms. The story would not be believed if it had not been told by an eye and ear witness, Eadmer, the companion of St. Anselm, and from that day to this nobody has called the accuracy and truth of the narrative in question.

The speech of the four bishops was to this effect: "Our dear lord, you know that there are a holy and religious man, whose conversation is above. But as we are hampered by relatives whom we have instituted, and by worldly cares which we have, we have neither the courage to climb the heights on which you live, or to laugh at the world as you do. Now, if you will come down to us and live as we do in our ways, we will make your affairs our own but if you refuse to do what we ask, you must be, so far as we are concerned, left to yourself, as we have hitherto left you; for we will be free from you." The Archbishop's singular confession the primate replied: "Well, then, go to you master: I will not follow you. The Bishops went back to the King; but St. Anselm, and those who were with him, remained together, and betook themselves to prayer.

That prayer was soon interrupted, for the King sent a message from the barons, bringing a message from the King. William was now the injured man, and the primate was the offender. According to the King the saint had broken his promise to him in his allegiance, and was continually disturbing and harassing the King. That is always the way with the Papists, they accuse themselves. The bishops told the saint, in the King's name, that he must immediately leave again to appeal to the Pope, under pain of expulsion from the kingdom, and he should confiscate his goods and those of his sides this, for the King must allow him to the King's Court for all the trouble he had given to the King. The Archbishop, they said, must also answer his claims for the customs of the King, and he had broken them; and it was a thing never heard of, that the Archbishop of Canterbury, and especially the Archbishop of Canterbury, should go to Rome without the leave and license of the King. The bishops then added: "And behold that a Christian king, a Christian anything, whether laws or customs, should be so joined to unfaithful before God." The barons could not but approve of the words of the bishops, for they would not openly maintain that the laws of God were not biding upon them and upon all Christians, but they were grieved that if the customs by which he, in the interests of the Church and the good government of the Church, was bound to be endured from having access to the Pope, those customs, from time to time, as might have been laid must dissolve them. He then told the King that his fidelity to him rested on his fidelity to God, and the King of Heaven, of Mamsu, unable to answer him, cried out in the vernacular: "I help them not by my sword," and then the rest of the barons joined in the clamor, for they did not like to be told the truth.

The Archbishop, perfectly unmoved, sat down, and waited till that fit of folly was over, and then, with the utmost gravity, replied, that he was running into danger, and that he, the bishop, had power to bind in heaven and earth, and to loose in heaven and earth, and continued his "preaching" as if he had not been interrupted. "As to the oath demanded of me, I have appealed to the Pope; the oath is unlawful; so also the demand. He who would make that oath would renounce the Pope, and the Pope renounces of the Pope renounces Christ, whose Vicar he is. Therefore I will not take the oath, for I shall renounce Christ for thy sake O King. I well confess that I have done wrong in asking for a safe conduct on my way to Rome, and will make satisfaction in thy court."

The Count of Maulan was still disturbed, and could not understand why the Archbishop should not take the oath required of him, but the primate explained to him that the oath would involve his renouncing the Pope, and that would be to renounce Christ for thy sake O King, I will

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPT. 14.

September
30—Monday—St. Jerome, Confessor and Evangelist.
31—Tuesday—St. Thomas of Villanova, Bishop and Confessor. Sis. Maculine and Companions, Martyrs.
1—Wednesday—St. Remi, Pope and Martyr. St. Thecla, V rgin and Martyr.
2—Thursday—B. V. M. de Mercede, or Our Lady of Ransom.
3—Friday—The Seraphic and Compulsive, Mar. tyrs (Sept. 30).
4—Saturday—The Immaculate Conception. Sis. Ursula and Companions, Martyrs.

THE MONITOR:

THE ONLY

Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

SATURDAY.....SEPT. 19, 1874.

SOMETHING FORGOTTEN.

The Beecher scandal has stimulated the activity of those newspaper gatherers who make it a special business to make up every day a story with which a Catholic clergyman happens to be in any way connected. Probably they think they can get even with "Popery" for the disedifying revelations made of the inner life of the Plymouth congregation by showing that private life is not exempt from the besetting weakness of human nature. With this in view no offence is too trivial to be overheard and no sin too secret to escape publication. The only point made against the Brooklyn phase of Protestantism on account of the great scandal. The mere fact of Henry Ward Beecher being the pastor of the church was in fact of much importance to the world at large; but the circumstance that such acts are the natural outgrowth of the so-called "Christianity-made-easy" which he has preached during his pulpit for a long series of years, is of some importance to those likely to be influenced by his teachings. So, until they can prove that the real or supposed delinquencies of Catholic priests are sanctioned by their Church or countenanced by their ecclesiastical superiors, we do not know how the "anti-popery" scribes can hope to effect anything by their prurient tales. They may succeed to feel the weakness of their position, however, for in all these stories they invariably forget something—they omit relating some significant fact which, if honestly disclosed, would present a moral very different from what they want.

A case in point. A few days ago we saw in the Sacramento Union, quoted from the Cleveland Leader, a letter, on account of the malicious doings of a "priest" named Fleming in that city. We turned to the Catholic Directory, but could find no priest of that name belonging to Bishop Gilmour's diocese, and therefore had prima facie evidence that the story was not true. As the Cleveland paper asserted that the reverend gentleman's pockets were discovered, when the police officers searched him, a document signed by the bishop authorizing him to officiate. Such a paper, if genuine, only showed that he was a transient individual, for whose conduct the diocese could not be fairly held responsible; but we waited for further information before alluding to the matter. It was not long coming. What were the real facts? The Fleming had been a priest under Bishop Gilmour's jurisdiction. More than a year previous to the commission of the offence with which the Index charged him he had been deprived of all ministerial faculties because of bad conduct, and expelled from the ranks of the clergy. He was not allowed any chance in investigating committee, and no convenient mutual friend was permitted to screen his irregularities. The mountain of guilt and unworthiness became apparent guilt and unworthiness became apparent to all the soldiers with censure and drives from the diocese. These are two rather important facts which were forgotten by the anti-Catholic chronicler of Rev. Mr. Fleming's evil deeds.

Again, after his fall and disgrace the unfortunate man was taken up by a Protestant sect in New York, the members of which were quite willing to condone all his offences against sobriety and good his offences against sobriety and good his morals in return for his apostasy. This is but the old story. The rankest weeds flung from the "Pope's Garden" are eagerly caught and placed in the choicest parterres of Protestantism. How long the ex priest officiated for his new congregation we are not aware, but at the time he fell into the hands of the Cleveland police Fleming was not a Catholic clergyman, and was, to all intents and purposes, a Protestant minister.

Here we have other important facts forgotten by the writer in the Cleveland paper, and of course unrecognized by the Sacramento Union. If the letter-journal had not thought fit to transfer the story to its columns, and so prepare it for circulation in California, we would never have occupied ourselves in the matter, or have compiled any portion of our space with reference to it. But inasmuch as the tale has been started, and may find believers, it is just as well that the whole truth should be known. These nasty sensational articles can do no good. They can neither instruct nor edify any human being. On the contrary, they do much mischief in the cause of religion and morality, which all reputable editors should have at heart. Therefore it is highly desirable that they should be left to their purely local notoriety, and not be transplanted to other places for the purpose of fostering prejudice where there is no need to be so fostered. But if journals choose to lower to print stuff, and hoosedly believe their readers like it, then the very least to be expected from them is that they will not forget anything, but will frankly send fully narrate all the facts. When this is done intelligent persons, if they take no more at all of the scandal, whatever it may be, will be in a position to pass an impartial judgment upon it.

AN OMINOUS VISIT.

The telegraph, no very creditable information on some matters, though occasionally correct, tells us that the Emperor of Germany and the King of Austria intend paying a visit to the King of Italy during the course of this year. If the story be true, the events of great political importance are on the cards. Monarchs are not given to wandering outside their own dominions unless they have an object in view; and it certainly is no ordinary business which induces these two illustrious personages to leave their capitals and travel to Rome. Honest men, not versed in king-craft, will wonder how the pair can keep company or preserve any kind of friendly feeling, inasmuch as the very title by which William is known conveys an insult to Francis Joseph, and also inasmuch as the Prussian potentate is the conqueror of his Imperial brother. But considerations of self-respect or true manliness have, we suppose, little or nothing to do with the proceedings of such individuals. It does not seem difficult to divine what may be the reason of their journeying, or what they hope to effect. Russia is notoriously unfriendly to Prussia, and is daily assuming more intimate relations with France. Indeed, there have lately been rumors of various diplomatic differences between the courts of St. Petersburg and Berlin, and the Czar is said to view with anything but feelings of satisfaction the attempts of the Kaiser to play the role of peacemaker of Europe. Germany, with all her bravado, would not care to run the risk of another duel with France, knowing well how much of her recent success was due to surprise alone, and doubting how the luck would befriend her again to the same extent; and, of course, she is anxious to secure allies for the impending and inevitable struggle. The probabilities are that the "Northern Colossus" will take side with France if the quarrel extends beyond the two powers immediately concerned; and therefore it is a necessity for Prussia to obtain assistance more than sufficient to counterpoise the strength of Russia. Austria and Italy have apparently been made safe, and without doubt the object of the approaching conference is to determine the point that each shall take in the fight, the disposition of their respective forces, and, as far as possible, the plan of campaign. The combat will be a Titanic one, and human foresight cannot predict to whom the victory will incline. But it would seem that, in addition to the ordinary hostilities will commence, but it would not surprise us if half Europe was a battle-ground when we are celebrating the centennial of our young republic.

The peace-loving inhabitants of the European continent are truly to be pitied. Over their heads hang lowering war-clouds, which sooner or later will burst into a storm that will lay waste their fields, destroy their homes and deluge their country with blood. The millions are ever ready to fall victims to the ambition of kings, but assuredly it is the scourge of peoples. It is a scourge, however, brought upon them by their own weakness and folly: for if they were courageous not to fight, but to cherish friendly feelings towards each other, the highest potentates would either have to keep the peace or else settle their differences in a prize-ring by themselves. As long as they are slavish and wicked enough to go into the murdering business at the beck of some pompous aristocrat called a king, they will naturally need to show their power by sacrificing their royal subjects on the inhumaned field of honor.

SHOWING THEIR FAITH.

Every thinking man who scrutinises the course of events in the German Empire, must by this time be convinced that the Falk laws, by which it is attempted to destroy the independence of the Catholic Church in that State, are doomed to be ignominious failures. They will create bad feeling in the minds of the people, and for a while embarrass the hierarchy in their administration of spiritual affairs, and that is about all they ever can do. If history knows anything, teaches any lesson that men may read, it certainly establishes that all Government interference with religion is productive of mischief, and invariably defeats the very purpose. Creeds, from their very nature and essence, cannot be fashioned or controlled by secular legislation, and any endeavor to accomplish such ends has been always regarded as tyrannical. In Germany Catholics are daily, almost hourly one might say, manifesting their displeasure at these Falk laws, and evincing a determination to render them inoperative. Only a few weeks since the inhabitants of an important town happened to be in that position when, according to the recent enactments, they should proceed to elect their pastor quite irrespective of the bishop's wishes, and of course quite in opposition to the usual practice. They assembled in great numbers, but it was only to declare that they would not elect a priest, and would not allow any one to minister among them unless canonically appointed by the bishop. These men gave proof of the faith that was in them and acted in the proper manner. It would be altogether impossible to meet such spirit of belief, or to keep up ecclesiastical discipline of any sort, if priests were to be elected by popular suffrage like municipal officials. In fact, the mercenaries of the priesthood would soon perish under such treatment. It is certainly not love of liberty or respect for popular rights that makes Emperor William approve of such absurd legislation. What would he say if it were proposed to make his own position dependent upon the popular votes?

The State Fair will open at Sacramento on Monday next, 21st instant, and close on Saturday, the 26th. We would advise visitors to put up at the City Hotel, where they will be accommodated with good rooms and board at moderate rates.

"TAKE THE STAND!"

The casual visitor at any of our law Courts will find in their proceedings much to interest, much to amuse and, we regret to say, much more to sadden. A Court of justice is, indeed, surpassed by few places in the opportunities it affords of studying human nature in all its phases, or of getting an insight into the workings of the passions and prejudices which influence the mind of man. There is little poetry and less romance connected with legal tribunals in these latter days, although the tales unfolded before them are not unfrequently deeply tinged with the darkest hues of both. But there is really nothing in the majority of cases adjudicated so calculated to impress a listener unfavorably as the number and flagrancy of the perjuries committed. Where great interests are involved, where life or possession of property is imperilled, perjury rise are almost inevitable, because not many men, schooled after the un-Christian fashion of the present day, have sufficient moral stamina in them to prefer serious loss to the utter indifference to the consequences of taking of a false oath. To whom upon strict adherence to truth is seldom expected, and still more seldom experienced. The delinquency is fearful and deplorable; perbribelises, one is to some extent prepared for it. But in petty cases—misdemeanor, assault, larceny and such others as are decided in the Police Court, for example—where the utmost at stake is a fine of a few dollars or imprisonment of a few days, the utter indifference to the sacredness of an oath is exhibited, sometimes by the defendant, sometimes by the complainant, is actually revolting.

Not a day passes in the Police Court without one or more cases being called up in which men and women deliberately perjure themselves, either for the purpose of fastening a petty offence upon a neighbor or of freeing themselves from some equally trifling charge. And, saddest of all, it not unfrequently happens that children of tender age, young things whose souls are as yet unsullied by crime, are brought up and placed upon the stand to corroborate the testimony of their parents, and are compelled to repeat language the foulness of which they happily are unable to comprehend, but which is the low-grade lawyers, the "shysters," as they are termed, who organize perjury and who make quite an art of it. These worthies, to earn their miserable fee and severe rogue from well-meaning but ignorant men, will concoct a regular chain of falsehoods and place their client on the stand to swear to it. The trick but rarely succeeds. The Judge knows the testifying witness by lying—the dishonesty of the latter in the Court knows it: the perjury has not the slightest imaginable effect upon the ultimate decision of the case, and yet it is repeated again and again each day. Why, we ask, is this one of the purely professional expedients which are resorted to as a last hope. If some of these unprincipled practitioners were made, civil war will be the inevitable result. Every honest man in the republic acknowledges that the present system is a scandalous one, leaving the question of its legitimacy aside altogether.

It will be a national disgrace if the soldiers of the republic are to be subjected to the perjured testimony who has lied to it from the indignation of the people. We do not think that the people at large would countenance any such proceeding, but with cowardly apathy and the connivance of the chief executive officers of the Court a little; but we fear that is next to impossible. Notwithstanding its manifest uselessness, this system of perjury will continue to be one of the characteristic features of Police Court proceedings until some severe lessons is taught.

WAR IN LOUISIANA.

The political disturbances in Louisiana have at length developed into open warfare. A regular pitched battle has taken place between a large body of armed citizens and the New Orleans police force, subsequent to Governor Kellogg, in which the latter were defeated with heavy loss. Barricades have been erected in several of the leading thoroughfares, and the inhabitants generally presents all the appearance of Paris during a revolution. It is really humiliating to find that notwithstanding our free institutions, equal rights for all, manhood suffrage and the ballot, purely political power have failed to develop physical force in so many States. This is not the kind of illustration of the blessings of republican government which Americans should give to the nations of Europe. Yet, so far as our knowledge of the causes of the Louisiana uprising warrants us in giving an opinion, we must say that we cannot blame the citizens for their appeal to arms, desperate as it may seem. There must always be in every country pretending to have a settled form of government some force or influence representing law and order and guaranteeing the enjoyment of their rights to peaceful citizens. But unfortunately in Louisiana no such thing exists at present, and there does not appear any feasible way of bringing it into existence except destroying the pretense of a government which now sets the people at defiance. It is no use to talk of legal proceedings where courts are notoriously and flagrantly corrupt; it is of little avail to speak of the ballot where a carnival prevails in the freedom of election: it is folly to quote the provisions of a constitution where the whims of a dishonest man regulate every thing. All the people ask for is fair and equitable government, manifested by due enforcement of law, justice and economy in the administration of public affairs; they do not want to use violence, and revolution is certainly anything but their taste, as they love well know its costs and risks. But the present administration is simply intolerable to men of spirit. It is ruining the State with fearful rapidity, and repudiation or universal bankruptcy is the alternative it is preparing for all citizens. How is this appalling state of things to be remedied? Federal interference, so far as it has gone, has been exercised in favor of corruption and dishonesty, and there is no disposition to relinquish their affairs on a proper basis. Consequently they are driven to deeds of violence and an appeal to arms is the only desirer to remove Kellogg. The sympathy of right-thinking men throughout the whole Union should be with them in their gallant struggle against knavery and thievery. Of course the radical press will misrepresent their position, and claim that a spirit of turbulence alone is the motive, power of their proceedings, for this is necessary to defend the actions of the Federal authorities; but their falsehoods and special pleadings can hardly deceive many intelligent persons. The unhappy condition of things in Louisiana and other Southern States is too well known both at home and abroad.

Since the preceding article was written the revolution has come to an end, and peace has, temporarily at least, been restored to Louisiana. After the battle to which we have alluded, Kellogg's forces became completely disorganized and incapable of further resistance, so that the citizens were enabled to get possession of all the public buildings without further bloodshed. The victorious party then indicated to the various offices the candidates who, it is claimed, were legally elected in 1872, and handed over to them all books, records and documents belonging to the State Government. The example set by New Orleans was immediately followed by the principal towns throughout all Louisiana, and Kellogg's men were ejected to be replaced by McKenzie's friends. The change was hailed everywhere with the greatest rejoicing, the citizens feeling that they had shaken off an intolerable burden of oppression and misrule, and a chance of honest government for themselves. Congratulations from the inhabitants of Louisville and other Southern cities soon flowed in, showing conclusively that the revolution which established the reign of Louisiana was cordial and widespread.

The great question now agitating the public mind is, what will the Federal authorities do? Kellogg, of course, is strong in favor of Kellogg, and so are some other members of his Administration; but the unfortunate corruption, illegality and extravagance of the ejected Government are so notorious that a few measures will inclined to McKenzey. A proclamation has been issued by Grant commanding the "rebels" to disperse with in five days or take the consequences, and Federal troops are now on their way to New Orleans. But the "rebels" have disposed already, in accordance with the advice of their leaders, as that when the troops arrive they will find a quiet community ready to bring this union among Irishmen, for to support to any law or any Government in existence. You ask me in what beginning and end, but I answer that Catholics is a secret, cowardly attack on the Catholic Church, her hierarchy and her clergy, intolerant throughout with audacious, impudent slanders on the whole Irish race. Now, my countrymen, standing for all the American people, I do not propose to intrude upon your long cherished principles of liberty of religious belief. According to him Meagher was a wonderful man, the greatest of Irishmen, the greatest orator, the most accomplished thinker of the age, right in all his views. No other Irishmen have ever been like him in comparison. In the part of his speech which referred to Ireland, Meagher

The Confederation of Kilkenny maintained a government in Ireland for seven years. It was established in 1642, and lasted for seven years. It was only the true party of Ireland, and was composed of the Catholic nobility and gentry of that day were banished to Connaught, and their estates confiscated to the princes of the land; and the Catholic clergy were hunted down like wild beasts. With them, priests and people, the Mass was a crime punishable with death. The Confederation of Kilkenny was the Irish Parliament, and the Bull of Nicholas V. was the Irish Magna Charta. The Confederation was dissolved by the Papal Nuncio, Rinuccini, who was sent to Ireland by Pope Urban VIII. to support the Confederation. He arrived in Ireland in 1645, and left in 1649. He was received with the greatest enthusiasm by the Irish army after the disastrous defeat of Benburb, and was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Irish forces by the Confederation. He was also appointed Governor of Limerick, Waterford, Duncannon Fort and Athlone

IRISH LOCAL NEWS.

High Mass de Requiem was celebrated on 15th August, by his Lordship the Most Rev. Dr. Duggan, at the chapel, Loughrea, for the repose of the soul of Dr. Derry.

A meeting of the county Cavan Home Rule Association met on August 18th for the purpose of discussing the propriety of inviting Messrs. Fay and Biggar, the county representatives, to a public banquet.

Last week Rt. T. Nestil, D. L., J. P., presented a silver shield to the constabulary of the Johnstown district, to be competed for at their annual ball practice"—a proceeding which shows how much of a military force are the Irish police.

The Bantry Bay regatta, which had so long been discontinued, was renewed on 3d August, under most distinguished patronage. The weather was all that could be desired, and nothing on the part of the stewards was wanting to make the day's amusement as it should be.

Thomas F. Brady, Esq., one of the Inspectors of Irish Fisheries, sat in the Courthouse, Kilrush, recently, for the purpose of hearing evidence in connection with an application made by the residents of Scattery, showing the necessity for the erection of a fishing pier for the island.

Rev. P. O'Kane, P. P., Duneastrick, with sincere thanks, acknowledges on behalf of the parishioners of his parish the be has received from J. Mulholland, Esq., M. P., the generous gift of an acre of land, in perpetuity, for a Catholic burying ground, at the nominal rent of one shilling a year.

At the last monthly meeting of the Clonmel Corporation, when the mayor (Alderman Caswell) had retired, a proposition was made and carried to pay a compliment to the mayor, such as was recently paid to the Mayor of Waterford, in commemoration of the birth of a child of his during his year of office.

Mr. Rosayne, M. P., the contractor, and Mr. Kavanghan, on behalf of the Southern Railway Company, visited Clonmel last week to make arrangements, if possible, for the completion and opening of the line to Fethard, and possibly to Leffen's Bridge, at an earlier period than was originally intended. November, if not earlier, may see the line in working order to Leffan's bridge, and the early part of February to Thurles.

Attwelve o'clock on August 15th, during high water, an iron vessel of 2,000 tons burthen was launched from the shipbuilding yard of Messrs. Harland & Wolfe, Queen's Island, Belfast, for the firm of Messrs. Brocklebank, Liverpool. The vessel is named the "Belfast," and is the fifth that has been launched from the Queen's Island for the same firm.

On August 19th the Marquis of Waterford was presented with an address, and was entertained at a luncheon by the citizens of Waterford, in commemoration of his recent marriage. At the banquet (at which the Mayor presided) there spoke, among others Major O'Gorman, M. P., who described Lord Waterford as the best landlord in Ireland.

Rev. D. Brennan, C.C., acknowledges the receipt of £100 from Lord Carew, towards the erection of a curate's residence at Courtmacsherry chapel. He also says he has given for the same purpose half an acre of land, free forever, and £100 towards the erection of the Catholic church at Courtmacsherry, and that Lord Carew always contributes most munificently whenever his aid is asked by the Catholic clergy.

The last sheaf of the Royal Agricultural Society of Ireland was opened on August 13th, in Wexford. The exhibition was not remarkably large, but the quality of the animals is said to have been above the average. The principal challenge cups for horses and sheep were carried off by English breeders. The Lord Lieutenant visited the show during the day, and was presented with the usual address by the Mayor and Corporation.

A very large and respectably attended meeting was held in Letterkenny recently to present an address and testimonial to Rev. John Kennedy, D. D., for his many and important services to the cause of temperance in the Donegal. Among those present were Dr. Every Kennedy (Liberal candidate at the late county Donegal election), and Mr. Ramsey, J. P., of Lisnenan House, who took the chair. A purse of £200 was presented to Dr. Kinnear, and many speeches very flattering to him were delivered.

The magnificent high altar recently erected in the church of St. Peter and Paul, Cork, was, on the feast of St. Lawrence, solemnly consecrated by Right Rev. Dr. Delaney, Bishop of Cloyne, assisted by a number of the dignitaries and clergy of the diocese. The ceremony was of the most solemn and impressive character, being replete with mystical forms and solemn observance, the full complement of which will be seen as down in the Roman Pontifical, occupies several hours.

At a council meeting of the Ulster Catholic Association, held on the 12th August, in the Christian Schools, Donegall street, Belfast, the following resolution was unanimously passed:—"That the council cannot sufficiently condemn the action of the Town Council in granting a site for the Cork museum in one of our principal thoroughfares, and that it entirely repudiates the vote of Alderman Higgins on this subject as in any way representing Catholic feeling or opinion on the question."

Lord Francis Conyngham, M. P. for the county of Clare, has, through his agent, Mr. Keane, placed at the disposal of Mr. Michael O. Considine, Secretary of the newly-organized trades, the sum of £300, to be distributed among the trades guilds of the town in recognition of the torchlight demonstration made by them on the night of his return as the last general election, and the enthusiastic reception accorded him and Lady Conyngham upon the occasion.

The Ulster Orange Lodge 519 have had their banner painted by a Catholic—Mr. M. Martin, of Carrickmacross — regarding which the Dundalk Democrat says:—It is gratifying to find such a friendly spirit existing between the Orangemen of Monaghan and their Catholic neighbors, as that the former should not only patronise a Catholic artist, but allow publicly recognise his talents, artistic taste and ability."

On Saturday, 15th August, the ceremony of dedicating a new Catholic church at Rathleigh, in the county of Meath, took place in the presence of a large assembly of the clergy and laity of the diocese. The church, which is a handsome structure, will be a lasting testimonial of the liberality and piety of the people of Meath. The Most Rev. Dr. Nulty, Bishop of the diocese, officiated. Father Burke preached the sermon.

Quite a sensation has been created in Longford by a report of the failure of the private bank seated Lyons from the office of the Bank of Ireland. It appears that Mr. Lyons, on Saturday, attended his office in the usual way up to two o'clock. Since Mr. Lyons came to Longford he lodged a short distance from the town, and his route home could have been either by the road or the canal banks. The latter is now prevalent at that the unfortunate young man took the latter way, fell into the canal, and was drowned. On Tuesday following Mr. Teeffe, sub-manager, reported the matter to the constabulary, and a most rigid search was made, but not a trace of the missing young man has been found.

The anniversary of the relief of Derry was commemorated on Wednesday, the 12th, by the Apprentice Boys of Derry, in that city, with the usual demonstrations. There was muefl outdoor duplay, and the proceedings included an anniversary sermon, preached by the Rev. R. G. D'Arcy. The constabularly mustered in strong numbers, but their services were not required, and all passed off without any breach of the peace.

A most melancholy and fatal accident occurred on Saturday in the village of Beerpark, about thirteen miles from Tralee. An old woman named Elizabeth Davis, aged about seventy, resided there in a thatched cabin with her husband, and early in the day having gone for water to the well, on her return she found her house in flames before her. She, at once sought to procure a sum of about £20 which she said was in a box in the house; in trying to effect this she was kneeled senseless by the smoke, and was burned to death beneath the ruins.

At the last monthly committee meeting of the Kilkenny Tenant Farmers' Association several complaints were made of landlord injustice and cruelty in the neighborhood of the city. Two secretary was instructed to communicate with other tenantright associations to obtain a general co-operation with a view to a National Land Conference, and a deputation from the meetings of the Association was ordered to be prepared and circulated forthwith. It was also determined that on the occasion of the entry of the United Kingdom should be hoisted by the Kilkenny Tenant Farmers' Association.

At the Fareham petty sessions last week a man named Lovett, who has been for some time undergoing charity in the neighborhood as a feat mute, was charged by the police with practicing imposition and obtaining money under false pretences. It was shown that the prisoner was neither mute nor deaf, and that immediately after getting charity from a lady near Passage he entered into conversation with a traveling piper and treated him to drink. In order to save the county the expense of maintaining the fellow until the next quarter sessions, the magistrates allowed him to plead guilty to vagrancy, and sentenced him to a month's imprisonment. He kept up the pretence to the last, and put in an ingenious defense in writing.

A little demonstration in favor of Home Rule was made recently at Ballybay, in Monaghan. Over 1,000 persons were present, and an imposing procession was organized and carried out without any opposition. Resolutions were passed expressing satisfaction at the growth of national opinions in the North, and pledging those present to use every effort to secure the return of two Home Rulers at the next general election. Mr. Joseph Biggar and Mr. J. P. McAllister attended as a deputation from the Home Rule League, and the other speakers were Messrs. J. P. Fitzpatrick, chairman; Mr. John J. McMenon, Mr. Charles Conlon, P. L. G.; Mr. Thomas McSherry, P. L. G., etc.

A gentleman named Bloomfield has been arrested at Borris, near Maryborough, charged with firing at his landlord, Mr. Thomas named Delaroyd. He statement is that a quarrel occurred between them about his household affairs, and he ordered her out of the house. She refused to go back, when, it is alleged, Mr. Bloomfield took a gun, pushed her out of the door, and in the air in order to intimidate her, and as she was going down the lawn he followed her and fired at her. The shot, however, took effect in her back, under the left arm and beneath her left shoulder. Mr. Bloomfield has been admitted to bail.

At the Callan Petty Sessions, on 6th August, Father O'Keeffe gave some employment to the magistrates in the case against Bartholomew Toomey, of Callan, requiring him to show cause why any bail may be not be received certain keys in his possession, and refused to deliver them up to him as the legal administrator of the late Robert Toomey. Mr. O'Keeffe stated that he had received a power of attorney from the late Mr. Toomey's family to act in the administration of his father's effects. Toomey had got the keys of the deceased's house in Kilkenny, and refused to give them up. The court ordered the defendant to hand over the keys, which he did, after receiving Mr. Toomey's son's address in America.

A rather odd piece of amusement was witnessed in the city of Limerick a few days since. Recently before the mail train for Dublin (says the Irish Sportsmen) left at midnight, a fine race of over a hundred and twenty yards took place between Sir Caurice Nugent, Mr. Appleton and Mr. Cregoe. The affair was generally arranged before it generally known, so that the coffee, smoking and billiard rooms of the Limerick Club were quickly left without occupants, as all turned out to witness the event, notwithstanding the heavy rain falling at the time. Mr. John H. Moore officiated as Judge. The start was from the first angle of the wall, 50 to 40 in one hand was laid against Mr. Appleton. Sir Charles got the best of the start, but was completely outstripped by his opponents, of whom Mr. Appleton in the last ten yards shot out, and won by half a dozen feet. Mr. Cagney second; third close up.

From an early hour on the 14th August crowds of strangers, from the counties of Cavan, Monaghan, Armagh and Tyrone, began to arrive in Dundalk in search of refreshing the pilgrimage around the Holy Well, and by the time the last train for the evening had arrived, the Upper End was literally thronged with tourists and pilgrims, most of whom had traveled on foot during the day, and previous night from distant parts of the adjoining counties, that they might the more entirely comply with the rules and observances of the pilgrimage. During the evening the Dominican Fathers were entertaining in their attendance to the religious wants of the strangers, and allowed them the shelter of the church until midnight, at which hour the duties for the day commenced; and for many years no large an attendance of pilgrims have been seen in Dundalk, many of whom were of the comfortable peasant class.

A meeting in connection with temperance right was held in the new warehouse in Leicester on Monday. The interests on Mr. J. G. V. Porter's estates assisted most him for the purpose of considering what best practical application of the great change wrought in the land laws of Ireland by the Land Act of 1870." Shortly after two o'clock the chair was taken by Mr. Porter, who proceeded at length to explain his objects in calling the meeting. There had not been a total abstinence society in Leicester, and his tenants were not one shilling in arrear. He wished now, in a quiet time, without hurry, and under guidance of the best possible advice, to provide their industry with the most certain security. He proposed to give to every tenant on his property who decired it a certificate of tenant right, with free sale, which he could keep as a bond of security to be referred to at any time; each certificate to be indorsed with a map of the holding, together with whatever special clauses might be agreed upon between landlord and tenant as regards future charges in rent or meetings. After some discussion, it was decided to adjourn the meeting for a month, in order to afford the tenants ample time to consider fully the proposals made.

An incident, in which the ludicrous was strangely blended with the terrible, occurred during the recent visit of the Pope to the vicinity of Bray. A native priest named Patrick Quinn was standing on the "Head" on the summit of an almost perpendicular cliff about forty feet in height, when his attention was directed to a man struggling in the water underneath at a considerable distance from the shore. With difficulty and at considerable risk Quinn scrambled down the precipitous face of the rock, plunged into the water and swam out to the drowning man. It was with the utmost difficulty the rescue was effected, and when they were dragged under water by the weight and struggles of the drowning man before he succeeded in bringing the insensible and almost lifeless body to the shore. A rope was fowered from the summit of the cliff and fastened around the body, which was then carefully drawn up to the top. On the application of the usual remedies animation was restored, and the rescued man gave a most extraordinary account of the transaction. It appeared that he is an Irish laborer named Kelly, of Nolan who has been accustomed to go over for the harvest to England. The object which he had held so tenaciously in the water were found to be a small bundle of clothes and a large pair of boots. He had been his intention to swim over to England in severe peace, and expressed the utmost astonishment that he had been interrupted in his undertaking.

An Anglican "Monastery."

A correspondent of the Cardiff Weekly Mail gives the following interesting account of a visit to Llanthony "Monastery," in Monmouthshire. It will be read with melancholy interest by Catholics:

Almost immediately the service began with a chant and Latin prayers. The oratory is some eight or nine feet square, the altar blazing with candles, gold, tassel and highly-colored images of the saints and angels. The service was conducted by Father Ignatius and another personage, not a monk, but wearing long black hair, a full beard and moustache, and spectacles. Both were arrayed in gorgeous vestments, which were from time to time changed for others, now equally resplendent, now black and white. The music was intoned by the latter in the chapel, however, was a mattress stretched at right feet across the aperture of the screen which divided the vestibule from the principal chapel. The mattress was covered with a black cloth, and surmounted by a white cross. I wondered at the reason of its presence, and waited for the solution of this enigma. Some time in the family service the oracle and prayers, and then Father Ignatius ascended the aperture of the screen and delivered a short sermon. I cannot give you all his words, but his text was—"Time is short." "Everything in time is short," quoth the Rev. Father; "nothing is certain in this world but death. You may accumulate riches, but you cannot be certain that you will keep them; the wife you have married and cherished may, as times go, prove unfaithful; the children may be undutiful, and may not be filial ingrates; the crops which you believe will yield you a rich harvest may prove nothing. There is no use in trusting to the things of this life; you cannot be happy if you do. Every man has felt at times in his lifetime an aching void in his heart—the feeling which has driven many a traveler to the wings against the bars of its cage, and long for the freedom and peace of the open air. Brother Dunstan, whom you hear Brother Dunstan to cast off the trammels of the world, to live for the service of God and the benefit of his fellow-creatures. You may think him a fool for doing what he has done; but I assure you that you are. Our Lord laid down his life for the brethren; our dear Brother Dunstan will do the same. For from this day forth he is actually dead to the world, its affections, its honors and its lusts." Then for the first time I saw the monk who was about to take the irrevocable vows. He was but a lad, eighteen years of age only, and he was white linen dress, with bare feet and shaven crown.

After the address by Father Ignatius the service proceeded. Prayers were again read, hymns were sung and incense was swinged from platforms placed in the archad to chests, and swung to and fro by boys in scarlet and white dresses, with closely cropped hair and bare feet. There was one monk who took considerable part in the ceremony as assistant to the Father. He lighted the altar candles, made ready the various vestments, handed the prayer-books to the conductors of the service, but never crossed the chapel without making a deep bow to the altar. In answer to a question as to the way in which he came to become a monk. Many come to us, gentlemen occasionally, more frequently men who have failed in life. We give them a home and employment. Immediately afterwards we arrived at the most solemn part of the ceremony. Brother Dunstan was led by Father Ignatius to the screen before which was stretched the mattress. The boy monk, his head veiled with a white cloth, laid down upon it, and was covered like a corpse by the black pall with the silvery cross. Then, in the most impressive tones, Father Ignatius began to read, "I am the resurrection and the life." The reason for the presence of the bier was now apparent. Brother Dunstan was dead to the world, and the reading of the funeral service over his motionless form signified his departure to a new life. More prayers were chanted by the Father, and Brother Dunstan arose from the bier. The curtain was drawn across the screen, and for some minutes nothing was visible. Presently the curtain was removed and Brother Dunstan emerged from it black, as was the other monk, his head covered with the cowl surrounded by a chaplet of flowers, we discovered kneeling at the altar. Standing on the top step above him was Father Ignatius. A moment's silence intervened, until the Rev. Father took a ring from the altar, placed it on Brother Dunstan s finger, and declared that he was the single bride of Christ. An hymn followed, and in conclusion the brotherhood blessed the brethren engaged in the ceremony, who kissed the hem of his robe and received the benediction. This blessing, Father Ignatius informed us, not only would confer us holier and more acceptable to God, but would also absolve us from any sins we had lately committed. Several of the little congregation were thus absolved. As I was a stranger, I received to bear the weight of my own peccadilloes. Then the service, after lasting about two hours, was concluded.

In the course of our subsequent talk I learned much of the doings of these monks of St. Beudict. "Our wish," said Father Ignatius, "is to dwell apart from the world. Hence the reason of our pitching upon this desert spot. Some months ago a party of Roman monks visited us. They saw all we had to show, but wondered we did not have a resident priest. 'Why do you not have your own church; why not move towards London?' Notoriety and fortune is precisely what we do not want. Our mission is to minister to the wings against the bars of its cage, and long for the freedom and peace of the open air. Brother Dunstan, whom you hear Brother Dunstan to cast off the trammels of the world, to live for the service of God and the benefit of his fellow-creatures. You may think him a fool for doing what he has done; but I assure you that you are. Our Lord laid down his life for the brethren; our dear Brother Dunstan will do the same. For from this day forth he is actually dead to the world, its affections, its honors and its lusts." Then for the first time I saw the man who was about to take the irrevocable vows. He was but a lad, eighteen years of age only, and he was white linen dress, with bare feet and shaven crown.

After the address by Father Ignatius the service proceeded. Prayers were again read, hymns were sung and incense was swinged from platforms placed in the archad to chests, and swung to and fro by boys in scarlet and white dresses, with closely cropped hair and bare feet. There was one monk who took considerable part in the ceremony as assistant to the Father. He lighted the altar candles, made ready the various vestments, handed the prayer-books to the conductors of the service, but never crossed the chapel without making a deep bow to the altar. In answer to a question as to the way in which he came to become a monk. Many come to us, gentlemen occasionally, more frequently men who have failed in life. We give them a home and employment. Immediately afterwards we arrived at the most solemn part of the ceremony. Brother Dunstan was led by Father Ignatius to the screen before which was stretched the mattress. The boy monk, his head veiled with a white cloth, laid down upon it, and was covered like a corpse by the black pall with the silvery cross. Then, in the most impressive tones, Father Ignatius began to read, "I am the resurrection and the life." The reason for the presence of the bier was now apparent. Brother Dunstan was dead to the world, and the reading of the funeral service over his motionless form signified his departure to a new life. More prayers were chanted by the Father, and Brother Dunstan arose from the bier. The curtain was drawn across the screen, and for some minutes nothing was visible. Presently the curtain was removed and Brother Dunstan emerged from it black, as was the other monk, his head covered with the cowl surrounded by a chaplet of flowers, we discovered kneeling at the altar. Standing on the top step above him was Father Ignatius. A moment's silence intervened, until the Rev. Father took a ring from the altar, placed it on Brother Dunstan s finger, and declared that he was the single bride of Christ. An hymn followed, and in conclusion the brotherhood blessed the brethren engaged in the ceremony, who kissed the hem of his robe and received the benediction. This blessing, Father Ignatius informed us, not only would confer us holier and more acceptable to God, but would also absolve us from any sins we had lately committed. Several of the little congregation were thus absolved. As I was a stranger, I received to

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.
YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORated according to the laws of the State of California, is conducted by the Sisters of Notre Dame. The Twenty-fifth Annual Session will MONDAY, August 10, 1874. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS:
Entrance, to be paid for once.....$15 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter.....$2 50
Washing, per quarter.....$2 50
Physician's fee, (unless it may be proprietor) to pay the bill for medicines.....$1 00
Piano, Violin, Drawing and Painting, extra charges, but these to be in extra charges for the use of Piano, Violin or Drawing Lessons, are for Plain Sewing and Fancy Needlework.
Payments are required to be made half a session in advance. Pupils will find themselves in bed and table linen, which can be had at any of the above rates.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE,
SANTA CLARA.....California
Under the management of the Fathers of the Society of Jesus.

THE SANTA CLARA COLLEGE WAS FOUNDED in 1851, and in 1855 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. Instruction is given in the departments—the Classic and Scientific.
The Collegiate Buildings are large and commodious, while extensive play grounds, with two covered gymnasiums, afford ample pool, air, and field for healthful exercise.
The College possesses a very complete philosophical apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has also a Physical Cabinet of Zoology, Entomology and Surveying. Assaying of Ores, Practical Chemistry, and Analytical Chemistry are taught.
The Scholastic Year, which is divided into two sessions, commences on the first Monday in August, and closes on the second Thursday in July.

TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually, in advance.)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once.....$15 00
Boarding, Lodging, Tuition, Bed and Bedding, use of Library, Normal Stationery, Medical Attendance and Medicines, Baths, Fuel, Light per year.....$50 00
Use of Gymnasium, Drawing and Music from charges. For Clothing, Books, Pocket money, &c., apply to the advertising Prefect. For further particulars, apply to REV. J. BANNIGAN, S. J., President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
MARYSVILLE.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS INCORPORATED according to the laws of the State, and empowered to confer such honors as are usually conferred by Colleges. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS PER HALF SESSION.
Board, Tuition, Washing.....$100 00
Bed and Bedding, use of Library.....50 00
Drawing and Painting.....50 00
Use of Piano.....50 00
Free charge for the French, Spanish and German languages, and for Vocal Music in classes.
Payments are required to be made half a session in advance.
The first term of the eighteenth annual session will commence on Monday, August 3d, 1874.
Pupils will find it best to furnish themselves with the following articles, which will be required:—Two mattresses, two pillows, six sheets, three pairs of blankets, one counterpane, six towels, six napkins, one napkin ring, one dozen tablespoons, one dozen teaspoons, one dozen forks, one fine tooth comb, one coarse tooth comb, one hair brush, one clothes brush, one shoe brush, one pair of boots, one pair of shoes, one pair of slippers, one pair of rubbers, one hat, one cap, one overcoat, one dress coat, one pair of pants, one vest, one dozen pocket handkerchiefs, one dozen collars, one dozen cuffs, one dozen shirts, one dozen drawers, one dozen undershirts, one dozen stockings, one dozen socks, one dressing gown, one sewing box, one work bag, one pocket knife, one pocket book, one pocket comb, one pocket mirror, one pocket rule, one pocket compass, one pocket dictionary, one pocket prayer book, one pocket hymn book, one pocket diary, one pocket pencil, one pocket pencil case, one pocket pencil sharpener, one pocket pencil eraser, one pocket pencil holder, one pocket pencil box, one pocket pencil box and sharpener, one pocket pencil box and eraser, one pocket pencil box and holder, one pocket pencil box and sharpener and eraser, one pocket pencil box and holder and sharpener, one pocket pencil box and holder and eraser, one pocket pencil box and holder and sharpener and eraser, one pocket pencil box and holder and sharpener and eraser and one pocket pencil box and holder and sharpener and eraser and one pocket pencil box and holder and sharpener and eraser and

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

Father Waldron, of St. John's, Chicago, has paid a debt of $105,000 on his church and school houses within the last five years.

Fifty-eight priests participated in a retreat just concluded at the Seminary, Albany, New York.

The Empress of Austria and suite attended services at the Catholic church, Ventnor, London, on August 19th. The Rev. Justin Mooney officiated.

Rev. Father J. B. Duffy, for twenty years pastor of St. Alphonsus church, New Orleans, died recently at Chatlows, aged 49. Father Duffy had been in bad health for some time.

A forty-thousand dollar Catholic church was dedicated to St. Bernard, at Springfield, Mass., on Sunday, 23d August. Bishop O'Reilly preached the sermon and Bishop Williams, of Boston, assisted in the exercises.

The Benedictine Monks are about erecting a monastery in the diocese of Savannah. They will devote themselves almost exclusively to the education of the colored race.

On Sunday, September 6th, Right Rev. Bishop Wood administered the Sacrament of Confirmation at St. Joseph's church, Downington, to one hundred and twenty persons, among whom were eighteen adults, three being converts.

The death is announced in Rome of the celebrated Father Augustin Theiln, many years keeper of the secret archives of the Vatican. He was sixty-nine years of age, and was engaged at the time of his death on a history of the Council of Trent.

The Sisters of Charity, Clonmel, acknowledge the sum of £50 sterling from Charles Bianconi, Esq., D.L., Longfield, per Very Rev. Dr. Power, P.P., V.G., SS. Peter and Paul's, towards the fund for the erection of an orphanage in that town.

The Holy Father, by his Eminence Cardinal Franchi, acknowledges the receipt of 20,000 francs from the Archbishop of Cincinnati. He sends his blessing to all the flock, especially to the contributors. The letter is dated 3d August.

The Mother-General of Notre Dame has recently celebrated, at the head house at Nimes, her jubilee of fifty years. Nearly all the heads of the houses from England, and two from America went to it. Among the presents sent to Mother Constantine, were some rich embroidery worked by converted Indians of America.

A new society, numbering over seven hundred members, and entitled the "Association of Prayer for the Repression of Intemperance," has been formed by the congregation of St. Mary's church, Burlington, Vt.

Eleven Sisters of the Presentation Order are on their way from the city of Cork to New Haven. Upon their arrival, which is daily expected, they are to take charge of the parochial school of St. Michael's Church. The Sisters are devoted to the education of girls.

The beautiful new church of Ste. Patrick and Bridget, which has just been erected at Ballyclare, was, on Sunday last, opened for Divine service by his Lordship the Most Rev. Dr. Dorrian, Lord Bishop of the diocese of Down and Connor. The Very Rev. Dr. Canroy preached an impressive discourse.

In 1830 there was not a church between Harrisburg and Pittsburgh, with the exception of a little one on the top of the Alleghany mountains, at Loretto, built by Father Gallitzin, and another at Nancy. At present there are twenty Catholic churches within thirty miles of Hollidaysburgh.

Rev. John Quinn, C. C., of Beragh, has been promoted by his Grace the Most Rev. Daniel McGettigan, Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of all Ireland, to the charge of the parish of Beragh, rendered vacant by the promotion of Rev. Patrick Quinn, P.P., to the charge of the parish of Ingenious.

The magnificent high altar recently erected in the Church of SS. Peter and Paul, Cork, was, on August 10th, the Feast of St. Lawrence, solemnly consecrated by the Right Rev. Dr. Delaney, Bishop of Cork, assisted by a number of the dignitaries and clergymen of the diocese.

The Cincinnati Telegraph speaking of the new church and monastery to be erected by the Paulist Fathers at the corner of Sixtieth street and Ninth avenue, in New York city, says: "The Paulists have a large amount of brains among them, and, of course, have a practical turn. There is not a church in the country that has so many able men attached to it."

In Austria there are twenty-five religious orders of men and twenty-seven of women; 463 nunneries and 300 monasteries. There are 7,300 monks and 2,000 nuns. In twenty years there has been an increase of 182 religious houses and 2,586 religious. In 1851, the Jesuits, who had only three houses, with sixteen Fathers, have now 38 houses and 421 Fathers.

Right Rev. Bishop Seghers, of Vancouver's Island, accompanied by Father A. J. Brabant, left Victoria on the 31st August in the schooner "Surprise," for the purpose of visiting the Indian tribes scattered along the west coast of Vancouver's Island. Bishop Seghers expects to be absent about two months, and we hope his missionary tour may be crowned with the greatest success. —Sentinel.

Report says that the diocese of Maine and New Hampshire is to be divided. Bishop Bacon, of Portland, now in Rome, with Archbishop McCloskey, of New York, is to be made Coadjutor Bishop of New York, on his return, and thus two new bishops will have to be chosen. Maine will form one diocese, and New Hampshire, with Haverhill and Lawrence, and the intervening territory, it is said, will form another. No names are mentioned for the occupancy of these sees.

Father O'Farrell's new schools in New York City were blessed on Sunday, September 6, preparatory to their opening for educational purposes on the following morning. The children of the parish to the number of 2,000 and upwards, together with the members of several societies attached to the parish, marched in procession from the church to the schools, where the ceremony of blessing a school was performed by the Vicar-General, Father Quinn, who afterwards addressed an assembly of 5,000 or 6,000 persons gathered in the street. Father O'Farrell also made an address on Catholic education and its advantages. On Monday morning the children heard eight o'clock Mass in the church, and then repaired for the first time to the new schools. The boys will be, as heretofore, under the care of the Christian Brothers, and the girls under that of the Sisters of Charity.

At Notre Dame, Ind., on Saturday, Aug. 5, Right Rev. Bishop Gilmour, who has recovered sufficiently to be able to perform the ceremony, raised to the dignity of the priesthood Rev. J. M. Huni, C. Cheverraux, J. Kinze, H. Kellog and H. Derner. Father Hunt goes to Newburgh, to take the place of Father Gallagher, whose failing health obliges him to seek rest. Father Cheveraux goes with Father McMahon of Elmore, to the Cathedral, Cleveland; Father Kellog goes to Elmore; Father Kinze goes to Defiance and Father Derner to St. Malachy's, Cleveland, West Side.

The young Duke of Norfolk, first on the roll of the peerage of Great Britain, is about to become a priest of the Oratory of St. Philip Neri. He is twenty-seven years of age. Having all that the world could give and all that it prizes as most dear, he gives up all for the sake of Jesus Christ. For him the heavenly glory of the Catholic priesthood has more attractions than all the glory of earth. He sees a higher honor in standing at the Catholic altar, the earthly throne of the Son of God, than any which he descended to him through a long line of illustrious ancestry. He has already taken up his abode with the Oratorians of London to prepare for his divine vocation. The young Duke has only one brother, not 20 years of age. One of his sisters entered a convent some time ago. His mother was a daughter of one of the most devout and most zealous converts.—Catholic Telegraph.

The Sunday Democrat publishes a most extraordinary statement to the effect that Horace Greeley died a Roman Catholic. The Democrat says that it was well known to his most intimate friends that he had strong predilections towards the Catholic faith, and that it was also known from the fact that one of his daughters was educated in a Roman Catholic school. The article goes forth that in one of the lucid intervals before his death, he spoke about religion to a Catholic friend who was constantly in attendance upon him. This person, finding him sinking fast, asked him if he wished to have a minister to attend him. Mr. Greeley, it is stated, replied: "Yes, I should like to die a Catholic." The statement goes to set forth that the young man went in pursuit of a priest, but failing to find him, he returned and baptized Mr. Greeley, who, according to the young man, died a Roman Catholic. The editor of the Sunday Democrat asserts that the gentleman from whom he received the statement is incapable of telling a lie.—N. Y. Cor. Advertiser.

The regular Republican Convention of South Carolina, repudiating and casting off Governor Moses, after some days of travail, nominated Chamberlain, one of his henchmen and backers, for Governor. We say one of the henchmen and backers of Moses, because the man Chamberlain, though quite a different character in many personal respects from Moses, has been of the corrupt carpet-baggers' ring for days past, and is covered all over with crimes against public virtue. He was Attorney-General under Governor Scott, the immediate predecessor of Moses, whose administration made away with millions of stealings; and as the Attorney-General took a step towards the prosecution of the thieves, he must share with them the odium which attaches to public plunderers. Chamberlain is a man of New England birth and education.—Sacramento Union, Sept. 15.

A GOOD LANDLORD.—A rather remarkable meeting took place at Llabellaw, in the county Fermanagh, on the 16th. August. It was a meeting of the tenants on the estate of Mr. J. G. V. Porter, and was presided over by that gentleman, who, in his opening speech, explained that he had called the hearers together for the purpose of offering them tenant-right in their holdings. He boasted that, so far, "there had not been a single land case on his property," and he wished it to be now, in time of peace, to take steps to secure to them and their descendants, forever, the fruits of their industry. He then detailed his proposals, to consider which the meeting was adjourned for a month. Whether Mr. Porter's views as to their future mutual relations accord in every respect with those of his tenants remains to be seen; but even now it may be said that if the landlords of Ireland generally evinced the same spirit in dealing with their tenants, the land question might soon be satisfactorily settled.—Dublin Nation.

The Cost of Impostors.

It is so obvious that physical and constitutional vigor is the best defense against disease, that even the vendors of drastic purgatives advertise their nostrums as tonics, stomachics, etc. It is the hope of satisfying the confidence of the public in the destructive and pernicious potions. It is amusing to note how these impostors imitate and copy its language in which the medicinal properties of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are described. Although the effect of their reaping everlasting is to destroy the tone of the digestive organs and the bowels, and to induce many of the worst ailments that are incurred, patiently recommended to the weak and prostrate victims of disease as stimulants! It is time this deception was generally successful; nor is it true, thanks to the unsleeping censure some of the American people, was stigmatized as "cowardice." Such sickening falsehoods should be exposed pro bono publico. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the only genuine stimulant, is a stimulant. It has a spirituous basis, and that basis is the vehicle in which diffuses its wonderful sanitary principles through every part of the system. The tonic, alterative and purifying ingredients of the Bitters would be comparatively inert if they were not, like the spirituous basis, diffusive. Where they exist, there will be no stimulating necessity for such protests against the use of a powerful, safe and wholesome medicine as the following, all of medicinal extracts of the highest purity, in the case of pure tincture. Every intelligent physician characterizes it, and the sick who are prized, testify to its unequaled excellence, the numerous and disgusting contrivers of the parties who put it forth, soon find to their sorrow that it is a formidable and lasting, Hostetter's Bitters, the great sanitary stimulant of the age, is, in this country and Europe, a household, a wholesome, vitalizing, renovating preparation.

Received.

| | |
|---|---|
| Lauderville, St Hurondo county—Mrs. John Poor | $4 50 |
| Thomas Vine—Patrick Scully | 2 00 |
| Campobello—Michael McGonigle | 2 00 |
| Charlesville—Patrick Cassidy | 2 00 |
| Mrs. Hugh Taylor | 2 00 |
| Edmond A. Chamberlain | 2 00 |
| Daniel Mcarthy | 2 00 |
| Francis Swallen | 2 00 |
| J. Delaney | 2 00 |
| Cody—John O'Connell | 2 00 |
| J. M. Redington | 2 00 |
| Auburn—Hugh Mahon | 2 00 |
| William Greeley | 2 00 |
| Thomas Greeley | 2 00 |
| Mrs. E. Shaw | 2 00 |
| Myrtle Creek, Oregon—Edward Mahoney | 2 00 |
| Jackson County, Oregon—Jas. Smith | 2 00 |
| Benicia—Charles Gay | 2 00 |
| San Jose—Martin Murphy | 2 00 |
| San Rafael—James Smith | 2 00 |
| Yuba Bluff—Jeremiah Lynch | 2 00 |
| Troy—Patrick Wash | 2 00 |
| Ashley—John Martin | 2 00 |
| Tuscarora—Peter Burns | 2 00 |
| Pioneerville (Idaho)—James Murphy | 2 00 |
| M. J. Foley | 2 00 |
| Brooks, Humboldt county—Daniel Cheney | 2 00 |
| Santa Cruz—Michael Leonard | 2 00 |
| North Bloomfield—D. Dugan | 2 00 |

REAL AND SHAM.—The Roman Catholic Bishop of Nottingham reproved a clergyman the other day for walking with a woman on his arm and her hand in his. The priest asked the bishop to whom he was walking, "I am the Bishop of Nottingham," said his lordship. "But we have no such bishop in the English Church," replied the clergyman. "Oh!" exclaimed the bishop, "then you belong to the English Church. I am delighted to hear it, and I beg your pardon with all my like but I do wish you would not walk about in our uniform."

Wholesale Market Report.

MORTON OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17, 1874.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export the inquiry has been moderate. We quote—Extra at $5 12½ @ $5, and superfine at $4 50 @ 4 75, in sks $ 100 lbs.

WHEAT—The market has ruled quiet and at steady rates the past week. At the close the market is quotable at $1 47½ @ $1 50 $ 100 lbs.

BARLEY—The demand has been very good at unchanged rates. We quote the range for old brewing at $1 70@1 75; new, $1@1 10 $ 100 lbs.

OATS—There was a fair demand, at unchanged rates, during the past week. Quotable at the close at $1 @1 05 $ 100 lbs.

HAY—The receipts have been light during the past week, with a good demand. Quotable at the close at $16@18 for ordinary to choice $ ton.

STRAW—Quotable at 50c@75c $ bale.

CORN—Yellow quotable at $1 12½@1 20 $ 100 lbs.

BEANS—The following are the ruling rates: Bayos, $3 @3 25; Pinks, $3 @3 25; Whites, $3 @3 25; small White, $2 50@2 75; butter, $3@3 $ 100 lbs.

ONIONS—We quote at $2 @ 2 50 $ 100.

VEGETABLES—Cabbage, 50 @ 62½c $ 100 lbs; Garlic, 3@4c $ lb; Green Peas, 2@3c; Rhubarb, —@—; String Beans, 2@3c; c; Lima Beans, 10c; Summer Squash, 50@75c $ box; Peppers 75 @ 90c $ box; Tomatoes, choice to fine, 50@75c $ box; Okra, 50@75c $ box; Egg Plant, 5@6c $ lb; Cucumbers, 50@75c $ box; Green Corn, 8@10c $ dozen; Marrowfat Squash, 2@3c $ lb; Sweet Potatoes, $1 50@2 $ 100 lbs; Turnips, $1 @1 25 $ 100.

The following receipts have been free, with a good demand, since the range in 50@$1 $ 100 lbs; Sweet, 2@3c $ lb; Irish, 1½@2c $ lb.

FRUIT—Quotable at $1 50@2 $ box.

BERRIES—Quotable at 6@7½c $ lb.

MIDDLINGS—We quote feed at $26 00 $ ton from the mill.

RYE—Quotable at $1 60 @ 1 65 $ 100 lbs.

BUCKWHEAT—Quotable at 2½ @ 3c $ lb.

SEEDS—We quote Flax at 3c; Canary, 6@6½c; Mustard, 10@12½c; Hemp, 6@6½c; Rape, 4@4½c.

HIDES—We quote California dry at 19@19½c, and salted at 15@16c.

TALLOW—Quotable at 8½@9c $ lb.

WOOL—We quote Fall Clip at 30@37½c $ lb.

HONEY—Choice white in frames, 18@20c; dark, 9@12½c; extracted, 10@12½c $ lb.

WAX—Quotable at 30@32½c $ lb.

PETROLEUM—We quote Crude in bbls, 18½c; extra choice, 24c; nearly and other descriptions neglected.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California, fresh roll, extra to choice, 35 @40c; fresh, 27½@32½c; pickled roll, 25c; Oregon, fresh roll, 30@37½c; do firkin, 30@35c; Eastern firkin and tub, 30@35c.

CHEESE—Imperials, 16@16½c; Eastern, none.

EGGS—California, 30@37½c $ dozen.

CURED MEATS.

HAMS—California, 16 @ 9; Oregon, none; Eastern, 14@16c.

BACON—California, at 13½@16c @ lb; Eastern, nominal; Oregon, none; Cumberland, none; 17@18c.

LARD—California, 12@13c @ lb; Eastern, in tierces, 12½@13c; do in kegs, 13@14c; do in cans and pails, 14@15c.

BEEF—For first quality, —@6c; other grades, 5 @ 5½ @ lb.

VEAL—At 8@10c @ lb.

MUTTON—At 8@10c @ lb.

PORK—Dressed, grain-fed, 9½@10c $ lb; Boston, 8@8½c; Hogs, 6@6½c @ lb.

POULTRY AND GAME.

POULTRY—Hens, large, $7 50@8; Broilers, $4 50@5 50; Roosters, $5@5 $ dozen.

GEESE—$2 50@3 $ dozen.

DUCKS—Tame at $3@3 25 @ pair.

HARE—At $1@1 25 @ dozen.

RABBITS—At $1@1 25 @ dozen.

QUAIL—At $1@1 25 @ dozen.

TURKEYS—Gobblers, 18@20c @ lb; Hens, 20@22½c @ lb.

VENISON—Saddle, 8@9c.

GRAME—$7 50 @ dozen.

Navy Regan, alias Murray, a native of Rossmore, County Cork, Ireland, is hereby directed to call on the Archbishop within the space of two months from this date, otherwise the matrimonial case now pending before him will be decided against her.

San Francisco, July 19, 1874. 3t8

WANTED—BY A RESPECTABLE AND RELIABLE woman, a few engagements as lady's monthly nurse, or would take care of an invalid; references if required. Please call at 1011 Washington street, above Powell. 3t10

DRY GOODS, ETC.

THE ARCADE.

ANNOUNCEMENT

—TO THE—

PUBLIC.

THE PUBLIC OF THE CITY AND STATE are hereby respectfully informed that the large and splendidly built Store,

924, 926 AND 928

MARKET STREET,

Now being fitted up by

J. J. O'BRIEN & CO.,

As a first-class Dry Goods Establishment, will be opened for the transaction of business

On the 26th of September,

With by far the largest and most elegant stock of

EUROPEAN GOODS

Ever exhibited on this Coast, all manufactured expressly for the firm. The Store will be known as

THE ARCADE.

It will be fitted up in the most elegant style, and will afford the very best accommodation for visitors, as it is the resolute intention of the proprietor to make

THE ARCADE

The most popular FIRST-CLASS DRY GOODS EMPORIUM of San Francisco.

Now well and attractively—

924, 926 AND 928

Market Street,

IMMEDIATELY ABOVE STOCKTON.

J. J. O'BRIEN & CO.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

E. SUPPLE,

838 Market Street,

HAS NOW A FULL AND COMPLETE ASsortment of Fall and Winter

DRESS GOODS

Which we offer to the public at very

LOW PRICES,

Consisting, in part, of Black and Fancy

SILKS,

IRISH, POPLINS, SHAWLS,

And a full supply of

Fancy Goods.

We invite special attention to our supply of

BLACK GOODS.

TABLE LINENS AND HOUSEKEEPING GOODS

To Hotels and Boarding-houses at Wholesale Prices.

RIBBONS

A Specialty, at importers' rates.

Orders from the country promptly attended to at lowest rates.

E. SUPPLE,

838 Market street.....Nearly opposite Fourth

sep1-1m

KENNEDY, O'NEILL & BRENNAN,

.....DIRECT IMPORTERS OF.....

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRY GOODS,

116 and 118 Third Street,

Corner of Minna.....SAN FRANCISCO

ONE PRICE ONLY.

sep5-7

Manufactory of all kinds of

Silk and Bunting Flags, Banners, A. O. H. Scarfs, ROSETTES AND BADGES, FOR BALLS AND PICNICS.

PASQUALE, 644 Washington street, SAN FRANCISCO.

JOHN S. KENNY. MORRIS SHEA

KENNY & SHEAHA

MERCHANT TAILORS,

No. 24 Third Street,

ARE PREPARED TO MAKE GENTLEMEN'S

BUSINESS SUITS TO ORDER,

FINE BEAVER SUITS,

FIRST-CLASS DRESS SUITS,

LATEST FASHIONABLE STYL

IMMENSE SACRIFI

—OF— —AND—

BOOTS SHOE

CLOTHING AND GENT'S FURNISHING GOO

AT THE AVENUE AUCTION STORE OF

JAMES O'HANLON,

725 Montgomery Street.

GREAT CLEARANCE SALE FOR SIXTY DAYS ONLY.

A VISIT TO THE STORE WILL CONVINCE THE MOST SKEPTICAL THAT WE ARE selling goods cheaper than any other house in the trade. Our present stock of Staple Goods is a very large one, and must be closed out to make room for the Winter Goods—a special and well-assorted stock of which will be received per steamer from our own store and to suit the requirements of the 500 cases Men's top sole Boots at.....$4 50

300 cases Farmers' Boots, full sizes.....4 00
500 cases Kip and Calf Boots.....3 50
500 cases Calf dress Boots.....4 75
" Patent calf do $5 50
" Serene do, split backs.....7 50
100 cases Youths' Leather Boots.....2 50
300 cases Boys' Boots, from $1 to.....3 50
Gent's own make, and warranted.....5 00

Men's and Boy's Clothing at Greatly Reduced R
1,000 Men's Cassimere Suits at.....
500 Men's Cassimere Pants at.....
Extra heavy Beaver Suits.....
A splendid and well-selected stock of Boys' and Youths' Clothing, very cheap—Boys' Suits
from $4 to.....
Youths' Suits, 27 to 32—worth $10.

IMPORTATION DIRECT

M. SHORT

PIONEER TAILOR,

COMMERCIAL STREET, Corner of Leidesdorf

An Inspection of

THE FINEST GOODS ever introduced into this market, including

MELTONS, CAMBRIDGE,
CHEVIOTS, NAPIER,
OXFORD, WITNEY,
RAGLANS, WESTWILLS,
&c.....&c.....&c.

ALSO—

A Large Assortment of Genuine Irish Frieze,

Being the NEWEST FASHIONS, both in material and colors, which he now offers at prices which Cannot be touched by any other house in the city.

GREAT BARGAINS

IN

BOOTS AND SHOES,

At HEALY'S

RED HOUSE,

848 MARKET STREET (OPPOSITE FOURTH)

PRICES TO DEFY COMPETITION.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

706 MARKET STREET.

HAVING MADE ARRANGEMENTS FOR EXtensive improvement and enlargement of our Store, we have determined to dispose of our stock of

DRY GOODS,

FANCY GOODS,

SILKS,

SHAWLS,

FURNISHING GOODS,

RIBBONS,

GLOVES, ETC.,

—AT—

SPRING SALES

Can be found in all Shades and at all Prices.

PASSEMENTERIES!

PASSEMENTERIES!

The Largest and Best Assortment of

BEADED GIMPS,
ORNAMENTS,
BUCKLES,
SLIDES,
FRINGES
AND BUTTONS.

YAK LACE AND INSERTIONS,

Both Plain and Beaded, in large variety.

FRATINGER & NOLL,

Leading Cloak and Suit House of the City,

10 Montgomery Street.

Manufactory of all kinds of

Silk and Bunting Flags, Banners, A. O. H. Scarfs,

ROSETTES AND BADGES, FOR BALLS AND PICNICS.

PASQUALE, 644 Washington street, SAN FRANCISCO.

FRATINGER & NOLL

WILL EXHIBIT RARE NOVelties during the coming week in handsome

LINEN SUITS.

NEW STYLES.

Embroidered and Braided in all the new Shades and Designs.

NEW STYLE CLOAKS,

.....CONSISTING IN.....

Drap d'Ete, English Walking Jackets, Dolman's Talmas, and Polonaise,

Trimmed and Inserted with YAK LACE and PASSEMENTERIE, both Plain and Beaded.

HOUSE WRAPPERS!

A Large Assortment, consisting in

French Calico, Cashmere and Silk.

STREET SUITS.

In all New and Desirable SPRING GOODS, made up stylish and handsomely trimmed in two colors or with silk.

FRATINGER & NOLL.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

706 MARKET STREET,

OPPOSITE THIRD.....SAN FRANCISCO

NEW STORE!---NEW GOODS

EVERYTHING NEW!

M. CAREY

TAKES PLEASURE IN ANNOUNCING to the people of San Mateo county that he has opened a

GENERAL MERCHANDISE STORE AT SAN MATEO,

Where he will keep constantly on hand a large and first-class

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS,
HARDWARE, CLOTHING,
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS AND CAPS,
GLASSWARE, CROCKERY, WINES, LIQUORS AND CIGARS,

Which will be sold at San Francisco prices for cash.

Farmers, what is the use of going to San Francisco to purchase goods, incurring needless expenses, when you can buy just as cheap from CAREY?

Five hundred thousand dollars is taken to San Francisco each year from San Mateo county by monthly PRICES.

CAREY'S

GROCERIES

Are resident families, when as good qualities and as cheap prices may be obtained at

CAREY'S.

It is a well known and undisputed fact that for choosing all kinds of general merchandise for family use you can do more for your money at

CAREY'S.

RETAIL DEALERS will be supplied at SAN FRANCISCO PRICES.

"Quick Sales and Small Profits" is my motto.

BACON & COMPANY'S ART GALLERY SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

PRINTING

Paper Ruling and Book Binding.

Neatly, Promptly, Cheaply

PERFORMED BY

Bacon & Company

Corner Clay and Sansome Sts.

Country Orders will receive equal consideration as those from our city patrons.

THE MONITOR:

The Only Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

LYONS & BARRY, - - - - Publishers.
JOHN LYONS. JOHN F. BARRY.

RICHARD O'SULLIVAN.....EDITOR.
DENIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—626 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts (Rooms 2, 7 and 8, up-stairs). All communications should be addressed to Lyons & Barry.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):

Served by Carriers, per week.....10c
Mail subscribers, per year.....$ 4 00
Six months.....2 50
The Monitor and Catholic World, one year.....7 75
" " Gentle's Lady's Book.....3 25
" " Demorest's Fashion Magazine.....3 50
" " Peterson's Ladies' Magazine.....3 50

ADVERTISING RATES:

1 square, 1 insert.....$1 00 | 1 square, 4 months.....$15 00
" 1 week.....4 00 | " 6 months.....21 00
" 2 months.....7 00 | " 9 months.....31 00
" 3 months.....9 00 | " 1 year.....35 00

The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

IRELAND.

Here is a German hailed on the sufferings of Ireland, says the Montreal Herald, translated by Mary Howitt. The author (Ferdinand Freiligrath) is not inspired so much by the beauties of the German Fatherland as by the sorrows of Erin. Alone in his wife he vision is not purple with the gorgeous light of a sunset on the Rhine, but with the life-blood which English law and landlord tyranny have drawn from the heart:

The best refuge to a rusty choler!
The salt, the oar, of use no longer—
The Kelpy's hair, the sea-dog's eye!
And now the fisher fields with keener,
Still keener, sharpened weapon sweep!
The fish—the fish is all I claim!
I'll not be robbed, I'll not be maimed!
A tattered garb, an empty dish,
Are all that I possess of harvest.

A pastoral sound is on the wind,
With kine the roads are thronged—oh, pity,
A famished people perishes!
And driven to the seagoat city,
Pale Ireland hawks her hecatomb—
The foot which Paddy's soil desireth—
That would starve his children's frames,
The landlord's export trade requireth.

To him the land is even a fetter!
Of joy and luxury never weary,
The church turned head supports the senses
Which swells for him the horn of plenty,
In Paris and in London!

His gold makes gambling table glitter,
The white he hair grey hairs to become Pres-
And die, like flies in winter bitter.

Bulls' balls! the chase is up!
Paddy, rush in—Mick is a freemen—
In vain! for thee there is no hope,
The game goes well to the preserver;
For Ireland's game is landlords game—
The landlord is a sportsman!
And upon the peasant's righteous claim,
He has no ear for human.

The landlord cares for on and bound,
Their wrath a pleasure to him is,
Instead of draining marshy ground—
He'd rather hunt with fire and sword—
It leaves the land a hoggy fen,
With pools and ponds some acres o'er;
It's barren'd for the water hen,
The rabbit and the screaming plover.

In "crash the curse of heaven is of wants
And vain the curse of man—
The people's curse, the landlord cares,
Is power corrupting, tyrannical—
Oh, Irish land in landlord's hand!
Oh, Irish land in landlord's hand!
Thy curse is heavier than the curse
Of the damned mothers weeping stand,
Their children's blood on their hands to bury.

A wailing cry swerves like a blast
The length and breadth of Ireland through!
Like Rachel weeping for her children
Refuseth to be comforted!
Upon her children's graves!
Pale, agonizing, with wild hair flying,
Her sorrow she embraces a weeping soul
Upon her children's graves!
Upon her children's graves!
Like Rachel's lamentation
Is the cry of her despair!
The cry of her despair!
The cry of her despair!
The cries "Shoe of Nations."

Irish Leaders.

The characteristics of the Irish people is manifest in developing the most singular and the most numerous class of leaders that has ever existed in any country or people. Their variety and occupation leaders are too numerous to make separation of each, but they can be classed in three heads—Revolutionists, Politicians and Parliamentarians. Every great revolutionary leader has a high-love about him, with a supernatural air more impressive by the mysterious which he approaches the most subject, often covering his ignorance assumed secrecy. He is constantly be wing, and comes to the average man backed up by one of the most and principles that on all the heart of somely, a worker in the cause of his In dress he looks the soldier on fur-

His vocation as a leading Irish nationalist is the way to the heart and of the majority of the Irish men and no matter what may be their position or location. Nobody can be descended a family known to fame, or been in the walls of an English prison, the Irish people with as many sins, he power he does, and all the confidence that one can give to another is at the disposal individual who comes as a leader to from serfdom the Irish people. He with a different feeling we must record that the sect condition of his native country forced him to expatriate himself at the opening of his brilliant life. Ireland ley, as still she is, in the shade of a drear provincialism, and offered no fitting home to genius. Deserted by those who should be the friends of art; impoverished by a system of rule that drove many from their homes, and kept the homes of the rest in poverty, void of all the gracious influences of wealth, munificence and culture, Ireland could not, and to the spring artist, artist, in the consciousness of genius, no prospect of an adequate career. With his genius as his only fortune, he went his way in the spring of life to London, and there, although contending against those might forces which keep back the poor Irishman seeking his fortune in the tangle of that capital, John Foley strode ahead, and left all competitors far behind. To the end, after that first struggle of true success, no man was able to approach him. He stood alone, and he stood without a second. As it is said of a great actor that he made a part his own, or of a famous singer that no one else can venture upon a certain role, so we may say of Foley that he took the art of sculpture and made it his own monopoly. All great works were sent home to him. So rapidly, indeed, did commissions crowd in upon him, that whilst his chisel commanded fortune, he was forced to abandon the higher flights of ideal art, and content himself with devotion to memorial sculpture. At home and abroad the works of his hands are found, and when death cut him down too early his atelier was filled with models not yet quite finished, or not much more than begun. The news of his loss was heard, not in Ireland only, but all over the British Empire, with unaffected sorrow. A public expression of her Majesty's regret was made, and the honor of a grave in St. Paul's—a grave beside the ashes of Barry, and close by the last resting place of Turner, Reynolds and Landseer—was given to one whose genius had shone with peculiar splendor in the pure white light of a quiet and unaffected life.—Dublin Weekly News.

Mr. Butt and the Marquis of Hartington.

What Irishman has not read with a gratification bordering on pride Mr. Butt's letter of July 23d, to the Marquis of Hartington, declining to refuse a public block to allow himself to be enrolled as an original member of the new Liberal Club? It is a retort with a vengeance to the insult offered to Ireland, at early period of the last session, by a majority of the old Reform Club, in rejecting a proposal to admit several new Irish members because of their disloyal tendencies. It is also a crushing reply to the charge so persistently urged by a certain class of Irishmen against Mr. Butt and his followers, that they are not Nationalists at heart, but Liberals in disguise.

The noble Marquis will not soon forget the severe, but well-merited rebuke which he has just received. It was an impertinence on his part to offer membership to the Home Rulers after the glaring offense which his party had, only a few weeks previously, perpetrated towards them. It may be that in his patrician negligence he encountered the Liberal party on a free basis, he forgot the insult, and in that blissful oblivion tendered the invitation to which Mr. Butt's letter is a very pertinent reply. We fancy that his memory is sharper now than it was then.

But even had there been no insult to resent, Mr. Butt would, with the same firmness, have declined to become a member of the Liberal Club. The fact is that the Liberal party is a party in themselves, with a Club and "Whips" of their own. It is policy they differ more widely from the Conservatives than either does from the Conservative. On some questions they do, it is true, agree with the Liberals, just as they do with other questions, agree with the Conservatives. But so wide is the chasm which separates the two sections of which Mr. Gladstone as, and the Marquis of Hartington will shortly be, the leaders, that no Irish Nationalist could for a moment understand "the meaning of Liberal unity" as applied to "Liberal policy in Ireland," since it was the Marquis of Hartington himself who, under a Liberal administration, prosecuted Ireland with an efficient code of coercion laws. This, esp cially in the Irish Liberals, rigged out, for purpose of their own, in the garb of Nationalism.

Another proof, if another were wanting, that the Home Rulers are not, and cannot be members of the Marquis of Hartington's party, is the presence of the renegade O'Donoghue in the Liberal ranks, where, owing to his own bad bargaining and boldness, he is a tower of strength. Such a man could not be associated, even on all, honest men like the Home Rulers are in duty bound to shun. So intense is their dislike to the cure, indeed, and expressed themselves so readily to testify to his miraculous power, that were might prove treacherous, that no one present at his meeting would be safe about the premises. Now, apart from the question of honesty, there is the question of expediency. Ireland is not a country in which any party can afford to be associated with a man who has been publicly chastising him on account of his misdeeds.

To the fifty-nine brave and determined men who have succeeded in having themselves recognized in England as a party distinct from both the Conservative and Liberal, who stand by the leadership of Mr. O'Donoghue, bona-fidei of an Irish Liberal, and the plotting Johnston, bona-fidei of an Irish Conservative, who have the confidence of the clergy and people at home, of Irishmen abroad, and particularly in Canada, gives a hearty support. Remember that at early dissolution of Parliament a series of vacancies in the Exchequer has intimated that it may be the close of 1875. Then another appeal will be made to the Irish people, and, with God's help and fair play, the fifty-nine Home Rulers will be increased to seventy-five at least. In the meantime let us, on this side of the ocean, do our part to secure or insure, that, or rather let us encourage, by word and deed, so that the inevitable triumph may be earlier and greater.—Montreal Herp.

Irish National Hall and Catholic Library.

A meeting of Catholic citizens was held on Tuesday evening last, in Irish-American Hall, for the purpose of taking into consideration the best and speediest means for according to the Catholics of the coast an Irish National Hall and Catholic Library. Judge Coffey occupied the chair, and briefly stated the object of the meeting. Rev. Father Gleeson then made an address, in which he alluded to the importance of the enterprise, and the humiliation to which he had been subjected in soliciting subscriptions from some of the wealthy citizens, who, he said, gave him but little encouragement. Rev. Father Brown—among whom Mr. John Sullivan, J. D. Oliver and Mr. Mahoney—expressed their intention of responding liberally as the call made upon them. He proposed to send for Father Thomas Burke, the eloquent Irish priest, to lecture in behalf of the enterprise; and he had no doubt that with the money collected as the proceeds of the lectures, the Hall would be pushed to a speedy completion. At the close of the reverend gentleman's address a committee on Permanent Organization was appointed by the Chair, composed of the following: R. Warde, Captain P. J. Kain, Dr. J. F. Gibbon, Rev. Father Gleeson and Michael Kane. The Secretary was instructed to notify the Presidents of the various Irish and Catholic societies, and the officers of the Irish military organizations, to appoint five delegates to represent each association at the next meeting, which will be held on Monday evening next, at the same place.—Call.

VOL. XVII. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1874. NO. 49.

MIRACULOUS CURES.

Remarkable Occurrence at the Convent of Notre Dame, Milwaukee, Wis.

Rev. Father Krautbauer, chaplain of the Convent of Notre Dame, in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has given the editor of the Catholic Visitator what he calls "well authenticated facts" concerning a miracle that was performed at the chapel of the convent on the 17th June last, through the intercession of the Blessed Virgin in behalf of a faithful and devoted client, Miss Marie Rosenman, a native of Hanover, aged at the time 19 years. He says:

The particulars regarding the picture before which the above named invalid poured forth her devotions immediately before her miraculous cure, are as follows: Right Rev. Bishop Henni, when about to return from the last Vatican Council, purchased an extra copy, as regards size, character of painting and material, having been painted on wood, of the miraculous picture of our Mother of Perpetual Succor, preserved in the Church of St. Alphonsus of the Redemptorist Fathers, in Rome, the copy having been blessed by the Holy Father, Pius IX., and touched to the original miraculous picture itself. Right Rev. Bishop Henni, for the sake of greater security in the conveyance of this picture to its destination, caused it to be boxed, labeling both the box and the picture itself with the address of the Sisters of Notre Dame, Milwaukee, and shipped it in another vessel than that on which he himself sailed on his return. It arrived safely, and is now located over the Virgin's altar in the above-named convent, and before it the miracle we are about to relate took place. The following are the particulars in a brief form:

Marie Rosenman was taken seriously ill in September, 1873, in the convent above mentioned, being at this time a candidate. The best medical attendance the city could furnish was engaged to treat her, all declaring her case to be pulmonary consumption. She continued to decline until all hope of recovery was abandoned even by chloroform was too powerful for her; her brain reeled, and she became senseless. When she came to herself she was lying on a coarse blanket in a little cave, which was dimly lighted by a hole through the side, for there's her head. At first her eyes could distinguish nothing, so dim was the light, and so confused her brain from the effects of the drug; but gradually she could distinguish large bales of goods in sackcloth wrappers, barrels and boxes, barrels there an empty bottle, a broken pipe, and a box of matches, and the strong wooden door of the cave. A prisoner! A prisoner she was, and no mistake; and the more she thought it over, the more helpless did she feel.

She lay on her blanket, for her head ached and swam, and she feared lest any movement should bring the hated Michael again before her eyes. It seemed that hours after she came to herself had passed, when he opened the door, and stood gazing at her. Norah did not move or raise her eyes.

"Sulking!" he said, with a slight sneering laugh. "Well, that won't hurt you or anybody else. Here's your supper! I'm going home, and shan't be here till to-morrow afternoon, so you'll have had time to think over before we meet again. Dennis will be thinking I've run away if I don't go there to find me at lunch. You won't be wanting a night-light, will you?"

He put a few hard tea biscuits on a barrel, and a cup of water, and shutting the door after him, shot the heavy iron bolt in its hole in the rock, and went away. Norah was alone in this dreary cavern, which was now fast becoming dark, as the evening drew on. Harry must have begun to wonder at his prolonged absence, and would be perhaps pass below this very spot in search for her. Would he hear her if she shouted? Would his voice seemed shocked and half strangled by the solid sandy walls on all sides. And even should she succeed in making him know where she was, if Michael found him there he would fling Harry down the rocks with him, for he was a strong and uncommonly powerful man. No, she would remain quiet, still refusing to take the oath required of her, but she should find some means of escape. Then kneeling to offer her usual night prayers to God and to the Blessed Virgin for safety and protection, with more fervor than she had ever yet experienced, she lay down with a smile, strong heart, and fell asleep.

When she awoke on the following morning, it was some minutes before she could collect her scattered thoughts and recollect where she was, and all that had passed. It was quite impossible to tell what time it was, but it seemed to her from the light that the sun had risen. Then she ate the frugal breakfast that Michael had left for her on the previous day, and then set to work to say her prayers, to see if there were any mode of escape. But she searched for some time in vain. The door was firmly fastened into the solid cliff, and other egress there was none. She dragged some boxes after the bale all that served her as a window, and piling one on top of another, peeped out. But there was nothing to be seen except the blue sky, a passing cloud, or a gull flapping slowly by. She was too high even to distinguish the tops of the trees beneath her; and discounting from her pedestal, she resolved the bottom to and found that the cave was so high that should discover her anxiety to escape. As she did so, she broke an empty bottle that lay on the ground, and picked up the bits of broken glass a sudden thought struck her. Could she not, by means of through the door unfriendly large to allow her arm so pass through and draw back the bolt? Eagerly she tried, but the door laughed at her efforts, and the scraping sounded so believe and loud, that she feared Michael must hear it from the cliff above and come on her unawares. With a sigh she threw away the glass, and set some more stones on the box to depend entirely on the peril into which her idle curiosity had brought her. By and by Michael's step arrived outside, and he opened the door.

"Well," he said, with the same taunting smile, "are you pretty well tired of your own company? You've had time to think over now, I guess. What do you say? Which is it to be?"

"I'll never be your wife, Michael White," replied Norah. Sorrely. "You may kill me, if you dare, but I'll be no wife of yours."

A scowl darkened the man's face as he listened to her answer, and for some minutes he scanned there in silence.

"You've a fine spirit," he said coolly at last, "but I'll break it before I've done with you. I'll give you a couple of days more of this, and see what you say then, and if you stick to it, why, I'll begin to think you know I'm not a man to break my word. Young Duncan came round to me last night, and I showed him all over my bosom to prove that you weren't there. I'm thinking I've thrown him off the scent for the present, so he won't be taking the hump from this out! I promised him. I shall be going to starve you, so here's your dinner."

He put some dried fish and sea-biscuit on the barrel, and then came more to her own thoughts. Norah's heart did not fail her yet. Much might happen in two days, and also her friends and fish cheerfully, and then began once more to search for means of escape. The door was hopeless, and so was the sandy wall. With the aid of the bit of glass it crumbled, though not quickly, and she thought that when she had pierced the obstacle both that kept her from life and happiness. But many days must pass before she could be found. Would her hear if she shouted? Would his voice seemed shocked and half strangled by the solid sandy walls on all sides. And even should she succeed in making him know where she was, if Michael found him there he would fling Harry down the rocks with him, for he was a strong and uncommonly powerful man. No, she would remain quiet, still refusing to take the oath required of her, but she should find some means of escape. Then kneeling to offer her usual night prayers to God and to the Blessed Virgin for safety and protection, with more fervor than she had ever yet experienced, she lay down with a smile, strong heart, and fell asleep.

When she awoke on the following morning, it was some minutes before she could collect her scattered thoughts and recollect where she was, and all that had passed. It was quite impossible to tell what time it was, but it seemed to her from the light that the sun had risen. Then she ate the frugal breakfast that Michael had left for her on the previous day, and then set to work to say her prayers, to see if there were any mode of escape. But she searched for some time in vain. The door was firmly fastened into the solid cliff, and other egress there was none. She dragged some boxes after the bale all that served her as a window, and piling one on top of another, peeped out. But there was nothing to be seen except the blue sky, a passing cloud, or a gull flapping slowly by. She was too high even to distinguish the tops of the trees beneath her; and discounting from her pedestal, she resolved the bottom to and found that the cave was so high that should discover her anxiety to escape. As she did so, she broke an empty bottle that lay on the ground, and picked up the bits of broken glass a sudden thought struck her. Could she not, by means of through the door unfriendly large to allow her arm so pass through and draw back the bolt? Eagerly she tried, but the door laughed at her efforts, and the scraping sounded so believe and loud, that she feared Michael must hear it from the cliff above and come on her unawares. With a sigh she threw away the glass, and set some more stones on the box to depend entirely on the peril into which her idle curiosity had brought her. By and by Michael's step arrived outside, and he opened the door.

"Well," he said, with the same taunting smile, "are you pretty well tired of your own company? You've had time to think over now, I guess. What do you say? Which is it to be?"

"I'll never be your wife, Michael White," replied Norah. Sorrely. "You may kill me, if you dare, but I'll be no wife of yours."

A scowl darkened the man's face as he listened to her answer, and for some minutes he scanned there in silence.

"You've a fine spirit," he said coolly at last, "but I'll break it before I've done with you. I'll give you a couple of days more of this, and see what you say then, and if you stick to it, why, I'll begin to think you know I'm not a man to break my word. Young Duncan came round to me last night, and I showed him all over my bosom to prove that you weren't there. I'm thinking I've thrown him off the scent for the present, so he won't be taking the hump from this out! I promised him. I shall be going to starve you, so here's your dinner."

He put some dried fish and sea-biscuit on the barrel, and then came more to her own thoughts. Norah's heart did not fail her yet. Much might happen in two days, and also her friends and fish cheerfully, and then began once more to search for means of escape. The door was hopeless, and so was the sandy wall. With the aid of the bit of glass it crumbled, though not quickly, and she thought that when she had pierced this

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINS OCT. 1 September
27—Sunday—Eighteenth Sunday after Pentecost.
28—Monday—St. Wenceslaus, Duke, Martyr.
29—Tuesday—St. Michael, Archangel.
30—Wednesday—St. Jerome, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.
October
1—Thursday—St. Remigius, Bishop and Confessor.
2—Friday—The Holy Guardian Angels.
3—Saturday—St. Thomas and Dionysius, Martyrs.

THE MONITOR
IS THE ONLY
Catholic Journal and Catholic Journal in
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....SEPT. 26, 1874.

THE IRISH IN AMERICAN POLITICS.

Towards election times the subject, Irish people in American politics, is pretty sure to be extensively treated of by a certain classes of journals. We regret to say that in most cases it is not discussed in a way calculated to do good to this country or to profit the persons to whom the remarks are addressed. One would readily imagine from the tone of the leading articles published in the so-called "national" no-papers that the chief business of Irish people in the United States is, or at any rate ought to be, the forwarding of some vague, undefined and indescribable "revolutionary" scheme for severing the political connection between Ireland and England. We may observe before we go any further, in order to avoid misunderstanding, that we are decidedly of opinion the said connection is a grievous misfortune for Ireland, and the man who will not do something to better the condition of his kith and kin at home is not worth much to them. But we sincerely we are gravely informed that our countrymen could wield immense power and secure the speedy redemption of the Old Land if they were only united and voted in a solid phalanx for certain office-seekers, we feel bound to protest against such absurd teachings and to expose their miserable fallacies. The plain duty of an Irishman, or any other person for that matter abroad, who becomes a citizen of this Republic, is to use the franchise conferred upon him honestly and patriotically for the welfare of his adopted country. He owes an undivided allegiance to the United States of America, and every public act of his should demonstrate his hearty loyalty. He has as much an interest in the tranquillity, prosperity and happiness of his chosen home as any descendant of the Puritans who landed at Plymouth Rock can possibly have. He should, therefore, bear himself as an American in all circumstances, and refuse to recognize, still more any attempt to organize in his name, to screen himself and the individual born here on the soil.

If Irishmen organize for political purposes as Irishmen, and make nationality the basis of membership, they cannot blame Americans for doing the same thing, and Know-Nothingism becomes justified at once. The United States have no connection with the rights or wrongs of the British government of Ireland, and it is no part of their mission to try to effect the wrongs endured by the Irish people at home, however great they may be. Their business is to guard and promote the rights and privileges of their own soil, and nothing more. But why we do not think it necessary to spend further time illustrating the absurdities perpetrated by these "national" journalists who seek to inflame their too confiding countrymen on the occasion for the achievement of Irish independence" by their action upon purely American political issues. More mischievous still, however, are those self-constituted leaders of public opinion, who loudly and persistently demand, through the columns of their obscure periodicals, that our countrymen shall organize and act as a unit for the purpose of assisting Irish candidates and guiding them into office. Now we strongly maintain that it cannot benefit any one, except the person immediately concerned, to have a man belonging to any particular nationality more than another administering public affairs. Whether a certain official is Irish or not is a matter affecting nobody; but whether that certain official is honest and capable or not is a matter affecting everybody having a business relation with him. These two things, honesty and capacity, should be the great recommendations of a candidate before the people, and not nationality or religious creed or any other thing of that kind. It should be well borne in mind that if citizens honestly voted for the best men, and the best men alone, thieving in office would come to an end, the Government need not cost the money one half of what it does, and as a consequence the burden of taxation would be greatly reduced.

It is worthy of remark that all those who impress these false views upon Irishmen and try to make dupes of them are Irish themselves, and invariably have a private object or their own to serve. Observation will surely show that the individual who wrote the Irish chimera to "unite" and support their own countrymen for office has some snug billet in view which he thinks would be admirably filled by himself. Either that or he wants to get into the Legislature to make money out of some place. Of course we need hardly say that a candidate should not be ignored or lose his claim to support because he happens to be of foreign birth; but what we want to urge is that that circumstance should not be allowed to tell either for or against him, and that he should be judged altogether upon his personal merits. Yet if any party, great or small, should make it a point to oppose a candidate on account of his religion or nationality, we should wish to see our countrymen, like all other honest and liberal men, resist and overcome that opposition. Unfortunately for the country there are such parties, and, indeed, we have had some experience of them in this State; but their power is in reality of a very limited character, and they are not nearly so formidable as they pretend to be. Our advice to our countrymen who enjoy the privilege of being citizens of this great and glorious republic is to support the honest and efficient candidate quite irrespective of party affiliations; so that good laws may be made and the money of the community may be neither stolen or squandered. That is the policy will tell best for themselves in the end, and best tend to secure them the enjoyment of the fruits of their industry.

THE LUST OF GAIN.

When Catholic writers deplore the materialistic tendencies of the present age, or express a doubt whether what is called modern civilization is, after all, so much of a benefit to mankind, they are charged with being hostile to progress, or with being desirous of reviving the barbarism of the Middle Ages. With such allegations made against them they are supposed to be effectually crushed by adverse popular opinion, and to be convicted of treason against enlightenment. And yet, strange to say, if we only give heed to the utterances of men who are deemed to be the profoundest thinkers of the present day, we shall find everything they urge corroborated and repeated under different forms. The pursuit of wealth was formerly only one out of many ends to which man directed their energies; now it is the exclusive one, and has destroyed all others. How heartless, how selfish and how dishonest this worship of Mammon has made the world it is not hard to tell. To increase the store of gold the capitalist and employer will make use of every shift and device. To multiply their profits they will cut down the wages of the toiling masses to the point that it scarcely suffices to procure the necessaries of life. They will make the hours of labor so long as to render the existence of the workingman little better than a constant round of wearisome and monotonous existence. They regard their poor fellow-creatures just as machines capable of doing so much work, and coming so much money, which it is proper to turn to the best advantage. The only limit placed to their avaricious is that dictated by considerations of their own safety, personal and pecuniary. There is a great deal of glitter and gaudiness in the world to-day; luxury is brought to an extravagant pitch; but all this is for the wealthy few—the poor have no share in it.

The tendency of the progress we hear so much about is to centralize wealth and power—to make the rich richer and the poor poorer than ever they were before. The struggle of life is a hundred-fold more bitter and exhausting now than it was during the much aspersed Middle Ages. Our very homes are made to be habitual to evil hives of industry, conceal more human suffering than was known throughout Christendom five centuries ago. Poverty has assumed more distressing and repulsive forms, and is growing even worse with the advance of civilization. Of course it is hidden away in cellars and garrets, midsqualor and filth, reeking with poisonous exhalations, because respectability does not like to be shocked in the world by seeing it; but there it is for all that, and it cries aloud to heaven against the new creed of selfishness. The lot of even the savage races is preferable by far to that to which our modern boasts of high-pressure civilization, for they, at all events, enjoy the blessings of pure water, of fresh air and wholesome surroundings. Wine, therefore, was the voice which was uttered against the modern progress which refuses to acknowledge God as its guide, and chooses to follow the promptings of pride and self-indulgence. It is not that progress and civilization have been condemned as such, but the fact that they carry with them responsibilities which are being ignored has been authoritatively proclaimed.

The "spirit of the age" was never more appropriately manifested than in the action of that man who, it is alleged, during the recent conflagration of the cotton mills at Fall River, directed that the engines which were playing on the front of the buildings should be taken to the rear and be used for the saving of property, and thus left a crowd of trembling women and girls a prey to the merciless flames. The human beings could be replaced, and hundreds could be found willing to take their places next day; but the property, the property, was precious, and should be saved at all hazards! The spirit of Christianity would not counsel that the wealth of the world is as nothing compared with the value of an immortal soul, but then it is not recognized in this strictly commercial age! The laws that place restraint upon men's acts, that oblige the capitalist or employer to consider whether such and such a way of making a profit may not be unjust to one person or necessitate the oppression of another, are fast falling into disrepute among all but those who still cling to the faith handed down by the apostles and believe it will profit a man nothing to gain the whole world if he loss his soul. The Revealed and fashionable creed now is that a man has no soul to lose, and that any act which is not in direct conflict with the law of the land is not only justifiable but moral. The decadence of public honor, the universality of corruption, the prevalence of immoral doctrines, are strong proofs that the present phase of civilization has well nigh worn itself out, and that it will soon give way to another. More Christian or more diabolic—which?

PROSELYTIZING IN IRELAND.

Nothing can be more repulsive to the man with true Christian charity in his heart than the eagerness with which proselytism is carried on by certain Protestant societies in Ireland. The endeavor to snatch one person, even a little infant, from Catholicity is held by these fanatical organizations to be a work beyond all praise; and to make it successful recourse is very often had to means which, if not positively criminal, are unquestionably disreputable. The natural consequence is that members of the societies frequently figure in legal proceedings, and call down upon themselves severe animadversions from the highest judicial functionaries.

The foolish attempt to "convert" the adult population has long been given over as utterly useless, and the once plentiful "soup-kitchens" in which the "errors of Popery" were clearly demonstrated by arguments drawn from the gratuitous distribution of cooked Protestant beef and mutton, are now few and far between. The temporary nature of the "conversions" achieved in this way—the most hopeful "brands snatched from the burning" returning to Popery and the Mass as soon as ever potatoes become plentiful—disgusted the most zealous evangelizers, and made them despair of giving the Irish people "the blessings of the reformation." So they turned their attention to the little children. It was much easier to kidnap or purchase from starving parents boys and girls of tender age, and in the secure refuge of orphanages, asylums and such institutions, teach them to curse the Pope and hate the creed of their fathers, that being precisely the extent of the Protestantism inculcated.

We must in common justice, remark here that the vast majority of the Irish Protestant population had no sympathy whatever with these proselytizers, and were filled with shame at their doings, and refused to support the institutions directed by them. They could not exactly understand that charity or benevolence which could leave a dozen orphans of a family to starve in the streets or die of want, because a mother, in the 28th, had been entrapped into the bosom of the One True and Apostolic Church over which presides the infallible Vicar of Christ.

Such sectarian intrigues and the obsequiousness of fawning mendicants may be the chief agencies for promotion in the "reformed" Church of England; but sanctity, humility and zeal for God's honor, and intellectual ability are, and ever will be, the only recognized titles to advancement within the Catholic Church. The difference between the two shows the difference in their essence—one is of the world worldly; while the other is animated solely by the spirit of wisdom.

AN EVANGELICAL ROMANCE.

It is well known that the road to preferment in the English Church Establishment lies through the odious and drawing-rooms of the great aristocratic families. Learning, or piety, or even orthodoxy, has very little indeed to do with the advancement of an ecclesiastical dignitary compared with the good-will and favor of some duke or marquis who happens to stand well with the Government of the day. This is one of the reasons why in the circle of English Protestant prelates there can be found persons entertaining the most widely divergent views respecting the very fundamental principles of Christianity. Their immense revenues appear to be the only substantial bond of union between them, for however differently they may think about the Trinity, or the Incarnation, or any other of the divine mysteries, all agree it is a fine thing to be salaried by the State, and that apostolic poverty is quite out of keeping with the ideas of the nineteenth century. As an interesting, if not edifying, illustration of how Parliamentary pretense are made, we think it worth while to relate a romantic incident in the life of the late Dr. SUMNER, Bishop of Winchester, a holy man, who meekly condescended to look after the spiritual interests of a number of Anglo-Saxon followers of the saintly Lutherans for the small consideration of seventy-five thousand dollars a year. As soon as he left Cambridge University, where he had studied with but indifferent success, this aspiring ecclesiastic obtained the position of private tutor to the Marquis of CONYNGHAM, which was certainly more agreeable than having to patrol the by-ways and high-ways of Dundee, ministering to the wants of the vulgar and unclassed poor. He was sent to travel through Europe with his lordly charge, and was, of course, duly commissioned to take care that the young fellow's morals were not corrupted by the profane gaieties of the various capitals he visited. It so happened, however, that while visiting Switzerland the marquis fell over head and ears in love with a young Swiss lady, who was of rather plebeian origin and was not troubled with superabundance of worldly goods. Here was imminent danger of a shocking mesalliance! A real flesh and blood marquis was actually meditating marriage with an obscure girl, who, if she did not land goats, was very possibly daughter of a watchmaker!

For many years did he perform the small duties and draw the large salary belonging to this Parliamentary episcopate, living on excellent terms, let us hope, with not to marry or gamble meanwhile! The idea of a baby solemnly pledging himself not to gamble or marry till he reached the mature age of six years, was so absurd and monstrous that the learned Judge fairly blazed with indignation, and by dint Mr. CORYTON just seven days to restore all the children to their mother or else take the consequences. We presume the reverend proselytiser was prudent enough to give them up, and that they are now in the custody of their natural guardian.

If the manager of the Kildare orphanage only spent a couple of hours walking through the lanes and alleys of Dublin he could find ten times as many little waifs belonging to his own Church who would be all the better for his protection. But then he would not have the honor and glory of "converting" them, of saving them from the errors of "Popery," and they may perish for aught he cares. His mission is to procure more Catholic babies, and to pay to frame another line of apostolic succession which will have more legal force than the one which Justice FITZGERALD tore to pieces. It is saddening to see one of the finest instincts of human nature, that which prompts man to aid the weak and shelter the homeless, thus turned into an agency for the gratification of sectarian rancor; but we suppose the proselytisers do not view their work in that light.

AN EVANGELICAL ROMANCE.

It is well known that the road to preferment in the English Church Establishment lies through the odious and drawing-rooms of the great aristocratic families. Learning, or piety, or even orthodoxy, has very little indeed to do with the advancement of an ecclesiastical dignitary compared with the good-will and favor of some duke or marquis who happens to stand well with the Government of the day. This is one of the reasons why in the circle of English Protestant prelates there can be found persons entertaining the most widely divergent views respecting the very fundamental principles of Christianity. Their immense revenues appear to be the only substantial bond of union between them, for however differently they may think about the Trinity, or the Incarnation, or any other of the divine mysteries, all agree it is a fine thing to be salaried by the State, and that apostolic poverty is quite out of keeping with the ideas of the nineteenth century. As an interesting, if not edifying, illustration of how Parliamentary pretense are made, we think it worth while to relate a romantic incident in the life of the late Dr. SUMNER, Bishop of Winchester, a holy man, who meekly condescended to look after the spiritual interests of a number of Anglo-Saxon followers of the saintly Lutherans for the small consideration of seventy-five thousand dollars a year. As soon as he left Cambridge University, where he had studied with but indifferent success, this aspiring ecclesiastic obtained the position of private tutor to the Marquis of CONYNGHAM, which was certainly more agreeable than having to patrol the by-ways and high-ways of Dundee, ministering to the wants of the vulgar and unclassed poor. He was sent to travel through Europe with his lordly charge, and was, of course, duly commissioned to take care that the young fellow's morals were not corrupted by the profane gaieties of the various capitals he visited. It so happened, however, that while visiting Switzerland the marquis fell over head and ears in love with a young Swiss lady, who was of rather plebeian origin and was not troubled with superabundance of worldly goods. Here was imminent danger of a shocking mesalliance! A real flesh and blood marquis was actually meditating marriage with an obscure girl, who, if she did not land goats, was very possibly daughter of a watchmaker!

The Sacramento Record of September 12th contained an article entitled "The Hand of Rome," which was more than usually remarkable for its bigotry, misrepresentation and bad taste. We shall quote a few of the expressions used in it as indications of the spirit manifested in the whole. Speaking of the Catholic vote in California, it says: "The Ultramontanes rally upon the Ohio Constitution; a square declaration of the doctrine that the Pope of Rome alone is authorized to plan the course of education for the children of Catholics. The Catholic Catholics merely obeyed the order of the Pope in voting against the Constitution, and would undoubtedly have voted the same way with equal readiness had they received instructions to do so." We ask our readers to note how cunningly every line of these sentences is framed so as to misrepresent the motives which actuated the Catholics and to place them in opposition to the country. Has not the Catholic citizen as well as any other a legal and constitutional right to vote upon whatever issue is laid before the people by the proper authority and the judgment suggests? Is freedom of the ballot to be reserved exclusively for members of Protestant sects and members of no sect at all? It would appear, indeed, that the Record is indignant because our co-religionists would not abandon their conscientious opinions upon an important question of principle and vote as the radical party desired!

And we would ask, what has the "Pope of Rome" to do with the Ohio Bill? Where was the necessity of dragging him into the dispute? The idea that he forwarded instructions to Ohio as to how Catholics were to vote upon the new Constitution is so absurd on the face of it as to require no comment for the ugly circumstance that it was ventilated with malignant and uncharitable intent. We venture to assert that the "Pope of Rome" was as much a stranger to the compiler's ignorance as to whether Ohio wanted a new Constitution or an old one.

Then, again, what can possibly be more offensive than this persistent endeavor to represent Catholics as people without soul or will of their own, and blindly subsiensive to the commands of a bigoted priesthood? If they were few or rare in the community, and their sentiments respecting matters of public importance were comparatively unknown, there might perhaps be some excuse for this kind of writing. But constituting as they do such a large element in the population, and coming into intimate relations with men of all classes in public and private, there is no conceivable justification for such deliberate and wanton misrepresentation.

What does the Record mean when it says: "We have no disposition to quarrel with the Catholic views of education as confined to Catholics. So confined it is purely a matter of opinion, and therefore open to discussion. But it does not happen to be so confined. On the contrary, the attitude of the Catholics is standing menace to freedom of thought and action." Is not this contemporary dare not mean that it is willing to allow Catholics to think as they please, but would prohibit them from expressing their thoughts or carrying them out in action, unless they were prepared to stand the English language: By what right or authority does the Record venture to define the amount of toleration which should be accorded to any Christian denomination in a country, in accordance with principle of whose constitution is that no person shall be molested in person or property, or subjected to any kind of disabilities on account of his religious belief? It strikes us that this is an arrogant assumption of unparalled audacity.

But, in addition to arrogance, our contemporary also exhibits very shameless untruthfulness. Hear what it boldly asserts: "Do they merely ask that Catholic children should be educated under Catholic auspices." Now we should like to learn where the smallest warrant, or pretence of a warrant, was found for this sweeping assertion. It is not supported by quotation or extract from any Catholic writer or speaker in the United States, and in consequence it is nothing better than the reckless invention of an unscrupulous enemy.

Be it remembered that all these ungenerous and unfair attacks were called forth by the single circumstance that the Catholics of Ohio voted against making secular education a constitutional obligation on the State. What, even a staunch friend of secular education might consistently do under the ground that such a thing should not irrevocably fixed by law, and that it was much better to leave it to be regulated events as they arise. If the question is not a purely political issue, and proper be decided by vote, why bring it before people at all? And as it was brought fore the people, we certainly think a Catholics, as citizens, and acting for what they believe is the welfare of the people, had as much right to vote their way as Catholics had to vote theirs. The result the election shows conclusively that a majority of the people of Ohio do not desire secular education should be made statutory. And there is nothing sacred in system of instruction that it should set against the will of the people.

SACRED HEART COLLEGE.

Sacred Heart College, corner of Eddy Larkin streets, is not very long in existence, and yet it has already acquired an enviable reputation. Its pupils assemble within its walls and receive excellent instruction from the ever-kind and zealous Christian Brothers. A branches of learning taught are such as enable the student to enter any profession, take up any vocation with fair chance success. Examinations are held at intervals, in order to ascertain with accuracy the progress which the pupils are making, and to test the efficiency of the discipline enforced. During the past week these classes have undergone a rigid scrutiny at the hands of competent judges, and their work for the term, and it is to the credit of the College it admirably. On Tuesday evening the second and collegiate and the first commercial were examined, and their answering in English and elocution, before the teachers and to the large concourse of friends present. On Wednesday evening fifth collegiate with the first and Commercial were put to the test, and on Thursday evening the third collegiate and first geometry, and the former in history, and arithmetic. The examination was even an improvement upon the first, and reflected great credit upon the Brothers, many of whom were quite young, but surprising intelligence, quickness and pacity. All the classes will be enlarged the same trial, and the aggregate of the examination will direct their future gests? Is freedom of the ballot to be re- course. Catholicity is not of the light, nor is she afraid of the mere shelves with the writings her own eminent sons the standard of Protestant authors. All she demands that her children shall be subjected to examination of creed and her history; and as to the Bible she has not the smallest apprehension. Let not the moneyed men of the city imagine that because they may not make their individual subscriptions that mar the success of the movement. Let them emphatically, but respectfully, say not. The class, the hardy sons of toil, have built up the College, our convents, hospitals and asylums, will also build the National Hall and Catholic Library. formed as a tribute of attachment to dear native land, "the emerald gem of western world," and the other as a offering in behalf of the Catholic cause.

Truly,

W. GLEASON.

Manchester (England), paper gives notice to a statement that a leading firm of Mowbray progresses to form a company of fifty men, and to start for the new El Dorado in the Spring. Each man is to contribute £200 toward the expenses.

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

Brother Romuald, of the Christian Brothers, Philadelphia, has been made Provincial of the mother-house of the Community in Baltimore.

Sister Margaret Clark, of the Sisters of Charity, died, after a lingering illness, August 23d, at St. Mary's Convent, Newark. The funeral services took place August 26th, at the Newark Cathedral.

Rev. Father Phelan, P.P., Carrickabeg, has been appointed by the Lord Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, pastor of Gammondale, vacant by the translation of Rev. E. P. Walsh, P.P., to St. Mary's, Clonmel.

Rev. Mother Boromeo Johnson, founder of the colony of Sisters of Mercy in the state of Iowa, head of the house at DeWitt, Independence, Iowa City and Davenport, died on the 2d instant. She was a native of Ireland, and forty-three years of age.

Died, August 18th, at the Presentation Convent, St. Joseph's, Terenure, Dublin, Mich (in religion Sister Ignatius), young ter daughter of the late Denis Delaney, Esq., St. Queen's county and Kilkenny, Castle-town.

Bishop Cross, of St. Paul, recently delivered the new German Catholic church of Peter, at St. Anthony's Falls, Minn. It was present at the dedication of the new church at Delano, Wright county.

From the 19th July last to the 1st of September, inclusive, the Mont Sec. Archbishop of New Orleans gave Confirmation to seven hundred and thirty-six persons in the Acadjane country and the parish of Lafourche.

On Sunday, September 6th, in St. Peter's Church, New Iberia, his Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop of New Orleans conferred the holy Order of Priesthood upon the Rev. Messrs. Coughlan, a native of Clare, King's County, Ireland, and an ex-member of the Paul Fraternity.

The following changes, says the Rose Messenger of August 29th, have been made during the past week: Rev. J. Donoghue, C. C., from Ships to Calico; Rev. J. O. C., to be P. P., at Ballygar; Rev. O'Reilly, P. P., from Barraca to the mills House and Oran; Rev. R. I. Geraghty, C. C., from Glynsk to Bilgo; Rev. J. Fagan, Oran to Castlerea; Rev. O'Hara, C. C., from Ballygar to Oran; Rev. J. Madden, C. C., from Loughrea to Carraghroe; and Rev. M. Egan, Carraghroe to Kiltoom.

Rev. Rev. Father McKeogh, P. P., Castlepollard, (nephew of his Grace, the Most Archbishop of Tuam), has been appointed for some time past, collecting for the Holy See of Roman Catholic in Castlebar. During his stay in he has been the guest of Rev. Walsh, Waldron, P.P. On the day of his departure for Ireland a grand banquet will be given in his honor by the parishioners of Colloon.

On August 16th the Archbishop of Tuam, opened by Very Rev. Thomas Macof the Irish College, Paris, and the Rev. Father Prendergast, C. C., Athenry, the parish of Aunaghdown. His administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to 1,000 children. The ceremony on the occasion was preached by Thomas McDonagh, P. P., Cummer. On the 18th the Archbishop was Dunmore by Archdeacon Waldron, P.P., and Rev. Mother Boromeo Johnson, founder of the colony of Sisters of Mercy in the state of Iowa, head of the house at DeWitt, Independence, Iowa City and Davenport, died on the 2d instant. She was a native of Ireland, and forty-three years of age.

Died, August 18th, at the Presentation Convent, St. Joseph's, Terenure, Dublin, Mich (in religion Sister Ignatius), young ter daughter of the late Denis Delaney, Esq., St. Queen's county and Kilkenny, Castle-town.

Bishop Cross, of St. Paul, recently delivered the new German Catholic church of Peter, at St. Anthony's Falls, Minn. It was present at the dedication of the new church at Delano, Wright county.

From the 19th July last to the 1st of September, inclusive, the Most Rev. Archbishop of New Orleans gave Confirmation to seven hundred and thirty-six persons in the Acadjane country and the parish of Lafourche.

On Sunday, September 6th, in St. Peter's Church, New Iberia, his Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop of New Orleans conferred the holy Order of Priesthood upon the Rev. Messrs. Coughlan, a native of Clare, King's County, Ireland, and an ex-member of the Paul Fraternity.

The following changes, says the Rose Messenger of August 29th, have been made during the past week: Rev. J. Donoghue, C. C., from Ships to Calico; Rev. J. O. C., to be P. P., at Ballygar; Rev. O'Reilly, P. P., from Barraca to the mills House and Oran; Rev. R. I. Geraghty, C. C., from Glynsk to Bilgo; Rev. J. Fagan, Oran to Castlerea; Rev. O'Hara, C. C., from Ballygar to Oran; Rev. J. Madden, C. C., from Loughrea to Carraghroe; and Rev. M. Egan, Carraghroe to Kiltoom.

Rev. Rev. Father McKeogh, P. P., Castlepollard, (nephew of his Grace, the Most Archbishop of Tuam), has been appointed for some time past, collecting for the Holy See of Roman Catholic in Castlebar. During his stay in he has been the guest of Rev. Walsh, Waldron, P.P. On the day of his departure for Ireland a grand banquet will be given in his honor by the parishioners of Colloon.

On August 16th the Archbishop of Tuam, opened by Very Rev. Thomas Macof the Irish College, Paris, and the Rev. Father Prendergast, C. C., Athenry, the parish of Aunaghdown. His administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to 1,000 children. The ceremony on the occasion was preached by Thomas McDonagh, P. P., Cummer. On the 18th the Archbishop was Dunmore by Archdeacon Waldron, P.P., and Rev. Mother Boromeo Johnson, founder of the colony of Sisters of Mercy in the state of Iowa, head of the house at DeWitt, Independence, Iowa City and Davenport, died on the 2d instant. She was a native of Ireland, and forty-three years of age.

Died, August 18th, at the Presentation Convent, St. Joseph's, Terenure, Dublin, Mich (in religion Sister Ignatius), young ter daughter of the late Denis Delaney, Esq., St. Queen's county and Kilkenny, Castle-town.

Bishop Cross, of St. Paul, recently delivered the new German Catholic church of Peter, at St. Anthony's Falls, Minn. It was present at the dedication of the new church at Delano, Wright county.

From the 19th July last to the 1st of September, inclusive, the Most Rev. Archbishop of New Orleans gave Confirmation to seven hundred and thirty-six persons in the Acadjane country and the parish of Lafourche.

On Sunday, September 6th, in St. Peter's Church, New Iberia, his Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop of New Orleans conferred the holy Order of Priesthood upon the Rev. Messrs. Coughlan, a native of Clare, King's County, Ireland, and an ex-member of the Paul Fraternity.

The following changes, says the Rose Messenger of August 29th, have been made during the past week: Rev. J. Donoghue, C. C., from Ships to Calico; Rev. J. O. C., to be P. P., at Ballygar; Rev. O'Reilly, P. P., from Barraca to the mills House and Oran; Rev. R. I. Geraghty, C. C., from Glynsk to Bilgo; Rev. J. Fagan, Oran to Castlerea; Rev. O'Hara, C. C., from Ballygar to Oran; Rev. J. Madden, C. C., from Loughrea to Carraghroe; and Rev. M. Egan, Carraghroe to Kiltoom.

Rev. Rev. Father McKeogh, P. P., Castlepollard, (nephew of his Grace, the Most Archbishop of Tuam), has been appointed for some time past, collecting for the Holy See of Roman Catholic in Castlebar. During his stay in he has been the guest of Rev. Walsh, Waldron, P.P. On the day of his departure for Ireland a grand banquet will be given in his honor by the parishioners of Colloon.

On August 16th the Archbishop of Tuam, opened by Very Rev. Thomas Macof the Irish College, Paris, and the Rev. Father Prendergast, C. C., Athenry, the parish of Aunaghdown. His administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to 1,000 children. The ceremony on the occasion was preached by Thomas McDonagh, P. P., Cummer. On the 18th the Archbishop was Dunmore by Archdeacon Waldron, P.P., and

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

Edmund Burke Roche, Baron of Fermoy, is dead.

The Crown Prince and Princess of Germany have received the Hon. Bancroft Davis, American Minister.

The Empress of Russia is expected to arrive in England October 18th, on a visit to her daughter, the Duchess of Edinburgh.

A Carlist dispatch from Tolosa reports that General Pereda carried the village of Bloudios, totally defeating ten battalions under General Moriones.

Guatemala advises say that on the 6th inst. the Guatemala Government satisfied the English flag with due solemnity, and full indemnity was paid to Mr. Magee.

The Danish Government directs its envoy at Berlin to ask from the German Government an explanation with regard to the expulsion of Danish subjects from Schleswig.

Bismarck is accused at Lisbon of the design of establishing an Iberian Union—that is, of merging Portugal with Spain. It is strongly condemned in Lisbon by the press.

In some practice shooting at Creedmoor, between the Irish and American teams, on the 22d, no scores were kept, but the Americans assisted the foreigners in almost every instance.

The Berlin National Gazette says that while the expulsion of Danes from Schleswig is a legal measure, it was strangely ed in a few isolated cases. Relations between Germany and Denmark are friendly.

A dispatch from Carlist sources denies the truth of the report that Don Carlos has been proclaimed by the branches of the Bourbon family as heir-presumptive to the throne of France.

The Lord Mayor of Dublin and the Irish Rifle Team were given an ovation by the New York city authorities on Thursday, and were subsequently received by Governor Robinson, Representative men of Brooklyn have tendered them a public dinner.

In Tennessee, on Thursday, Louisiana, the People's party and the Republicans have made a compromise and agreed upon a fusion ticket, which both parties are equally represented, both in candidates for the Legislature and for parish officers, and the compromise have been nominated on both sides.

The Russian Government has addressed a note to the German Government, hoping that the difference existing between them and the Spanish question will not impair their friendship for each other. A courteous reply has been received from Germany, assuring the Russian Government that its friendship remains unaltered.

The Russian Government, on account of the extensive emigration of Mennonites, has undertaken to exempt members of that sect from actual military service, but will hold them liable to do duty as hospital attendants. The Mennonites of the Volga district will probably consent to remain under these conditions.

The Commissioner of the General Land Office decided, September 15th, that the Rancho Los Prietos y Najá Lagrope, in Santa Barbara county, confirmed to José Domingo Lata, on 4th June 1858, shall be limited to eleven square leagues, to be selected in a compact form, north of Santa Barbara range of mountains.

French genius has another gigantic enterprise on hand. It is proposed to tunnel the Straits of Dover and unite London and Paris by a submarine railroad. Loveley the engineer, to whom the success of the project owes its birth, has estimated the cost of the work at 150,000,000 francs, and he promises to have it completed for a 4,000,000 francs to be expended in making surveys, is already subscribed.

Thiers, the Democratic Orleanist for Dictator of New York, in response to a serenade on the evening of his nomination, made a speech, in which he predicted a peaceful revolution in the Government in the direction of retrenchment. He said the general Government is falling into such a dangerous centralism, which assumes control of individual interests, is in favor of monopolies, and usurps the control of public schools, and said the Democracy would remedy these evils.

The President has answered the message of Governor Brown of Tennessee, in effect that until a new Federal Judge and District Attorney of the Western District of Tennessee, no definite answer can be given. He expresses gratification that the Governor authorities are taking prompt and vigorous measures against the outlaws, but reminds the Governor that the United States Courts alone have jurisdiction over Tennessee, as well as other States, in regard to crimes like those in question.

In Philadelphia, September 21st, the will of Miss Mary D. Brown was admitted to probate. She distributes $139,000 among various charitable institutions in that city, $20,000 to the benevolent societies of the Presbyterian, Episcopal and Catholic Hospital, and $15,000 to the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home.

Beverly Johnson, in a lengthy communication to the New York Herald from Baltimore, giving his views on the Louisiana question, considers that the President committed an error in recognizing Kellogg as the legitimate Governor. The recognition, however, having been made, it was absolute and final, and the people had no right to appeal to arms. Johnson commends the resignation of Kellogg, McEnery and the Lieutenant Governors, and the holding of a new election.

A riot occurred among the laborers on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad tunnel, in Jersey City, on the 23d. It commenced by a fight between the Corkonians and Far-downers, which was joined in by friends of the two factions, until more than fifty men were engaged in it, and stones and clubs were freely used. Many men were injured, but none fatally severely. The riot was quelled by a squad of police, and many of the rioters were arrested.

French newspapers publish St. Petersburg advices concerning the report of Bismarck's visit to Christian IX. of Denmark, looking to the incorporation of that country in the German Confederation. Correspondents say that the Danish people is irritated, and will never permit Germany to hold the key to the Baltic Sea. Some papers say that the opposition of Russia to the German policy in Spain is due to this cause.

The Vienna New Free Press says the expulsion of Danish sympathizers from Schleswig is attributable to a design of Bismarck to force Denmark to enter the German Federation. Bismarck (says the Press) proposed to King Christian that he should enter the Bund with the whole kingdom if Germany was then to cede the whole of Schleswig to Denmark, and guarantee the integrity of Denmark; that the Danish fleet should become an integral part of the German fleet, and German ports be established in Danish colonies. But King Christian declined to accept the proposal.

The golden reports from the Black Hill country have already begun to tell. A railroad of Monterey progresses to form a company of fifty men, and to start for the new El Dorado in the Spring. Each man is to contribute $200 toward the expenses.

Fearful Calamity.

FALL RIVER (Mass.), Sept. 19.—About 7 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in Granite Mill No. 1, on Twelfth and Bedford streets, but owing to a misunderstanding with regard to the location the firemen did not reach the scene until the flames had made fearful headway, and the entire Department was summoned. An attempt was made to extinguish it with buckets of water, and the door leading to the spooling room, which opens south on the lower staircase, was closed to keep back the employés and prevent a panic; but when the flames gained such headway that it was impossible to stay them, the escape of the girls in the spool-room was cut off. The terrified creatures rushed in a body for the fire-escape, but the roaring flames and blinding smoke which poured into the room forced them to the northeast end of the apartment, where there were no means of escape. Many by this time had become suffocated; others preferring death by falling to the ground, sprang recklessly from the windows, and were picked up mangled and bleeding, dead and dying.

The excitement was terrible, every mill nearly emptying its contents to swell the sympathizing crowd. All the physicians in the city were promptly on hand. Mattresses, pillows and all available articles for hospitals were promptly furnished, and the dead, dying and suffering were attended to. It is certain that nearly thirty or forty lives —nearly all girls—have been lost, while the list of wounded is probably as great.

LATER.

Further investigations seem to prove that the fire originated in the mule-room, from spoolled cotton, which was there in large quantities. The flames spread so rapidly that when the alarm was sounded they were bursting from the lower windows, and by the time the mass of the spool-room, as before related, had fallen through the floor, the entire basement of Danger was received by the girls from the other end of the room rushing to-ward her, and the cry was taken up and repeated by those in the basement. The latter were praying and lamenting, while others were huddled together in a corner, each person awaiting the turn for escape. On Wednesday evening fifth collegiate with the first and Commercial were put to the test, and on Thursday evening the third collegiate and first geometry, and the former in history, and arithmetic. The examination was even an improvement upon the first, and reflected great credit upon the Brothers, many of whom were quite young, but surprising intelligence, quickness and pacity. All the classes will be enlarged the same trial, and the aggregate of the examination will direct their future gests? Is freedom of the ballot to be re- course. Catholicity is not of the light, nor is she afraid of the mere shelves with the writings her own eminent sons the standard of Protestant authors. All she demands that her children shall be subjected to examination of creed and her history; and as to the Bible she has not the smallest apprehension. Let not the moneyed men of the city imagine that because they may not make their individual subscriptions that mar the success of the movement. Let them emphatically, but respectfully, say not. The class, the hardy sons of toil, have built up the College, our convents, hospitals and asylums, will also build the National Hall and Catholic Library. formed as a tribute of attachment to dear native land, "the emerald gem of western world," and the other as a offering in behalf of the Catholic cause.

Truly,

W. GLEASON.

Manchester (England), paper gives notice to a statement that a leading firm of Mowbray progresses to form a company of fifty men, and to start for the new El Dorado in the Spring. Each man is to contribute $200 toward the expenses.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

Each saloon-keeper of Los Angeles is required to give a bond of $500 before he can get a license.

The Yreka Journal says several more claims have been opened on the Klamath river, and agreat quantity of the glittering dust is taken out daily.

William T. Coleman will probably, this Fall, erect an elegant hotel at San Rafael.

Leland Stanford purchased the running horse "Fellowcraft" during his recent visit East, the price paid being $15,000.

The warehouses in the vicinity of Livermore are filled with wheat.

The Watsonville Pajaronian reports an average potato crop in the Pajaro Valley. It was thought a week ago that the potato crop in that section would be ruined.

A movement is on foot for organizing a joint stock company at Orangeville, Tulare county, with a capital stock of $5,000, for the purpose of erecting a public hall in that place.

Rachel Morton, a small girl of less than fifteen years of age, daughter of Mr. Marston, of Fern Valley, on Saturday last, shot a fine deer not far from her father's house.

The officers and crew of Montana gave a free dance on board the steamer on the day of the fund. The genuineness of the Santa Cruz Catholic Benevolent Association went in a body to Holy Communion in a body, and after Mass, each carrying a beautiful banner lately imported from Europe, with Father Adam Kieffer at their

IRISH LOCAL NEWS.

The Waterford Corporation has unanimously adopted a resolution favoring the principle of Lord O'Hagan's Jury Act.

Arrangements are about being made for the establishment of a local farming society in the Nenagh Union.

At a meeting of the Waterford Corporation on the salary attached to the Mayoralty was, on a division, reduced from £300 to £200 a year.

The rental of the property of the Town Commissioners of Cashel is over £1,700 a year, and their income from other sources amounts to about £700 in addition.

The parishioners of Bansaw have erected a beautiful monument in the Catholic church at Carrig-Banaow, in memory of their late venerable and respected parish priest, the Very Rev. P. Corish, Chancelor of Ferns.

The solemn blessing of the new altar of the Catholic church at Neal took place on Sunday, August 23d, in the presence of a large congregation. His Eminence Cardinal Cullen presided at the ceremony and preached the sermon.

The prices of cattle in Kerry are down to an extent that is discouraging to farmers. Cattle purchased last winter will not now realize the sums paid for them. Still the cost of fresh meat is almost as high as it was last spring.

The Cork Harbor Commissioners, on the 19th August, decided after a short discussion to take a quarry at the Limekiln Dock-yard and a half acre in extent, on lease from Captain Bury, for the purpose of supplying themselves with limestone broken at a lower rate than it costs them at present.

At the last meeting of the Galway Town Board a letter was read from Dr. Ward, M. P., announcing that he had succeeded in getting the fines for drunkenness for that borough fixed. Mr. Purdinand to compliment, moved a vote of thanks to the Rev. Ward for his exertions in the matter.

At the last meeting of the Board of Guardians of the Newbridge Union (which comprises the county Leitrim and Carnew), a resolution was unanimously passed, informing the Government that by the last Act of the Parliament of Leitrim and by the guardians of the Meath Union, which called earnestly for the extension of the electoral franchise to persons from Desmond, Meahli and Carrick-on-Shannon to Ballinamore and Bawboy.

A sad story on Sunday morning, August 23, a fatal railway accident took place on the Armagh line, about a mile from Portadown. The young man, as named Robert Clayton, about 25 years of age, was fatally injured and his companion killed shortly after the night mail passed. The body presented a fearful spectacle, the head severed from the body and terribly mutilated in all directions. An inquest was held and a verdict returned accordingly.

On Friday, August 21st, a young man, eighteen years of age, named John Griffin, was drowned at Ballymenagh while endeavoring to save some sheep from being swept away by the heavy flood caused by the recent rain. He quickly did the flood rise, that though only a foot or two deep when he entered the field to drive the sheep to a place of safety, he was carried out of his depth in a short time, notwithstanding the gallant efforts of two men named Martin Moran and Loni King to rescue him.

The Home Rulers of Tralee, it would appear, are resolved not to be taken by surprise in the next election. Many of them were negligent in getting themselves registered up to this, now put forward their claims for the October sessions. Mr. W. T. Negligan, one of the solicitors of The O'Donoghue at the recent election, took care of over thirty notices of objection to parties who claim the franchise.

The steers and the United States' direct cable was landed from the steamer Dacia on Thursday evening, August 20th, at Ballinskelligs. The Dacia proceeded westward, paying out two hundred miles of shore end and medium cable, which she had on board. She will be met by the Faraday with the deep sea portion, and when the cable is effected the latter will proceed to complete the work. No fears are entertained of full success.

The case of Mr. Henry Purcell Dicconson of Wrea Green, charged with shooting at his own housekeeper was for the second time before the magistrates at Marylebone on Wednesday, the 19th August, but was again postponed in consequence of Mr. Bloomfield's absence, which it was alleged was owing to having broken his arm a few days before. Mrs. Dalrymple, the prosecutor, said she went to the dining-room of Mr. Bloomfield's and paid her wages, and to have nothing more to do with the case. One of the magistrates said she had brought a serious charge which should be proved on another day.

The memorial for awarded to the executive, extensively signed, in favor of commuting the sentence of the Irish peasant Purtell to Dripper to one term Surrey and for the murder of his wife has proved successful. A telegram was received on Saturday cancelling the sentence of death to penal servitude for life, was received by Rev. Robert Byrne, the parish priest, who promptly took proper steps to have the sentence transferred to the result of the memorial. It is not in favor. Dripps is over seventy years of age, and spent some time in America.

Mr. Edmund Mc. A. W. Power, Secretary of the Waterford Ariel Bicycle Club, left Waterford on the 14th August, for the Agricultural Show, Dublin, on his velocipede to Cork. They started from Ballybeat at three o'clock P. M., and arrived at the Bell Bing, 8 o'clock at 5:45 P. M., having ridden a distance of twenty-four miles in one hour and forty-five minutes. The return journey was made against a very strong head wind and a fifty road, in two hours and five minutes. We believe this is the quickest ever run yet made by any member of the Waterford Ariel Bicycle Club. Mr. Wilkins, on his velocipede had a 50-inch driving wheel, and Mr. R. W. Rose's a 48-inch, of the celebrated pedal make.

Mr. Keleh, one of the Meath coroners, held an inquest on the 16th August, at Griffith's Cottage, on the body of a gentleman found dead in his bed at the hotel on Thursday Morning, 17th August. On examination of some papers on the body found that his name was Gerald Griffin, and that he had lately been engaged collecting rents for Mr. Hamilton near Drogheda. A post mortem examination of the body was made by Dr. Aikin, of Odenalls, and the following facts deposed to in evidence, and a verdict returned to the effect that death had resulted from pulmonary apoplexy. The deceased, Mr. Gerald Griffin, was a native of Foynes, county Limerick, aged about sixty years, and a cousin to the celebrated writer and author of that name.

The Temperance Defence Association founded in Monaghan the other day, has already begun work in a most useful direction, by calling attention in a printed form of "expressment" which the land-agent for the Bath Estate, Mr. Trench (saints of evil omen), is circulating for signature by all tenants from year to year. It is a fearfully wordy and enormously lengthy document in which the land agents of the notorious "Leinster Lease" is termed to account. Within the past week Mr. Trench has seen the necessity of considerably modifying the terms of the document, which, as it originally stood, called on the tenant to sign himself of the Ulster Tenant Right, and even of the rights which Parliament quite recently conferred upon him.

If the Limerick watchmen have their faults, their redeeming qualities are more than sufficient to atone for their shortcomings in the eyes of their fellow-citizens. On August 19 one of the body came before the Town Council with a tale of heroism which must have made the bosoms of the audience swell with pride. Attached to the force the previous night by nine herculean dragoons, he put the whole detachment to flight, captured two whips and inflicted on one of his flying foes a blow which he fervently trusts has made its mark. As a test of personal daring, there has been nothing to equal this since Sir John Falstaff, on Gadsby Hill, paid with his single sword seven of those eleven knaves in Kendal Green. The watchman asked for no reward and received none—not even permission to get drunk.

One of the narrowest escapes from being gored to death by a furious bull occurred in two men at Heywood on Sunday morning, August 23d. The beast broke from a field in which it was grazing, and entered the lawn in front of the house. The herder (Mr. Carthy) and a man named Dwyer went towards it to drive it out, when the bull lowered its head and seemed determined to show resistance. Dwyer then left the field, and Carthy, who was made a stroke at the bull, but instead of striking it he struck with limestone behind and snapped in twain. The bull then became infuriated and tossed Carthy and Mahoney one after the other, basic over head. The fortunate part of the episode here occurred. Both men by rambling in the hedge found, and, seeing to be tossed up again, when happily a favorable opportunity blew off both their heels, and the distressed bull caressed madly after them, flinging them about with his horns, and inflicting on the one severe injuries. While he was thus engaged in the pastime of "thinking," the two men escaped out of the lawn.

At the Rochdort (county Westmeath) Petty Sessions a man named Patrick Corrigan was charged by Mr. Reddy, of Castlelost, with having attacked his house. The complainant stated that on the previous day the prisoner went into his yard, and, after first using violent threats, picked up stones and commenced throwing them, then attempted to enter the house through a window, and, having failed in his effort, he procured a crowbar with which he attempted to break open the door. Witness, who was alone in the house, succeeded in calling the police, who arrested the prisoner. He believed the outrage was committed in consequence of his having removed a tenant Regan, with whom the prisoner lodged. The tenant gave witness some annoyance, and he threatened that he would put him out with him. The prisoner was sentenced to six weeks imprisonment, and ordered to find bail to keep the peace or go to jail for an additional month.

There was a meeting at Skibbereen on the 20th August for the purpose of presenting Rev. Mr. Davis, C.C., with an address and testimonial. Among those present were McCarthy Downing, Esq., M.P.; Eugene Downing, Esq.; Henry R. Harmion, J.P.; A. Hutchins, J.P.; F. Cormac, J.P.; Thomas Downes, solicitor; John Hennessy, T. C.; Timothy Donovan, W. Oakley, C. Burke, George K. Hardiman, Provincial Bank, etc. Mr. McCarthy Downing having been called to the chair, Mr. Downes to the vice-chair, he (Mr. Downing) alluded in eloquent and touching terms to the long connection which existed between them all and the reverend clergyman, and to his long-tried friendship in the cause of the Church and of the people, and proceeded to read the address, and at its close handed it to Rev. Mr. Davis. A purse containing the amount subscribed—one hundred and fifty sovereigns. The reverend gentleman, who seemed much affected, then delivered his reply. The party then sat down, on the invitation of Mr. Davis, to a sumptuous and elegant dejeuner.

At the Dundalk Petty Sessions, on August 21, Mr. Moynagh, solicitor, applied to the bench for a summons against Mr. Edward Carlton, proprietor of the Dundalk Herald, to show why any information should not be taken against him for publishing a libel of Mr. Moynagh. The alleged libel was contained in a report of the trial of Murphy vs. Calian, M.P., (at the recent assizes), and was as follows: "Mr. Father preceded into the witness-room drawn up on cumpled paper dated the 25th of February, 1874, and signed by the solicitor, Mr. Moynagh." In one document Captain Nolan seemed into an engagement that he would retire should Mr. Calian come forward at the next election, and in the other Mr. Calian undertook to act as counsel for Captain Nolan and give his legal and professional aid and political influence in his behalf. The latter document purported to be signed by Mr. Calian, and in reply to Mr. Falkiner, he denied all knowledge of them—he had never signed them, and that the late libel trial in Dublin. He had been told of their existence by Mr. Moynagh, and he had also been told that that libel implied that he had forged Mr. Calian's name; but the assurance of the solicitor to that effect was that it imputed anything to Mr. Moynagh. The latter intimated that he would receive his applesauce next court day.

The death is announced of the Rev. Jas. McGourty, P. P., of Ballymacnan, in the Archdiocese of Armagh, after a short illness. The funeral took place on 17th August. At about eight o'clock on that morning a vast crowd of people, not only from this parish but from the surrounding parishes of Glenavy and Carrickmore, began assembling at the residence of the deceased to pay the last tribute of respect to the good parish priest who had lived so long in the midst of them. Father McGourty was in the 74th year of his age and nearly fifty years in the sacred priesthood. He was a native and parish of Ballymacnehan. He was educated at Sayscop, in Normandy. He was ordained priest in Ireland, whence he was removed to his native parish, where he lived upwards of forty years as parish priest. He built the lovely thatch-roofed chapels of his early days no less left the handsome and beautiful slated edifice which is the pride of the land. He was a good and zealous priest, a clever scholar, could preach fluently in Irish, English and French, and a gentleman of taste and refinement.

At a great lodgement was held by the whole body of the Catholics of Armagh at the notice of the magistrates of the city on Saturday, 15th August, in their interference with a peaceable Catholic procession—especially so compared with their conduct on former occasions in the case of processions which were Protestant, disorderly and illegal—all the respectable men of the city assembled on Friday, August 21st, at the Orangeman Bobbin, Armagh, to determine what mode of notice they should adopt in the present circumstances. It being moved by O. Grosse, Esq., solicitor, and seconded by J. McMahon, Esq., Rev. P. J. Byrne, Administrator, took the chair amid universal applause. The chairman explained the objects of the meeting. Rev. Mr. Coyne proposed the first resolution: "That we, the Catholics of the city of Armagh, hereby record our sense of deep indignation at the uncalled-for, and what we consider illegal, interference on the part of W. M. Miller, Esq., R. M., and Ferdinand Lenhane, Esq., J. P., with perfectly peaceable processions in the exercise of their right to walk through the streets of the city on the 15th instant." The resolution was seconded by J. Dignam and unanimously passed. The second resolution, proposed by C. Grosse, Esq., solicitor, was: "That, while men of no usurly disapprove of public processions of a party nature in the present divided state of feeling in Ulster, we nevertheless consider it our duty as citizens to assert for ourselves the same right to assemble or march in public without molestation or interference on the part of the authorities that is accorded to all other subjects of this realm." The resolution was seconded by Mr. McCauley, and adopted unanimously. A number of gentlemen were then chosen to form the committee, and at the close of the meeting a subscription list was opened to defray whatever expenses the committee may incur in taking action. Though this subscription was only opened, about £30 were handed in by a few gentlemen.

A telegram states that the Protestants of Ballyshannon have unanimously condemned an attack which has been made on the Rev. Mr. O'Flaye, P. P. of that place, by some ruffians in the neighborhood. It appears that there was a mission of the Franciscan Fathers in the parish of which Mr. O'Hare was pastor, and it attended into the neighboring parish of Dunmore, which forms apart of his charge, and which from the latter place, which is about four miles from his residence, about ten o'clock at night, an attack was made on him and his companion, a missionary priest, which resulted in the latter being severely shook at night, an attack was made on him and his companion, a missionary priest, which resulted in the latter being severely shook and had got within half a mile of Ballyshannon when a dozen ruffians appeared in front of the car and commanded the driver to stop. The driver, instead of complying, put the horse to his speed, and the latter, hurling both, and pursued the car, which stopped at the police barrack. Father O'Hare, indignant at the insult offered to himself and his friend, and not conscious of having in any way given offence to the whole fraternity, and thinking it might be a mistake on the part of his assailants, here got off the car and inquired if he had ever done anything to merit such treatment. He had scarcely uttered the words when two savages (I use that term nothing else) dashed at him, exclaiming, "You're the man we want;" and, seizing him by a mother (which he was wearing to save him from the night air), succeeded in bringing him to a half-stooping posture, and then commenced battering his bare head with those murderous weapons called "cudgels." They also dealt him some savage kicks about the legs. Its more than probable that, had Father O'Hare got off the car when first attacked, about half a mile from town, he would have been murdered outright; as it is, he is very severely bested. His received more than a dozen blows, and would have killed a man of ordinary strength; but Father O'Hare is a powerful gentleman, and I hope his strength of constitution will soon bring him safely over the effects of this murderous attack. He would have secured both his assailants but that his sustance, which he had not left aside at Dunmore, prevented the use of his legs, and so the two murdering villains escaped. The police are actively on the track of the telegram referred. The respectable gentleman who forwarded it to the Freeman's Journal office informs us that the people are really wished to dissociate themselves from any participation in a sympathy with this outrage, and hence the expression of condition which has been telegraphed before the circumstances to which it owes its rise were known.

Catholic Science.

In Italy educated men in every department of science and art are uniting in organizing societies for the purpose of promoting the Catholic element and affirming Catholic doctrine in discovery and research. Perhaps the greatest movement in this way has been begun by the Catholic physicians of Italy. They have the advantage of a very high order of educational training, and as a body are very influential. Hence in recognizing this and realizing how greatly useful to the Church they might make themselves, that a Napolitan physician, Alfonso Travaglini by name, founded on the 7th of last March, the Academy known as that of Saint Cosmas of St. Thomas Aquinas, a Christian association of medical men, to be styled "The Philosophico-Medical Society." It combats the prevailing materialism of the Italian schools of medicine. Its programme, printed in one of the Catholic papers, did not excite general attention at the time. From the latest news we have received the Philosophico-Medical Society has in five months gained well nigh the first place in Italian estimation, and has in that time a very large number of members, and on the 2d of July received the crowning honour of Papal Brief of congratulation and encouragement. Giving a first leader to the subject, the Unita Cattolica qualifies the Academy as "Catholic science—and thereby bring its advantages within the reach of all."

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. MARY'S ACADEMY,
SANTA CLARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS ACADEMY, CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS of Notre Dame, is opened to afford an opportunity of securing to the young ladies of the Pacific Coast a solid and refined education. The plan of studies is such as to prevent the pupils from wasting their time on superficial branches, tending to unfit them for their allotted sphere—to which belongs the duty of forming the heart. For the purpose practical lessons in the art of domestic economy will be given.

Year commences on the 15th of August, and terminates about the 30th of June.

TERMS:

| | |
|---|---|
| Entrance Fee (to be paid but once) | $10 00 |
| Board and Tuition, per month | 18 00 |
| Washing, per month | 2 00 |
| Vocal Music, per month | 1 00 |

For further particulars apply to the Superioress of the Academy, or to the Sisters of Notre Dame, San José, Santa Clara, or Gilroy.

1911

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who completed the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Agencies.

The Commercial Course is the most practical ever established for the accommodation of those who wish to acquire a good business education in as short a time as possible.

Pupils prepare here in thorough manner for the various branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS

(Invariably half-yearly and in advance):

Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per session.....$200 00
Classic, tuition of instrument, per month, 1st & 2d do.....2 50
Modern languages, Music and drawing form extra charges.

Studies will be resumed on the 6th of August.

1910 REV. B. LUTTY, President.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN SANTA Barbara, a climate unsurpassed in the most delightful and healthy part of the city. The grounds are extensive, and the building is large and convenient.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS

(Invariably half-yearly and in advance):

Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per session.....$200 00
Classic, tuition of instrument, per month, 1st & 2d do.....2 50
Modern languages, Music and drawing form extra charges.

No extra charge for visits from Mercy Headlawyer, etc.

For further particulars apply to
1736 SISTERS OF CHARITY, Santa Barbara, Cal.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,
SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THE EIGHTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the first Monday of August.

The object of the institution is to give a good English, Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical Education, at the lowest possible rate. The Fathers of the Catholics—and thereby bring its advantages within the reach of all.

TERMS:

Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....$10 00
Tuition, Board and Washing, per session, of 10 months.....150 00
Music, French and German form extra charges.
Use of Bed and Bedding, if required.....10 00

The above terms may be made semi-annually in advance.

Apply to the Fathers for medical assistance, and supply other articles, etc.

Terms must be paid in advanced by the College: for the purchase of necessary articles, a sufficient sum must be deposited.

For further particulars apply to
REV. P. J. O'KEEFE, O. S. F.
Santa Barbara, Cal.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

DEGREES CONFERRED

Rev. JAMES McGILL, C. M.
1620-27 President

C. DESMOND

PRACTICAL HATTER,
No. 5 New Montgomery Street,
GRAND HOTEL BUILDING.

TO SELLING OFF HIS LARGE AND VARIED Stock of Hats and caps of late and fashionable styles in order to room for a large re-store now in transit. These goods

Will and Must be Sold,

So regardless may be expected. You can secure yourself of the very best of this statement by a personal examination. The store embraces every variety, from the FIN BUT SILK HAT to $3 2nd HAT.

All who have dealt with DESMOND will vouch that

His Hats are fair when colors fade;
They neither bend nor bother;
Of perfect shape and finest grace
Those from DESMOND the Hatter.

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORated according to the laws of the State and empowered to confer academical honors, will commence its Fifteenth Annual Session on SUNDAY August 16, 1874. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once.....$10 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter.....62 50
Washing, per quarter.....12 50
Physicians' fees (unless it may be preferred to pay the bill in case of sickness) per quarter 2 50
Piano, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges, but there is no extra charge for the French, Spanish or German Languages, nor for Plain Sewing and Fancy Needlework.

Payments are required to be made half a session in advance. Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the session. 687-tf

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE,
SANTA CLARA,.....CALIFORNIA.

Under the management of the Fathers of the Society of Jesus.

THE SANTA CLARA COLLEGE WAS FOUNDED in 1851, and in 1855 was incorporated, with the privileges of a University. Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classic and Scientific.

The College buildings are large and commodious, and pleasantly situated. They cover the entire square, a swimming pond, one, afford every facility for exercise.

The College possesses a very complete philosophical apparatus, a Cabinet of Natural History, a Library containing over 8,000 volumes, and a Gallery of Fine Graphy, Photography and Surveying. Assaying of Ores, Practical Chemistry, Mineralogy, etc.

Principal Office, 409 California Street, SAN FRANCISCO.

OFFICERS—PETER DONAHUE, President; A. S. BRYANT, Vice-President; C. H. CUSHING, Secretary; T. EYLAND, of San José, Assistant Secretary.

A. K. MYLOTT, Special Agent, San José.

EDWARD MAHONEY,
Corner Market and Santa Clara Streets,
SAN JOSE.

DRY GOODS, CLOTHING, BOOTS AND SHOES, Etc.

☞ TAILORING.—Clothing cut and made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. 438-tf

L. CHOPARD,
WATCH AND CLOCK MAKER & JEWELER,
No. 806 Santa Clara street,
Alameda Block, SAN JOSE.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE,
First Street (bet. Santa Clara and St. John street)
SAN JOSE, CAL.
BARKER & TOWNE.....Proprietors.
☞ Coach and Carriage attend all trains. 681

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
BENICIA.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED BY THE Sisters of St. Dominic, and offers to families healthy and accessible town of Benicia. The plan of education pursued in this Academy is such as to combine the usually taught in the most approved seminaries of the United States. The French and Spanish languages will be received, but, for the sake of uniformity, no pupil will be allowed to attend at the regular religious services of the Institution.

The scholastic year, comprising six months, opens on the first Monday in August, and closes on the last Thursday in June. No deduction will be made if the pupil is withdrawn before the termination of the scholastic year. Pupils will be received at any time, the fee to commence from the date of entrance.

TERMS

Per annum (payable half-yearly in advance):

| | |
|---|---|
| Board and Tuition | $250 00 |
| Entrance Fee | 10 00 |
| Physician's Fee and Medicines | 10 00 |
| Vacation at College | 40 00 |
| Day Scholars | 40 00 |
| Modern languages, Music and drawing form extra charges. | |

Studies will be resumed on the 6th of August.

1910 REV. B. LUTTY, President.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who completed the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Agencies.

The Commercial Course is the most practical ever established for the accommodation of those who wish to acquire a good business education in as short a time as possible.

Pupils prepare here in thorough manner for the various branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS

(Invariably half-yearly and in advance):

Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per session.....$200 00
Classic, tuition of instrument, per month, 1st & 2d do.....2 50
Modern languages, Music and drawing form extra charges.

No extra charge for visits from Mercy Headlawyer, etc.

For further particulars apply to
1736 SISTERS OF CHARITY, Santa Barbara, Cal.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,
SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THE EIGHTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the first Monday of August.

The object of the institution is to give a good English, Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical Education, at the lowest possible rate. The Fathers of the Holy Father as "stupendously beautiful."

We call attention to one passage: "Illustrious Philosophico-Medical Society has a rule not to admit any member who does not adhere to the theory of St. Thomas Aquinas in respecting the union of the soul and body, and to the Aristotelian philosophy of matter and form." The Holy See notes and approves this exclusion: "Illustrius viduemus vos eo tenere sodales vobis adhaerere non admittens qui tendit ad propugnatari sunt Angelici Doctoris principia de anima intellectiva et unione ejus corpori humano per substantiali forma et materia prima." Could not a like association be formed in America? There is literary talent enough among the medical men of Baltimore to begin it.—Baltimore Mirror.

Spiritualism and Madame Bassine.

Among other explanations given of Marshal Bessine's escape, not the least interesting is one which is rapidly gaining ground in mystical circles—namely, that it was effected by spiritual agency. Madame Bassine is, it is asserted, a powerful medium, and in constant communication with spirits. Nothing, then, is more likely than some friendly and athletic spirit lifted the prisoner bodily from the Fort St. Marguerite, and deposited him without further trouble in the fields of the steamer waiting to receive him. To some persons this may appear surprising; but it must be remembered that a whole time ago a lady of considerable dimensions is alleged to have been conveyed from her own house in London, and dropped on to the supper table of some friends at a distance, by the spirits. Moreover, as it is well known, there is nothing the spirits take greater delight in or perform more neatly than the release of prisoners bound by ropes. Confinement of any description is utterly opposed to all their tastes and sympathies, and they will excite the most difficult knots for the performance of voluntary liberty to their spirits. Again, they take a positive delight in lifting heavy weights, and Marshal Bazaine, notwithstanding his portliness, is a little light as air compared with some of the big babies and other furniture they are in the habit of raising without difficulty. Altogether the spiritual theory of the escape is, to say the least, not a bit more marvelous than that given by the late captive himself, and we shall probably hear before long of other escapes accomplished in a similar fashion by spirits unite with women in exerting their powers of locomotion.—London Observer.

Death of Oliver Sadlier.

It is our painful duty to announce the death of Oliver Sadlier, brother of Denis Sadlier, senior member of the Sadlier firm. He was born near Cahul, county Tipperary, in 1833, and came to this country at the early age of six years, in 1836. Like his brothers, Denis and the late lamented James, he was an industrious and self-made man; and upon his life in connection with the Sadlier firm he was deservedly esteemed. For some years past failing health compelled him to forego the duties of his position, much to the regret of the members in the company. He never married. Agreeable in disposition, loved by friends, Sisters, and all with whom he came in contact, and vexed with fine capacities, and with a very extensive knowledge on all Catholic subjects, his death will be a loss to the community which cannot easily be filled all over the States and Canada. His loss is deeply felt by his brother, Denis Sadlier, as well as by the firm. The funeral of the counties Catholic households who have had the pleasure of reading the many excellent Catholic literature which has issued for a quarter of a century and more from the Sadlier press. We could not offer a prayer over the repose of the soul of Oliver, while they mourn for his loss. We are confident that the readers of the Pilot will join in offering our Father in heaven to shed the light of the Resurrection and the Life of consolation on his brother and relatives in their bereavement.—New York Tablet, Sept. 12.

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. MARY'S ACADEMY,
SANTA CLARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS ACADEMY, CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS of Notre Dame, is opened to afford an opportunity of securing to the young ladies of the Pacific Coast a solid and refined education. The plan of studies is such as to prevent the pupils from wasting their time on superficial branches, tending to unfit them for their allotted sphere—to which belongs the duty of forming the heart. For the purpose practical lessons in the art of domestic economy will be given.

Year commences on the 15th of August, and terminates about the 30th of June.

TERMS:

| | |
|---|---|
| Entrance Fee (to be paid but once) | $10 00 |
| Board and Tuition, per month | 18 00 |
| Washing, per month | 2 00 |
| Vocal Music, per month | 1 00 |

For further particulars apply to the Superioress of the Academy, or to the Sisters of Notre Dame, San José, Santa Clara, or Gilroy.

1911

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who completed the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Agencies.

The Commercial Course is the most practical ever established for the accommodation of those who wish to acquire a good business education in as short a time as possible.

Pupils prepare here in thorough manner for the various branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS

(Invariably half-yearly and in advance):

Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per session.....$200 00
Classic, tuition of instrument, per month, 1st & 2d do.....2 50
Modern languages, Music and drawing form extra charges.

No extra charge for visits from Mercy Headlawyer, etc.

For further particulars apply to
1736 SISTERS OF CHARITY, Santa Barbara, Cal.

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,
SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THE EIGHTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUTION, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the first Monday of August.

The object of the institution is to give a good English, Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical Education, at the lowest possible rate. The Fathers of the Holy Father as "stupendously beautiful."

We call attention to one passage: "Illustrious Philosophico-Medical Society has a rule not to admit any member who does not adhere to the theory of St. Thomas Aquinas in respecting the union of the soul and body, and to the Aristotelian philosophy of matter and form." The Holy See notes and approves this exclusion: "Illustrius viduemus vos eo tenere sodales vobis adhaerere non admittens qui tendit ad propugnatari sunt Angelici Doctoris principia de anima intellectiva et unione ejus corpori humano per substantiali forma et materia prima." Could not a like association be formed in America? There is literary talent enough among the medical men of Baltimore to begin it.—Baltimore Mirror.

Spiritualism and Madame Bassine.

Among other explanations given of Marshal Bessine's escape, not the least interesting is one which is rapidly gaining ground in mystical circles—namely, that it was effected by spiritual agency. Madame Bassine is, it is asserted, a powerful medium, and in constant communication with spirits. Nothing, then, is more likely than some friendly and athletic spirit lifted the prisoner bodily from the Fort St. Marguerite, and deposited him without further trouble in the fields of the steamer waiting to receive him. To some persons this may appear surprising; but it must be remembered that a whole time ago a lady of considerable dimensions is alleged to have been conveyed from her own house in London, and dropped on to the supper table of some friends at a distance, by the spirits. Moreover, as it is well known, there is nothing the spirits take greater delight in or perform more neatly than the release of prisoners bound by ropes. Confinement of any description is utterly opposed to all

The Priest Leauch Again.

The Government has at length captured the obnoxious person. The failure of the Sunday attempt was made up for by success on the following Wednesday. The manner of the priest took place under rather exciting circumstances. After his Mass he received a sick call. Meantime he heard that all the entrances of the church were watched by policemen. In spite of this he did not allow himself to be led astray from the path of duty, which made him attempt, at least, to visit the sick man. He took the Blessed Sacrament and put on the church door, which opened upon the street, when a policeman came towards him exclaiming, "Reverend sir, you are a prisoner." The priest stood still, and said quietly that he might perhaps be allowed first to visit the sick man and give to the last consolations of religion. Either the priest's request nor the entreaties of the crowd which had assembled, had heed the policeman, and as the former proceeded to replace the Blessed Sacrament in the tabernacle, the constable, however, the officer (who was a Protestant) was encountered by one of his fellow-police Gallagher, who, on hearing the case, persuaded him to allow the priest to perform his duty, and afterwards to take him in custody. When this was agreed to, the priest, attended by the policemen, visited the sick person, and soon after wards marched off to prison.

Such is one of the many similar occurrences that are daily taking place in Germany. Now a priest is imprisoned; now he is deprived of his salary, now he loses his frontiers either of a district or of the Empire. To this we must add the judicial sentences of such persons as dare to express sympathy for the imprisoned priests on their return to their country. Such a case occurred lately in the district of Aldenhoven. A priest was called for at the house of a dying man, and was attended with the ordinary ceremonies. He was followed repeatedly, and repeatedly plunged into a cold tub of water, and then put to bed, apparent with a consent floor. Of course the poor child died.

And there were two hundred and fifty other children in this same promiscuous den run by Father Barnardo—or rather by his Barnardo—for the Superintendent Barnard was away, and his brother, a cattle dresser by occupation, was in charge, and did the boasting to death of little Giuseppe. And the New York Legislature gives money to this precious pair, and allows them to hang out themselves Christians make private collections for the "heathen Chinee" against Popery!" And all this happens in the city of New York, in the year of grace 1874!—N. Y. Freeman's Journal.

Cossack or Republican?

The recognition of Spain appears to be a fait accompli with all the powers of Europe, excepting only that of the United States. The more coincidence comes as a serious reminder of that famous saying of Napoleon the Great, uttered by him when he was on a visit and a State prisoner in the island of St. Helena. As the Père Lacordaire said of him in one of his immortal sentences, speaking from the pulpit of Notre Dame, "After having unconsciously accomplished the work of God, he (Napoleon) disappeared, that work being done, and waned like a setting sun in the decline of the ocean. Then misfortune heaped the soul to illumination when his prosperity are unseen!" And there, in that "cloud of life," which, according to the text, "has a mystical lore," among his other memorable utterances Napoleon the Great is on said—"Fifty years hence, and Europe will be either Cossack or Republican." Whether we have yet here journeyed the turning-point when there come the momentous alternative. Which is it, Republican? In the sense of sovereignty for Autocracy or for Republicanism? Cossackised, a few years back, was the Polish Republic in Europe, the same has since befallen that minister of a Democracy, the Republic of Mexico, which has been followed up with so many other Southern Principalities by the omnivorous greed of the Italian Government.

Royal France, Imperial France, Constitutional France, has again, for the third time, become at least nominally Republican—Republican, that is, underthe guise of military dictatorship. Hanging, like Damocles' sword, by a single hair, by Catholic Spain is, so far as its nominal Government is concerned, delivered over, during these last three or four years, into the clutches of Democracy. Surrounding Powers, the chiefs of which are Emperors, Kings, Queens, and which are Catholic, have once the guilt of the revolutionists. Under another name, Republics are accepted, or, in other words, recognized, as necessarily, in this way, an example, a reproach, and a menace to the Catholic world is to other coming, or, at any rate, possibly revolutionalized. The Russian Autocracy is consistent among the European Recognition. If all the others assent, the Russian does not assent. It is a violation of his own antecedents—this pattering with Utopian unreality, this royal and imperial Philippics of republics, which are simply poisons of successful recognition.—Daily Register.

NOW IN SAN FRANCISCO.

DR. J. A. SHERMAN,
Specialist in Treatment of Rupture,

RESPECTFULLY ANNOUNCES THAT HE has permanently located in this city, and may be consulted at his branch office,

No. 40 Montgomery St., corner of Pine,

Where desirous of obtaining the benefit of his experience and assistance in the adaptation of his Improved Elastic Medical Appliances, will receive at the age of the patients or duration of the disease.

Photographs of bad cases of

RUPTURE

before and after treatment and CURE, can be seen at his office. Descriptive pamphlets[illegible] on application or receipt of one cent.

THE CURE is effected by[illegible] external application of MINERS' RUBBER CEMENT.

OFFICE:
No. 40 Montgomery street, San Francisco.
ORIENTAL OFFICE:
No. 1 And street, New York (formerly 91 Broadway). 1911 ly

AGENTS FOR "THE MONITOR."

Altamont—W. H. Wright.
Alvarado—Mrs. Amelia Wilson.
Amador City—M. G. Mc-Donald.
Antioch—James Walsh.
Auburn—James Walsh.
Auburn—F. Griffin.
Bodie—Mrs. Daly.
Bodie—Alameda Co.—M. Sullivan.
Byron Springs—P. Thrpey.
Benicia—Charles Gong.
Benicia—Thomas Hamilton.
Benicia—Thomas Keefe.
Centreville—Thomas Keefe.
Cherokee—M. Brennan.
Cherokee—Thomas Keefe.
Carson City—Thos. Roche.
Carson City—Thos. Keefe.
Cortez Grove—Thos. Mc-Namara.
Clarksville—J. Delaney.
Clarksville—Thomas Keefe.
Dunnigan—P. Ryan.
Dutch Flat—Jas. Mc-Mullen.
Dutch Flat—Thomas Keefe.
Downieville—P. Ryan.
Downieville—Thomas Keefe.
Dry Creek—Thomas Keefe.
Elk Grove—Wm. Ryan.
Elk Grove—Thomas Keefe.
Folsom—Thomas Keefe.
Forest City—P. Ryan.
Forest City—Thomas Keefe.
Georgetown—Thomas Keefe.
Gilroy—James Mahoney.
Grass Valley—P. English.
Grass Valley—Thomas Keefe.
Grizzlyville—D. Mc-Donald.
Gold Hill—E. Welch.
Haywards' Plat—M. Powers.
Hollister—J. Smith.
Healdsville—Mrs. Daly.
Jackson—Thomas Keefe.
Jose—M

LATE IRISH NEWS.

From the Dublin Nation.

The national movement for Home Rule is in full swing in the provinces. In all quarters preparations are being made for great open-air demonstrations in favor of it, and of such demonstration has already taken place under the most encouraging circumstances, and with the most enthusiastic results.

Very Rev. Martin Crane, O.S.A., the Bishop elect of Sandhurst, Australia, has just returned from America, whither he went about a year since to collect funds in aid of the building of his beautiful Augustinian church in Thomas street. He will be consecrated by his Eminence Cardinal Cullen some time in the end of September. The number of Irish priests who have been made bishops of late in Australia is now quite remarkable.

Mr. Disraeli, it appear , is to pay his first visit to this country some time in September. It would be well if he could manage to have got the leaders of the Tory party in the North to act cheek and jowl with them for the event. A private meeting of the Conservatives of Belfast and the surrounding districts was, we are told in that city on Monday, August 31st, for the purpose of considering what steps should be taken to welcome the Premier and the outcome of this private deliberation seems to have been a resolution to entertain him at a grand banquet in the Ulster Hall. The country, it is needless to say, is profoundly indifferent to the whole affair.

On the 30th August the Protestant and Presbyterian clergymen of Belfast reviewed their contingents on Shankill Road and Hanlon's Corner, and marched past the Lord Lieutenant, for the purpose of adding two names to the roll of Knights. The Earl of Carrysfort and the Marquis of Londonderry were the "fortunate" Knights in question. The usual ceremonies were observed, and not one of those who were present is reported to have had his gaiety.

The temperance movement in Dublin has given further signs of renewed life, in accordance with the resolution of the bishop of Ossory, it has been resolved to ask his Eminence Cardinal Cullen—and there is no doubt he will accede with the request—to convene an aggregate meeting of the Catholics of the metropolis at which some measures should be taken for the suppression of drunkenness, and to prepare a memorial to Parliament in accordance with the objects of the meeting."

The Belfast strike, after having lasted for eight weeks, came to an end on the 28th August, the workmen having gained the British Association credit for the success of the struggle, but the real truth appears to be that the operatives were worried out and practically accepted the masters' terms. They got no concession for which the latter had been in maledition in regard to the starting of girls, and they had to submit to a cut-half as regard to the men and boys.

The strikers lately preached at Belfast, and the topic of discussion at a meeting of the Council of the Catholic Union of Ireland, held on September 1st, "A meeting unanimously adopted the following resolution, embodying the principles on matters connected with religion, addressed to the Catholics of Belfast and Ireland generally by some of the speakers," was made and a resolution was passed condemning and repudiating, expelling and the theories and principles enunciated in the address of Professor Tyndall.

A demand for Home Rule has been made by Almon. The local District Council of that substantially French province, elected by ballot, has endorsed Home Rule, and, by a unanimous vote, adopted a resolution expressing a hope that the people it represented would thereby be induced to take measures for a separate constitution and of a local parliament. The Governor immediately protested against this resolution, and no doubt Bismarck will be vastly annoyed by it for he has already, by the unscrupulous use of the German rule, been absolutely disowning several provinces upon the Rhine and Moselle.

On Friday, August 23d, Mr. John O'Connor Power concluded at Keighly, in Yorkshire, his series of able and useful addresses in behalf of home rule which he has been delivering in the principal towns in England. In Keighly he had to encounter much opposition, and indeed, which he succeeded many Englishmen; and the result gave the death blow to the branch of the Home Rule League in the town.

Mr. Disraeli, it appear , is to pay his first visit to this country some time in September. It would be well if he could manage to have got the leaders of the Tory party in the North to act cheek and jowl with them for the event. A private meeting of the Conservatives of Belfast and the surrounding districts was, we are told in that city on Monday, August 31st, for the purpose of considering what steps should be taken to welcome the Premier and the outcome of this private deliberation seems to have been a resolution to entertain him at a grand banquet in the Ulster Hall. The country, it is needless to say, is profoundly indifferent to the whole affair.

On the 30th August the Protestant and Presbyterian clergymen of Belfast reviewed their contingents on Shankill Road and Hanlon's Corner, and marched past the Lord Lieutenant, for the purpose of adding two names to the roll of Knights. The Earl of Carrysfort and the Marquis of Londonderry were the "fortunate" Knights in question. The usual ceremonies were observed, and not one of those who were present is reported to have had his gaiety.

The temperance movement in Dublin has given further signs of renewed life, in accordance with the resolution of the bishop of Ossory, it has been resolved to ask his Eminence Cardinal Cullen—and there is no doubt he will accede with the request—to convene an aggregate meeting of the Catholics of the metropolis at which some measures should be taken for the suppression of drunkenness, and to prepare a memorial to Parliament in accordance with the objects of the meeting."

The Belfast strike, after having lasted for eight weeks, came to an end on the 28th August, the workmen having gained the British Association credit for the success of the struggle, but the real truth appears to be that the operatives were worried out and practically accepted the masters' terms. They got no concession for which the latter had been in maledition in regard to the starting of girls, and they had to submit to a cut-half as regard to the men and boys.

The strikers lately preached at Belfast, and the topic of discussion at a meeting of the Council of the Catholic Union of Ireland, held on September 1st, "A meeting unanimously adopted the following resolution, embodying the principles on matters connected with religion, addressed to the Catholics of Belfast and Ireland generally by some of the speakers," was made and a resolution was passed condemning and repudiating, expelling and the theories and principles enunciated in the address of Professor Tyndall.

A demand for Home Rule has been made by Almon. The local District Council of that substantially French province, elected by ballot, has endorsed Home Rule, and, by a unanimous vote, adopted a resolution expressing a hope that the people it represented would thereby be induced to take measures for a separate constitution and of a local parliament. The Governor immediately protested against this resolution, and no doubt Bismarck will be vastly annoyed by it for he has already, by the unscrupulous use of the German rule, been absolutely disowning several provinces upon the Rhine and Moselle.

On the 30th August, after a lingering illness which she bore with Christian piety and resignation to the divine will, there passed away from this life to eternity Margaret, the beloved wife of Michael Doherty, in the 64th year of her age, beloved and respected by all who knew her, and sanctified by the rights of the Holy Roman Catholic Church, to whose communion she died, that when there was no other more attached or a more constant, faithful and affectionate wife or kinder mother. Her remains will be sadly missed and regretted, not only by her surviving family and long circle of friends, but by the poor, whose moments of sorrow are so deep as they are sincere and lasting, for she was always a sincere friend, and always a most beautiful benefactress, with a heart as soft and sympathizing as a child. No one ever went empty-handed from her. During her last illness she had one consolation, however, which is only given to very few—namely, of having her son, the Rev. E. Doherty, C. C., Drangan, by her bedside, to gently close her down her pillow, and breathe forth a prayer for her to the throne of mercy. He offered up a happy release from the miseries of mortality on every anniversary morning before her death by her beloved husband, and even on attending of her demise, and so constant was his attendance on her, that during the last days of her life, he never hardly left her bedside until he gave her the last absolution, read the prayers for the dying, and near her breathe forth her pure soul into the hands of her Maker. The vast multitude from all quarters, of every class and creed, that accompanied her remains to the new family burial ground in the chapel yard in Pubnaad, fully testified to the regard and esteem she was held in by all who knew her, so that seldom if ever such a funeral passed through Paddy's—Tipperary Free Press.

A further and rather excited controversy has taken place between Father O'Keeffe, of Callan, and the Local Government Board, in reference to his claim to the use of the Catholic chapel in the Callan workhouse for the purpose of ministration to paupers who might send for him. The Local Government Board remited the reverend gentleman of his removal from the chaplaincy, as a clergyman no longer qualified to perform the ordinary duties of a Roman Catholic priest, and inform him that his admission to the workhouse conferred on him no title to the use of the chapel. In reply Father O'Keeffe insists on his right to minister to an inmate who had called for his assistance, and in the apartment provided by the Union Guardians for that purpose, and protests in the strongest terms against the assumption of the Local Government Board that he had become a canonically suspended priest, and their arbitrary dismissal of him from the chaplaincy of the Union.—Cork Herald.

The Cost of Impositions.

It is so obvious that physical and constitutional vigor is the best defence against disease, that even the readers of drastic purgatives advertise them as tonics, combustibles and inexpressibles, in the hope of winning the confidence of the public in the destructive and pernicious potions. It is amusing to note how these impostors imitate and copy the language in which the medicinal properties of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are described. Although the effect of their reaping stratagem is to destroy the tone of the digestive organs and the bowels, and to rob the system of its vital strength, they are universally recommended to the weak and prostrate victims of disease as stimulants! It is time this humbug and deception were put a stop to, and in the interest common sense of the American people the imposition should be exposed. By their publication, falsehoods should be exposed; by their publication, falsehoods should be suppressed; by their publication, truth should be established. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is, beyond question, a stimulant. It has a spirituous basis, and that basis is a pure whisky, which is highly recommended for sanitary principles through every part of the system. The vegetable tonics and regulating properties of the Bitters would be comparatively inert if their vehicle, in its speed, carried them to the parts where they are required by the stimulating agent. Thus, the whole compound is a tonic, and a powerful one, when subjected as a means of purification to the test of chemical analysis. It is the only effective remedy for fever and ague, bad blood, malarial fevers, and for those who are gripped, racked and tortured by the agonies of dyspepsia, constipation and biliousness. Ask the opinion of the millions of the parties who put it forth, soon and in their own words, and they will tell you that Hostetter's Bitters, the great sanitary stimulant of the age, is the best preventive of fever, ague, a whole some, vitalizing, renovating preparation.

Subscriptions Received.

Vallely—P. McElroy, ..... $7 65
Sweeney—J. A. Hopkins, ..... 2 00
Roney Byrne, ..... 2 00
Ryan—John O'Brien, ..... 2 00
Nagle—John A. Nagle, ..... 2 00
Lawrence Power, ..... 2 00
Patrick Kennedy, ..... 2 00
D. McCarthy, ..... 2 00
James Sweeney, ..... 2 00
Mahoney—Jeremiah Mahoney, ..... 2 00
J. Walpole, ..... 2 00
Thomas A. Cox, ..... 2 00
John Kane, ..... 2 00
Peter O'Connor, ..... 2 00
P. H. Ahern, ..... 2 00
D. Ahern, ..... 2 00
Thomas Sheridan, ..... 2 00
John Leahy, ..... 2 00
Mrs. McSweeney, ..... 2 00
Patrick Sweeney, ..... 2 00
Tenaville—McDonnell & Bros. ..... 2 00
James Roney, O'Connell, ..... 2 00
Walker Brown, ..... 2 00
Farrell Mahoney, ..... 2 00
James Daley, ..... 2 00
Brosnan—James Connolly, ..... 2 00
J. A. S. Trant, ..... 2 00
T. Donovan, ..... 2 00
Michael Donovan, ..... 2 00
Daniel Riordan, ..... 2 00
Mrs. Whitney, ..... 2 00
D. W. McCormack, ..... 2 00
J. Rosenthal, ..... 2 00
Daniel McBride, ..... 2 00
Michael Mahoney, ..... 2 00
H. White, ..... 2 00
Shaw's Flat—P. Miller, ..... 2 00
St. Helena—F. D. Bassett, ..... 10 00
Mrs. Bassett, ..... 2 00
Marsh Hi-def, ..... 2 00
Oakland—Lawrence Sweeney, ..... 2 00
Knoxville—James Nolan, ..... 2 00
Cloverdale—P. C. Power, ..... 2 00
St. Louis, Missouri—Timothy Donohoe, ..... 2 00
Mrs. T. J. Mahon, ..... 2 00
Mrs. Catherine Cronin, ..... 2 00
George Bell, ..... 2 00
Mrs. Bell, ..... 2 00
Capt. John Griffin, ..... 2 00
Portland—Edward O'Brien, ..... 2 00

Wholesale Market Report.

MERCHANTS EXCHANGE, SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, Sept. 24, 1874.

FLOUR—The demand was moderate but confined fair, while for export the inquiry has been moderate. We quote: Superfine, $4 @ $4 25; extra, $4 50 @ $4 75; family, $5 @ $5 50.

WHEAT—The market has ruled quiet and at former prices. Shipping grades have ranged from $1 47½@$1 50. At the close the market is quotable at $1 70 @ $1 80.

BARLEY—The demand has been very good as no change is noted. We quote the range for old brewing at $1 70@ 75; new, $1 60@$1 65 @ $1 80.

OATS—Are in fair demand and unchanged in rates, during the past week. Quotable at the close at $1 @$1 40 @ $1 60.

RYE—Only receipts have been light during the past week, with a good demand. Quotable at the close at $1 @$1 10 @ $1 20.

STRAW—Quotable at $20@ 25 bale.

CORN—Yellow sacked, $1 80@ 1 85; $1 @ 1 90 lbs.

BEANS—The following are the last sales: Pinks, $3 @$3 50; Bayo, $3 @$3 50; Red, $3 @$3 50; Lima, $4 @$4 50; Butter, $3 @$3 50.

SEEDS—Quotable at $2 @ 2 50 lbs.

POTATOES—Sweets, $1 @ 1 50 @ 1 90 lbs; Peerless, $1 @ 1 50; Green Peas, $1 @$1 50; Rinbeck, —@—; Early Rose, $1 @$1 50; Burbank, —@—; Summer Queen, —@—; Peerless, 75 @ 1 00; Peerless, 75 @ 1 00; Peppers, 75 @ 1 00; Peppers, 75 @ 1 00; Peppers

SEPARATION, FEDERATION AND REPEAL.

A Free Discussion Between Pat, Hugh and Owen.

[CONCLUDED.]

Owen—At our last meeting, Pat, you argued that simple restoration of the Constitution of '82 would mean restoration of the penal laws, restoration of Protestant ascendency and other undesirable things.

Pat—I did; and so it would.

Owen—Why need that be? Could not England restore to us the Constitution defined in the phrase "King, Lords and Commons of Ireland," without casting us back on penal laws and Protestant ascendency?

Pat—Of course she could, if she liked—just as she could give us separation if it so pleased her. But what she might do if she liked is not the question here. Your point is that we have a strict claim on her for a certain set of restoration which she ought to perform whether she likes it or not, and which we ought to try to extort from her. Might she not, therefore, say if she found herself put under compulsion to effect this change: "I will give you what you ask—a Restoration pure and simple;" I will restore exactly the state of things I took away, and I will restore it to the class of people from whom I took it—the Orangemen and the Protestants of Ireland?"

Hugh—I think so. If you go upon the strict right and letter of the thing she might say precisely. The only guarantee she had for the preservation of the connection we took away was connection in the '82 period consisted in the attachment felt for her as a Protestant power by the Protestants of Ireland, and in their desire to keep the heads of their Catholic fellow-countrymen under their heels. It would be a very different thing to give a repeal amount of legislative independence to a Parliament from which Catholics would not be excluded, a Parliament in which Catholics would constitute the majority, and in which the full spirit of Irish nationality—the spirit of Wolfe Tone, Fitzgerald, Emmet and Davis—would find ample expression. I do not think reason why I believe England will never consent to grow what our simple Repealers are simple enough to think they can extort from her by legal and constitutional agitation.

Pat—Yes and I, Hugh, are pretty well agreed upon that point. But before say more in said I what is current erroneous idea to which our friend Owen has given expression. He says that the Constitution of '82 is defined in the phrase "King, Lords and Commons of Ireland." It is not, any more than the British Constitution is defined in the phrase "King, Lords and Commons of England." The Constitution in each case consists of a number of unwritten articles and customs, and some of those customs in Ireland were of such a nature as to render the independence of the Irish Parliament little better than nominal.

Hugh—Well, gentlemen, it seems to me the Irish people, if they could exchange the present Federation—have yet to be discussed—for a Parliament which would be the legislative organ of a confederacy of Irish and English communities, would take part in the management of Imperial affairs only—who would have votes and vote on one class of subjects and questions, would be represented in the most complicated and fantastic fashion—which would prove exceedingly unsatisfactory, and which in the end would never be put into practice.

Pat—I grant, my friend, that there are difficulties about it; but there are difficulties in the way of every scheme that can be invented for giving local legislation to Ireland and still preserving the connection between the two countries. If you want to get rid of all legislative difficulties and constitutional entanglements with England you will have also to be content with the present system of incorporation, which deprives me of all political power, or go in for your friend Hugh's plan of separation.

Hugh—Exactly so. That is the real state of the case.

Owen—But how do you show that any difference, plethora or entanglements would arise under the latter system?

Pat—I will tell you. But I will bring out my answer by asking you some questions. You will admit, I suppose, that in order say form of connection there would be a class of affairs in which the two countries would have a joint interest; that is, foreign matters—war or peace, commercial treaties, and so forth—they should act as 1 unit; otherwise, you know, the connection would be no connection at all.

Owen—Yes, I quite admit that.

Pat—Well, then, would you allow England to have the uncontrolled management of those affairs common to the two countries?

Owen—To tell you the truth, I do not think that any interference we could make them would be of much use to us, but it would be a humiliating thing for us to surrender to her the right of acting in those matters without any interference on our part.

Pat—Quite so. Is it not, therefore, desirable that Ireland should have some representation in the assembly which would have to decide upon them?

Owen—I think I must admit that some such representation would be desirable.

Pat—If so, you admit the principle of the Federal arrangement. If so much were done between the two countries the establishment of the details would present no insuperable difficulties.

Owen—But the country in '82 managed to get along without any such Federal arrangement, and at the same time avoided coming into collision with England on any imperial question.

Pat—There you are mistaken. The two Parliaments differed on the question of the extent of power to be given to the Prince of Wales, who was about to be appointed Regent during the illness of his father, whose mind had become deranged. This was a very important question. How the contention might have ended if it had to be settled between them there is no knowing; the difficulty was disposed of by the recovery of the king. But there is more than this to be said. I ask you to remember what I stated before—that the Act of the '82 period was a Protestant Parliament, a Parliament of thoroughgoing loyalists. If that Parliament existed for eighty-six years without getting into collision with England on any imperial question, it does not follow that an Irish Parliament of our own time, possessing an equal amount of legal independence, would prove equally in accord with English notions.

Owen—Is it your view, then, that the '82 arrangement had in itself the seeds of dissolution, and could not last?

Pat—I firmly believe that in order to render it permanent it should have undergone some alteration in the direction of Federalism. A reform of the Irish Parliament was necessary and inevitable; England dreaded that reform, believing that it would take Ireland in the direct line of separation, and she resolved, therefore, to destroy the Parliament and effect a legislative union. If the Irish Parliament had entered into some sort of Federal connection with England, which would have given her assurance of a continuance of the connection between the two countries, it would have had our native legislature from that day to this in the Old House on College Green.

Owen—O'Connell was the man, and you he asked not for Federalism of any sort, but for Repeal of the Union.

Pat—I believe as firmly as I believe any other thing in politics that if the Government in O'Connell's time had said to him, "Come, Dan, we are satisfied to repeal the Act of Union if you will enter into some plan with us for the establishment of a Federation of the two countries in Imperial affairs on the terms mentioned," O'Connell would have jumped at the offer. He asked for Repeal of the Act of Union because he knew the repeal of that Act was a necessary preliminary to the reconstitution of an Irish Parliament in Ireland.

Owen—And why cannot you content yourself now with asking just the same thing.

Pat—Because we gather wisdom from experience. We know well that the very shadow "Repeal of the Union" has an ominous sound in English ears. We know that to the most powerful statesmen it is a demand for separation. We believe that Federation would be the arrangement into which the two countries would enter after a repeal of the Union, and we think it wise to present to the Federal idea prior to the Repeal mind. Owen—I will confess it seems to me that the unconstitutional Irish Parliament would probably enter into some Federal arrangement with England, and, in that view of the matter, I think that we may have to ask for Federation rather than "simple Repeal."

Hugh—Fairly spoken, Owen. I retain my preference for my own plan, but I have no hesitation in saying that, on the ground of legal and constitutional agitation, not "Repeal," or "simple Renoration," as it is called, but a Federated Irish Parliament is the thing to aim at, and the only thing worth the most and people of England.

Owen—I accept the verdict. Some other then quekuon.

Hugh and Pat—Agreed. Good by, and "God save Ireland."—Dublin Nation.

GARIBALDI.

A book has lately issued from the press of Turin, entitled "I Mille; or, Tos Thousand." The author is the notorious Giuseppe Garibaldi, the same who was made by the late Emperor of the French the glory of having founded the modern kingdom of United Italy. Garibaldi from within, Louis Napoleon from without, conquered and established the present rule of Victor Emmanuel over Sicily, Tuscany, Modena, Parma, Lombardy, Venice and the States of the Church. Louis Napoleon reaped the reward, first in the the acquirement of Nice and Savoy, and subsequently in the catastrophe of Sedan and the loss of all his Empire. Garibaldi, more disinterested than Louis Napoleon, only gained the applause of revolutionists, the hatred of Victor Emmanuel, and Aspromonte. Apparently contented with the rock of Caprera, he receives occasional plaudits from Republicans in Italy, who still hope to see the realization of his services, and he has occupied his leisure time, after the example of other great men, in concocting a book after Disraeli write novels, the late Earl of Derby translated Homer, and Mr. Gladstone translated the most wonderful lines concerning the immortal bard of Greece. Louis Napoleon published reminiscences records ioccoing the history of France and Bonaparte. Way should not Garibaldi read his own compositions in book-making as well as in statecraft or in fighting? Accordingly, Garibaldi, to the astonishment, it is to be presumed, of his friends and foes, and certainly without occasioning any regret, has by his advocation, entered the field of literary adventure and has written a book.

As a pecuniary speculation the "Mille" of Garibaldi cannot be termed a failure, inasmuch as his admirers have been found willing to lay out twenty francs for the writer by subscribing some twenty thousand francs for copies. The book is reported to be satisfying a true picture of the hero himself, and as enabling the world to estimate truly the moral worth of a man whose ambition rester largely into the chronicles of modern Italy, and cannot be passed over in silence by the historian of the future. It is true that this volume throws no new light upon the character of its author, for many history of Garibaldi have already been given to the public, to which the so-called hero showed very plainly of what sort of clay he was made. Yet, letters after all may be asserted to be hasty productions, and it is as well to have the more deliberate and elaborate declarations of a matured volume. And, from the "Mille," it appears perfectly plain that the intemperate blasphemy of the lecture of Garibaldi is the genuine and abiding sentiment of the man. In the very preface he cannot refrain from denouncing Christianity and the Head of the Church in terms which, while they most appear to English Protestants needlessly offensive and impolitic, are positively revolting to Catholics. He speaks of the "putrid foundations of priestly lies," of the "supreme corruptor of Rome," the present venerated Pontiff, Pius IX.; and of "the bishops and similar agents of darkness." The Catholic clergy, according to Garibaldi, "condemn to flames every one who refuses credit to their lies." They are "accomplices in brigandage." They employ "all methods of iniquity in order to corrupt the nations." Garibaldi warns his readers to beware of the cunning priests, and exclaims in wondering regret: "The people go to Mass, Confession and Communion, and kiss the hand before this pestiferous animation of hell." The General of the Jesuits is described as having "an immense paunch," and is styled "general of robbers." "The darkest, most degrading and most unbridled tyranny" was the work of priests." The Pope is an "idol of mud," and the clergy are "the spawn of humanity." The priests are "preachers of immorality, puffers of a celestial paradise, by means of which they cheat the people." They, the priests, deserve the "beatitude," they "produce the sacred name of God with their bells, their symphonies and their apparatus of most splendid luxury." The Pope is described as having "a privileged belly," and "it takes little knowledge to enable one to perceive that a priest is an impostor." The expression "ragghed priests" (preti ibridati) is employed with "Garibaldi. The ministers of religion are also, "an impudent canaille," who "fatten on the shoulders of the mob," and "drain their power, in spite of every sort of almost incredible wickedness, a wicked-ness of which human nature could scarcely form an idea." Of course the priests are "evil being," an essere malefico. "There is not the smallest virtue in a priest or a prelate, sides which is not a focus of reaction and a school of ignorance and treason against the country." It is Garibaldi's opinion that liberty should be denied to priests as being worse than vipers or rubbers. "I ought to be says, "that there ought not to be liberty for mosquitoes and vipers, for assassins and robbers, or for priests, and the last the latter I hold to be as much hurtful as the former, or even more mischievous."

There is plenty of blasphemy in Garibaldi's book to please, doubtless, his fellow-Masons, and there is much ignorance and the unblushing effrontery with which the hero of revolution and champion of the rights of man attacks the foundations of the Christian religion and slanders the ministers of the Church, exhibiting the most unbridled hatred towards its head, Pius IX. The Pope and the clergy can afford to suffer slander of such a kind, and the open insult from a man who thus openly betrays his unreasoned hatred of Christianity. And strange to say, the priests are not the only persons whom Garibaldi exercises his supreme powers of vituperation. The present rulers of Rome, the actual Ministers of Victor Emmanuel, receive their share of abuse and condemnation. Of Rome itself he prophesies the victors of the 20th September, 1870:

"The new comers! The Minister of the Italian Government! The men of the Papal Conclave! The Cardinals! A council of Love Church perfect at the forthcoming Church Congress, to be held at Brighton. The applications for tickets have already made it evident that there will be a strong muster from both of the Ritualistic and of the Low Church clergy, and a collision between the two is almost inevitable. So strong are the apprehensions of disorderly meetings that the propriety of abandoning the Congress altogether has been considered. Many persons, however, think that to give up the Conference would be more damaging than a squabble with the Ritualists, and it will, probably, therefore, be allowed to go on.

THE SOUL'S FAREWELL TO EARTH.

From dusky clouds the waters moan in flowing
His shadow beams across the brow of day,
And evening hours their weary flight are wingeing
To Lethean realms, unknown and far away;
Unpeopled woods and lonely mountains sighing,
For angels hold the lives of years and sighs
That bend us to the past, and strive to cheer us
With hope of future years these visions bring.

The dews' sighs come floaty out upon the silver,
And to the loving sound their breathless meet,
And sweet and soft and fond and far regretsy,
Like down to pleasant dreams" and slumbers sweet.
The fragrant trees a mournful dirge in sighing—
Earth's sweet repose and silver hours are breast;
The nothing waves to ocean's arms are lying,
And Nature strives to lull them all to rest.

Then, come, O soul of mine, while all are sleeping
When warblers sweet fold each flight-weary wing,
When angel guards their voiceful watch are keeping
Around the prison of Nature's beauties—

Come, let us think on death, while night is watching
Bright dewy blooms 'round Mary's earthly shrine;
For so these flowers shall in their hours are wreathing,
So 'round our tomb the ivy soon shall twine.

Ah, yes! my soul, at eve for distant dawning
And sad and fond farewell we fain must say;
To all of earth, then, with that tearful mourning,
Dear soul, will thou dreary life frame of clay.
And farewell to all of Nature's beauties—
To all the friends we love so dear, alas!
To all our gladsome tasks and pleasant duties,
Which we in the sunshine hand in hand pass!

And farewell to all the golden gleamings
That tinge the paths where we were wont to roam!
And farewell to all the bonds around us twining,
From angel eyes that gem the azure dome.
Farewell to life, to gladsomeness to sorrow—
To heart and to soul farewell, to hope and prayer,
To all the thoughts which we were wont to borrow
From gloomy rift and blooming mountain side.

Farewell to all! Yet, soul, why thus repining?
Which, as they fall upon earth's bosom, sound—
Like footsteps of sad mourners, softly treading
Beneath the sunless land and moonless pass?
My soul, we weep, yet way this sombre feeling?
It is because we leave our all on earth?
Ah! no! because we are not all we are stealing
Aright angels whisper of our heavenly birth.

And can a child of heaven be sad when leaving
The land of tears, where ever sorrow's wave
To gather mortal's brow and blooms, for weaving
The crown which she will wear in her true home?
No, no, my soul, let not the shadows so grieve thee
By Jesus' love and grace, will show at last
The way or tread the path that leads to heaven,
Where all is joy and where the storm is past.

Oh, Jesus! great that there may be no weeping
When we thy creatures, speechless clod alone,
Thy children's voices hear in their true meaning,
Shall kneel before Thine awful judgment throne!
On them accept the pleadings of the living—
Thy Son shed once our sins—"Thou cursed, depart!"
But those to our sight—our sins forgiven—
Shall hear the blessed and loving heart.

Oh! take to where Thy face in light is beaming
Fills souls with joy which they can never say;
Where through an endless day bright angels kneeling
Wait to Thy glorious throne their reaping cry.
Where their bright wings shall never o'er us, shield,
Nor
Our happy souls from earth's forgotten pole—
Where farewells tremulous on Time's sad fleeces are yielding
To an eternal—"Welcome home again!"

—Boston Echo, Gold Hill, Nev.

Henry Ward Beecher on Irishmen.

At a New England agricultural fair last week the prize animal exhibited was Henry Ward Beecher. He was invited to make a speech, and he made one—one that outdid the intelligence of his hearers—one need higher than even the average hard-faced, hard-headed, hard-hearted Yankee farmer. One would think that Mr. Beecher could select some harmless subject to talk upon that would make his yahoos laugh and applaud, but no; he must needs be drilled on the pleasures of farming, stock-raising, female voting, artificial praying, or a hundred other things; but no—he must leave these rational paths and select as his fatal topic—the Irishman! And he say about him? Here are his words:

"How do things look in New England? Does a great deal about the degeneracy of the times? Is there a good deal about the genuine stock being exported largely? Are the old ones are dying out, and their sons gone West and South, and all over the world. I am told there is a large foreign population in the place of the native Yankee stock changing hands, going into the hands of the foreigners. Well, you should remember that that was the way it was in old times. The Indians had it first, and then your ancestors came and took your wives and farms, Scotch, Irish, English and all sorts, and you are the result. A tol-rably good outcome. I am told that the Irish element is now young men's places in New England? Irish? Well, I have seen some mean Irishmen, and I have seen some mean Americans, and so far as I can see, you can't improve an Irishman that has got a good heart and a good belly and a reasonably good disposition. Irishmen are of a good deal more account as a good school, and if he don't die of whisky in ten years he has got a good New England stock."

Mr. Beecher made his point there; this laugh was what he wanted. In the course of his speech, a little later on, he drew and told that the country was about to be ruined, and the country was "in the ditch this country ruined three times, and it has been made up my mind that it stands centre-bore and takes a ten-inch shell as same about the Irishmen. We have seen him laughed at by foolish people hundreds of times. What a mistake they made! He put him through a good school," says Mr. Beecher. What sort of school, may we ask? The sort that turned out Daniel O'Connell? No, no; that will never improve the Irishman, "you can improve an Irishman that has got a good belly," Ah! Mr. Beecher, why say that? And what does it mean? What sort of a thing is a bad belly? "If he don't die of whisky in ten years he has got a good New England start." This was the funny part—Mr. Beecher keeps his eye to the tail of his epigrams. Trank heaven, the Irishman is not going out of society, but is occupying the land once held by Mr. Beecher's Puritan ancestors—who have died out and are dying out for want of vim and morality. Farther on Mr. Beecher says:

"Although it is not drone that makes a man, it helps him amazingly. You see people when they are first brought face to face with their legs of bran, and you see what they are when their sisters have dressed them. Now a man's face is like a doll, with legs of bran, and it is the institutions of this country that dress him. It is he has the church, the school and books, and they have been studied long enough, they will turn him out a well-dressed citizen."

It will be seen from this that Mr. Beecher sees up his private and personal reflections in his public speeches. Bolls, indeed, like preachers, are "poor naked things" until "their sisters have dressed them." Mrs. Hooker "dressed" a brother of hers in fine style lately; and Mrs. Stowe has been up the country doing her best in bible her reverend brother's "legs of bran," and turn him out again "a well-dressed citizen."—Boston Pilot.

AN IRISH MARTYR.

Dr. O'Hurley, Archbishop of Cashel.

From Annals of Our Lady of the Angels:

Dermod O'Hurley was born in a village of the diocese of Limerick, known as Lyscedone. His parents were farmers of the good old Irish sort. William, his father, was steward to the great Earl of Desmond, and his mother was an O'Brien. Dermod was pious, studious boy, and his parents, having given him the best education they could, sent him abroad, where he took a doctor's degree in civil and canon law. He gave public lectures on philosophy for four years at Louvain, and subsequently he held the chair of canon law at Rheims. Like so many Irish who shed lustre on the Continent, he sighed to greet ability, eloquence and knowledge, a wonderful humility, simplicity and purity of heart. Such a man was not meant to remain in obscurity, and in 1580 Gregory XIII. made him Archbishop of Cashel. To reach his diocese, however, was a matter of no small difficulty and peril. The penal laws were in full force, and he had to travel under either of being betrayed by the sailors on landing, or of being discovered beforehand by the spies who abounded on the French coast. After some time he found a ship at Dunkerque, bound for Cork, and the good owners consented to take him; and after a tempestuous voyage he landed at Drogheda, and thence proceeded to Waterford. Here he was joyfully received, and remained in comparative safety for four years. But how many attempts were made by English spies to seize him; but their devices were frustrated, and he was able to baffle them as no other people, since the days of Israel, have been assigned—a mission which will be carried on to the end of the time. Meanwhile the persecution

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCT. 17.
Sunday—Twenty-first Sunday After Pentecost.
12—Monday—St. Luke, Evangelist.
13—Monday—St. Peter of Alcantara, Confessor.
14—Wednesday—St. John Cantius, Confessor.
15—Wednesday—Martyrs of the B.V. M. St. Hilarion, Abbot. San Ursula and Companions, Virgins and Martyrs.
16—Thursday—Vigil of the Blessed Sacrament.
17—Friday—Feria.
18—Saturday—St. Raphael, Archangel.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....OCTOBER 17, 1874.

TALKING NONSENSE.

The Louisville Catholic Advocate, a journal conducted with much learning and ability, is just now engaged in exposing certain unbelievers, who, as they say, mix up their false opinions and sentiments which it claims to have stolen from leading articles and editorial matter that appeared in the columns of the New York Irish World, if memory serves right, in Kentucky.

These publishers are genuine, which is the reason to doubt, we should imagine, in characterising them and a disgrace to Catholic journalism. Our contemporaries are a cranky old character, as well as a brave and pugnacious one, and they would scorn as an imputation to be cowardly ruffian the person who, in Louisville, could take steps to tie-up an English barrack or arsenal now or again by way of keeping their hands ready of the approaching revolution, laying up a barrack or arsenal implies, at the very least of sense, the imposing of a regular or less number of sleeping and unarming men. The thing would be murder of the most horrible and revolting description, whereas we have to do with men and men, and those guilty of it would be deservedly branded with eternal infamy. There is little fear, however, that Irishmen will ever do anything of the kind, although unfortunately there is a lack of self-reliance among the "red-hotting" political journalists to urge them on to it; they will leave diabolical business of that nature in the revolutionists and assassination department of the European continent.

In denouncing advice like this we are one, heart and soul, with our friend the Catholic Advocate; but there is another portion of its condemnation with which we consider us unjust and even ridiculous. The Advocate says, substantially, that whoever indorses Irish soldiers in the English army to abandon their flag and take sides with their own country in a rebellion against the British constitution commits a mortal sin, and, if unrepentant, merits everlasting punishment. This is to the whole course of history as to the best of such flearing and of balderdash. Would any man in Prussia not only indorse the manly conduct of Americans who fought for King Georges during the Revolution—and there were thousands of them—deserved damnation for quitting the service and espousing the cause of their country, or that individuals counseling them to do so lost all title to salvation? Yet King George's rule over the American colonies was a hundred times more legitimate and righteous than that of Queen Victoria over Ireland is at the present day. We think that the man who instills the principles of patriotism into the breasts of his countrymen, driven by necessity, to choose, like the sons of the British army, and tells them plainly it is their duty to stand by their native land when the proper time for a struggle comes, does a most honorable and praiseworthy work, and deserves the grateful record in the annals of Ireland.

That is a better and far more practical way of aiding in the achievement of Irish national independence than urging unarmed and undisciplined peasantry to a conflict with the armed legions of England. In fact, we firmly believe that the only reasonable chance of a successful and justifiable revolutionary movement on the part of Ireland is the wholesale defection of Irish soldiers when England is about engaging into a foreign war. England has not, and cannot have, any claim upon their allegiance when such a contingency arises, and the land of their birth or present them from helping to make it free. The Catholic Advocate totally spoils the good effect of its criticisms on the doctrine preached by the Irish World when it indulges in such absurd and revolting nonsense, for it may do much greater mischief thereby to the cause of religion and morality than could well be remedied in a year by the most devoted Catholic journal printed in America. We have no doubt our New York contemporary will take advantage of this mistake and will turn the tables completely upon its adversary. We say those few words with a view to the best desire to interfere in the controversy, and solely with the intention of correcting what we consider a harmful error.

THE MORALITY OF MASONRY.

The conversion of the Marquis of Ripon to the Roman See is a great many discussions in the English newspapers concerning the morality and morality of the Masonic Fraternity. General acquiescence with the remarkable circumstance that the distinguished nobleman in question owes his change of faith to great measure to studies which he pursued with the intention of writing a book vindicating Masonry against the hostility of the Catholic Church, has lent considerable sharpness and pungency to the large mass of correspondence called forth. We need not direct attention to what we are sure must strike everybody—namely, that the conversion of the Marquis indicates with infallible certainty that he must have discovered that the mystic brotherhood had the worst side of the argument and the Catholic Church the best. Never before, we believe, has the issue between Masonry and Catholicity been so clearly defined and so ably debated as it has been of late in England. It is really cheering to notice that the Catholic writers have used the weapons of logic so scientifically that they have forced their opponents into what are more properly called apologies than retaliating arguments. The utmost the London Times can say for the Fraternity is that it is an "inoffensive organization," maintained chiefly for social and benevolent purposes; which may be true enough of the body in England, but certainly cannot apply to the Continental portion of it. And even while penning this feeble defense the same paper cannot help sneering to very cutting terms at the aprons and other regalia with which the brethren bedeck themselves, so that it evidently regards them as so much meaningless trumpery. Upon the moral aspect of the case it frankly admits that "in the abstract it may be wrong to pledge one's self to a secret society, or to take an oath concerning things trifling or unknown." This "it may be" is simply a half-hearted way of saying it is, and Cardinal Manning says the same thing.

Were, then, we have conceded the whole position maintained so strenuously by the Church. The Catholic Church, on broad principles of morality which cannot be impugned by any intelligent person, could not allow that a man does a right—that is, a moral and conscientious right—to do what he knows to be wrong either in the conception or abstract. We cannot understand how any person possessed of the slightest idea of the sacredness of moral obligations could attempt to justify an oath demanding secrecy as to things the precise nature of which is unknown at the time the pledge is administered, and consequently we cannot understand why all Christian denominations should not be as opposed to secret societies as Catholicity is. All the objections to the lethal oath, as rash and immoral, be added the incontrovertible proofs of the irreligious character of the association, which have been repeatedly furnished by Catholic writers, the brutality of the Church becomes at once justified. Educated people all over the world will in the course of time come to look at the question in debate from this standpoint, and when they do, they may safely fail to recognize the righteousness and wisdom of the policy of the Catholic Church. The conversion of the Marquis of Ripon, and the public discussions to which it has given rise, will assuredly work much good for the cause of truth and faith, and we should not wonder if they brought about, at no distant period, the downfall of the Masonic Society.

BISMARCK'S INTRIGUES.

There can no longer be any uncertainty about the end to which Prince BISMARCK is bending his every energy and the greatest power in Europe, but so preponderatingly great that her influence shall be supreme over the whole continent. To accomplish this the Chancellor is all of a kind tending to strengthen the Government against the people and make it able to coerce them when occasion requires. This is, of course, despotism, but as yet the people do not appear to have realized that fact, being blinded by the splendor of their recent victories; and they seem willing to submit to anything from the man whose genius raised them to their present rank among the powers of the world. How long they will remain in that frame of mind it is hard to foresee.

WANTON TYRANNY.

Our readers may not, perhaps, be aware that among the enactments with which the anti-Catholic policy of Prince BISMARCK has blessed the German Empire is one forbidding the residence of foreign ecclesiastics within Prussian dominions. One might imagine that the word residence would be interpreted so as to mean a prolonged stay, in order to prevent inconvenience to transient visitors who could have no possible connection with politics. This leniency, however, would not suit the despotic Chancellor, and he has, apparently, resolved that his persecuting laws shall be enforced to the very letter. A member of any sect, let it be ever so strange, unnatural or immoral, an infidel even, a man of the most infamous and criminal antecedents, may live in Prussia as long as he likes without being molested; but let a Catholic ecclesiastic of any grade set his foot on German soil, and he is immediately treated as if he were a notorious malefactor! Yet for all we can see this is not the case executed, and that the utmost religious freedom prevails in Kaiser WILHELM'S dominions. It fell to the lot of an Irish prelate, the other day, to experience in a disgreeable way the stringency with which these despotic orders of Prince BISMARCK are carried out. Most Rev. Dr. DELANY, Bishop of Cork, who has been suffering from bad health for a long time, was recently ordered by his physician to try what benefit he would receive from a visit to the South of Spain; and, suspecting nothing, made his way to the baths of Rosenberg. What the Prussian Empire could possibly have to fear from his presence it would be hard indeed to imagine, seeing that he is a gentleman of very quiet and unobtrusive habits, who carefully eschews all connection with politics of any sort; but, at any rate, the Bishop of Cork has had it summarily ordered out of Prussian soil. He was informed that if he did not want to see the interior of Kaiser WILHELM'S bastiles he had better take a speedy departure. We very much regret that Dr. DELANY did not remain and add the German Empire to shame before the whole civilized world; but, to avoid giving trouble, no doubt, he turned his steps elsewhere. The Government that could treat as a criminal a gentleman and prelate of the dogma of dogmas, the English laborer, if he is the city, sleeps half the day and boozes in the streets, and is generally addicted to liquor. He is untidy, coarse, brutal and materialistic, and is fond of fighting and burying with scrubby towards Christianity and everything religious. The European peasant proprietor is elevated to proud position by a splendid sense of independence, by habits, by Faith. He is sober, industrious, and is fond of his home, a lover of a dead body, incense over during Christian sacrifice mourning in the Central Sea were vanishing away. While the universities of the nations bordering on the Central Sea were vanishing away, Christian science, Christian civilization, and the Christian spirit of the people, in Ireland unobtrusive and unassuming, and the latest where their forefathers chanced to have settled. In the history of ancient Ireland there is no such cessors as the Apostles of the Allhoregos described by Cæsar. In their days we recognized a fixed authority and no acknowledged generally spontaneous allegiance. They had good property, war, genealogy, tradition, religion and race. Since the clouds of religious prejudice have begun to vanish, men are getting a clearer insight of this ancient people. It seems that they used clay, basket-work, timber and some for their buildings. Hospitality was a marked characteristic of the Celtic people. But the most wonderful fact connected with the race is the alacrity with which it accepted Christianity. In Greece and in Rome Christianity was established by martyrs' blood and miracles. In Ireland, Europe, Christianity expanded with the lapse of time. We do not wish to vouch for the truth of the legends related in Colgan's "Via Tripartita," but for the aid of the men who heretofore have been its opponents. This eliminates many objections to believing in the sanctity of the sanctuary so favored by the apparitions of the Sacred Heart and by the spiritual banner of Paray-le-Monial. It is only to be regretted that a great poverty, a great ignorance, a great social misery, a great want of sympathy, a great want of union, a great want of organization, a great want of leaders, a great want of money, a great want of a press, a great want of a literature, a great want of a language, a great want of a country, a great want of a nationality, a great want of a flag, a great want of a history, a great want of a future, a great want of a God, a great want of a Christ, a great want of a Church, a great want of a religion, a great want of a faith, a great want of a hope, a great want of a charity, a great want of a love, a great want of a life, a great want of a death, a great want of a resurrection, a great want of a judgment, a great want of a heaven, a great want of a hell, a great want of a purgatory, a great want of a limbo, a great want of a paradise, a great want of a nirvana, a great want of a metempsychosis, a great want of a transmigration, a great want of a reincarnation

IRISH LOCAL NEWS.

The work of the extension of the Waterford and Central Ireland Railway from Maryboro' to Mullingar has been commenced.

The Lords Justices have revoked the license to distill granted to carry out to James Dowling, Castle Connell, parish of Standhilly, county Limerick.

A number of emigrants left Tralee on September 16th, en route for New Zealand. They consisted principally of young people, strong and active, of both sexes.

Charles French Blake Foster, Esq., High Sheriff of Galway city, died on the evening of September 8th. His was eldest son of Captain Blake-Foster, J. P., and wrote a valuable historical book called "The Irish Chieftains." He is universally regretted.

At the usual monthly meeting of the Thurles Board of Guardians John Corbosch, Esq., Ballyrahill, was unanimously elected Deputy Vice-Chairman, in the room of Thomas O'Meara, Esq., deceased.

At a meeting of the managing committee of the Cork Fever Hospital a letter was read from Dr. McEvoy resigning his position as ordinary physician, after nearly thirty years of official life.

A man named Michael O'Sullivan was recently lodged in the Mallow bridewell on a charge of having been unable to give a satisfactory account of himself, and also on suspicion of having committed a crime elsewhere!

At a meeting of the Board of Superintendence of Roscommon jail, J. Plunkett Taaffe, Esq., J. P., was appointed Local Inspector of the County Prison, at a salary of about £120 per annum.

A committee meeting of the Limerick Corporation was held on the evening of September 11th, at the Town Hall, to confer with Mr. O'Shaughnessy, M. P., in order to have the fines inflicted on drunkards, applied to the reduction of city taxation.

The Waterford Guardians decided that the funeral service over all Catholic paupers dying in the Union shall take place in the chapel of the workhouse, and the house chaplain should, in consequence, have a salary of £10 yearly added to his salary.

The Cork Examiner states that the first seal of Brook Richard Brasier, Esq., of Ballyvilla, Mallow, on coming of age, was to give to the Very Rev. Dr. Downes, P., rent free forever, a beautiful site for a new church for his Catholic tenantry in the town of Kilmallock.

The Mayor of Cork has called a general meeting of his Roman Catholic fellow-citizens, to be held at the Chamber of Commerce, Cork, on the 17th September, for the purpose of paying a compliment to the Right Rev. Dr. Delany, on his having completed a quarter of a century in the episcopate of the diocese of Cork.

On Thursday, September 10, one of the most destructive fires which have been witnessed in Clonmel for many years broke out in the extensive stores belonging to Mr. Patrick Murphy, of Tullow street, by which the premises and their contents were entirely consumed, leaving nothing standing but the bare walls.

John Mayo, living near Kilthampar, Kilmeady, aged 55, was last week married to a Miss Ryan, whose husband died in the workhouse a month ago. The bride is the former wife that Tuite so bepossessed, and he has fallen into the clutches as well as the shoes of the deceased Winegigle.

A collection in the employment of the Midland Great Western Railway Company, named Murray, residing near Manulla, within four miles of Castlebar, was found out recently, but escaped unfeatured. The shot penetrated the door of Murray's house, where he was standing. No cause is assigned for the outrage.

Miss James Nolan, daughter of the late Alderman Hackett, J. P., Clonmel, received the white veil at the hands of the Right Rev. Dr. Power, Lord Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, in the presence of the community and a large number of relatives, by the benefits of new matter of Ursuline, St. Mary's Convent, Waterford.

Dr. Robert Scott, for fifteen years presiding as a medical officer in Ballinrobe, county Westmeath, died suddenly at his residence, Ballinrobe, on the 9th, the cause assigned for an event which has caused general regret in Kilbeggan and neighborhood.

A meeting of the Catholic inhabitants of Drogheda, recently, was presided over by the Mayor, to consider the most fitting testimonial to present Rev. James Moonan, C.C., on his removal to Forkhill, county Louth. During his stay in Drogheda Father Moonan endeared himself to all classes, and his removal is greatly regretted.

At the last meeting of the Rathdown Board of Guardians a number of papers were received from the Local Government Board addressed to the Board in London by the old lady inmates of the house, who persists in remaining in the institution although entitled to some property in Chancery.

There certainly is no exaggeration in saying, says the Tralee Chronicle, that the inhabitants of Ennean and the large parish surrounding it have sustained a great loss in the refinement, after a lengthened service—extending to nearly forty years, of George Henry Dowe, M.D., the highly-esteemed medical officer of that district.

The Board of Guardians of the Nenagh Union, at a recent meeting, accepted the tender of the chairman of the county Tipperary (North Riding) jail, for the supply of twenty-ton bedsteads at 10s. each. It would appear that the number of prisoners in the county jail have become so few that the Board of Superintendents could see no valid reason for keeping up a large sleeping accomodation.

A private horse-race came off on the 15th of September, on the old race-course of Lenoghehil, between Eugene Lorigan, Esq., of Dunore, and Henry O'Brien, Esq., of Rockfield. A large crowd assembled. Having received the preliminary examination in St. Mel's, Longford, he entered St. Patrick's College, Maynooth, in the year 1837, where, at his entrance examination, he took the first place in rhetoric among a great number of students. During his career in that institution he distinguished for his abilities on the different subjects, and, by his quiet and inoffensive manner, he endeared himself to all his class-fellows. On the 20th July, 1873, he was ordained a priest, destined for the diocese of Ardagh.

At one o'clock on the morning of September 8th the coastguard watchman at Ballybunion reported that a vessel lying in the bay was on fire. Mr. Fitzpatrick, the coastguard officer, immediately collected his men, manned the boat, and pulled towards the vessel. Having got on board before the flames had made much progress, they found the crew all sleeping below until they were aroused by the coastguards. After great exertions, Mr. Fitzpatrick and his men succeeded in extinguishing the flames. The burning ship proved to be the Fairie, of Monmouth, laden with bark, iron, slates, etc., which had entered the bay and cast anchor. She only escaped destruction by the vigilance of the watchmen and the prompt action of the coastguards.

On 13th September the mission which was opened in Tullyallen three weeks previously by members of the Order of Redemptorists—Rev. Father O'Donnell (superior), Father Livius and Father Crofts—was brought to a close. The labors of the good priests have been attended with an amount of good that is almost incalculable. His Grace the Primate was present on Friday, and gave Benediction of the Most Holy Sacrament in the evening. He assisted in the confessional during the day. High Mass was celebrated by Rev. Michael McElhone, C.C., Killeavill. During the Mass the chapel was crowded to excess, and a large number were unable to gain admittance at all. Afterwards a large cross, which was erected in the chapel-yard as a memorial of the mission, was solemnly blessed by Very Rev. Father O'Donnell.

An inquest was held in the county Derry Infirmary, on Saturday, September 12, on the body of a man named Boggs, who died in that institution on the previous day. It appeared, from the evidence of witnesses examined at the inquest, that the deceased had been removed to the infirmary from the streets, suffering from exhaustion for want of the necessaries of life. From the date of his admission he got worse daily until Friday, when he died. It is remarkable that, after the deceased had been lying to stout £6 in cash was found concealed in his clothes; and yet the unfortunate man was in such a state of destitution. A case of somewhat similar character occurred in the same institution about two months ago. A man named Townsend, from the neighborhood of Kilrea, was admitted as a pauper, suffering from exhaustion. He died shortly after his admission, and it is generally believed that the fatal disease was aggravated, and his death accelerated, by the want of proper nourishment. In the clothes worn by this alleged pauper afterwards found a gold watch and chain, and checks and money to the amount of £300.

The Count de Jarnac, French Ambassador to London, who has been for many years a resident proprietor in Tipperary, was present recently at the castle show held in the town of Tipperary under the auspices of the local Farming Society, of which he is chairman. An address was presented to him by the Society, and expressive of satisfaction at his elevation to the distinguished post of French Ambassador, and the Count appeared to be deeply affected by the cordial feeling manifested towards him. On the same day, being in connection with the show in the evening he took the chair, and, in responding to the toast of his health, which was coupled with the Earl of Portarlington, made a brief speech in which, alluding to his epaulettes, he said he was now ready to pull-a-life again by a uses whose character was more appreciated than by Ireland, the land of his illustrious forefathers; and the great Emperor of human events alone could say whether the bark of the fortunes was one day to founder in the dark abyss, or whether he should be cast on the golden shores, the victim of a fresh political catastrophe.

On 19th September the very interesting ceremony of reception took place in the convent of the Sisters of St. Louis, Ramsgrange, New Ross, Athenry, county Galway, the ladies received being Miss Power, of Tipperary, Miss Morris, of Dublin, and Miss Young, of Wexford. The Very Rev. Canon Doyle, they have become a center of continuous blessings to the part of the country situated on the Templemore estates. The new convent and schools are built in pure Gothic style, but with a solidity and finish rarely met with. Being placed on perhaps the highest knoll in the Queen's County in Ireland, one commands from them a magnificent view of the surrounding plains, as well as distant sea and mountain views, which are truly beautiful.

The Temperance Campaign.

CATHOLIC T. A. UNION OF THE DIOCESE OF } Pittsburgh, October 1, 1874. }

To the President and Board of Government of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of the Diocese of Pittsburgh:

Union of Philadelphia was composed of five societies, with an aggregate membership of 1,100. In October, 1873, it had increased to twenty-nine societies—twenty adult and nine cadet societies—with an aggregate membership of 8,048. At the present date it numbers fifty-seven societies—thirty four adult and and twenty-three cadet—with an aggregate membership of 12,380, of which 8,577 are adults and 3,709 cadets. This is an increase of fourteen adult and fourteen cadet societies during the past year, and an increase in the aggregate membership during the same period of 4,295; there are also 1,000 members of non-Union societies, making a grand total of 13,380 total abstainers in Philadelphia.

During the year the movement has been prosperous in this diseases. The societies are getting established on a permanent basis; many halls have been rented or purchased; the beneficial features have been introduced in all the societies but two, and flourishing cadet societies have been organized. Free public entertainments, consisting of concerts, lectures, exhibitions, debates, etc., have been given almost weekly, and everything possible to make the organization attractive to both young and old has been provided.

The latest feature is the establishment of free night schools for the instruction of the members who are employed during the day in workshops, foundries, and such like places. Two general parades—one on St. Patrick's Day and the other on the Fourth of July—have been given under the auspices of our Union, and both were magnificent affairs, meeting the cultured commendation of all classes.

Steps have been taken to carry into practical effect the Centennial Fountain project, and numerous parish meetings have been held in Philadelphia and vicinity to further it. These have been very enthusiastic and successful, several thousand dollars having been collected, and there being every indication of the whole amount needed being raised in a short time.

In conclusion, I trust that the Convention at Chicago will be a harmonious and successful one, and that our glorious cause may receive a fresh impetus from its action.

Fraternally yours,

PHILIP A. NOLAN,
Corr. Sec'y C. T. A. U. of Philadelphia.

NOW IN SAN FRANCISCO.

DR. J. A. SHERMAN,
Specialist in Treatment of Rupture,

RESPECTFULLY ANNOUNCES THAT HE has returned to this city, and may be consulted at his branch office,

240 Montgomery st., corner of Pine,

By those desirous of obtaining the benefit of his experience and assistance in the adaptation of his method for the radical cure of Hernia, without regard to the age of the patients or duration of the affection.

Photographs of bad cases of

RUPTURE

Before and after treatment and CURE, can be seen at his office. Descriptive pamphlet, mailed to any address on receipt of ten cents.

The CURE is effected by local external application only.

OFFICE:
240 Montgomery street, San Francisco, Cal.

Entrance, corner of Sutter street.

No. 1 Ann street, New York (formerly 97 Broadway.) au18-3m

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. MARY'S ACADEMY,
SANTA CLARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS ACADEMY, CONDUCTED BY THE SISters of Notre Dame, is opened to afford an opportunity for securing, for young ladies, a solid, yet express, a united, moral and useful education.

The Academy is situated in the pleasant City pupils of this institution from forming tastes and habits Board, Lodging, Tuition, Washing, and Mending of Linen, School stationery, Medical Attendance and Medicine, Baths, Fuel, Light per year.....$90 00

Music, Drawing and Music form extra charges. For Clothing, Books, Pocket money, and the like, no charges will be made. A copy of each year will be given.

Your commence on the 16th of August, and terminates about the 15th of June.

TERMS:

Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....$10 00
Board and Tuition, per month.....18 00
Use of Piano, per month.....3 00
Use of Music, per month.....2 00

For further information inquire of the superiors of the Sisters of Notre Dame, San José, Santa Clara, or Mission Dolores. 1f11

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

This Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.

While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, yet zeal is bestowed on the Catholic Religion, Christian Doctrine, and Christian Morality.

The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 16th, and terminates on the last Thursday in June.

For further particulars apply to

BROTHER VISITOR,
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

1y36

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,
SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THE EIGHTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUtion, conducted by the Fathers of the Order of St. Francis, will commence on the 15th Monday of August.

The object of the institution is to give a good English, Mathematical, Classical and Philosophical Education, the three former branches of which are taught in California—and thereby bring an advantage within the reach of many.

TERMS:

Entrance Fee (to be paid but once).....$10 00
Tuition, Board and Washing, per session, or ten months.....200 00
Music, French and German form extra charges.
Use of Bed and Bedding, per session.....20 00 will be charged

Payments must be made semi-annually in advance.

No deduction will be made for vacations, and no pupil solely articles, etc.

No pupil will be admitted by the College; for the purchase of necessary articles, a certificate from address on receipt of ten cents.

For further particulars apply to
REV. J. J. O'KEEFE, O. S. F.
1f9

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

CONFERS

DEGREES

Rev. JAMES McGILL, C. M.
President.

1ebl8-tf

MERCHANT TAILORS.

JOHN KAVANAGH,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 12 New Montgomery st., (Grand Hotel.)

Clothing to order for Men, Youths and Boys.

A special fashion in the designing and fabrication of Pilot Suits for boys, in a style of unsurpassed elegance. 6f18

N. SWEENY,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
NO. 42 SECOND STREET,
Opposite Jessie street.....San Francisco.

Constantly on hand a choice assortment of Cloths, Cassimeres, Doeskins, Beavers and Vestings, which will be made to order on reasonable terms.

Particular attention given to Military Uniforms. my11-1y

T. CANTY,
Merchant Tailor
37 Sutter street, near Montgomery
San Francisco.

Suits of fashionable clothes made in the latest styles at the ruling prices. 1y11

SAN JOSE ADVERTISEMENTS.

VICTOR HOFFMANN,
Architect
SAN JOSE, CAL.

CENTRAL HOUSE,
San Fernando St., bet. First and Second,
SAN JOSE, CAL.

P. NIXON.....Proprietor.

This House has recently been greatly improved, enlarged and refurnished. It is unexcelled by any house of its kind in San José.

Board and Lodging, per week.....$4 to $5
Board alone, per week.....$3 50
Rent Wines, Liquors and Cigars on sale.

WESTERN HOTEL,
Market Street, near the City Market,
SAN JOSE.

D. NOONAN.....Proprietor.

Board, per week.....$4 50
Board and Lodging, per week.....$5 to $6
Single Meals.....50 cents
Lodging, per night.....50 cents

Families and others will find all the comforts of home at this new and elegant Hotel. no6

THE STATE
Investment and Insurance Company
FIRE AND MARINE.

Cash Assets, . . . . $360,000

Principal Office, 405 California Street, SAN FRANCISCO.

OFFICERS—PETER DONAHUE, President; A. E. BRYANT, Vice-President; C. H. CUSHING, Secretary; C. T. RYLAND, of San José, is one of its Directors.

A. E. MYLOTT, Special Agent, San José.

EDWARD MAHONEY,
Corner Market and Santa Clara Sts.,
SAN JOSE.

DRY GOODS, CLOTHING, BOOTS, SHOES, Etc.

☞ TAILORING.—Clothing cut and made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed. 42bf

C. CHOPARD,
WATCH AND JEWELER,
No. 305 Santa Clara street,
Auzerais Block.....SAN JOSE.

dc6

NEW YORK EXCHANGE,
First Street (bet. Santa Clara and St.) Cahn street,
SAN JOSE, CAL.

HARKER & TOWNE.....Proprietors.

☞ Coach and Carriage stand at all trains. s28

C. WALSH'S
LIVERY STABLE
401 First Street (opp. N. Y. Exchange Hotel),
SAN JOSE.

SAN JOSE MARBLE WORKS.
E. POWER,
WAREHOOM, 309 SECOND STREET,

STATUARY, TOMBS, MANTEL-PIECES, HEAD-STONES, FOUNTAINS

And every description of MARBLE WORK.

DESIGNING, MOULDING, Etc.

And every style Wood and Stone Carving. all

SANTA CLARA ADVERTISEMENTS.

CAMERON HOUSE,
SANTA CLARA, CAL.

MARTIN CORCORAN.....PROPRIETOR.

MR. CORCORAN, having purchased the above House, is now prepared to accommodate gentlemen (throughout the State that the patronage heretofore bestowed upon the "Cameron House" will be continued under the present management.

The Hotel is remembering; the rooms are large, well ventilated and furnished, and the surroundings are healthy and pleasant in the extreme.

In connection with the House is a fine stable of horses and carriages, which can be had at any hour of the day or night at most reasonable rates. au21

D. BERGIN,
SANTA CLARA.....CALIFORNIA

Has on hand a superior assortment of

Dry Goods, Clothing, Boots and Shoes

To be found South of San Francisco, which he will sell at less than San Francisco rates. au18

HARNESS AND SADDLERY.

F. C. FRANK,
Proprietor and Manufacturer, SANTA CLARA, Cal.

HARNESS, SADDLES, BRIDLES, COLLAR WHIPS, BURRS, COMBS, BRUSHES, Etc.,

Which he will sell at and below San Francisco prices. Repairing done at short notice. au25-1y

THE YOUNG CRUSADER for 1874.

IN ADDITION TO THE LEADING STORY, is added

BRAVE BOYS OF FRANCE!

A Tale of the Late War in Europe,

Well grouped pictures of the Battles of PHOENIXBURG and other incidents in each number; BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES of eminent men and women; PUZZLES; MARKABLE EVENTS OF HISTORY; interesting passages in the lives of GREAT SAINTS; GLIMPSES OF EARTH; SEA AND AIR; articles for the NATURE SCIENCE and ART; together with a great variety of amusing and instructive PARLOR and other reading matter for young people.

The volume begins with the year. Address, in closing ONE DOLLAR for the twelve monthly parts

REV. WILLIAM BYRNE,
103 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

Recent volumes of the "Young Crusader" of past years may be had at the above address each for following (viz):

1871, Bound Volume.....$1 75
LITTLE KNIGHT and other Stories.....1 00
TOM-BOY, and other Stories.....1 00

RUSS HOUSE COACHES.

Nos. 27, 40, 48, 97 and 109.

McNALLY & SLATTERY.....Proprietors

Orders left at the Russ House will be promptly attended to. Rates most reasonable. s28-1f

Interesting Statistics.

PERIOD OF GESTATION OF FARM ANIMALS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Cow | 284 days. |
| Sheep | 151 " |
| Mare | 342 " |
| Jennet | 365 " |
| Ass | 365 " |
| Mule, Hinny (offspring from ass or jennet) | 365 " |
| Ass, or jenny | 360 " |
| Sow | 154 " |
| Cat | 60 " |
| Rabbit | 30 " |

PERIOD OF INCUBATION OF FOWLS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Turkey | 28 days. |
| Partrid | 30 " |
| Goose | 30 " |
| Pheasant | 30 " |
| Hen | 21 " |
| Ostrich—from 42 to | 56 " |
| Canary | 14 " |
| Duck | 28 " |
| Turkey | 28 " |
| Pigeon | 14 " |
| Drone | 24 or 28 " |

(The bee hatched in 16.)

PERIOD OF INCUBATION OF BIRDS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Queen Bee | 16 days. |
| Worker Bee | 21 " |
| Drone | 24 or 28 " |

(Heat for brood, 70°.)

When a Tennessee husband is horse-whip his wife for washing potatoes in his Sunday ping bail, it is time to inquire whether this generation of men isn't getting to be too confounded high-toned for the age of the country?

AGENTS FOR "THE MONITOR."

Alameda—W. H. Wright.
Alviso—John Daly.
Amador City—M. O. Mooney.
Auburn—James Walsh.
Austin—Nevada County—J. Quinn.
Aurora—P. Griffin.
Angel's Camp—Thomas Mackey.
Brooklyn, Alameda County—M. Sullivan.
Benicia—Thomas Cavanagh.
Bodie—Mono County—F. Tarpey.
Bonanza—Charles Long.
Bridgeport—Mono County—J. Mahoney.
Bannack—J. C. Gibbon.
Bodie—Mono County—Jeffrey Pine Co.
Chico—Thomas Welch.
Colusa—Thomas Maher.
Cherokee—M. Brosnan.
Columbia—Mat. Hughes.
Carson City—Thos. Nolan.
Cortez—Thos. McGarvey.
Carterville—J. Delaney.
Cherry Valley—Wm. Kehl.
Downieville—D. Grant.
Dutch Flat—Thos. Cronin.
Greenville—Plumas Co.—J. Bowman.
Greenwood, El Dorado Co.—M. Keane.
Hamilton—M. J. Garvin.
St. Louis—J. Cluskey.
Helena and Fairfield—Ed. Donnelly.
Honcutt—M. J. Garvin.
Healdsburg—Sonoma County—J. Smith and J. Lyons.
Hot Springs—Rev. Father Mesplie.
Hangtown—M. Bellrose.
Iowa Hill—Rev. Wm. Somin's Ranch—P. D. Quinlan, R. Kilduffe.
Jacksonville, Or.—Rev. Father Mesplie.
Jamestown—R. O'Donnell and Rev. Father Lovejoy.
Jacksonville—Tuolumne Co.—Rev. Father Kenny.
Kelsey—Rev. Father Mesplie.
Knight's Ferry—Stanislaus Co.—P. Gleason.
Lewiston—Trinity County—Rev. Father Mesplie.
Lone Pine—Inyo County—Rev. Father Mesplie.
Marysville—T. J. Power.
Murphy's—Calaveras Co.—Rev. Father Mesplie.
Milpitas—John Shinel.
Mokelumne Hill—Patrick Murphy's Camp—James Mason—San José—John Shinel.
Nevada City—P. Keane.
Oakland—Rev. Father Mesplie.
Oroville—P. Murphy.
Petaluma—Thos. Hughes.

Subscribers will save no considerable expense and trouble by ordering at once any books they may need in our agents or transmit the same directly to this office, at our expense. Many of them are largely in arrears, and we require and must have the money.

REMOVAL.

T. J. BRODERICK, HAS REMOVED FROM 26 THIRD ST., TO
NO. 112 THIRD STREET,
Between Mission and Minna.

T. J. B. begs to acquaint his old friends and the public that he has a large stock of

Fashionable Boots and Shoes,

Allower rates than any other house in the city.

Repairing done in a superior manner and to order.

Orders from the country promptly attended to.

Only the best material and workmanship. The most leader feet fitted with ease. Call and see. 1y36

No. 112 Third Street.

DITSON & CO.'s MUSIC BOOKS FOR CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

Books Containing Morning and Evening Service.

THE OFFERTORIUM.....Price, $1 50
(The newest work; plenty of easy as well as more difficult pieces.)
THE CANTATA. No. 1. Morning Service.
THE CANTATA. No. 2. Evening service.
THE CATHOLIC CHOIR BOOK.....Part 1, $2 50
THE CATHOLIC CHOIR BOOK.....Part 2, $2 50
STABAT MATER.....Rossini's, $1 50

MASSES.

| | |
|---|---|
| By Beethoven, in C.....$1 | Mozart, 1st, in B flat.....$1 |
| " in C.....1 | " 2d, in C.....1 |
| Haydn, 1st.....1 | Mozart, 1st, Mass.....1 |
| Haydn, 2d.....1 | Mozart, 2d, Mass.....1 |
| Haydn, 3d.....1 | Mozart, 3d, Mass.....1 |
| Haydn, 4th.....1 | Mozart, Requiem.....1 |
| Haydn, Mass in honor of St. Bernardine.....1 | Requiem, Mass for the Dead.....1 |
| Schubert, 1st.....1 | Concone, in F.....1 |
| Schubert, 2d.....1 | Concone, in A.....1 |
| Schubert, in E flat.....1 | Concone, in D.....1 |
| Schubert, in G.....1 | Concone, in E flat.....1 |
| Weber, in E flat.....1 | Concone, in A.....1 |
| Weber, 2d.....1 | Lambillotte, Psalter in Latin.....1 |
| Weber, 3d.....1 | Lambillotte, Psalter in English.....1 |
| Weber, in G.....1 | Stearns, in A.....1 |
| Weber, in E.....1 | Stearns, in B flat.....1 |
| Weber, in E flat.....1 | Stearns, in C.....1 |
| Weber, in E flat.....1 | Zimmer.....1 |

Any of the above books mailed, post-paid, for the price given.

Note.—The prices above given are for one style of binding only. A slight increase for superior styles.

OLIVER DITSON & CO.,
451 Broadway, New York.

C. H. DITSON & CO.,
711 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE FIFteenth Judicial district of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco. CATHERINE CURTIN, Plaintiff, against DENNIS CURTIN, Defendant.

Action brought in the District Court of the Fifteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco, and the complaint filed in the office of the Clerk of said District Court, in the city and county of San Francisco, and State of California.

The People of the State of California send greeting to DENNIS CURTIN, Defendant.

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the District Court of the Fifteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but in this district, then within thirty days; or within forty days if served elsewhere; and you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Given under my hand and seal of the District Court of the Fifteenth Judicial District of the State of California, in and for the city and county of San Francisco, this twenty-fourth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four. [L. S.]

WILLIAM HARNEY, Clerk.
By H. W. KING, Deputy Clerk.
JAMES MOE, attorney for plaintiff, 926 Montgomery street, San Francisco. au8-5w

BANKING HOUSES.

HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY

Office—Northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets.

OFFICERS:

President.....M. D. SWEENY
Vice-President.....D. O'SULLIVAN

TRUSTEES:

M. D. SWEENY, D. O'SULLIVAN, JOHN SULLIVAN, R. J. TOBIN, M. J. O'CONNOR, P. McGARR, GUSTAVE TOUCHARD, JOS. A. DONAHOE, PETER DONAHUE.

Treasurer.....EDWARD MARTIN
Secretary.....RICHARD TOBIN

Remittances from the country may be sent through Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express office, or any reliable banking house in the State. Deposits will not be responsible for their safe delivery. The signature of the depositor should accompany his first deposit. A pass-book will be delivered to the agent by whom the deposit is made.

Deposits received from $2½ upwards.

Office Hours—From 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.

JOS. A. DONAHOE, San Francisco. EUGENE KELLY & CO., New York.

DONOHOE, KELLY & Co.
SAN FRANCISCO.
EUGENE KELLY & Co.
NEW YORK
BANKERS.

EXCHANGE ON

NEW YORK, LONDON, AND DUBLIN

BANK OF IRELAND.....DUBLIN

Payable at all the Branches,

AND IN EVERY COUNTY TOWN IN IRELAND

BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA,
INCORPORATED BY ROYAL CHARTER,
S. E. corner California and Sansome sts.

Head Office—LONDON.

Branches—PORTLAND, OREGON; VICTORIA AND CARIBOO, BRITISH COLUMBIA.

AGENTS:

New York—BANK OF MONTREAL
Chicago—BANK OF MONTREAL
Canada—BANK OF MONTREAL
Mexico and Havana—LONDON BANK OF MEXICO AND SOUTH AMERICA.
Ireland—BANK OF IRELAND.
Scotland—BRITISH LINEN COMPANY.
England—NATIONAL PROVINCIAL BANK OF ENGLAND.
England—NORTH AND SOUTH WALES BANK.
England—BANK OF LIVERPOOL

This Bank transacts a General Banking Business. Interest allowed on current accounts subject to check, or on deposit.

Drafts issued on London and all the principal towns and cities in Ireland and Scotland from £1 upwards.

Approved Bills discounted and advances made on good collateral security.

WM. H. TILLINGHAST, Manager.

PIONEER LAND AND LOAN ASSOCIATION,
BANK OF SAVINGS AND DEPOSIT.

NO. 405 CALIFORNIA STREET,
Opposite Bank of California.

Incorporated, 1869.—Guarantee Fund, $100,000.

Seventy-fifth Dividend will be Paid on the 5th of September.

TERM DEPOSITS IN GOLD, SILVER AND U. S. CURRENCY received for one year, at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, payable in gold coin, in quarterly payments of $2 50 each, on every $100 deposited.

Interest paid on ordinary deposits monthly, at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum on each $100 deposited, for every month they remain on deposit.

Deposits received from $1 to $10,000.

Office hours—From 10 a. m. to 3 p. m.

THE COMMERCIAL AND SAVINGS BANK OF SAN JOSE.

Capital, . . . . . $1,000,000.

OFFICERS:

P. D. MURPHY.....President
C. T. RYLAND.....Vice-President
HERMAN HOFFMAN.....Cashier
THOMAS M. O'BRIEN.....Secretary
S. McCLOSKEY.....Attorney

Receive General and Special Deposits in gold and silver currency. Deal in United States Bonds and Coupons. Buy and sell Bills of Exchange.

In our Savings Department, which is organized separate from the Commercial, we receive deposits at the fixed rate of interest or semi-annual dividends, as they may select, which will be declared in July and January of each year. The ample capital of the Bank affords unquestioned security for the safety of deposits.

Remittances from a distance may be made by check on San Francisco, or in coin or by Express, and Post Books will be promptly forwarded as desired.

Correspondents:

DONOHOE, KELLY & CO.....San Francisco
EUGENE KELLY & CO.....New York
BANK OF IRELAND.....Dublin
BANK OF IRELAND.....New York

Premium Cutlery.

First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1871
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1872
First Premium and Medal of Mechanics' Institute, 1873
First Premium for Mechanics' Institute in 1874
First Premium for Mechanics' Institute in 1875
First Premium in New Orleans, 1876.

M. PIGUE
FOR HOME-MADE CUTLERY,
STORE: 615 KEARNY ST., bet. Pine and California.
FACTORY: 10 STEVENSON STREET,
SAN FRANCISCO.

Razors, Knives, Shears, &c., made to order and warranted. Particular attention paid to judging damaged Cutlery restored equal to new. Country orders promptly attended to. my11

MENEELY'S BELL FOUNDRY,
WEST TROY, NEW YORK,
Established in 1826.

CHURCH, ACADEMY, FACTORY AND OTHER BELLS, made of copper and tin, warranted satisfactory, and mounted with our New Patent Rotary Yoke—the most recent and desirable Bell Hanging in use. For prices and catalogues apply to

MENEELY & COMPANY,
West Troy, N. Y., or New York.

BOOT AND SHOES.

KAST'S
FASHIONABLE SHOE STORE,
826 and 828 Sixth Street, opposite the Alhambra Theater. 1y12

WILLIAM O'CONNELL, FASHIONABLE BOOTMAKER,
219 Howard Street,
(Irish-American Hall).....San Francisco.

Boots and Shoes

JOHN SULLIVAN, NORTHEAST COR. of Battery and Jackson streets, office, is prepared to make to order the best French Calf Leather BOOTS at from $8 to $9; California Leather Boots, $6; French Calf Oxford Ties, $5 50; Gaiters, $4.

Boys' and Children's Boots and Shoes made to order.

Persons in the country ordering Boots or Shoes to the amount of Twelve Dollars or more will be allowed a reduction of four per cent., so as to make the express charges light; but Boots and Shoes of MY OWN MANUFACTURE ONLY. Boots and Shoes sent C. O. D. to any part of the country. my10

UNDERTAKERS.

YEAR PLANKED. W. J. GALLAGHER.

FLANAGAN & GALLAGHER,
Successors to J. Kehr.)
Undertakers,
NO. 634 MARKET STREET,
Nearly opposite Fourth.....San Francisco

EVERYTHING NECESSARY FOR funerals thereof, furnished promptly attended to, at moderate charges. au4

MASSEY & YUNG,
Undertakers,

PRACTICAL FURNISHING UNDERTAKERS, Massey's Burial Casket always on hand. Agents for Fish's Metallic Burial Cases.

Everything necessary for Masonic burial constantly kept. Orders from the country will receive prompt attendance, at moderate charges.

Office—841 Sacramento street, between Kearny and Webb.

JAMES McGINN,
UNDERTAKER,
737 Market Street, (opposite Dupont.)

☞ Everything requisite for Funerals at the lowest prices. bf15-tf

J. O'KANE.
Manufacturer and Importer of

SADDLES & HARNESS
Fine Horse Clothing, etc., etc.,
No. 632 KEARNY STREET,
Between Sush and Sutter, . . . San Francisco

Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. Orders promptly attended to. ma15-1y

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

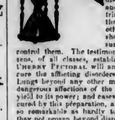
For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.



Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are more real value to mankind than the effectual remedy for all forms of Throat and Lungs. A visit to the sick, throughout this and other countries, shows that it does literally carry and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs will be found prompt and sure of Correction, when cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy, in a Measure, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the countless forms of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unprecedent attack of Pulmonary Affection, which are prone at this time, to fasten upon the throat and lungs. Prepared only by the Proprietors, DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass., Practical and Analytical Chemists.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE.

C. DESMOND
PRACTICAL HATTER,
No. 5 New Montgomery Street,
GRAND HOTEL BUILDING,

IS SELLING OFF HIS LARGE AND VARIED Stock of Hats and Caps at less than half its value in order to make room for a large invoice now in transit. No large goods.

Will and Must be Sold,

So bargains may be expected. You can assure yourself of this truth of the statement by a personal examination. The stock numbers over twenty, from the FINEST SILK HAT to a 25 cent CAP.

All who have dealt with Desmond will vouch that He runs no risk when prices fade,
They neither break nor batter;
For perfect shape and glossy shade
Please from DESMOND the Hatter.

C. DESMOND, 5 New Montgomery St., cb8-tf Under the Grand Hotel.

$72 A EACH WEEK.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE, SOMEthing entirely legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WORTH & CO., St. Louis, Mo. se12-1my13

INSURANCE.

FIRE AND MARINE INSURANCE.

UNION Insurance Comp'y
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
THE CALIFORNIA LLOYDS.
ESTABLISHED IN 1861.

Nos. 416 and 413 California Street

Cash Capital, - - - - $750,000 Gold.
Assets Exceed - - - $1,000,000 Gold.

FAIR RATES,
PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF LOSSES,
SOLID SECURITY.

DIRECTORS:

SAN FRANCISCO.

| | |
|---|---|
| J. Mora Moss, | H. C. Ellis, |
| James Otis, | James Howe, |
| Moses Heller, | Nicholas Luning, |
| N. T. Smith, | John Parrott, |
| H. J. O'Connor, | Nicholas Larkin, |
| W. W. Montague, | J. Bassi, |
| Daniel Meyer, | M. D. Sweeny, |
| Adam Grant, | Joseph Brandenstein, |
| Antonio

LATE IRISH NEWS.

It is stated that the dry crop this year in Ireland is very much superior to that of any season since 1864, and that in many localities it will compare favorably with the memorable crop of that year. It appears that it was almost entirely exempt from causalities while growing, and that it has been saved without injury. In a few places, however, the crop is reported to have been a partial failure.

The steamer Tegus arrived in Cork harbor on 21st September, and reported having lost one man in a storm in the Atlantic while coming from New York. She passed another vessel which, in the same gale, lost three of her crew. There were 2,000 piles on board the Tegus, intended for the Russian Government. A force of police was sent on board to insure the safety of the piles while the vessel remained in the harbor.

Mr. John Mitchel left Dublin on the morning of September 24 for Kilkarney. At the Kingsbridge terminus a number of eyre relatives and friends assembled to bid him farewell. He was accompanied by his daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hill Irwin, Mr. John Martin, M. P., Mr. P. J. Smyth, M. P., Mr. Florence McCarthy and Dr. Croke, Bishop of Auckland. Several other gentlemen—including Mr. A. M. Sullivan, M. P.—were present to bid adieu to the distinguished Irishman, who, as the train moved off, was saluted by those assembled on the platform.

In order to satisfy the wishes of the numerous friends desirous to present an address to Isaac Butt, M. P., on the close of his late illness, Bishop Keane of Cloyne, as a mark of esteem and respect, a preliminary meeting of the clergy was held in the Queen's Arms Hotel, Mallow, on Sunday, September 20. The meeting was large and truly representative. Dr. Keane presided. A committee was appointed to carry out the object of the meeting. It was resolved to hold another meeting at the same place on the following Sunday, at which all the friends and admirers of the Bishop elect were invited.

The Sunday closing movement is making way in Ireland. At a meeting of the General Committee of Ennistymon the chairman said that as the approaching licensing meeting in the city, the magistrates would in no case grant other than six-day licenses. Subsequently, at his suggestion, a resolution was adopted calling upon the grocers and other dealers of the town to send a memorial to the magistrates requesting the closing of such stores. In the face of action like this, it is impossible to assume that the closing of Irish public-houses on Sunday will be tabled in the next session of Parliament.

Active preparations are going on in several places, at last accounts, for monster Home Rule demonstrations. At a preliminary meeting held in Carrick, on 18th September, presided over by Mr. Shaw, M. P., it was resolved to hold an aggregate meeting of the friends of the Home Rule movement in the county of Tipperary on Sunday, October 4. The Rev. Father Kenyon, C.C., Clonmel, presided over a meeting of the Home Rule Association of Clonmel, at which resolutions were adopted expressive of sorrow for his unexpected and early decease.

The census of Fermanagh has been published, and it discloses more of the Cassandra-like character of our "prosperity." As in the case of every other county, the returns for 1871, as compared with those of 1861, show a considerable falling off in the number of inhabitants and of inhabited houses. In 1861 there were in 1,378 inhabited houses; in 1871 there were only 17,710; while the population, which was 109,767 in the latter year, is only 94,734. Considering that the Catholics are much more than half the population, and are known often to marry, it looks rather strange on the surface that the county should be represented in Parliament by two anti-Home Rule Irishmen as Messrs. Cole and Archdall; but that anomaly will not, we hope and believe, exist after the next general election.

Mr. O'Leary, who was sent out by the Irish Laborers' Union to Canada, has sent home word that he "has secured the active co-operation of Lord Dufferin, the Governor-General, and other important personages in the Canadian Ministry;" and that he is "willing to send a cargo of Irish laborers to Canada as emigrants if Irish laborers so desire." He also says that a scheme has been formed and the necessary funds raised elsewhere—one Irish Canadian, Mr. James Mulligan, giving the large sum of $100—to aid such emigrants to settle down on the land. Practical work this, and something like what one has been doing was plainly needed. The great drain of Ireland being still further depopulated by emigration.

An important demonstration in favor of fair valued rents and fixity of tenure was made September 20 at Urlingford, Kilkenny county. Mr. Martin, the late M. P. for Meath, took the chair, and excellent practical speeches were made by him, Mr. Mulhallen Marum, Mr. Kennedy, of the Kilkenny Journal, Father Healy and several local gentlemen. The principle of fair rent, the valuation of rents, and the fact that rents in the South of Ireland are at present too high and may be, were put in force by resolutions and a special interesting feature of the proceedings was the adoption of a pledge against taking the holding of any tenant disturbed unfairly. A passing allusion to Home Rule by one of the speakers was greeted with enthusiastic cheers.

It is our melancholy duty to record the death of a good priest and kindly-hearted gentleman—Father James O'Gorman, P. P., Conahy, who expired in his bed a few weeks ago of malignant fever. For some years past Father O'Gorman was in declining health, and his demise was not unexpected by, the kind friends who watched around his bedside, as well as by his numerous admirers who ostemed him for his genial qualities and his priestly character. The sad intelligence of his death will be received with painful feelings, not only in this diocese, but amongst his clerical acquaintances throughout Ireland, by whom, as we have reason to know, he was highly esteemed and regarded as a universal favorite.

Another name has just been added to the already lengthy roll of Irish prelates appointed to Australian Sees. The Very Rev. Martin Crane, D. S.A., was consecrated Bishop of Sandhurst on September 21, by his Eminence Cardinal Cullen. The ceremony was, as usual, of a very impressive character. Besides his Eminence and the Bishop elect, there were present eight other prelates, a large number of the clergy, secular and regular, of the diocese of Dublin, and members of the Australian Order from various parts of Ireland. Father Burke was the preacher of the day, and delivered a discourse of great force and eloquence. Of Dr. Crane is will be sufficient to say that he has long been known as a most devoted and zealous clergyman, ministering in one of the most populous and the poorest districts of Dublin, and taking a prominent part in the erection of the splendid church in Thomas street, of which it has been justly said that this is a poem in stone.

Ireland has been, perhaps justly, subject to the reproach implied in the phrase semper mœrsum. But of late years the Irish people have done something to redeem their character. Statues of several of Ireland's most famous sons adorn the streets of Dublin, and some provincial towns have local similar erections. The statues of other distinguished Irishmen will soon be unveiled to the public gaze, and steps, it is rumored, will shortly be taken to perpetuate in a similar manner the memory of still other Irishmen who have left their mark on their country's history. Thus a movement has been set on foot or rather revived within the last few days in waterford to erect a statue to Thomas Francis Meagher. A considerable sum of money, in fact, the entire sum has been subscribed in town of Ballybricken for that purpose, and a public meeting in the Urbs Intacta itself was, in all probability, be held on an early day. The work is a patriotic one, and will, we are sure, be prosecuted with energy and success; for his native city is justly proud of the name of Thomas Francis Meagher.

TELEGRAPHIC JOTTINGS.

The Queen Dowager of Bavaria has been converted to Catholicism, and will shortly make a public recantation.

Tammany Hall has unanimously nominated William H. Wilkeman for Mayor of New York.

Advices from the Cape of Good Hope to the 16th ult., state that another diamond field has been discovered at near Pniltjestown.

Rev. Francis Patrick McFarrissa, Bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Connecticut, embracing the State of Connecticut, died on the 12th, aged 59 years.

John Kelley, Chairman of the Tammany Hall Committee, has begun suits for slander against Mayor Havemeyer and Nelson Waterbury, laying damages in each case at $50,000.

A seven's engagement, which lasted two hours, took place on the 16th instant, between the Republican army and 3,000 Carlists, at Arbija di Navarra. The latter lost 300 killed.

A London dispatch of October 14th says it was officially announced to-day that the English Government will withdraw its diplomatic representative at the Vatican.

It is reported in London that the Government agrees to guarantee to Spain the interest on the Spanish German loan, taking as security for its ultimate payment a lien on the Island of Porto Rico.

At the Congressional Convention of the German-American Independent citizens' Association in the Ninth District, New York, Fernando Wood was nominated for Congress.

No general engagement has yet taken place between the Government troops and the insurgents in Brazil. General Osorio, commanding the main body of the latter, is waiting for reinforcements before moving on the capital.

An application from Chief Joan Wa, a Chinaman of San Francisco, for a patent for improved oversite, the first application for a patent that has ever been made by a subject of the Chinese Empire, was filed at the Patent Office on the 15th.

A motion to Anglicise the Episcopal Church of America, by a sort of official recognition of the Church of England as a sister branch of it, was debated in the House of Delegates of the Episcopal Convention of America, assembled at New Haven.

The trial of Arnim, the would-be assassin of Bismarck, is set down for the 29th inst. It is expected that Bismarck will give evidence personally. There are numbers of applications from foreign journalists for places in the Court.

The French Councils-General election finish up as follows: Republicans, 573 Constitutional Monarchists, 458; Bonapartists, 85. Republican majority over all, 13. The Monarchists have a majority to each of 44 councils; Republicans to each of 28, and in three departments they are equally divided.

Friends of Count Von Arnim having petitioned for his release, on account of his health, physicians were appointed by the Government to examine his condition. They recommended a change of place of confinement, as air and exercise are necessary, and the Count will probably be removed to a sanitary establishment in the suburbs of Berlin.

It is said that President Lerdo of Mexico desires reelection. This may mean serious consequences, as in the last Presidential campaign a pledge was put forward that the President would not seek re-election, and on this account he was supported by his party. The debates in Congress on the matter were very excited and even disorderly, troubles in several of the States furnishing themes for bitter recrimination.

In addition to the cases involving the constitutionality of the Ouachita and Grant Parish (Louisiana) cases, which involve the constitutionality of the Ku Klux law, there will come before the Supreme Court at this term the case to be certified from the Supreme Court of California, involving the constitutionality of the law of that State prohibiting the landing of Chinese women brought to the United States for immoral purposes. All these cases will undoubtedly be the consideration of their great public importance, be advanced on the docket.

At a public meeting held at Birmingham, England, on the 19th, resolutions were adopted protesting against the h-gal use of public moneys to defray the expenses of threatening the entry on the occasion of the anticipated visit of the Prince of Wales. The speakers denounced the Mayor, and accused him of seeking a favor with the Court in order to obtain a knighthood. Opprobrious epithets were applied to the Prince of Wales, and other violent language used, which called out strong expressions of dissent. The proceedings throughout were very disorderly.

San Diego will this year export 400,000 pounds of honey.

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The sentence on the Bishop of Ermeland has been confirmed.

Died at Newcastle, Delaware, Saturday, September 6th, Rev. John Daly, late pastor of St. Peter's church.

Bishop Martin, who was prosecuted before the Court of First Instance in Berlin, on account of his pastoral letter of 14th March last, has been condemned to four months' imprisonment in a fortress.

A special telegram from Rome states that a consistory for the election of twelve Cardinals was fixed for the beginning of October.

Rev. Joseph Meade, P.P. of Kyle, near Borris-le-Ossory, has been promoted to the pastorate of Lower Fenele, vacant by the death of the late Father Andrew Quinnellan. Rev. Rhody Kennedy, curate of Nenagh, is named as the Rev. Mr. Meade's successor as pastor of Kyle.

His Lordship the Most Rev. Dr. Ryan, Coadjutor Bishop of Killaloe, assisted at the Kilrush Convent of Mercy, on September 23d, on the occasion of the interment, within the convent ground, of Miss Mary O'Grady, native of Killnoe, county Limerick, aged 24 years—in religion, Sister Mary Catherine.

Four sisters of the Community of Grey Nuns left Montreal on the 24th of September for the Mission of the Seven Dolors at the Devil's Lake, Dakota Territory. These zealous ladies go there to devote themselves to the service of the children of the Sioux Indians, to care for them in sickness, to give them an elementary education, and to train them in habits of industry. The Abbé Bonin, also of the diocese of Montreal, devotes himself to the same mission, which is under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of St. Paul, Minnesota.

The operations for the election of the Superior General of the Lazarists and Filles de la Charité, founded by St. Vincent de Paul, at Etienne, deceased, commenced on the 8th of September, when the provincial Superiors of Japan, India, Brazil and other foreign countries assembled at the principal establishment in the rue de Sevres, Paris. The final deliberation took place on the 15th and, after a grand Mass, sung by all the pupils of the congregation, the result of the election was announced, the Abbé Eugene Hore, Secretary General of the Institute, being chosen successor to M. Etienne. The personage is one of the most eminent and learned of the French ecclesiastics, as he is not only a distinguished Orientalist, but knows fifteen languages, and speaks all of them with the marvelous facility which formerly rendered Cardinal Mezzofanti so celebrated.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS.

Five car loads of immigrants arrived from the East on Friday of last week.

The proprietor of the Hotel de Vere building ranges is arranging to have large pipes laid at the full Creighton distance—1,000 yards—and has already secured grosse sufficient for 500 yards.

The cases of The People ex John G. Corbett and John F. Fitzpatrick, charged with murder, were called in the Twelfth District Court, and continued until Monday next.

Great Bulalay, the aeronaut who on Sunday dropped over the roofs of the houses and landed at his residence near Woodward's Gardens on Tuesday morning from the 16,000 feet received. His relatives had been in a state of melting in their attention to the sparing aeronaut; and all that medical skill could devise was done, but to no purpose.

Fourteen cases of is officially informed that, at the request of the Government of New Zealand, the use of the San Francisco Mint for the manufacturing of medals from Great Britain to New Zealand has been discontinued, and that hereafter our bullion for that colonial will, such further notice, be forwarded by the Suez and Melbourne route. The medals for New South Wales and the other Australian colonies will continue for the present to be forwarded from the United Kingdom for dispatch via San Francisco.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONTHLY OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, TUESDAY, October 13, 1874.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has been moderate. We quote—Extra at $4 @$4 12½, and superfine at $3 75 @ $4 in sks & 100 lbs.

WHEAT—The market has ruled quiet and at steady rates the past week. Prices have ranged from $1 40@$1 45 for shipping. The market is closed at $1 40@$1 42 ½ @ 100 lbs. The Liverpool market was interpreted on the 14th at 8s 11d@8s 8d for average and fine cargoes off coast.

BARLEY—The demand has been very good at unchanged rates. We quote the range at $1 05@$1 35 @ 100 lbs.

OATS—The market is steady at unchanged rates during the past week. Quotable at the close at $1 @$1 50 @ 100 lbs.

CORN—The receipts have been light during the past week, and the market is unchanged at the close as quoted for ordinary to choice @ sack.

RYE—Quotable at $1 @ 100 lbs.

COKE—Quotable at $1 25 @ 100 lbs.

BUCKWHEAT—Quotable at the jobbing rates: Extra, $2 25; Fine, $2 11; Fair and Red, $2; Small White, $1 75; Small, $1 50.

ONIONS—We quote at 90@75c @ 100 lbs.

POTATOES—The receipts have been free, with a fair demand. We quote the range at 87½@1 00 @ 100 lbs, as to quality.

BEANS—Quotable at $1 75 @ 100 lbs from the mill.

BUTTER—Quotable at $1 @ 100 lbs.

CHEESE—Quotable at 15 @ 16c @ lb.

EGGS—We quote Fair to Good at 25@27½c @ doz.

HIDES—We quote California dry at 19@19½c lbs, and at 15@16c.

TALLOW—Quotable at 6@6½c @ lb.

HERDS—Quotable at 2@2½c @ lb.

HONEY—Comb white in frames, (regular) dark, @ 20c; extracted, 7@10c @ lb.

WOOL—We quote fine at 18@20c. Heavy and coarse description at 14@17c @ lb.

VEGETABLES—Quotable: Cabbage 60 @ 75c @ 100 lbs; Turnips, 75c @ $1 @ 100 lbs; Beets, $1 @ $1 25; Lima Beans, 10@12½c @ lb; Green Peas, 5@6c @ lb; Tomatoes, 50c @ $1 @ box; Okra, 40@50c @ box; Peppers, 50c @ $1 @ box; Cucumbers, 10@12½c @ doz; Green Corn, 25@30c @ doz; Marrowfat squash, 1½@1½ @ ton.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh roll, good to choice, @ 25@27½c; Eastern, 18@20c; Pickled, 15@17½c.

CHEESE—California, 12½@13c; Eastern, 14@16c.

EGGS—California, 22½@25c @ dozen; Oregon, 20@ 22½c; Eastern, 17½@20c.

CURED MEATS.

HAMS—California, 12½@13c @ lb; Eastern, 16@16½c.

BACON—California, 10@11c @ lb; Eastern, 12½@ 13½c; Oregon, 10@11c.

LARD—California, 10@11c @ lb; Eastern, in three, 10½@11c; do in tins, 10@11c; do in tubs, 11@11½c; do in caddies and pails, 12@12½.

BEEF IN BRINE.

BEEF—For first quality, 7@7½c; other grades, 6@ 6½c.

VEAL—At 7@10c @ lb.

MUTTON—At 7@8c @ lb.

LAMB—5@7c @ lb.

PORK—Hams, large, 12 @13c; Sealers, 15 @16c @ lb; Shoulders, $1 @ 1 @ 100 lbs @ dozen.

Hams—$1 @ 1 @ 100 lbs @ dozen.

Shoulders—$1 @ 1 @ 100 lbs @ dozen.

Bacon—Dry Salted, 10 @ dozen.

Venison—@10c @ lb.

Beef—$1 @ 1 @ 100 lbs.

Pickle—Beef, $1 @ 1 @ dozen.

The Source of Many Ills.

If all the ailments, bodily and mental, which torment the human family could be traced to their primary source, it would probably be found that three-fourths of them originated in the failure of the stomach and the other organs by which food is converted into nutriment and applied to the purposes of life, to perform the tasks allotted to them by nature, unprovoked and regularly. This being the case, the vast importance of a medicine which compels these organs to do their whole duty, thoroughly and efficiently, becomes at once apparent. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters may be truly characterized as a preparation of the kind—indeed, as the only one which can be implicitly relied on as combining the properties of a stomachic, an alterative and an aperient in such proportions as to produce simultaneously the desired effect upon the disordered stomach, liver and intestines. This conclusion is warranted by the celerity and certainty with which the Bitters afford relief a chronic cases of dyspepsia, torpidity of the liver and constipation. The false idea that these complaints, and ills that grow out of them, could be cured by fiery cathartics, has about it so hopelessly exploded. The while, during the last hundred years, hard-swallowed thousands of tons of mercury, sanguinary, gastric, croton oil, jalap, etc., and lose of thousands of dollars have been thus unnecessarily bled liberally. But ever since the principle of restoration, as embodied in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, was arrayed against the principles of prostration, the latter have been steadily losing ground, and the former has become a household word throughout the length and breadth of the land. Dyspepsia, liver complaint, constipation, nervousness, rheumatism, fever and ague, and kidney troubles of every description, are the ailments which this unrivaled tonic and alterative is ready for, and which it never fails to conquer. Let no one, therefore, who is afflicted with any of these distressing complaints, neglect to procure a bottle of this powerful vegetable remedy. For sale by druggists and dealers generally.

Subscriptions Received.

Santa Clara—H. Rhinehart.....$2 75
San José—H. Crow.....7 25
Fresno—Thomas Fowler.....4 00
P. J. Devine.....4 00
J. Wilson.....4 00
Livermore—A. Flaig.....4 00
Isleton—Thos. Hall.....4 00
John Nash.....4 00
Charles Nash.....1 00
C. A. Nash.....1 00
R. T. Barlow.....2 25
Mrs. Barlow.....1 00
Washington, Nat. Co.—James Meaghor.....3 00
Napa—Patrick Gallagher.....4 00
Mount Hill, Nev.—Thomas H. Whelan.....4 00
Madison—Patrick Ryan.....4 00
Michael Walsh.....4 00
Encarnina—Timothy Sullivan.....4 00
Tetuscua—R. Orlandi.....3 00
San Buenaventura—Hugh Dunn.....4 00
James Meehan.....4 00
Lakeport—Thomas Scanlan.....3 00
Calistoga—John Slattery.....4 00
San Quentin—Thomas Cahill.....4 00
Cave City—John Horan.....4 00
Oakland—John Fogarty.....4 00
Haywards—P. Greaney.....4 00
Los Gatos—John Carr.....4 00

DRY GOODS, ETC.

FRATINGER & NOLL

WILL EXHIBIT RARE NOV-elties during the coming week in handsome

LINEN SUITS.

NEW STYLES.

Embroidered and Braided in all the new Shades and Designs.

NEW STYLE CLOAKS.

CONSISTING IN—

These Are: English Walking Jackets, Dolman's Talmas, and Paletots.

Trimmed and Inserted with YAK LACE and PASSEMENTERIE, both Plain and Beaded.

HOUSE WRAPPERS!

A Large Assortment, consisting in

French Calico, Cashmere and Silk.

STREET SUITS.

In all New and Desirable SPRING GOODS, made up stylish and handsomely trimmed in two colors or with silk.

SPRING SILKS

Can be found in all Shades and at all Prices.

PASSEMENTERIES!

PASSEMENTERIES!

The Largest and Best Assortment of

BEADED GIMPS,

ORNAMENTS,

BUCKLES,

SLIDES,

FRINGES

AND BUTTONS.

YAK LACE AND INSERTIONS,

Both Plain and Beaded, in large variety.

FRATINGER & NOLL.

Leading Cloak and Suit House of the City,

10 Montgomery Street.

sept19

KENNEDY,

O'NEILL & BRENNAN,

—DIRECT IMPORTERS OF—

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

DRY GOODS,

116 and 118 Third Street,

Corner of Minna.....SAN FRANCISCO

ONE PRICE ONLY.

Manufactory of all kinds of

Silk and Bunting Flags, Banners, A. O. H. Scarfs,

ROSETTES AND BADGES, FOR BALLS AND PICNICS.

PARQUALE, 641 Washington street, 1y38 SAN FRANCISCO.

IMPORTATION DIRECT!

M. SHORT,

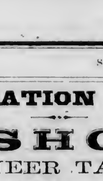
PIONEER TAILOR,

COMMERCIAL STREET, - - - Corner of Leidesdorff.



An Inspection of THIS SPLENDID STOCK Is respectfully invited. A perfect fit guaranteed.

Remember, my Prices to Orders are—

Pants.....$4 00
Business Suits.....12 00
Beaver Suits.....12 00
Finest French Beaver Suits.....15 00

M. SHORT,
527 Commercial Street,
SAN FRANCISCO.

IMMENSE SACRIFICE

—OF— —AND—

BOOTS AND SHOES!

CLOTHING AND GENT'S FURNISHING GOODS,

AT THE AVENUE AUCTION STORE OF

JAMES O'HANLON,

725 Montgomery Street.

GREAT CLEARANCE SALE FOR SIXTY DAYS ONLY.

A VISIT TO THE STORE WILL CONVINCE THE MOST SKEPTICAL THAT WE ARE NOW selling goods cheaper than any other house in the trade. Our present stock of Staple Goods must be sold to make room for a large consignment of Winter Goods—a space-full and well assorted stock of Men's and Boys' Boots and Shoes, manufactured expressly for our own trade and to suit the requirements of our customers.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 500 cases Men's tap sole Boots at..... | $1 50 | Men's and Boys' Clothing at Greatly Reduced Prices. | |
| " " " " " " | 1 75 | Your Men's Customers Suits at..... | $12 00 |
| 500 cases Farmers' Boots, full stock..... | 1 50 | 500 Men's Customers Suits..... | 12 00 |
| 500 cases Split and Nailed Boots at..... | 1 25 | Extra Heavy Beaver Suits..... | 12 00 |
| 500 cases Calf from Boots..... | 2 50 | A splendid and well-selected assort of Boys' and | |
| " " " " " " | 2 75 | Youths' Clothing, very cheap—Boys' Suits | |
| 100 cases do., split leather..... | 2 00 | from $3 to..... | 10 00 |
| 100 cases do., Kip and Calf..... | 2 50 | Youths' Suits, 17 50—worth $18. | |
| 100 cases Boys' Boots, 2 to 5..... | 1 50 | | |
| Don't we make and warrant | | | |

JOHN S. KENNY. MORRIS SHEAHAN

KENNY & SHEAHAN,

MERCHANT TAILORS,

No. 24 Third Street,

ARE PREPARED TO MAKE GENTLEMEN'S

BUSINESS SUITS TO ORDER, . . . . $25 00
FINE BEAVER SUITS, . . . . $35 00
FIRST-CLASS DRESS SUITS, . . . . $55 00

LATEST FASHIONABLE STYLES.

GREAT BARGAINS

BOOTS AND SHOES,

AT HEALY'S

RED HOUSE,

848 MARKET STREET (OPPOSITE FOURTH)

PRICES TO DEFY COMPETITION.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

706 MARKET STREET.

HAVING MADE ARRANGEMENTS FOR EXtensive improvements and enlargement of our store, we have determined to dispose of our stock of

DRY GOODS,

FANCY GOODS,

SILKS,

SHAWLS,

FURNISHING GOODS,

RIBBONS,

GLOVES, ETC.,

AT

Reduction of 33 1-3 Per Cent.

In order to open up our NEW STORE with an entire

NEW STOCK OF GOODS.

WYNNE, LOWTH & CO.

706 MARKET STREET,

OPPOSITE THIRD.....SAN FRANCISCO

NEW STORE!--NEW GOODS!

EVERYTHING NEW!

M. CAREY

TAKES PLEASURE IN ANNOUNCING TO the people of San Mateo county that he has opened a

GENERAL MERCHANDISE STORE AT SAN MATEO,

Where he will keep constantly on hand a large and well selected stock of

GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, CLOTHING, HARDWARE, BOOTS, SHOES, FURNISHING GOODS GLASSWARE, CROCKERY, WINES, LIQUORS & CIGARS, TOBACCO AND CANDIES,

Which will be sold at San Francisco prices for cash.

FARMERS, what is the use of going to San Francisco to purchase goods (meeting needless expense, when you can buy just as cheap from

CAREY?

Five hundred thousand dollars is taken to the Francisco each year from San Mateo county for the purchase of

GROCERIES

By resident families, when as good qualities and as cheap prices may be obtained at

CAREY'S.

It is a well known and undisputed fact that by purchasing all kinds of general merchandise for cash you save from 20 to 25 per cent.

SMALL DEALERS will be supplied at SAN FRANCISCO PRICES.

☞ Quick Sales and Small Profits is my motto.

GRAY'S

Music Stores and Music Publishing House,

933 and 935 Clay Street, San Francisco, and 101 First Street, Portland, O.

☞ The only Engraving and Publishing House on the Coast.

STEINWAY PIANOS AND ORGANS.

DECKER BROTHERS.

GUILD, CHURCH & CO. PIANOS AND SHONINGER ORGANS.

CARL RUDNICH, KRANICH & BACH, ERNST GABLER, AND M. GRAY Squares and Uprights.

☞ The Largest Stock of Music on the Pacific Coast.

Pianos for Rent at from $5 to $10 per month, at

GRAY'S MUSIC STORES.

PRINTING

Paper Ruling and Book Binding,

Neatly, Promptly, Cheaply,

PERFORMED BY

Bacon & Company,

Corner Clay and Sansome Sts.

Country Orders will receive special attention, and everything at these Offices now city prices.

THE MONITOR!

The Only Irish and Catholic Journal in California.

LYONS & BARRY, - - - Publishers.

PETER LYONS. JOHN T. BARRY.

RICHARD O'SULLIVAN.....EDITOR.
DENIS LYONS.....BUSINESS MANAGER.

OFFICE—522 CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 7, 8 and 9, up-stairs.)

All communications should be addressed to Lyons & Barry.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):

Sent by Carriers, per week.....10c
Sent by subscribers, per year.....$4 00
The Monitor.....$3 00
The Monitor and Catholic World, one year.....7 75
" " Godey's Lady's Book.....6 25
" " Demorest's Fashion Magazine.....5 50
" " Peterson's Ladies' Magazine.....3 50

ADVERTISING RATES:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 square, 1 time..... | $1 00 | 1 square, 6 months.. | $20 00 |
| " 1 month..... | 6 00 | " 9 months.. | 25 00 |
| " 3 months..... | 7 00 | " 6 months.. | 35 00 |
| " 6 months..... | 9 00 | " 1 year.. | 50 00 |

The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

A TWIN'S MISFORTUNES.

In form and features, face and limb,
I grew as like my brother,
That folks got taking me for him,
And each for me another.
It puzzled all our kith and kin—
It puzzled more than mother.

One day, to make the matter worse,
Before our names were known,
As we were being washed by nurse
We got completely mixed;
And then, you see, by fairy's curse,
Or nurse's fault, or worse,
My brother John got christened me
And I got christened John.

This fatal blunder was dogged
By Destiny's relentless spite;
And I was always getting flogged,
For John was full of mischief.
I put this question fruitlessly
Ten score times a week:
"What would you do if you were me
To prove I was not you?"

Our close resemblance never turned the tide
Of my domestic life,
For, somehow, my fair-minded bride
Became my mother's wife.
In fact, ever after I was Absent to make went on,
And when I did the right was
And buried brother John!
—Literary Recreation, Philadelphia.

Fit-Inspirations of the "Two-Year Olds."

BY MARK TWAIN.

All infants appear to have an impertinent and disagreeable fashion now-a-days of saying "unman" things on most occasions that offer, and especially on occasions when they ought not to be saying anything at all. Judging by the average published specimens of such sayings, the rising generation of children are a little deficient in Attic. And the parents must surely be but little better than the children, for in most cases they are the publishers of the infamies of infantile depravity which daily s'ts us from the pages of our periodicals. I may seem to speak with some heat, not to say a suspicion of personal spite; and I do admit that my motive may be to bear about so many gifted infants in these days, and remember that I seldom said anything smart when I was a child. I tried it once or twice, but was not popular. The family were not expecting brilliant remarks from me, and so they snubbed me sometimes and spanked me the rest. But it makes my blood jump and my blood amount to a fever when I see the average child of the baseness and beastliousness which are doing so much to degrade and render insignificant the adult human race of this superior epoch. When the child disappeared similar was ready for the opportunity, and the absence of Mrs. Rose from the room was the signal for an indecently callous indifference, though the truth was that she was then lying dangerously ill, and it was found necessary to withhold the sad intelligence from her. This calumny refuted, the pettiest gossips could invent the unhappy father. It was intimated that he had procured the abduction of his child for the purpose of blackmailing somebody.

His own relations, his social position, were assailed in the most venomous manner, and the press sensation-mongers caught up the scandalous rumors, and circulated them throughout the country. Presently these lies were in their turn refuted, and then, with unabated malignity, the scavengers resumed their calumnies against the unfeeling wife and mother, and at length reached the climax of outrage by a circumstantial report to the effect that she had been married to Rose, and that the family were a pack of swindlers and adventurers. The infamous story was first published in a Pennsylvania paper, the Real Estate Register, and Rose at once wrote to the editor of the lie to punish his and his wife's traducers, and proceeded vigorously against the libelling paper. The case is not yet settled, but it was well be said that in the preliminary examination Rose completely established the falsity and malice of the report, and vindicated the good name of his family and of his wife in the public. But the mischief had by this time reached a stage where the law was powerless. The envenomed shafts of calumny had done their work, they did, to some children. But I digress. I was lying there trying the Judas rubber rings. I remember looking at the clock and noticing that it is an hour and twenty-five minutes I would be two weeks old, and thinking of myself how little I had done to merit the blessings that were so unsparingly lavished upon me. My father said:

"Samuel is a very good name. My grandfather was named Abraham."

My mother said:

"Abraham is a good name. Very well. Let us have Abraham for one of the names."

I said:

"Abraham suits the subscriber."

My father frowned, my mother looked pleased; my aunt said:

"What a little darling it is!"

"My name, my child!"

"Isaac is a good name, and Jacob is a good name."

My mother assented and said:

"No names are better. Let us add Isaac and Jacob to his names."

I said:

"All right. Isaac and Jacob are good enough for yours truly. Pass me that rattle, if you please. I can't chew India rubber rings and sing."

Not a soul made a memorandum of these sayings of mine for publication. I saw that, and did it myself, else they would have been utterly lost. So far from meeting with a generous encouragement like other children when developing intelligently, I was now furiously scowled upon by my father; my mother looked grieved, and even my aunt had about her an expression of seeming to think maybe I had gone too far. I took a vicious bite out of an India rubber ring, and covertly broke the rattle over the kitten's head, but said nothing. Presently my father said:

"Samuel is a very excellent name."

I saw that trouble was coming. Nothing could prevent it. I laid down my rattle; over the side of the cradle I dropped my India-rubber ring, the children's brush, the toy dog, my tin soldier, the nutmeg grater, and other matters which I was accustomed to examine and meditate upon, and took a pleasant noisse with, and bang and batter and break and destroy, for entertainment and entainment. Then I put on my little frock and my little bonnet, and took my pigmy shoes in one hand and my pigmy mittens in the other, and climbed out on the floor. I said to myself, now, if the worst comes to the worst, I am ready. Then I said aloud, in a firm voice:

"I forbid, I cannot, cannot wear the name of Samuel."

"My son!"

"I shield, I mean it. I cannot."

"Why?"

"It rattles. I have an invincible antipathy to that name."

"My son, this is unreasonable. Many great and good men have been named Samuel."

"Sir, I have yet to hear of the first insane."

"What! There was Samuel, the prophet. Was he not great and good?"

"Not so very."

"My son! With His own voice the Lord called him."

"Yes, sir, and he called him a couple of times before he would come!"

And then I sallied forth, and that stern old man sallied forth after me. He overtook me at noon the following day, and when the interview was over I had acquired the name of Samuel, and a threshing, and other incidental information; and by means of this compromise my father's wrath was appeased, and a misunderstanding bridged over which might have become a permanent rupture if I had chosen to be unreasonable. But just jotting by this cyclone, what would my father have done to me if I had ever uttered in his hearing one of the flat, sickly things these "two-year-olds" say in print now a days? In my opinion there would have been a case of infanticide in our family.

The Horrible Work of Slander.

The "Monitor" has from time to time called attention to the baseness and beastliousness which are doing so much to degrade and render insignificant the adult human race of this superior epoch. When the child disappeared slander was ready for the opportunity, and the absence of Mrs. Rose from the room was the signal for an indecently callous indifference, though the truth was that she was then lying dangerously ill, and it was found necessary to withhold the sad intelligence from her. This calumny refuted, the pettiest gossips could invent the unhappy father. It was intimated that he had procured the abduction of his child for the purpose of blackmailing somebody.

His own relations, his social position, were assailed in the most venomous manner, and the press sensation-mongers caught up the scandalous rumors, and circulated them throughout the country. Presently these lies were in their turn refuted, and then, with unabated malignity, the scavengers resumed their calumnies against the unfeeling wife and mother, and at length reached the climax of outrage by a circumstantial report to the effect that she had been married to Rose, and that the family were a pack of swindlers and adventurers. The infamous story was first published in a Pennsylvania paper, the Real Estate Register, and Rose at once wrote to the editor of the lie to punish his and his wife's traducers, and proceeded vigorously against the libelling paper. The case is not yet settled, but it may as well be said that in the preliminary examination Rose completely established the falsity and malice of the report, and vindicated the good name of his family and of his wife in the public. But the mischief had by this time reached a stage where the law was powerless. The envenomed shafts of calumny had done their work, they did, to some children. But I digress. I was lying there trying the India-rubber rings. I remember looking at the clock and noticing that it is an hour and twenty-five minutes I would be two weeks old, and thinking of myself how little I had done to merit the blessings that were so unsparingly lavished upon me. My father said:

"Samuel is a good name. My grandfather was named Abraham."

My mother said:

"Abraham is a good name. Very well. Let us have Abraham for one of the names."

I said:

"Abraham suits the subscriber."

My father frowned, my mother looked pleased; my aunt said:

"What a little darling it is!"

"My name, my child!"

"Isaac is a good name, and Jacob is a good name."

My mother assented and said:

"No names are better. Let us add Isaac and Jacob to his names."

I said:

"All right. Isaac and Jacob are good enough for yours truly. Pass me that rattle, if you please. I can't chew India rubber rings and sing."

Not a soul made a memorandum of these sayings of mine for publication. I saw that, and did it myself, else they would have been utterly lost. So far from meeting with a generous encouragement like other children when developing intelligently, I was now furiously scowled upon by my father; my mother looked grieved, and even my aunt had about her an expression of seeming to think maybe I had gone too far. I took a vicious bite out of an India

THE MONITOR.

VOL. XVIII. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1874. NO. 1.

Annales de Notre Dame de Lourdes, 1874.

No matter in what light the facts contained in this most remarkable publication be considered, they must strike all who read them with wonder and admiration. The small pamphlet under notice purports to be a record of the pilgrimages to the now world wide known grotto of Lourdes, and of the facts there witnessed by hundreds and thousands of living witnesses. First comes the record of the pilgrimages—men and women, old and young, learned and ignorant, believers and unbelievers, from every corner of the world, hastening to that shrine, where they heard God has been pleased to manifest His power through her intercession whom all generations blessed among women. From the published we learn that fourteen sends in pilgrims, Cayenne in 587, Castres in Montpellier has 560, and so on of Hoche, Carcassonne, Perpignan, Forcalquier hundreds and their thousands of p.

These items are followed by the lesser numbers from every clime under the sun, all hastening round what was but a few years ago a barren and unsightly rock in a poor and unknown district at the foot of the Pyrenees. The next portion of the Annals of the month of August gives the solemn ceremonies of the blessing of the new bells presented to the Church of Lourdes by his Royal Highness Don Alfonso XII. de Bourbon, Prince des Asturies. At these ceremonies his Eminence Cardinal Donnet, Archbishop of Borde

LATE IRISH NEWS.

It is stated that the flax crop this year is looked to very much superior that of any season since 1866, and that many localities it will compare favorably with the memorable crop of that year. It appears that it was almost entirely exempt from casualties while growing, and that the has been saved without injury. In a few places, however, the crop is reported to have been a partial failure.

The steamer Tagus arrived in Cork harbor on 21st September, and reported having lost one man in a storm in the Atlantic while coming from New York. She passed another vessel which, in that same gale, lost three of her crew. The Tagus were 2,000 rifles on board the Tagus, which, landed for the Russian Government. A force of police was sent on board to insure the safety of the rifles while the vessel was moored in the harbor.

Mr. John Mitchel left Dublin on the morning of September 24 for Kilkenny. At the Kingsbridge terminus a number of sympathizers and friends assembled to bid him farewell. He was accompanied by his brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Hill Irwin, and by John Martin, M. P.; J. F. Smyth, ex-M. P.; Mr. Florence McCarthy and Dr. Cruise, Bishop of Ardagh. Several other gentlemen—including Mr. A. M. Sullivan, M. P.—were present to bid adieu to the d ser, inguished Irishman, who, as the Express moved off was saluted by those assembled on the platform.

In order to satisfy the wishes of friend numerous friends desirous to present a testimonial to Most Rev. Dr. John, MacHale, Bishop and Archbishop of Tuam, as a mark of esteem and respect, a preliminary meeting for that purpose was held in the Queen's Hotel, Mallow, on Saturday, the 23th September 20. The meeting was large and it truly representative. Dr. Barry presided, and a committee was appointed to carry out the object of the meeting. It was resolved to hold another meeting at the same place on the following Sunday, to which all the friends and admirers of the Bishop elect were invited.

The Sunday closing movement is making way in the south. At a meeting of the Grocers' Association of Dublin, the chairman stated that, at the approaching licensing meeting for that city, the magistrates would be asked to close either the six-day licenses. Subsequently, at his attention, a resolution was adopted calling upon the grocers to spirit dealers of the town to send a memorial to the magistrates upon the subject. Could this be done, in the face of action like this, it is impossible that the question of Sunday closing for Ireland can be shelved to the next session of Parliament.

Active preparations are going on in several parts of the country for meetings in Home Rule demonstrations. At a preliminary conference in Cork, on 18th September, presided over by Mr. Shaw, M. P., they were resolved to hold an aggregate meeting in the city on Sunday, the 29th inst. and on October, in furtherance of the Home Rule cause. Resolutions were also passed at a meeting of the Limerick Catholic Club, held on the motion of the venerated Father Tom O'Shea, to hold the meeting for O'Connell on the 15th October, in Mary Street, and to invite the Lord Mayor to preside. As Queen's county the Independent Club formally received on September 17 for it on the motion of the Rev. Father Tom O'Shea, to hold the meeting for O'Connell on the 4th October, in Maryborough, and in Limerick the preparations are so complete advanced, but there and in Clare the process pily will assemble the greatest demonstration on the great question of the day in Ireland ever witnessed. Arrangements to be made for meetings in Kilkenny, Waterford, Tipperary, and other counties are also in progress.

His numerous friends throughout the country will regret to hear of the unexpected demise of that estimable priest and patriot, Rev. John Ryan, C.C., Kno know clergyman, who departed this life very suddenly, which occurred at Byrne's Hotel, Limerick, on September 25. The deceased clergyman was in the prime of life, but with scarcely attained his 37th year. He was married, and left three young children. He was ordained by the late Archbishop Slattery, now of which he spent in his native diocese of Cashel, and was universally esteemed by the clergy of the diocese of Emly, as well as by the poor people of the parish in which he was attached during his brief ministry. The reverend gentleman was interred in the family vault, Caherconlish, and in every denomination deep sorrow for his Christian end and early demise.

The census of Fermanagh has been published, and it discloses more of startling nature and one to cause great surprise. As in the case of every other county, upon the returns for 1871, as compared with those of 1861, such a considerable falling off in the number of inhabitants and of inhabited houses. In 1861 there were 19 378 inhabited houses; in 1871 there were only 17, standing on the population, which was 105 in that 1861, stands now only at 92,781. It is interesting that the Catholics are much more than half the population, and are Nearly seven to one. It looks rather strange, even on the surface that the county should be represented in Parliament by two such Tories, Irish politicians, as Messrs. Cole and Archdall; but that anomaly will not, we hope, long believe, exist after the next general election.

Mr. O'Leary, who was sent out upon the Irish Laborers' Union to Canada, has sent home word that he "has secured the active co-operation of Lord Dufferin, Governor-General, and other important establishments in the Canadian Ministry," towards facilitating the emigration of Irish laborers to that country. He also says that a branch of the union has been formed and the members, in a few months, will number 5,000. Mr. James Milligan, giving the largeness of 2190—to old such immigrants to Manitoba down on the list. Practical work that and something like what has been was extremely desirable in the event Ireland being still further depopulated by emigration.

An important demonstration in favor of fair valued rents and fixity o Tenure was made September 20 at Ulting the Kilkenny county. Mr. Martin, the well-known Land Leaguer, Father Healy and other local gentlemen. The principle of the meeting was to call upon the spirit dealers of the town to send a memorial to the magistrates, upon the Sunday Closing Act. Could this be done in such a shape, the face of action like this, it is impossible that the question of Sunday closing for Ireland can be shelved to the next session of Parliament.

It is our melancholy duty to re the death of a good priest and hearted gentleman—Father James Loguen, P. P., Conahy, who expired in h on the 26th September, whither he a few weeks ago for medical advice, the some years past Father O'Gorman had declining health, and his demise was unexpected by, the kind friend watched around his bedside, as well his numerous admirers who esteem for his genial qualities and his character. The sad intelligence death will be received with painful not only in this diocese, but among clerical acquaintances throughout

THE MONITOR.

THE WEDDING OF SHON MACLEAN.

A B-SIDE BALLAD, FROM THE GAELIC.

At the wedding of Shon Maclean
Twenty pipers together
Played the bagpipes merrily,
Tuning over the bonnie
Then the fiddlers struck up,
Twenty fiddlers together,
Each one with a long feather,
Each one with a new feather;
Twenty pipers together.

He's but a seannachie, blind and vain,
Who never heard of Shon Maclean—
The Duke—who plays second, "Over the Fells,"
From his fe'rocious wind his fiery hair
Tosses and tosses, and his fingers dance
The Maclean's head followed them in measure,
And played the pipes back to the Duke
Since the Duke's fingers and the earth forgot
Who was a lily and lordship, and the humming of bees—

Like the shafts of the sun wind in the trees;
Like the stinging of tongues, the griping of hunger,
Like ocean itself, with its storms and its calms,
Was the piping of Shon, now he strutted and now

A cock whose crowing creation he knew!
At last, I, the prime of boasting the life,
The spirit moved Shon to take a wife—
A lassie with respect ill-gifted and fine,
So he loved her for her virtues, poor boy,
And danced to the sound with a heart and a leg
Whose wedding was worthy of Shon Maclean.
Shall the pipers of a single parish
Have all the wedding and bride their song,
And the pipers of twenty parishes
All the pipers in history drowned
Where the Duke and the bonnie wind and the wind,
To bless the wedding and bless their song.

At the wedding of Shon Maclean
Twenty pipers together—
Leave out the fiddlers—
Sandy of the Isles,
Sandy of the Isles, and Sandy Mather;
And twenty pipes was he,
And twenty pipes was he.

The kind was tied, the word was said,
Shon was married, the feast was spread,
All the world was there, and the piping free,
Strong Sandy, of the Isles Seannachie—
Sandy of the Isles, and Sandy Mather—
And clad in crimson from head to heel,
Sandy, the piper, and Sandy, the seer,
Gathered the music of many a year,
With knowledge of piping and piping lore,
Many widows and orphans have wailed,
Many a maiden and matron grown pale,
While Shon was at home and her father fled,
Shon, Shon, Shon, Shon Maclean,
Then came a lilt, I remember the pipers blew
Like the sound of the sea in the Hebrides,
The Duke himself, in his kilt and plaid,
With crest of the eagle and badge of the spade,
And knew a march, and he played it there,
Before the Piper, and from his wife,
A heart to the bagpipes dear,
They set the wedding, and each man sprang
To the floor of the barn, and the rafters rang
With the lilt of the music—and Shon and his bride
And the Duke and the pipers and pipes to boot,
Danced all night to the bagpipes' tune,
Sandy of the Isles and Peasant Mather,
Played the pipes, and Sandy played,
Played for the company on the floor,
Played for Shon Maclean and his bride.

At the wedding of Shon Maclean
Twenty pipers together
Blowing with might and main
Through wonderful ranges of leather;
With wonderful ranges of leather;
They struck it, they struck it, they struck!
They struck it, they struck it, they struck!
Sounding time and tune
Like the sound of the sea in the Hebrides.

Who led the dance? In pomp and pride
The Duke himself led out his bride,
And the Duke's son led out another,
For the new Duke's son reached her shoulder;
Sandy of the Isles led out the youngest,
Like a mountain and a lass, the strongest
And the weakest, the tallest and the least,
Shon Shon himself and the bonniest lass
Whose name was Mary, and Shon's own bride
Shon's own bride, and his wife and his love,
Danced all night to the bagpipes' tune,
Danced all night to the bagpipes' tune,
Danced all night to the bagpipes' tune

LATE IRISH NEWS.

It is stated that the flax crop this year in Ireland is very much superior that of any season since 1864, and that many localities it will compare favora with the memorable crop of that year. appears that it was almost entirely exempt from causative while growing, and the has been saved without injury. In a few place, however, the crop is reported to have been a partial failure.

The steamer Tagus arrived in Co harbor on 21st September, and report having lost one mast in a storm in N Atlantic while coming from New Yo She passed another vessel which, in same gale, lost three of her crew. The want 2,000 rifles on board the Tagus, needed for the Russian Government, horse of rifles was sent on board in lieu the safety of the rifles while the vessel transhipped in the harbor.

Mr. John Mitchel left Dublin ong the morning of September 24 for Kilkenny. At the Kingsbridge terminus a number of his friends assembled to bid him farewell. He was accompanied by the daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Mill Irvine, Jas. John Martin, M. P., Mr. F. J. Smyth, Mr. Florence McCarthy and Dr. Gray, Bishop of Auckland. Several other gentlemen—including Mr. A. M. Sullivan, M. P., to whom he had sent word as the ty at disguised Irishman, who, as the ly moved to it was saluted by those assem on the platform.

In order to satisfy the wishes of t numerous friends desirous to present of address and testimonial to Mons. Barry MacCarthy, Bishop elect of Cloyne, Sprom search of esteem and respect, a preliminary meeting of the parties was held in Queen's Arms Hotel, Mallow, on Sunday, September 29. The meeting was further adjourned to Wednesday. Dr. Barry presided. A committee was appointed to carry out the object of the meeting. It was resolved to hold another meeting at the same place on the following Sunday, to which all the friends and admirers of the Bishop elect were invited.

The Sunday closing movement is making way in Ireland. The Archbishop of the Province of Limerick the chairman stated that, at the approaching meeting of bishops, they would publish rules which in no great other ill-sty days' interval. Subsequently, at his re quest, the rules adopted embraced upon the grocers and spirit dealers of town to send a memorial to the magistrates urging the adoption of such a course, and the face of action like this, it is impossible that the people of Ireland will, by the end of ' ', be landed on the lee-shore in the next session of Parliament.

Active preparations are going on, and several places, at last accounts, for meetings in Home Rule demonstrations. At a public meeting recently held in Cork, on the 25th September, presided over by Mr. Shaw, M. P., any was resolved to hold an aggregate meeting of the friends of Home Rule on the 7th of October, in furtherance of the Home Rule movement. The meeting was held in the Victoria Rooms, Cork, formerly rented on September 17 last, on the motion of the venerated Father Tom O'Shea, to hold the meeting for the county on the 6th October, in Mary borough, in Limerick the preparations are not so ' advanced, and it is feared the meeting for the 7th will have once more declared the preliminaries on the great question of the day in Ireland to be premature, and have to be put away.

His numerous friends throughout the country will regret to hear of the ne ported illness of the estimable Roman clergyman, Rev. John Ryan, C.C., Knoxnlatey, which occurred at Bryan's Hospital, Limerick, on September 26. The deceased gentleman was in the prime of life, her ' ' ently stationed in the Irish capital. He ordained by the late military about five y ago, most of which he spent in his native diocese of Cashel, and was universally loved by the clergymen of the diocese that will be by the poor people of the parish to which he was attached during his mission ary. The reverend gentleman was interred on the family vault, Cahirconlish, on the following day, amidst the deepest manifestations of sorrow for his untimely and unexpected end.

The census of Fermanagh has been published, and it discloses more of a Gaelic character than the other counties. As in the case of every other county, Fermanagh has suffered by emigration since the returns for 1871, as compared with those of 1861, when a considerable falling off in the number of inhabitants and of inhabited houses. In 1871 there were 19,376 inhabited houses, in 1871 there were only 17,1 and while the population, which was 105 and in 1861 stands now only at 97,784. Notwithstanding that the Catholics are much more than half the population, and are Nationalists to the backbone, the Orange element still holds the surface that the county should be represented in Parliament by two anti-Home Rulers as Messrs. Cole and Archdall; but that anomaly will not, we hope, long exist after the next general election.

Mr. O'Leary, who was sent out as the Irish Laborers' Union to Canada, has sent home word that he "has secured the active co-operation of Lord Dufferin, Governor-General, and other important personages in the Canadian Ministry," together with "the encouragement of Irish Catholics in that country. He also says the s ' ' ' natives has been formed under the auspices of the Irish Canadian Colonization Society, and that Mr. James McGillespie, giving the large of £100—to aid such immigrants as may come on the land. Practical work and something like what has been suppose ' ' '

IRISH LOCAL NEWS.

The Vincentian Fathers recently gave a mission to the town of Galway.

Mr. Dourley has been elected secretary of the Tuam Lunatic Home Rule Association in place of Mr. Hayden, resigned.

The death is announced of Mr. John Mulvany, of Cruiserath House, Dunsaw. The funeral was one of the largest seen in that district for many years.

The Hon. Gerald Fitzgibbon was recently appointed to the vice-chairmanship of the Limerick Board of Guardians, and a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Sandars, who has retired from the office after several years of valuable service.

About £300 have been subscribed in Drogheda for the erection of a drinking fountain, but the Corporation have not yet decided anything definite with regard to it. When the foundation-stone is laid it is intended to present Mr. Whitworth with a suitable address.

At the petty sessions in Killorney the magistrates referred with regret to the fact that as many as twenty-seven persons were placed in the police cells for drunkenness on the evening of the recent fair in the town.

A preliminary meeting was recently held in Maryborough for the formation of a brass band for that town. There was a large attendance, and great interest was manifested in the proceedings. Several subscriptions were handed in.

On Sunday, September 20, the Maynooth brass band paid a visit to Rathcoole and played a variety of national airs there. They afterwards attended soberly, thus showing by their general demeanor that temperance is their chief motto. The visit to Rathcoole was hailed by the people of the locality with the greatest pleasure.

At a most influential and largely attended meeting, held September 15 in Ballina, under the presidency of Mr. Bourke, the principal proprietors relative to the bill to be brought before Parliament in reference to the improvement of the town were adopted after a most interesting discussion. The different proprietors, Mr Charles Gore, Captain Jackson and others, promised to give every support in their power to facilitate the measure.

A shocking occurrence has taken place in Omagh Lunatic Asylum. A poor imbecile, who had forgotten his own name, was allowed to associate with refractory inmates, as he believed he was proprietor of that division of the institution, and liked to be styled landlord. A fellow-patient, conceiving the idea that he had at night to feed and water the devil, attacked him from behind with a poker, and literally beat his head to pieces. The madman next attacked the keeper, but was disarmed.

The usual weekly meeting of the Guardians of the Cookstown Union was held on 19th September. The attendance of the members—ex officio and elected—was unusually large, owing to a notice of motion, the object of which was to exclude the representatives of the press from the meetings of the Board. A good deal of interest was attached to the proceedings. A vote was taken on the motion, and the result showed that thirteen voted for the motion and fourteen against it; thus, by a majority of one, the representatives of the fourth estate have access to the Board's proceedings.

A meeting was held at Kilrea, county Londonderry, for the purpose of considering the desirability of making a railway or gauge line of railway from the town to Ballymena, where a junction could be effected with the Northern Counties line. The project would seem to have been received with favor, and after the meeting a visit to the neighborhood through which the proposed line would run, and after the chairman and Mr. Cleary, C. E., had explained the advantages of the intended railway, a committee was appointed to collect subscriptions to be applied to defraying preliminary expenses necessary in obtaining Parliamentary powers for the completion of the proposed scheme.

A fatal boat accident is reported from Ballybunion, a sea-coast town about six miles from Tralee, at the mouth of the Cashen river. It appears that a boat set out to a boat to meet a government cutter, to bring in a new life-boat from the coastguard station. On their return they were upset by a wild sea. Mr. Weekes, one of the crew, managed to get right, and seeing the chief boatman, Mr. Harvey, in danger of being lost, he threw him one of the oars and so saved his life. Three of the crew and four fellows during the time were battling in the waves. Two were rescued by their gallant and brave comrades, the chief boatman and Weekes, but one man, named Searle, was lost.

Immediately after divine service on Sunday, September 20, a large and influential meeting of the parishioners of Fanlis was held in the chapel by the purpose of raising subscriptions to erect a monument to the memory of their respected pastor, the Rev. A. Conellan, Thomas McGrath, Esq., in the chair. The meeting was addressed in very appropriate terms by the chairman, and carried unanimously: "That the following be appointed collectors in their respective districts: Messrs. David Rochford, John Walsh, Michael Slattery, Pat. McMahon, Robert McGrath, Pat. Ryan." "That the erection of a mural tablet or other monument to be placed in a suitable place in the chapel is but a just tribute to the memory of our late respected parish priest, the Rev. Andrew Conellan." The following subscriptions were then handed in: Thomas McGrath, £1; Matthew Purcell, £1; Walter Heaney, £1. A number of other preliminaries the meeting separated.

The Carrickmacross Guardians have set their faces determinedly against casuals, and on the application for a night's lodging, has now to enter a bath of cold water, and to the same before leaving the house in the morning. Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to receive a good practical education in as short a time as possible. Those who prefer it can, however, study the French language in the College, our own language especially excepted. Only for what Dan O'Connell styled "the illiterates," where more potatoes belonging to Mr. Harold were to be sacrificed to the Carrickmacross Guardians, and their letter was read at the usual weekly meeting of the body. The Board intimated that the cutting of the hair of casuals must be regarded in the light of punishment, and parties legally entitled to relief among not be punished, and the local board would not recognise any difference between casuals and regular work-house inmates, referring the Guardians to the poor law regulations on the subject. The Local Government Board, therefore, called upon the Guardians to rescind the resolution passed by them in reference to the hair-cutting. Mr. Evelyn Shirley, who presided, said he quite agreed with the Local Government Board—as they were equal before the law, and even among paupers the Guardians could make no odious distinctions.

As soon as the news reached Newtownbutler that a son and heir had been born to the Earl of Erne, preparations on a grand scale was made by the inhabitants of the village and the surrounding neighborhood to have the houses illuminated, and such to the esteem in which his lordship and the Countess of Erne are held, that men and poor, old and young, joined hand in hand to give relief to the event. At about seven o'clock in the evening a large bonfire was lighted at the end of the town, and fully fifty persons were assembled. All the houses in the village were beautifully illuminated. Father Murray's house presented a lively appearance, as also did Mr. James Wales', assistant county engineer; and the little village of Newtownbutler up to twelve o'clock presented a cheerful appearance. Drumhish, another village on the property of Lord Erne, also contributed to the rejoicings. A large bonfire was lighted near the square, and every house in the village was beautifully lighted up. In the evening Father Murray's house presented a lively appearance, as also did Mr. James Wales', assistant county engineer; and the little village of Newtownbutler up to twelve o'clock presented a cheerful appearance. Drumhish, another village on the property of Lord Erne, also contributed to the rejoicings. A large bonfire was lighted near the square, and every house in the village was beautifully lighted up. In Longford, at about ten o'clock, a tar barrel was lighted outside the hotel, and a large concourse of people attended, and several cheers were given for the Earl and Countess and their infant heir. It is contemplated by the Town Commissioners and all altogether to celebrate the happy event on the return of Lord Granard and Lady to Castleforbes.

It is a painful duty, says the Kilkenny Journal to record the death of Rev. Joseph Moore, P. P., of Castlecomer, which took place on the 6th inst. Father Moore, P. P., Johnstown. The reverend gentleman had been ailing for some time past, suffering from paralysis. His strong and healthy constitution by degrees gave way, and on the 6th inst. he breathed his last. On the 8th September, in the seventy-first year of his age and forty-sixth of his sacred ministry. Early life he passed with credit through the old diocesan colleges—Burke's Hall and Herbert's Hall. Having received the order of priesthood, he was appointed to a curacy in the diocese of Kildare. As soon as possible he was required to his native diocese he was appointed to Burrow. His subsequently arrived in Castlecomer, Upperchurch, Ballan, Kilmacow, Rosbercon and Piltown, in the death of Rev. Mr. Kelly he was promoted to an especial charge of Castlecomer in November, 1851. As a scholar he was distinguished for his classical knowledge, and was for many years a useful member of the Kilkenny Archæological Society. His death is regarded as a calamity of no ordinary kind in his flock, for he was a friend to all in his power to help and console the afflicted. Mindful of them through life, he made them his heir of any little property he possessed at death, and bequeathed to the parish of Castlecomer, notwithstanding the inclemency of the day, a large number of clergy from Emory and Kildare attended his office.

The Sword of a Hero.

The sword of the hero may come to men as base as those to which fate condemned himself. Everybody knows the history of Latour d'Auvergne, the premier grenadier de la France," who was killed in 1800 at Oberhausen, fighting pour la patrie. Latour, a man of princely birth, despised the extravagance of the wild sixth century sweep the armies of Europe before them. He might have aspired to any grade, even to high military rank, but he steadily refused all offers of promotion, and remained in the ranks of the rank and file. He was, however, the most glorious of private soldiers, and was called "the first Grenadier of France" was a position at once heroic and romantic, but one which in the way which led to the more solid attainment of the Marshal's baton. There is little poetry in war, but where it exists it could be imparted into the air was used to keep fresh the memory and the example of a brave and noble spirit. Every day after his death, when the 46th (their legends, to which he belonged was called, the praise was to call the roll as if the plain soldier still carried his musket in the rank. When his name was called, one of the regiment answered, "Mort au champ d' honneur!" There was custom, but, notwithstanding, it is hard to conceive a more graceful or more touching tribute to the deserving. Latour-Auvergne, the plain soldier, is still remembered in the regiments, and every house is lighted up. In the 46th he is still the "Grenadier of France."

Mr. Mather, accordingly, had sent before him four of the constabulary and was proceeding to the place on a car, accompanied by Mr. Kirkland, when Mr. Harold rushed from his house, drew a double-barrel pistol from his breast, and presenting it at Mr. Mateer, pulled the trigger. The powder was burned, but the bullet ran to the opposite side of the car. Mr. Harold pursued him and fired the second barrel, the ball passing close to Mr. Mateer's back. Mr. Harold was arrested by the constabulary, and lodged in the custody of the constabulary.

More than a quarter of a century has passed since O'Connell died. Never did a man deserve more the name of "Liberator," and never did he more have on his the history of Ireland of more serviceable patriotism. Only for what Dan O'Connell accomplished during his lifetime such organizations as the Irish Brigade and the Home Rule parties in the House of Commons would be impossible. Indeed, to him O'Connell's exertions must be attributed the most of the civil and religious liberties which Catholics all over the United Kingdom now enjoy. Yet the man for whom the Irish people of the British Empire are still endeavoring to raise a monument, in a permanent and substantial manner, Irishmen in Europe and America—and their number is not by any means small—will blush that twenty-seven years have been suffered to pass away, and that the capital of Ireland is still without such a statute of the Liberator of the Irish people. The death of Mr. Finlay, the distinguished sculptor, both in a degree drawn public attention to this disgraceful national fact. The great artist left no work on the great national memorial to the most useful of Irishmen of this century seems to be in a fair way to completion as soon. No wonder that Irish patriotism should be sneered at.

On Sunday evening, Sept. 20, Athenry was thrown into excitement by the sound of drums, fifes, clarionets, etc., played by a dozen of the most respectable young men there, who, having been organized—the old men walking in four deep behind the band, followed by hundreds of young men, marched in in the same manner. They played several national airs through the town, and when bringing it to a stop, walked in procession to the residence of Very Rev. Canon O'Grady, Athenry, and continued their musical entertainment before his door for about an hour. The very reverend gentleman appeared at his window and addressed the assembled multitude. He said he was more than delighted to see so many sober, respectable and intelligent people assembled together in such a simple but amusing enjoyment; that they had his hearty cooperation and concurrence, and that if any member of their society would call upon him on the following day he would heartily give them five pounds towards buying instruments and then, after receiving his paternal national amusement before his door for about an hour. The very reverend gentleman then disappeared at his window and addressed the assembled multitude. He said he was more than delighted to see so many sober, respectable and intelligent people assembled together in such a simple but amusing enjoyment; that they had his hearty cooperation and concurrence, and that if any member of their society would call upon him on the following day he would heartily give them five pounds towards buying instruments and then, after receiving his paternal national amusement before his door for about an hour. The very reverend gentleman then disappeared at his window and addressed the assembled multitude. He said he was more than delighted to see so many sober, respectable and intelligent people assembled together in such a simple but amusing enjoyment; that they had his hearty cooperation and concurrence, and that if any member of their society would call upon him on the following day he would heartily give them five pounds towards buying instruments and then, after receiving his paternal national amusement before his door for about an hour.

NOW IN SAN FRANCISCO.

DR. J. A. SHERMAN,

Specialist in Treatment of Rupture,

RESPECTFULLY ANNOUNCES THAT HE has returned to the city, and may be consulted at his branch office,

240 Montgomery st., corner of Pine,

By those desirous of obtaining the benefit of his experience and assistance in the adaptation of his garment for the radical cure of Hernia, without regard to the age of the patients or duration of the affection.

Photographs of bad cases of

RUPTURE

Before and after treatment and CURE, can be seen at his office. Descriptive pamphlets mailed on self address on receipt of ten cents.

The CURE is effected by local external application only.

OFFICE:

240 Montgomery street, San Francisco.

PRINCIPAL OFFICE:

No. 1 Astor street, New York (formerly 627 Broadway).

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. MARY'S ACADEMY,

SANTA CLARA,.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS ACADEMY, CONDUCTED BY THE SISters of the Notre Dame, is situated in the most healthy portion of the Santa Clara Valley, two miles from the cars. The object of this institution is to give a solid Christian education, comprising all the branches suitable for young ladies. Pupils of any religious denomination will be received. For further information inquire of the Sisters of Notre Dame, San José, Santa Clara, or Mission Dolores.

1211

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to receive a good practical education in as short a time as possible. Those who prefer it can, however, study the French language in the College, our own language especially excepted. Only for what Dan O'Connell styled "the illiterates," where more potatoes belonging to Mr. Harold were to be sacrificed to the Carrickmacross Guardians, and their letter was read at the usual weekly meeting of the body. The Board intimated that the cutting of the hair of casuals must be regarded in the light of punishment, and parties legally entitled to relief among not be punished, and the local board would not recognise any difference between casuals and regular work-house inmates, referring the Guardians to the poor law regulations on the subject. The Local Government Board, therefore, called upon the Guardians to rescind the resolution passed by them in reference to the hair-cutting. Mr. Evelyn Shirley, who presided, said he quite agreed with the Local Government Board—as they were equal before the law, and even among paupers the Guardians could make no odious distinctions.

As soon as the news reached Newtownbutler that a son and heir had been born to the Earl of Granard, preparations on a grand scale was made by the inhabitants of the village and the surrounding neighborhood to have the houses illuminated, and such to the esteem in which his lordship and the Countess of Granard are held, that men and poor, old and young, joined hand in hand to give relief to the event. At about seven o'clock in the evening a large bonfire was lighted at the end of the town, and fully fifty persons were assembled. All the houses in the village were beautifully illuminated. Father Murray's house presented a lively appearance, as also did Mr. James Wales', assistant county engineer; and the little village of Newtownbutler up to twelve o'clock presented a cheerful appearance. Drumhish, another village on the property of Lord Granard, also contributed to the rejoicings. A large bonfire was lighted near the square, and every house in the village was beautifully lighted up. In Longford, at about ten o'clock, a tar barrel was lighted outside the hotel, and a large concourse of people attended, and several cheers were given for the Earl and Countess and their infant heir. It is contemplated by the Town Commissioners and all altogether to celebrate the happy event on the return of Lord Granard and Lady to Castleforbes.

It is a painful duty, says the Kilkenny Journal to record the death of Rev. Joseph Moore P. P., of Castlecomer, which took place on the 6th inst. Father Moore, P. P., Johnstown. The reverend gentleman had been ailing for some time past, suffering from paralysis. His strong and healthy constitution by degrees gave way, and on the 6th inst. he breathed his last. On the 8th September, in the seventy-first year of his age and forty-sixth of his sacred ministry. Early life he passed with credit through the old diocesan colleges—Burke's Hall and Herbert's Hall. Having received the order of priesthood, he was appointed to a curacy in the diocese of Kildare. As soon as possible he was required to his native diocese he was appointed to Burrow. His subsequently arrived in Castlecomer, Upperchurch, Ballan, Kilmacow, Rosbercon and Piltown. In the death of Rev. Mr. Kelly he was promoted to an especial charge of Castlecomer in November, 1851. As a scholar he was distinguished for his classical knowledge, and was for many years a useful member of the Kilkenny Archæological Society. His death is regarded as a calamity of no ordinary kind in his flock, for he was a friend to all in his power to help and console the afflicted. Mindful of them through life, he made them his heir of any little property he possessed at death, and bequeathed to the parish of Castlecomer, notwithstanding the inclemency of the day, a large number of clergy from Emory and Kildare attended his office.

The Sword of a Hero.

The sword of the hero may come to men as base as those to which fate condemned himself. Everybody knows the history of Latour d'Auvergne, the premier grenadier de la France," who was killed in 1800 at Oberhausen, fighting pour la patrie. Latour, a man of princely birth, despised the extravagance of the wild sixth century sweep the armies of Europe before them. He might have aspired to any grade, even to high military rank, but he steadily refused all offers of promotion, and remained in the ranks of the rank and file. He was, however, the most glorious of private soldiers, and was called "the first Grenadier of France" was a position at once heroic and romantic, but one which in the way which led to the more solid attainment of the Marshal's baton. There is little poetry in war, but where it exists it could be imparted into the air was used to keep fresh the memory and the example of a brave and noble spirit. Every day after his death, when the 46th (their legends, to which he belonged was called, the praise was to call the roll as if the plain soldier still carried his musket in the rank. When his name was called, one of the regiment answered, "Mort au champ d' honneur!" There was custom, but, notwithstanding, it is hard to conceive a more graceful or more touching tribute to the deserving. Latour-Auvergne, the plain soldier, is still remembered in the regiments, and every house is lighted up. In the 46th he is still the "Grenadier of France."

Mr. Mather, accordingly, had sent before him four of the constabulary and was proceeding to the place on a car, accompanied by Mr. Kirkland, when Mr. Harold rushed from his house, drew a double-barrel pistol from his breast, and presenting it at Mr. Mateer, pulled the trigger. The powder was burned, but the bullet ran to the opposite side of the car. Mr. Harold pursued him and fired the second barrel, the ball passing close to Mr. Mateer's back. Mr. Harold was arrested by the constabulary, and lodged in the custody of the constabulary.

More than a quarter of a century has passed since O'Connell died. Never did a man deserve more the name of "Liberator," and never did he more have on his the history of Ireland of more serviceable patriotism. Only for what Dan O'Connell accomplished during his lifetime such organizations as the Irish Brigade and the Home Rule parties in the House of Commons would be impossible. Indeed, to him O'Connell's exertions must be attributed the most of the civil and religious liberties which Catholics all over the United Kingdom now enjoy. Yet the man for whom the Irish people of the British Empire are still endeavoring to raise a monument, in a permanent and substantial manner, Irishmen in Europe and America—and their number is not by any means small—will blush that twenty-seven years have been suffered to pass away, and that the capital of Ireland is still without such a statute of the Liberator of the Irish people. The death of Mr. Finlay, the distinguished sculptor, both in a degree drawn public attention to this disgraceful national fact. The great artist left no work on the great national memorial to the most useful of Irishmen of this century seems to be in a fair way to completion as soon. No wonder that Irish patriotism should be sneered at.

On Sunday evening, Sept. 20, Athenry was thrown into excitement by the sound of drums, fifes, clarionets, etc., played by a dozen of the most respectable young men there, who, having been organized—the old men walking in four deep behind the band, followed by hundreds of young men, marched in in the same manner. They played several national airs through the town, and when bringing it to a stop, walked in procession to the residence of Very Rev. Canon O'Grady, Athenry, and continued their musical entertainment before his door for about an hour. The very reverend gentleman appeared at his window and addressed the assembled multitude. He said he was more than delighted to see so many sober, respectable and intelligent people assembled together in such a simple but amusing enjoyment; that they had his hearty cooperation and concurrence, and that if any member of their society would call upon him on the following day he would heartily give them five pounds towards buying instruments and then, after receiving his paternal national amusement before his door for about an hour. The very reverend gentleman then disappeared at his window and addressed the assembled multitude. He said he was more than delighted to see so many sober, respectable and intelligent people assembled together in such a simple but amusing enjoyment; that they had his hearty cooperation and concurrence, and that if any member of their society would call upon him on the following day he would heartily give them five pounds towards buying instruments and then, after receiving his paternal national amusement before his door for about an hour.

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

SAN JOSÉ, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORated according to the laws of the State and enjoyed the privileges conferred by the Legislature at the Twenty-fifth Annual Session on MONDAY, August 3, 1874. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS PER HALF SESSION.

Entrance, to be paid but once.....$15 00
Board and Tuition, per month.....$12 50
Washing per quarter.....$2 50
Physician's fees, unless it may be preferred to pay the bill in case of sickness apportioned.....$1 00
Instrumental Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges, but there is no extra charge for the French, Spanish or German Languages, nor for Plain Sewing and Fancy Needlework.

Payments are required in gold or silver or bank notes in advance. Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the Session. ast1f

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE,

SANTA CLARA,.....CALIFORNIA.

Under the management of the Fathers of the Society of Jesus.

THE SANTA CLARA COLLEGE WAS FOUNDED in 1851, and in 1855 was reorganized, with the privileges of a University. Diplomas are given in the Collegiate and Commercial Courses.

The College buildings are large and commodious, with a capacity for accommodating 300 students. A swimming pond, etc., afford every facility for healthful exercise.

The College possesses a very complete philosophical apparatus, and a valuable collection of Minerals and Geology. It has, also, plots of all kinds of Seeds, Plants, Flowers, etc., for the use of students. Every native care is taught in a thoroughly fitted Chemical Laboratory.

The Library contains 5,000 volumes, and is constantly receiving additions.

TERMS:

Payable semi-annually, in advance:

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once.....$10 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition, Washing, and Medical Attendance and Medicine, Bath, Fuel, Lights.....$150 00
Graduation Fee.....$10 00
Use of Philosophical Apparatus.....$5 00
Use of Chemical Apparatus.....$5 00
Use of Library.....$2 00
Vocal Music, per month.....$2 00
Use of Instrument.....$2 00

For further information inquire of the Superior of the Sisters of Notre Dame, San José, Santa Clara, or Mission Dolores.

1211

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

Those who complete the Classical Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to receive a good practical education in as short a time as possible. Those who prefer it can, however, study the French language in the College, our own language especially excepted. Only for what Dan O'Connell styled "the illiterates," where more potatoes belonging to Mr. Harold were to be sacrificed to the Carrickmacross Guardians, and their letter was read at the usual weekly meeting of the body. The Board intimated that the cutting of the hair of casuals must be regarded in the light of punishment, and parties legally entitled to relief among not be punished, and the local board would not recognise any difference between casuals and regular work-house inmates, referring the Guardians to the poor law regulations on the subject. The Local Government Board, therefore, called upon the Guardians to rescind the resolution passed by them in reference to the hair-cutting. Mr. Evelyn Shirley, who presided, said he quite agreed with the Local Government Board—as they were equal before the law, and even among paupers the Guardians could make no odious distinctions.

As soon as the news reached Newtownbutler that a son and heir had been born to the Earl of Granard, preparations on a grand scale was made by the inhabitants of the village and the surrounding neighborhood to have the houses illuminated, and such to the esteem in which his lordship and the Countess of Granard are held, that men and poor, old and young, joined hand in hand to give relief to the event. At about seven o'clock in the evening a large bonfire was lighted at the end of the town, and fully fifty persons were assembled. All the houses in the village were beautifully illuminated. Father Murray's house presented a lively appearance, as also did Mr. James Wales', assistant county engineer; and the little village of Newtownbutler up to twelve o'clock presented a cheerful appearance. Drumhish, another village on the property of Lord Granard, also contributed to the rejoicings. A large bonfire was lighted near the square, and every house in the village was beautifully lighted up. In Longford, at about ten o'clock, a tar barrel was lighted outside the hotel, and a large concourse of people attended, and several cheers were given for the Earl and Countess and their infant heir. It is contemplated by the Town Commissioners and all altogether to celebrate the happy event on the return of Lord Granard and Lady to Castleforbes.

It is a painful duty, says the Kilkenny Journal to record the death of Rev. Joseph Moore P. P., of Castlecomer, which took place on the 6th inst. Father Moore, P. P., Johnstown. The reverend gentleman had been ailing for some time past, suffering from paralysis. His strong and healthy constitution by degrees gave way, and on the 6th inst. he breathed his last. On the 8th September, in the seventy-first year of his age and forty-sixth of his sacred ministry. Early life he passed with credit through the old diocesan colleges—Burke's Hall and Herbert's Hall. Having received the order of priesthood, he was appointed to a curacy in the diocese of Kildare. As soon as possible he was required to his native diocese he was appointed to Burrow. His subsequently arrived in Castlecomer, Upperchurch, Ballan, Kilmacow, Rosbercon and Piltown. In the death of Rev. Mr. Kelly he was promoted to an especial charge of Castlecomer in November, 1851. As a scholar he was distinguished for his classical knowledge, and was for many years a useful member of the Kilkenny Archæological Society. His death is regarded as a calamity of no ordinary kind in his flock, for he was a friend to all in his power to help and console the afflicted. Mindful of them through life, he made them his heir of any little property he possessed at death, and bequeathed to the parish of Castlecomer, notwithstanding the inclemency of the day, a large number of clergy from Emory and Kildare attended his office.

The Sword of a Hero.

The sword of the hero may come to men as base as those to which fate condemned himself. Everybody knows the history of Latour d'Auvergne, the premier grenadier de la France," who was killed in 1800 at Oberhausen, fighting pour la patrie. Latour, a man of princely birth, despised the extravagance of the wild sixth century sweep the armies of Europe before them. He might have aspired to any grade, even to high military rank, but he steadily refused all offers of promotion, and remained in the ranks of the rank and file. He was, however, the most glorious of private soldiers, and was called "the first Grenadier of France" was a position at once heroic and romantic, but one which in the way which led to the more solid attainment of the Marshal's baton. There is little poetry in war, but where it exists it could be imparted into the air was used to keep fresh the memory and the example of a brave and noble spirit. Every day after his death, when the 46th (their legends, to which he belonged was called, the praise was to call the roll as if the plain soldier still carried his musket in the rank. When his name was called, one of the regiment answered, "Mort au champ d' honneur!" There was custom, but, notwithstanding, it is hard to conceive a more graceful or more touching tribute to the deserving. Latour-Auvergne, the plain soldier, is still remembered in the regiments, and every house is lighted up. In the 46th he is still the "Grenadier of France."

Mr. Mather, accordingly, had sent before him four of the constabulary and was proceeding to the place on a car, accompanied by Mr. Kirkland, when Mr. Harold rushed from his house, drew a double-barrel pistol from his breast, and presenting it at Mr. Mateer, pulled the trigger. The powder was burned, but the bullet ran to the opposite side of the car. Mr. Harold pursued him and fired the second barrel, the ball passing close to Mr. Mateer's back. Mr. Harold was arrested by the constabulary, and lodged in the custody of the constabulary.

More than a quarter of a century has passed since O'Connell died. Never did a man deserve more the name of "Liberator," and never did he more have on his the history of Ireland of more serviceable patriotism. Only for what Dan O'Connell accomplished during his lifetime such organizations as the Irish Brigade and the Home Rule parties in the House of Commons would be impossible. Indeed, to him O'Connell's exertions must be attributed the most of the civil and religious liberties which Catholics all over the United Kingdom now enjoy. Yet the man for whom the Irish people of the British Empire are still endeavoring to raise a monument, in a permanent and substantial manner, Irishmen in Europe and America—and their number is not by any means small—will blush that twenty-seven years have been suffered to pass away, and that the capital of Ireland is still without such a statute of the Liberator of the Irish people. The death of Mr. Finlay, the distinguished sculptor, both in a degree drawn public attention to this disgraceful national fact. The great artist left no work on the great national memorial to the most useful of Irishmen of this century seems to be in a fair way to completion as soon. No wonder that Irish patriotism should be sneered at.

On Sunday evening, Sept. 20, Athenry was thrown into excitement by the sound of drums, fifes, clarionets, etc., played by a dozen of the most respectable young men there, who, having been organized—the old men walking in four deep behind the band, followed by hundreds of young men, marched in in the same manner. They played several national airs through the town, and when bringing it to a stop, walked in procession to the residence of Very Rev. Canon O'Grady, Athenry, and continued their musical entertainment before his door for about an hour. The very reverend gentleman appeared at his window and addressed the assembled multitude. He said he was more than delighted to see so many sober, respectable and intelligent people assembled together in such a simple but amusing enjoyment; that they had his hearty cooperation and concurrence, and that if any member of their society would call upon him on the following day he would heartily give them five pounds towards buying instruments and then, after receiving his paternal national amusement before his door for about an hour. The very reverend gentleman then disappeared at his window and addressed the assembled multitude. He said he was more than delighted to see so many sober, respectable and intelligent people assembled together in such a simple but amusing enjoyment; that they had his hearty cooperation and concurrence, and that if any member of their society would call upon him on the following day he would heartily give them five pounds towards buying instruments and then, after receiving his paternal national amusement before his door for about an hour.

SAN JOSE ADVERTISEMENTS.

VICTOR HOFFMANN,

Architect

and SAN JOSÉ, CAL.

CENTRAL HOUSE,

San Fernando st., bet. First and Second,

SAN JOSÉ, CAL.

F. NIXON.....PROPRIETOR

This House has recently been greatly improved and refurnished. It is conducted by a lady in the best manner.

Board and Lodging, per week.....$5 to $6
Board alone, per week.....$4 to $5
Board, Wines, Liquors and Cigars on sale.

WESTERN HOTEL,

Market Street, near the City Mark

SAN JOSE.

D. NOONAN.....Proprietor

Board, per week.....$5 to $6
Board and Lodging, per week.....$6 to $7
Single Meals.....25 cents
Lodging, per night.....25 cents
Families and others will find all the conveniences of home at this house and elegant Hotel

THE STATE

Investment and Insurance Company

FIRE AND MARINE

Cash Assets, - - - - $360,000

Principal Office, 401 California st., SAN FRANCISCO.

OFFICERS:

PETER DONAHUE, President.
C. H. CUMMINGS, Secretary.
T. RYLAND, of San José, Manager.

A. E. MYLOTT, Special Agent, San José.

EDWARD MAHONEY,

Corner Market and Santa Clara Sts.,

SAN JOSE.

DRY GOODS, CLOTHING, BOOTS AND SHOES, Etc.

TAILORING.—Clothing cut and made to order. Perfect fit guaranteed.

L. CHOPARD,

WATCH AND JEWELER

No. 203 Santa Clara street,

Auzerais Block.....SAN JOSÉ

NEW YORK EXCHANGE,

First Street, bet. Santa Clara and St. John sts.,

SAN JOSÉ, CAL.

BANKER & TOWN.....Proprietor

Coaches and Carriages attend all trains.

C. WALSH'S

LIVERY STABLE

401 First Street (opp. N. Y. Exchange),

SAN JOSÉ.

SAN JOSE MARBLE WORKS

E. POWER,

WAREHOUSE, 109 SECOND ST.,

SAN JOSE.

STATUARY,

And every description of

MARBLE WORK.

DESIGNING, MOULDING, &c.

And every style Wood and Stone Turning.

SANTA CLARA ADVERTISEMENTS.

CAMERON HOUSE,

SANTA CLARA, CAL.

MARTIN CURCORAN.....PROPRIETOR

MR. CURCORAN, having purchased the above well-known House, respectfully announces to the public that he has refitted and refurnished the same throughout, and that it is now one of the most comfortable hotels in the city. Being centrally situated, the position of the House is unsurpassed, and will be maintained by the proprietor over the Cameron House.

The Bar is well stocked, the rooms are newly and well furnished and ventilated, and the attendance is healthy and pleasing to the eye.

In connection with the Hotel is a fine and commodious Livery Stable, which can be had at all hours of the day or night, at most reasonable rates. ap22

D. BERGIN,

SANTA CLARA.....CALIFORNIA

Has the largest assortment of

Dry Goods, Clothing Boots and Shoes

To be found South of San Francisco, which he will sell at less than San Francisco rates.

HARNESS AND SADDLERY

F. C. FRANK,

Franklin street, Santa Clara,

Importer, Manufacturer, and Wholesale and Retail Dealer in HARNESS, SADDLES, BRIDLES, COLLARS, WHIPS, ROBES, HORSE, BUG—HESS, &c.

Which he will sell at cost prices. Carriage Trimming done in the neatest and most workmanlike manner. Agent for the celebrated Axle Grease for heavy loads.

STOCKTON ADVERTISEMENTS.

GARVIN & NUNAN,

Dealers in and Butter Stores.....

Books, Periodicals, Magazines, PICTURES, Etc.

News Agents—Advertising Agents

YOSEMITE HOTEL,

STOCKTON.

The only great resort for those traveling to Southern Mines, Big Trees or Yosemite Valley.

Connected with the Hotel is one of the finest bowling saloons in the State, supplied with the best Duck boughten, one of old Toodlemeyer's make, to every traveler call.

RUSS HOUSE COACHES

Nos. 27, 10, 18, 97 and 100.

McNALLY & BRATTLER.....Proprietors

Orders left at the Russ House will be promptly attended to. Rates most reasonable.

Prohibition of Freemasonry in Austria.

It appears that Masonic lodges have been legal in Austria for a very long time back. Under the Emperor Joseph II., in the last century, though he was at first disposed to favor the Masonic organization in his campaign against the Austrian Church, grew to distrust such dangerous allies when he discovered that in the eyes of the very chiefs of the ubiquitous conspiracy he was merely a poor tool blindly doing the work of universal revolution. Encouraged by recent anti-Catholic demonstrations of Austrian Government, they have appeared themselves to what they believed to be the easy task of procuring the legal authorisations for the installation of their organization into Austria. But at once by a natural ambition and supposed establishment of the locality, where the metropolis of the Empire as seat of their intended victory, they had to found a Grand Lodge under the title of Zukunft, or the Future, Vienna. The Austrian Vaterlandische Law on Associations, requires a copy of the statutes of all proposed societies and they are to be lodged with the local authorities for inspection; a copy of the statutes of Freemasonry, or what purported to be, was deposited in conformity with law. The whole proceeding was, however, a village way to ascertain for certain that the preparations for the festive inauguration of the lodge were complete, and when the dire intelligence of the resolution of the authorities was communicated to the brethren, it seems that the Governor of Austria had not deemed it beneath him to assist at the rites of the statutes of Masonry, and herewith giving his consent to the existence of the Grand Lodge subsidiary to his inspection, and death of his investigation was to be put into effect

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The late Bishop of Savannah, Ga., Dr. Persoon, who resigned his office in 1872, has just been re-commissioned a Bishop of Bolivia. He has been filling a curacy in Quebec.

Archbishop Purcell celebrated Mass at St. Aloysius' church, on September 30, and afterwards administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to Mrs. General Charles Ewing, a convert.

Father Walters, pastor of the church of Immaculate Conception, Connellsville, is a delegate to the Irish Catholic Benevolent Union, which met in annual Convention in Baltimore on the 21st inst.

Brother Rousseil, who is in charge of the community of Christian Brothers attached to St. Michael's Church, Philadelphia, has been promoted to the high office of Provincial of the Mother house of the Brothers in Baltimore.

We are pleased to chronicle the ordination of Rev. P. C. McGrath, late assistor editor of our paper. The happy event took place on July 25th, the feast of St. James the Apostle, at the Cathedral, Dubuque, Iowa.—Catholic Messenger.

The promotion of Milwaukee to be a Metropolitan See, with Mgr. Henni as first Archbishop, has been extensively announced in papers, Catholic and other. The announcement is premature. This and other Metropolitan creations are expected.

Rev. Patrick Birmingham, priest of the diocese of Chicago, died on September 21, at Charity Hospital in that city. Born in the county Roscommon, Ireland, about thirty-seven years ago, he emigrated in early life to America, and as an ecclesiastical student, affiliated himself to the diocese of Chicago.

We announce with the deepest regret the death of Right Rev. Francis Patrick Mc-Farland, Bishop of Hartford, Conn., the sorrowing event occurred on Monday evening, 12th inst. Deceased was consecrated March 14, 1858, and was fifty-six years of age at the time of his demise. Reader, pray for the repose of his soul.

Rev. Mr. Ryan, for many years parish priest of Cahersonlish, expired somewhat suddenly at Byrne's Hotel, Limerick, on the 19th ult. He had just returned from Killiha, where he had been staying for the benefit of his health.

His Eminence Cardinal Cullen laid the foundation stone of the new Hospital of St. Michael, Kingstown, on the 2d October, in the presence of an exceedingly large number of the aristocracy, gentry and residents of Kingstown and Dublin. At the close of the ceremonial Very Rev. Thos. Burke, O.S.D., Order of Preachers, preached an eloquent sermon.

His Grace the Archbishop of New York left Rome on the 22d ult., expecting to return to New York about the end of this month. Bishop Bacon, who went abroad with him, has been confined to hospital treatment, in France, for organic disease. It is hoped, however, that he may be able to accompany the Archbishop on his return.

The Ulster Examiner, September 26, says: "It is with most sincere sorrow we have to announce to-day the sorry and lamented death of the Rev. Malachy Kelly, who was one of the kindest and most esteemed priests in the diocese of Down and Connor. The sad event took place at the parochial house, Carnmoney, where Father Kelly had been ramsiding as the guest of his reverend friend, the Rev. C. S. Quinn, the parish priest of that parish.

The Kilkenny Journal says: "It is our melancholy duty to record the death of a good priest and kindly-hearted gentleman, Father James O'Gorman, who expired in Dublin, on September 18th, whither he went a few weeks ago for medical advice. The remains of the lamented reverend gentleman arrived in Kilkenny, by train, on Saturday afternoon, September 19th, and were escorted to St. John's Church by a large concourse of his fellow-citizens.

The solemn rite of profession took place in the Convent of the Poor Clares, Ballyjamesduff, on the 23d ult., the lady received being Miss Brady (in religion, Sister Mary Patrick), niece of Rev. James Brady, Adm., of Castlerahan. Most Rev. Dr. Conaty, Bishop of Ullmore, officiated and received the vows of the new-made Sister. The sermon following was preached by Very Rev. Thomas Brady, P.P., Ballieamore.

The Bulls appointing Right Rev. Dr. Fellicer Bishop of San Antonio, Texas, have been expected from Rome. Right Rev. Dr. Mauney, appointed Bishop to Portland, Oregon, and Vicar Apostolic in Idaho, Nebraska, and Montana, from his Eminence Cardinal Franchi, Prefect of the Propaganda, sprung from the ranks of the people, and was a native on which he is to be sent. The Bulls appointing him, it not already received, are on the way.

The New York Herald says: "Mr. Moorie, who lost seven hundred dollars about five years ago, received five hundred dollars of the amount last week from the Archbishop, out of a Catholic priest. The balance, he was assured, would be in a little while returned with interest. This is evidently a case of conscience in which the confessional was resolved a guilty secret, and the priest was commanded on honorable restitution."

A London correspondent of the Dublin Freeman writes: "I understand on reliable Catholic authority that another conversion of considerably less than a year's duration has been effected by the recently taken place of a far more important nature than was that of the Marquis of Ripon. I refer to the wife of the most influential and wealthy English duke who has entered the Catholic Church, and that the conversion of the duchess is expected to be real-ed in a few days. For the present, for obvious considerations, I withhold the name."

The rumor of a gift from the Pope to the Marquis of Ripon is true. His Holiness has sent a magnificent crucifix, inclosing a precious relic. The image of our Saviour is beautifully wrought in silver. This token of fraternal love does honor both to the Sovereign Pontiff and to the distinguished man who has become his spiritual son. It shows the noble character of both. The gift and event took place at the parochial house, Carnegie, where Father Kelly had been remaining as the guest of his reverend friend, the Rev. C. S. Quinn, the parish priest of that parish.

DOOMED FOR CATHOLICITY.

The Boston Pilot speaks thus: "A statesman who becomes a Catholic," says the London Times, 'forfeits at once the confidence of the English people,' which is a sweeping censure a complete abandonment of any claim to political or even social influence in the nation at large." It is to be presumed that this brutal expression of the great English organ was in sympathy with the general English mind; which is a sorry showing in the estimation of justice or freedom in Protestant countries.

Some such cry as that of the Times has been raised in this country because a distinguished man dared to have his daughter publicly married according to the rites of the Catholic Church. Here there is no excuse for religious intolerance, and the people who foster such a spirit are unworthy to live under republican institutions. It is England there is some show of reason for the bigotry. Bigotry is tyranny; the State Church is Protestant, and according to the Constitutional theory of England the King is the Protestant. But one look from England to America by enlarged house of religious freedom, and the absolutest of men are free and equal, and all religious are tolerated and protected. Nothing could be more contrary to American institutions than the growth of a religious supremacy. We have looked the shells from the limbs of the slave, and shall we stand by to see it riveted again on the mind of freemen?

The New York Evening Telegram, one of the few papers that have treated the matter in a liberal manner, says:

The same day it was telegraphed from Washington that in some circles severe comments were passed upon General Sherman's part at the great display at the marriage of his daughter; that a friend of his had gone so far as to say that the General of the Army had destroyed his chance for the Presidency in 1876, such had been the prejudice he had created in the person not of the Catholic Church, by the high church ceremonies of the occasion.

We do not think it not to need a single word of comment; but the composition of the circle of gossip must be rarely known that it will be commented upon from one end of the land to the other. The interesting question is, as to whether any differences of religious opinion and creed will prevent the people from according to the very first place in public position a well-tried and faithful public servant. Sherman's is a Catholic family, but we have known for very much if he has many friends and lovers in that fold than among other religious denominations, Protestants, Hebrews, etc., and among men who make no formal religious profession whatever.

The fact is, General Sherman is one of the half dozen prominent men in the eye of the public as possible candidates for the Presidency. As against Grant, if the latter should indeed violate our traditions by running for a third term, there is hardly a man in this country who would have the colossal strength of Sherman. The freshly published chapter from the unpublished book which he has prepared on the leaders and leading events of the civil war has revealed him in a somewhat new and also a stronger and better light than ever before. He is seen not only as the great military chieftain, but as a statesman, as a man who, like the first Napoleon, can both fight and make codes.

Sherman is simply a danger to some of the politicians. Therefore, as simple a thing as the marriage of a beloved daughter to a Catholic must be turned to account against him thus early in the struggle, which is unfortunately, already upon us for the Presidency in 1876.

The interesting question is, we say, as to the strength of these religious prejudices. All noble, right-minded men will, of course, say that these should have no place, nor more than in the case of the Methodist Grant, or of the so-called "infidel" Thomas Jefferson. But the game of the politicians is a very noble and interesting game!

Subscriptions Received.

Dove-Hotle—Rev. Father Lynch ..... $1 00
Allenbary—Charles O'Donnell ..... 1 00
Ivy—Father Eyre ..... 1 00
Benicia—Rev. Father Villarasau ..... 1 00
Vienna—Thomas J. Byrne ..... 1 00
School house Station—Thomas Gallagher ..... 1 00
J. O Brien ..... 1 00
Valley—F. McGinn ..... 1 00
Carson City—Patrick McCarthy ..... 1 00
Graysonville—John Brannan ..... 1 00
San Juan—Martin B. Sullivan ..... 1 00
Richard Dowling ..... 1 00
Oakland—Timothy Mahony ..... 1 00
Suscunville—James Kelly ..... 1 00
Colfax—John O'Hara ..... 1 00
Thomas Reardon ..... 1 00
Matthew Brady ..... 1 00
Patrick Brady ..... 1 00
P. H. Cosgrove ..... 1 00
Black Diamond—Henry O'Hara ..... 1 00
Ella Station—Michael McGreary ..... 1 00
Alta—Stephen Cleary ..... 1 00
Chico—John Montgomery ..... 1 00
Mr. Antonio Lopez ..... 1 00

A Sure of Many Ills.

If all the ailments, bodily and mental, which torment the human family could be traced to their primary source, it would probably be found that three-fourths of them originated in the failure of the stomach and the other organs by which the food is converted into nourishment and used for the purposes of life, to perform the tasks allotted to them by nature, vigorously and regularly. Of the many remedies for the restoration of a medicine which combines these organs to do their whole duty, thoroughly and efficiently, none is at all comparable to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters may be truly characterized as a preparation of the vegetable kingdom, as its properties are implicitly relied on as combining the properties of a stimulant, an alterative and an aperient to such proportions as to produce simultaneously the desired effect upon the disordered stomach, liver and intestines. This concussion is warranted by the unanimity and certainty with which the Bitters have relief a chronic case of dyspepsia, instigated by disordered liver and constipation. The same is true of other complaints, and others that, though not so fatal, it is hoped, be cured by these agreeable means. Suffering is not to be necessary supposed. The annals of medicine are filled with the records of wonderful cures, effected by remedies which, in the case of thousands of sufferers have been prematurely consigned to the grave, but ever since the principle of restoration, as embodied in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, was extensively applied to the purposes of purification, as represented by mineral salivants and furious purgatives, the latter was steadily and surely falling into deserved contempt. The sensory assailed Hostetter's Bitters, by which compounds of drastic properties were supposed to give relief to their disorganized structure by compounds, based on the principle of the vegetable kingdom, have met with a success which for a series of years triumphed over all opposition, and is now the most popular medicine in the Western hemisphere.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONITOR OFFICE, San Francisco, Saturday, October 24, 1874.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export inquiry has been moderate. We quote—Extra at $ 5@5 12½, and superfine at $ 4@4 12 ½ ab $ 100 bs.

WHEAT—The market has been quiet and at nearly rates the past week. Prices have ranged from $1 47½@1 50. At the close the Liverpool market was dull at 10s 3d@10s 4d. The Liverpool market was dull at 10s 3d@10s 4d. The Liverpool market was quiet and steady

IRISH LOCAL NEWS.

From the Dublin Nation of November 7.

ANTRIM.

At the recent municipal revision in Belfast eight Catholic clergymen who live in one house were placed on the register in accordance with an order from the Queen's Bench.

Mr. Charles Wilson, the tenant right candidate for the county Antrim at the recent election, was presented with an address in Ballymoney by the members of the Tenant Farmers' Association. Several resolutions were at the same time passed in favor of the tenant right cause.

A shocking death by burning has occurred a short distance from Lurgan. It seems that an old woman named Aikinson had taken at an early hour and was sitting near a large fire sewing, when, by some means, she fell into the fire. The consequence was that she was awfully burned from the face down over the entire body, which presented a fearful spectacle. It is thought that with the heat of the fire the unfortunate woman must have fallen asleep, and then fell into the fire.

A special meeting of the Carrickfergus Town Commissioners was held recently in the Town Hall, M. R. Dalzell, Esq., M.P., in the chair, to approve of the allotment of a portion of the Great Commons into farms to certain persons at 8s.-d rents, and to sign agreements confirming the same. The settlement of the Great Commons case, which has been in litigation many years (and years,) is one of the most favorable and important events which has ever taken place in this borough. By the settlement of this lengthy and costly suit, 1,920 statute acres are let in the deposal of the Town Commissioners for the benefit of the Corporation. The litigation has been terminated by the able influence of Sir Robert Dalzell, Bart., M.P., the member for the borough. Five hundred acres were disposed of to thirty-eight tenants, at a rental varying from 5s. to 10s. per acre. Leases have been granted to the tenants for sixty-one years.

ARMAGH.

At the usual weekly meeting of the Lurgan Board of Guardians the clerk reported that a man named John Thompson had been sent over from Glasgow on a removal warrant. It appeared that the man had been a number of years in Scotland, and when taken ill, offered to support himself in the workhouse, but the master would not waste to rid the house of "the dirty Irish." The chairman said that the whole affair was a disgraceful, and he hoped that the press would take a note of the matter.

CARLOW.

On the 26th ult. David Campion, Esq., coroner of Carlow, held an inquest on view of the remains of a man named Sarah Doyle, a pauper, employed at the National Bank, Carlow. From the evidence adduced at the inquest it appeared that the deceased, who was about 58 years old, had only just retired to bed, when the servant girl heard a heavy groan; she immediately ran upstairs, when she found the deceased apparently dying, and partly undressed. The matter was at once communicated to the police, and Father Colgan sent for, who promptly arrived, and, fortunately, was enabled to render the unfortunate man the consolations of our holy religion. The jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased died of rupture of the heart.

CAVAN.

The weekly meeting of the Cavan Board of Guardians was held on 31 November, the Rev. James Tuite, P.P., chairman, and sworn in as the new master. The salary of Mrs. Freemen will be increased from £26 to £32, that being the amount paid to Mrs. Kenny, the other school-mistress." The resolution was adopted. The sum of £10 was direct to be paid to the clerk, Mr. Grier, for his duties in connection with the jurors' list.

CORK.

At the municipal revision court in Cork the claim of Mr. Ronayne, M. P., to be placed on the burgess roll was disallowed.

A gentleman named J. Dalton was killed a few days ago by a train coming from Fermoy to Mallow. Dalton was in charge of a level crossing near the Killavarline station, six miles from Mallow. The gates were on closed as to allow persons to cross the railway, and Dalton, hearing the train approaching, was going forward to close them when the train overtook him and killed him on the spot.

Dr. Foote, Inspector of Fisheries, Mallow district, was killed recently by a mule he was superintending at Ballinamona falling on and crushing him. The body was not recovered for an hour.

At a Sebrey inquiry held at Bandon a resolution was adopted, on the motion of the Earl of Bandon, strongly urging on the Government the necessity of placing a gunboat under the control of the Fishery Conservators for the protection of the fisheries, and also strongly recommending that the same assistance be given to the Irish fisheries as had been given to the Scotch.

Lawrence Smith and Patrick O'Connell were committed for trial at Queenstown petty petty sessions for obtaining money under false pretences. Smith was dressed in the garb of a Roman Catholic clergyman, and having represented himself as Father Tom Burke, and that he was collecting funds for the erection of schools at Mount Melicry, obtained different sums of money as donations towards the work. He was fully identified by Burtice or fifteen persons from whom he got money; and the other prisoner, Patrick O'Connell, was recognised as having assisted the pseudo clergyman in his misrepresentations.

At a meeting of the Mallow Farmers' Club the chairman, Mr. James Byrne, J. P., said, since last meeting he has been in Dublin, but the misery and distress he wanted to rid the house of "the dirty Irish." The chairman said that the whole affair was a disgraceful, and he hoped that the press would take a note of the matter.

CARLOW.

On the 26th ult. David Campion, Esq., coroner of Carlow, held an inquest on view of the remains of a man named Sarah Doyle, a painter, employed at the National Bank, Carlow. From the evidence adduced at the inquest it appeared that the deceased, who was about 58 years old, had only just retired to bed, when the servant girl heard a heavy groan; she immediately ran upstairs, when she found the deceased apparently dying, and partly undressed. The matter was at once communicated to the police, and Father Colgan sent for, who promptly arrived, and, fortunately, was enabled to render the unfortunate man the consolations of our holy religion. The jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased died of rupture of the heart.

CAVAN.

The weekly meeting of the Cavan Board of Guardians was held on 31 November, the Rev. James Tuite, P.P., chairman, and sworn in as the new master. The salary of Mrs. Freemen will be increased from £26 to £32, that being the amount paid to Mrs. Kenny, the other school-mistress." The resolution was adopted. The sum of £10 was direct to be paid to the clerk, Mr. Grier, for his duties in connection with the jurors' list.

CORK.

At the municipal revision court in Cork the claim of Mr. Ronayne, M. P., to be placed on the burgess roll was disallowed.

A gentleman named J. Dalton was killed a few days ago by a train coming from Fermoy to Mallow. Dalton was in charge of a level crossing near the Killavarline station, six miles from Mallow. The gates were on closed as to allow persons to cross the railway, and Dalton, hearing the train approaching, was going forward to close them when the train overtook him and killed him on the spot.

Dr. Foote, Inspector of Fisheries, Mallow district, was killed recently by a mule he was superintending at Ballinamona falling on and crushing him. The body was not recovered for an hour.

At a Sebrey inquiry held at Bandon a resolution was adopted, on the motion of the Earl of Bandon, strongly urging on the Government the necessity of placing a gunboat under the control of the Fishery Conservators for the protection of the fisheries, and also strongly recommending that the same assistance be given to the Irish fisheries as had been given to the Scotch.

Lawrence Smith and Patrick O'Connell were committed for trial at Queenstown petty petty sessions for obtaining money under false pretences. Smith was dressed in the garb of a Roman Catholic clergyman, and having represented himself as Father Tom Burke, and that he was collecting funds for the erection of schools at Mount Melicry, obtained different sums of money as donations towards the work. He was fully identified by fourteen or fifteen persons from whom he got money; and the other prisoner, Patrick O'Connell, was recognised as having assisted the pseudo clergyman in his misrepresentations.

At a meeting of the Mallow Farmers' Club the chairman, Mr. James Byrne, J. P., said, since last meeting he has been in Dublin, but the misery and distress he wanted to rid the house of "the dirty Irish." The chairman said that the whole affair was a disgraceful, and he hoped that the press would take a note of the matter.

CARLOW

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING DEC. 12.
Sunday—Second Sunday in Advent.
Monday—St. Ambrose, Bishop, Confessor and Doctor of the Church.
Tuesday—Immaculate Conception of the B.V.M.
Wednesday—Vigil of St. Peter, Bishop and Confessor.
Thursday—Ember Day. Fast and Abstinence.
Friday—Ember Day. Fast and Abstinence.
Saturday—Ember Day. Fast and Abstinence.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
SATURDAY.....DECEMBER 5, 1874.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

It is absolutely necessary for us at this time to call the attention of our country subscribers to a recent alteration in the Postal law which will come into effect upon 1st January, 1875. Hitherto, as our readers are aware, the postage on newspapers has been collected at stated intervals from those to whom they were addressed; but, according to the new regulation, it must hereafter and be paid in advance by the office in which the papers are published. That is, it will be our duty, before the burden of paying postage till subscribers and places upon us. We notice that very many of our Eastern contemporaries, in order to indemnify themselves against the additional expense they will have under the said their rates of subscription or demand of that all subscribers shall remit the amount of the postal charges to them. Now, we do not intend to do either of these two things. The Monitor shall continue to be sent for the same price as before and we shall pay all postal charges. One thing, however, we must do for our own protection, and that is to insist upon payment in advance. We cannot afford to send the paper to an address, pay the postage, and then have to wait twelve months, or probably longer, before goods long any return. We are sure our friends will acknowledge the justice of the stipulation.

Moreover, we respectfully invite all who are now in arrears to, if possible, liquidate their indebtedness before the beginning of the New Year, because from that date we shall rigidly enforce our rule and strike off from our lists those who happen to be twelve months or over behind hand in their payments. We know very well that most of our friends have not the least unwillingness to make prompt remittances, but they see no harm in waiting until summer's fruit comes round to collect them from. The expense of collection are so great that in many cases they completely swamp all advantages from subscriptions, as we really might as well send the paper for nothing, and, consequently, we are not very anxious to resort to it. It is now so easy to obtain a Post Office order, or even a check on Wells Fargo & Co., that there is small excuse for negligence. In conclusion, we desire to say that we, on our part, shall spare neither trouble or expense to make THE MONITOR a paper in every way worthy of the confidence and support of the respectable and intelligent class of the community to be whose organ it is its proudest claim and highest ambition.

FRUITLESS INVESTIGATIONS.

It is probable, we suppose, that a certain number of the citizens of San Francisco are laboring under the pleasing but harmful delusion that the municipal affairs of the city are undergoing a thorough overhauling, and that reforms are being taken to secure economy and honesty in future. Has logs with the public money of the Board of been, we know, an effort made by people with of Supervisors to justify a belief in the fact that false lies laid on by the Finance Committee of a little reflection will show to intelligent citizen what a large account is taken there is to these inquiries, and what little likelihood there is of their ever resulting in any benefit to the city. Three Deputy Assessors are in prison, charged with issuing forged poll tax receipts, chiefly to Chinese residents, and that fact has been loudly commented upon as proof of the completeness of at least one of the investigations.

It is of course some advantage to have these gentlemen put out of the way of doing further mischief; but the chances of their receiving punishment according to their desert, even if found guilty, are not, to say the least, extremely encouraging. Yet the thievery connected with the issuing of bogus poll-tax receipts is generally believed to be only one of the many shapes assumed by fraud in the Assessor's office, and to be by no means the most palpable one. Favoritism in the valuation of real estate and personal property, so that some individuals are not asked to pay one-third or one-fourth of their proper taxes, while others are compelled to pay far more than their due share, is alleged to manifest itself on every page of the assessment rolls. The Call has recently been directing attention to the flagrant injustice, and has instanced some very shameful examples of it. Some of the undervaluations pointed out may have resulted from ignorance on the part of the deputies, others may have been occasioned by misrepresentations on the part of the property owners; but augmentations by many owe their origin to bribery and corruption. It is not necessary to enter upon a lengthy disquisition to show how calamitous and how fatal to public peace are frauds of this character are.

The people favored are, almost without exception, rich men, who can very well afford to fulfill their legal obligations towards the State; the people from whom the last cent is extorted are poor men, who by uniting to bury have accumulated a little property as a provision for old age. I could be hard, we think, to mention a single wealthy individual who really pays his proper proportion of taxes; and perhaps it would be as difficult to name a poor man who has not to bear more than his legal quota to the full. The knowledge of this significant state of affairs is sure to create a very bad feeling among the classes which may consider themselves unfairly treated, and it may, some time or another, lead to considerable disturbance. There is, we understand, a secret committee now sitting on the assessments, but its secrecy does not promise to public any good thing, because most likely its public will be of opinion that its members are conducted privately simply in order to shield our monied men from the shame of exposure.

Take a real Dupré man, according to all appearances at one time, was to be subjected to a rigid examination. Some nicety edifying revelations as to the method of disposing of certain kinds of public property were, of course, to follow. But more important results were daily expected, when an unassailable and significant three of the figures sheeting the integrity of members of the Board of Supervisors, made by a witness under examination, caused a sad paralysis of the vigor previously displayed, and the investigation ended in a ridiculously puerile recommendation of the dismissal of a couple of the subordinates.

As the public should be shown some practical result from all these investigations it was appointed that so to turn down the fine of Mr. Ferster, Dr. Hoff, the former charges against his honor and honesty were made by the papers; he was duly characterized as a ghoul or vampire that battened upon the friendless dead; every means was used to bring him into public contempt and hatred. Judicial proceedings were taken against him with a promptness contrasting strangely with the sluggishness exhibited in other cases, and the end was that he was finally gained! But the trial showed the entire groundlessness of the horrible accusations so recklessly and a persistently hurled against him, and the decision of the Judge compelling him to retain his office was, after all, grounded upon the circumstance that in a specified case he had not empaneled his jury in the manner prescribed by law. This is, so far as we can make out, the result of all the much vaunted investigations. We scarcely think the citizens will be satisfied with it.

DECREASE OF CRIME IN IRELAND.

If we allude in terms of much satisfaction to the decrease of crime in Ireland, as testified to by the statistics for 1873, compiled by Mr. Neilson Hancock, it certainly is not because we have the least idea of in drawing the English official calumny that Ireland was at any time remarkable for the prevalence of crime, or that it is not entitled to the most unstinted praise for the extraordinarily small amount of crime that exists at present. Even the Times, which is usually hostile to Ireland, is compelled to admit that "the Irish people have a full share of thankfulness where due is to be given," and the Saturday Review corresponds with the same. This is almost unexampled praise, and the terms made recently by several of the judges in the last assizes, that Long may it last, is also testified of the same kind. It is to their credit that could be traced to the influence of increasing education. Considered of the truth of those allegations, the fact is exceedingly satisfactory, and especially the energy of all denominations are earnestly advocating the temperance movement. Their efforts are attended by the most gratifying success in all parts of the Island.

The Catholic Hall and Library

We wish to remind our city readers, and all whom THE MONITOR reaches before Saturday, that the debaters and paper-readers of the said to Catholic Hall and Library, last Sunday, are to meet at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of adopting the Constitution and By-laws of the St. Patrick's Hall and Library Association. A full and punctual attendance of all the friends of the proposed institution is earnestly requested.

THE ORPHANS' FAIR.—The Fair of Saints Peter and Paul's Orphan Asylum, which is now in full progress at Union Hall, is one of the most successful we have had occasion to notice. We trust we need say little to recommend this excellent and most deserving charity to the kind patronage of our friends. The thing is that by a visit to the Hall everything for sale dollars and hundreds of dollars should remain required assistance is given to the industrious and homeless, should stimulate every Christian heart to the utmost exertion in its behalf. Every dollar spent in the purchase of articles for sale will, in the sight of God, be counted as a dollar given for the support of the orphans, so that they have always reason themselves generous to the orphans, and we are sure the present occasion will not prove an exception.

MUSIC RECEIVED.—We have received from Mr. M. Gray, 621 and 525 Clay street, the following new pieces of music, all of which are published at very cheap rates: "Oklahoma Quick Step," "Hymn of Kamehameha I.," words by King Kalakaua, music by Berger; "Gentle Words." We have received from Messrs. Sherman & Hyde, corner of Kearny and Sutter streets, their Musical Review for November. It contains "Gleanings from Musical History," "Art Notes," interesting miscellaneous matter and four fine pieces of vocal and instrumental music.

THE Montgomery Guard had a very pleasant and very well attended ball on Wednesday evening. The Montgomerys have loads of friends, and they always manage to make them enjoy themselves.

From the New York Herald
GLADSTONE AND MANNING.
"Prudentius" Defines What the Church Considers Lawful and Unlawful.

The following article, which is one of a series of historical articles of late, possibly on the Manning-Gladstone controversy, owes some peculiarities to which all Catholics must this exception. Quoting the words of the Archbishop, "Conscience is supreme in matters of truth it is the law of God," it proceeds thus: "Consequently the law of God teaches all men that they must, for the good of society, obey civil laws, and that they are bound in conscience to do so. The allegiance of Englishmen is therefore not an allegiance to the Queen, but to the law. It is not to the person, but to the principle, of opposition.

You are the State, or the State's legislator, and you must frame a law binding me, as under the old Lyons, to do immediately the same thing which you command me to do. I am subject to sacrifice in Jupiter or Diana. Am I also bound in the one from God and reason? How can human law, or the will of a legislator, be a higher law?" In the very first precept of the Decalogue forbidden? Is the act you ask of me lawful? From the harem of the Sultan's Prophet, or of some one of his subject empire, a system of polygamy? Agent I am a citizen of Geneva, or of Turkey, or Persia, and my Catholic conscience makes me one to Deists, to pious and to Mahometans. I am not by independent nature a citizen of Rome—the sacraments incorporated by Christ, save in those Churches founded by the Apostles or their successors. Now, revelation surrenders the natural law promulgated anew Moses, and forming the supernatural work under the social and civil society. It is with her a cardinal principle that she has no power to make or change anything in the law of God, clearly known dispositions of the law of nature, any more than she does one of the positive law. They both are here, passion of the divine will, binding alike on the head of the Church and on every individual within her bosom. Any legislative enactment, no matter from what source promulgated, that violates the law of nature, founded in the eternal and essential reason of things, is of itself null and void. Such is the law forbidding marriage between parents and their descendants in the first or second generation. No law of Church or State can change the natural and essential "impediment" existing here; no dispensation of any human authority can validate a union which nature reprobates. No Pope would be a law legalizing polygamy and commanding the officers of State or all private citizens, under certain circumstances, to aid the polygamist in recovering his absconding concubine. Such, finally, would be a law making of man a mere chattel of his fellow-man, denying him all social rights and compelling him to the habitual violation of his own innate moral sense.

Those laws of the State are imperfecta, and therefore utterly void before the tribunal of conscience, and before the Court or ecclesiastical tribunal, null and of no effect. The law of nature, the divine positive law of God, which they violate, not only dispenses from obeying the legislator, but binds us not to obey him. Which, therefore, you speak of the law of the State as opposed to the "higher law," either of nature or positive revelation, you indicate a false conception in the minds of your readers. Any legislative enactment which contrary to either of these is a thing in itself, nothing. It is absolutely necessary for us at this time to rail the attention of our country subscribers to a recent alteration in the Postal law which will come into effect upon 1st January, 1875. Hitherto, as our readers are aware, the postage on newspapers has been collected at stated intervals from those to whom they were addressed; but, according to the new regulation, it must hereafter and be paid in advance by the office in which the papers are published. That is, it will be our duty, before the burden of paying postage till subscribers and places upon us. We notice that very many of our Eastern contemporaries, in order to indemnify themselves against the additional expense they will have under the said their rates of subscription or demand of that all subscribers shall remit the amount of the postal charges to them. Now, we do not intend to do either of these two things. The Monitor shall continue to be sent for the same price as before and we shall pay all postal charges. One thing, however, we must do for our own protection, and that is to insist upon payment in advance. We cannot afford to send the paper to an address, pay the postage, and then have to wait twelve months, or probably longer, before goods long any return. We are sure our friends will acknowledge the justice of the stipulation.

Moreover, we respectfully invite all who are now in arrears to, if possible, liquidate their indebtedness before the beginning of the New Year, because from that date we shall rigidly enforce our rule and strike off from our lists those who happen to be twelve months or over behind hand in their payments. We know very well that most of our friends have not the least unwillingness to make prompt remittances, but they see no harm in waiting until summer's fruit comes round to collect them from. The expense of collection are so great that in many cases they completely swamp all advantages from subscriptions, as we really might as well send the paper for nothing, and, consequently, we are not very anxious to resort to it. It is now so easy to obtain a Post Office order, or even a check on Wells Fargo & Co., that there is small excuse for negligence. In conclusion, we desire to say that we, on our part, shall spare neither trouble or expense to make THE MONITOR a paper in every way worthy of the confidence and support of the respectable and intelligent class of the community to be whose organ it is its proudest claim and highest ambition.

THE DEMOCRATIC VICTORY.

Address by Hon. Samuel S. Cox.

On the evening of November 12 the anniversary of Annapolis was thronged by people from the surrounding country, to participate in the great demonstration in honor of the victories in Maryland, and to listen to the remarks of Hon. S. S. Cox, of New York, who was announced to address the meeting. There was a grand torchlight procession, headed by the 14th Regiment Band of Baltimore; the city was illuminated, and nearly every body seemed to enjoy the occasion. After a complimentary introduction, Mr. Cox spoke as follows:

Fellow-citizens of Maryland: For many weeks I have been shut up in the big, busy place which man made, and I have now had my first view of the country when God made it. I find the country in harvest, with the fruits and always clean mine. For my heart is glad. The yellow and the scarlet which make your woods so gay and splendid, and the darkness which the spring of the year, and the fruitfulness which the autumn, are to me like the voice of God. Rocked in the cradle of the deep, I learned to love the land. Rocked in fallow, I learned to love the land. Rocked in fallow, I learned to love the land. Rocked in fallow

DARK ROSALEEN.

TRANSLATED FROM THE IRISH BY J. C. MANGAN.

This impassioned song, entitled, in the original, "Roisin Dubh," or the "Black Little Rose," was written in the reign of Elizabeth by one of the poets of the celebrated Three-ombine clan-Sasin, Hugh the Red O'Donnell. It purports to be an allegorical address from Hugh to Ireland on the subject of his love and struggles for her, and his resolve to raise her again to the glorious position she held as a nation before the irruption of the Saxon and Norman spoilers. The true character of, and meaning of the figurative allusions with which it abounds, and to two only of which I need refer here—namely, the "Roman wine" and "Spanish ale" mentioned in the first stanza—the intelligent reader will of course find no difficulty in understanding.

O, my Dark Rosaleen,
Do not sigh, do not weep!
The priests are on the ocean green,
They march along the deep;
There's wine from the royal Pope
Upon the ocean green,
And Spanish ale shall give you hope,
My Dark Rosaleen!
My own Rosaleen!
Shall give you hope, shall give you hope,
Shall give you health and help and hope,
My Dark Rosaleen!

Over hills and through dales
Have I roamed for your sake!
All yesterday I mourned with sad
On Slieve Gua's lofty lake,
The Erne, at its loudest flood,
I dashed across unseen,
For there was fighting in my blood,
My Dark Rosaleen!
My own Rosaleen!
O! there was lightning in my blood—
Red lightning lightened through my blood,
My Dark Rosaleen!

All day long in secret,
To and fro, do I hunt;
The very soul within my breast
Is wasted for you, love!
The heath this night must be
My only bed, my only bier,
My life (if life my soul of saints),
My own Rosaleen!
My own Rosaleen!
To hear your sweet and sad complaints,
My life, my love, my soul of saints,
My Dark Rosaleen!

Woe and pain, pain and woe,
Are my lot night and noon,
To see your bright face clouded so,
Like to the mournful moon.
But yet will I rear your throne
Again in golden sheen;
'Tis you shall reign, and reign alone,
My Dark Rosaleen!
My own Rosaleen!
'Tis you shall have the golden throne,
You shall reign and reign alone,
My Dark Rosaleen!

Over dew-girt inch and strand,
Will I go for your weal:
Your hoary de'mons white and black
Shall gird me with zeal;
A home in your embrace shall be
From morning's dawn till e'en,
You'll pray for me, my flower of flowers,
My Dark Rosaleen!
My own Rosaleen!
You'll think of me through daylight's hours,
My virgin flower, my flower of flowers,
My Dark Rosaleen!

I could scale the blue air,
I could pass the high hills;
Oh, I could tread all night in prayer,
To heal your many ills,
And one bead only counts from you
Would float like light between
My hills and me, my own, my true,
My Dark Rosaleen!
My own Rosaleen!
Sweet is my life and soul anew,
A thousand welcomes to you,
My Dark Rosaleen!

O! the Erne shall run red
With redoubtance of blood—
The earth shall rock beneath our tread,
And flames wrap hill and wood,
And gout post and steeple cry
Wake many a glen secure,
Ere you shall fade, ere you shall die,
My Dark Rosaleen!
My own Rosaleen!
The judgment hour must first be nigh
Ere you can fade, ere you can die,
My Dark Rosaleen!

JOHN SCRANTON'S HAT AND IRA EATON'S GUN.

Here Yeomans shoved up his shirt-sleeves and mixed a cocktail for George A. Smith and Bishop Scribner. After the cocktail had disappeared he continued:

"Well, you see, in about five minutes Ira came back. They all began talking and laughing, and Ira began bragging about the game he was going to shoot. Hackett stepped up to the corner and picked up Ira's gun. He turned her over and sighted her three or four times, and then asked Ira what kind of a gun she was. Ira said that she was a pretty good shooter; that he used her half a dozen times, and that he didn't have any fault to find with her. 'What did you pay for her?' says Hackett, still turning her over. 'Well,' Ira says, 'she cost me a hundred and seventy-five dollars.' Hackett laughed and began to ridicule Ira, telling him that the gun wasn't worth a dose of tansy and bitters, and he'd be willing to buy a cord load of such guns in New York for two bits. Of course Ira was mighty indignant. He told Hackett that he talked like a infernal fool, and advised him to go to a gun shop and learn something about a gun before he made an ass of himself."

THE JOB PUT UP.

Here Yeomans shoved up his shirt-sleeves and mixed a cocktail for Judge Hemingway, of Kansas, and Judge Jotee Clinton, of Salt Lake. After the cocktails had disappeared he continued:

"Well, Ira got to the field and Hackett got to one side; another, John Scranton he stepped up and sculled himself into the row. Of course he took Hackett's side, declared the gun to be nothing more than a sporting, and he wondered what a man of Ira's sporting reputation would carry such a gun. Ira was wild. He had no suspicion but what the loop was perpendicular. There was a jolly row. It lasted two or three minutes. Then John Scranton asked Ira if the gun was loaded. Ira said she was. 'Then,' said John, winking at the boys, 'I'll bet you a basket of wine that you can't hit my hat on top of that barrel,' pointing to a barrel about forty rods distant. At this Ira beat-leted. He looked at Scranton's new beaver, and said it would be a cussed shame to ruin such a hat as that. If some one would put up an old hat he would take the bet. But John Scranton insisted upon putting up his hat, and he knew that there were no old hats on the premises. T at fired Ira up again. 'Put up your hat,' he said, 'I'll take a pop at it for a basket of wine.'"

THE FATAL SHOT.

Here Yeomans shoved up his sleeves and mixed cocktails for Bishop Farr, of Ogden, and Chaffee, Secretary of Chicopee. They were large cocktails. After they had disappeared—the cocktails, not the Bishop and Colonel—he continued:

"So John Scranton went out and put up his fifty-dollar hat on the barrel. Ira, when he came back he was mighty hunting with a shotgun. The boys were nudging each other and laughing, and Ira began bragging about the game he was going to shoot. Hackett stepped up to the corner and picked up Ira's gun. He turned her over and sighted her three or four times, and then asked Ira what kind of a gun she was. Ira said that she was a pretty good shooter; that he used her half a dozen times, and that he didn't have any fault to find with her. 'What did you pay for her?' says Hackett, still turning her over. 'Well,' Ira says, 'she cost me a hundred and seventy-five dollars.' Hackett laughed and began to ridicule Ira, telling him that the gun wasn't worth a dose of tansy and bitters, and he'd be willing to buy a cord load of such guns in New York for two bits. Of course Ira was mighty indignant. He told Hackett that he talked like a infernal fool, and advised him to go to a gun shop and learn something about a gun before he made an ass of himself."

THE JOB PUT UP.

Here Yeomans shoved up his shirt-sleeves and mixed a cocktail for John Scranton and Hackett. Hackett got to one side; another, John Scranton he stepped up and sculled himself into the row. Of course he took Hackett's side, declared the gun to be nothing more than a sporting, and he wondered what a man of Ira's sporting reputation would carry such a gun. Ira was wild. He had no suspicion but what the loop was perpendicular. There was a jolly row. It lasted two or three minutes. Then John Scranton asked Ira if the gun was loaded. Ira said she was. 'Then,' said John, winking at the boys, 'I'll bet you a basket of wine that you can't hit my hat on top of that barrel,' pointing to a barrel about forty rods distant. At this Ira beat-leted. He looked at Scranton's new beaver, and said it would be a cussed shame to ruin such a hat as that. If some one would put up an old hat he would take the bet. But John Scranton insisted upon putting up his hat, and he knew that there were no old hats on the premises. T at fired Ira up again. 'Put up your hat,' he said, 'I'll take a pop at it for a basket of wine.'"

THE FATAL SHOT.

Here Yeomans shoved up his sleeves and mixed cocktails for Bishop Farr, of Ogden, and Chaffee, Secretary of Chicopee. They were large cocktails. After they had disappeared—the cocktails, not the Bishop and Colonel—he continued:

"So John Scranton went out and put up his fifty-dollar hat on the barrel. Ira, when he came back he was mighty hunting with a shotgun. The boys were nudging each other and laughing, and Ira began bragging about the game he was going to shoot. Hackett stepped up to the corner and picked up Ira's gun. He turned her over and sighted her three or four times, and then asked Ira what kind of a gun she was. Ira said that she was a pretty good shooter; that he used her half a dozen times, and that he didn't have any fault to find with her. 'What did you pay for her?' says Hackett, still turning her over. 'Well,' Ira says, 'she cost me a hundred and seventy-five dollars.' Hackett laughed and began to ridicule Ira, telling him that the gun wasn't worth a dose of tansy and bitters, and he'd be willing to buy a cord load of such guns in New York for two bits. Of course Ira was mighty indignant. He told Hackett that he talked like a infernal fool, and advised him to go to a gun shop and learn something about a gun before he made an ass of himself."

THE JOB PUT UP.

Here Yeomans shoved up his shirt-sleeves and mixed a cocktail for Judge Hemingway, of Kansas, and Judge Jotee Clinton, of Salt Lake. After the cocktails had disappeared he continued:

"Well, Ira got to the field and

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

Domiciliary visits have also become part of the Prussian procedure against the Catholic functionaries at Posen. The local police, accompanied by a high Government official, have searched the premises of the Cathedral for documents belonging to the Papal Legate.

Right Rev. Dr. Ryan, Roman Catholic Bishop of Killaloe, has appointed Rev. Sylvester Malone, administrator of Newtownsandon-Fergus, to the parish of Six-mile Bridge, vacant by the death of the late Rev. Michael Chine.

The Redemptorist Fathers at the Highlands, Boston, Mass., have heard 118,000 confessions in the past twelve months. A new church, 200 feet long by 70 feet, is to be built of stone, on a fine site, for them.

Catholic priests in Chicago are engaged in circulating among the workmen of their congregations, pledges, not merely to refrain from the use of liquor, but from the temptation also. The pledge binds the signer to avoid going into a saloon or place where liquor is sold on any pretence.

The municipality of Seville has offered a reward of two thousand pounds for the recovery of Murillo's splendid painting of St. Anthony, recently stolen from the Cathedral of that city.

The London Telegraph professes to be in a position to state that there is no foundation whatever for the report that it had been resolved to build a Roman Catholic Congress in England, to uphold the dogma of the Pope's infallibility and the temporal and spiritual claims of the Sovereign Pontiff.

We deeply regret to announce the death of Rev. Dennis O'Brien, lately assistant pastor of St. Andrew's church, Manchester, Pa. He was born in the Tipperary, Ireland, in 1848, came to Pittsburgh in the Winter part of 1868. Solemn High Mass was celebrated at St. Patrick's by the Right Rev. Bishop.

The Vagaries of English Law.

Magisterial sentences are becoming some of those things that "no fellow can understand." The other day two soldiers arrived at Bangor, on their way to Carrick-on-Shannon, to take a pedestrian tour in the latter town. If not picked men, they were, at any rate, choice spirits, and so loyal that they considered it their duty assiduously to drink their Royal Mistress' health during the journey, a proceeding which rather "fatigued" them, as we say in Ireland. They were armed with loaded rifles to shoot the Carrick-on-Shannon men if attempted to desert again. To make certain of their aim they thought it as well to have a little practice en route, so when they came to Bangor they discharged their arms among the people at the station. They were quite right in making sure they wanted practice, for they failed in hitting anybody, notwithstanding the presence of a large number of people. Some of the officials, with the impertinence which characterizes the time, interfered with the exercise, and by force of numbers drove them to retreat behind the wagons. The breech-loader is a good weapon, however, very useful on an emergency; and so, with great presence of mind and discipline, the soldiers loaded and discharged their weapons again at the porters. Their aim was not yet all that was to be desired, and again they missed their mark.

They were about to make a third attempt, which doubtless would have been more successful, when their adversaries, coming from behind, overpowered them, and, with a stupid disregard for what was due to the service, removed their rifles, and actually had the audacity to handcuff them and hand them over to the civil power. The civil power, in this case represented by a very civil magistrate, tried them the next day. Unfortunately it was found that they had committed a technical violation of the law, and the magistrate was compelled to inflict a nominal penalty. He, however, indicated his personal opinion of the system of bull prattice among a crowd at a railway station, by merely fining them forty shillings. Probably even this penalty would have been remitted, but that the men proved themselves such bad shots as to fire four rounds without "bringing down" a single person or thing. We regret that this enlightened magistrate was not at Bangor station on the night in question. It might have enjoyed quite a new sensation. —Dublin Freeman.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED:

Rev Jos—James McGowan ..... $2 50
" John Tumpkins ..... 4 00
" John Richardson ..... 2 00
" Jas Kinnefick ..... 2 00
Almsden—Joseph Usher ..... 2 00
Milpitas—Robert Walsh ..... 2 00
" Miguel Soto ..... 2 00
Washington—Thomas Mahony ..... 2 00
Point Arena—Rev Father Nappa ..... 2 00
San Juan—Jas O'Connell ..... 2 00
Farmer's Hall—E. Mahoney (by Rev. Father Nappa) ..... 10 00
" Nagle ..... 10 00
Los Angeles—Stephen M. White ..... 2 00
Petaluma—Jeremiah O'Rourke ..... 2 00
" Thomas Mahony ..... 2 00
" Jo Smith ..... 2 00
" P. Cunningham ..... 2 00
" H. Painted ..... 2 00
" John Richardson ..... 2 00
" John McNamara ..... 2 00
" William Gaffney ..... 2 00
" John Wright ..... 2 00
" Jo Mahoney ..... 2 00
" Jo Smith ..... 2 00
Peach Tree—James Meade ..... 2 00
San José—John J. Owens ..... 2 00
" P. Conner & Bro ..... 2 00
" Philip Doherty ..... 2 00
Carson City—Thomas Roche ..... 2 00
" Miss Hoyt ..... 2 00
" Joseph Carwell ..... 2 00
Gilroy—John Smith ..... 2 00
" John Markham ..... 2 00
" Judge John Mc Cray ..... 2 00
" Peter Trainor ..... 2 00
" James Peters ..... 2 00
" J. Nordt ..... 2 00
" J. H. Bangs ..... 2 00
" Georg Seaman ..... 2 00
" Jo Mahoney ..... 2 00
Silly Ridge—Jo Smith ..... 2 00
" J. Weir ..... 2 00
Healdsburg—Jo Mosely ..... 2 00
Bernardsville—A. S. Hopkins ..... 2 00
Napa—Maurice Meahan ..... 2 00
Utah—Joseph Herrick ..... 2 00
Cayucos—Patrick J. Sampson ..... 2 00
Strawberry Valley—Jeffrey Welch ..... 2 00
Brooklyn—Ignatius Vassalo ..... 2 00
Calistoga, Nev.—P. Gaffrigde ..... 2 00
Our Mother—Thomas Fitzpatrick ..... 2 00
" H. W. Moody ..... 2 00
" P. S. Barr ..... 2 00
" Andrew Healy ..... 2 00
" Thomas Doherty ..... 2 00
" Peter Reilly ..... 2 00
Monterey—Thomas Gallagher ..... 2 00
Cloverdale—P. Gilbert ..... 2 00
" Louis Lavelle ..... 2 00
Salinas City—Joseph Reilly ..... 2 00
" Joseph Reilly ..... 2 00
" A. P. Ryder ..... 2 00
" D. F. Ryder ..... 2 00
Cathedral (W. T.)—Maurice B. Sullivan ..... 2 00
Walnut River, John Hart ..... 2 00
Widow with (Rev)—John McDonald ..... 2 00
On Tyrone, Ireland—Daniel Downey ..... 2 00
Nantucket—M. Reardon ..... 2 00

A concert, under the auspices of Miss Tina Murray, will be given at the Chapel Hall, in the Convent of Notre Dame, Marysville, on the 10th instant.

For all Female Complaints

Nothing equals Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a most powerful restorative tonic and nervine, combining the most valuable curative properties especially adapted to the wants of debilitated ladies suffering from weak back, internal fever, congestion, inflammation, ulceration, or female irregularities, or neuralgic pains. Mrs. H. W. Reynolds, Grayson, Carter Co., N.Y., writes Dr. Pierce as follows: "I obtained for your Favorite Prescription in wonderful and cure I am thankful to say that his wife had not done a day's work in five or six years, when she commenced taking your Favorite Prescription, and is to-day the best woman in the world. She has gone to do her own work since and is now able to do a large family." Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is sold by all dealers in medicine.

A Valuable Medical Treatise.

Hostetter's United States Almanac for 1875, for distribution, gratis, throughout the United States, and all civilized countries of the Western Hemisphere, will be published about the first of January, in the English, German, French, Norwegian, Swedish, Holland, Bohemian and Spanish languages, and all who wish to understand the true philosophy of health should read and ponder the valuable suggestions it contains. In addition to an admirable medical treatise on the causes, prevention and cure of a score of diseases, it contains, in embrace a large amount of information interesting to the merchant, the mechanic, the miner, the planter and the professional man; and the calculations have been made for each meridians and latitudes as are most suitable for a correct and comprehensible Almanac. National statistics of interest, laws and extraordinary sanitary effects of the Bitters, and other matters of a miscellaneous character make up a volume of rare value and interest. Druggists, Merchants, Hotels, Steamboats, Railroads, Manufacturers, and others who are interested in the sale of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, can have circulars forwarded to them, containing various terms for the Almanac, by addressing Hostetter & Smith, Pittsburgh, and mentioning this paper.

Wholesale Market Report.

MONDAY OFFICE, SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6, 1874.

FLOUR—The demand for local consumption has continued fair, while for export the enquiry has been moderate. We quote—Extra at $4 [illegible] 75; and superfine at $3 [illegible] to $4 [illegible].

WHEAT—The market has ruled quiet and at steady rates the past week. Prices have ranged from $1 [illegible] 45. At the close we quote shipping at $1 [illegible] 42½ to $1 [illegible].

BARLEY—The demand has been very good at unchanged rates. We quote feed at $1 [illegible] 30, and brewing at $1 [illegible] 40 @ [illegible].

OATS—There is a fair demand, at unchanged rates during the past week. Quotable at the close at $1 [illegible] 75 @ [illegible].

RYE—The receipts have been light during the past week, and the demand good. Quotable at the close at $1 [illegible] for ordinary to choice [illegible].

BRAN—Quotable at $1 [illegible] 10 @ [illegible].

CORN—Quotable at $1 [illegible] 15 @ [illegible].

BEANS—The following are the jobbing rates: Bayo, $2 [illegible] 75@3; Pink and Red, $2 [illegible]; small White, $3 [illegible] 75; Butter, $4 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible].

ONIONS—We quote at $1 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible].

POTATOES—The receipts have been free, with a fair demand, and the quote has been at $1 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible] per cental.

BRAN—Quotable at $1 [illegible] 10 @ [illegible] per ton from mill.

MIDDLINGS—Quotable at $1 [illegible] 25 @ [illegible] per ton from mill.

BARLEY—Quotable at $1 [illegible] 12½ @ [illegible].

BUCKWHEAT—Quotable at $2 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible].

CHICKEN FEED—Quotable at $1 [illegible] 40 @ [illegible].

Mustard, Lyallpur Alfalfa, 12½c; Timothy, 10c; Red Clover, 20c; Alsike, 20c; White Clover, 25c; Hungarian, 6c; Millet, 6c; Lucerne, 12½c. All quoted at wholesale.

TALLOW—Quotable at 6½@7c.

FEED WAX—Quotable at 45@50c.

HIDES—Quotable at [illegible] dull; dry [illegible]; dry salted [illegible]; salted [illegible]; dull; kips [illegible]; dull; calf [illegible]; dull; deacons [illegible]; dull; dry kips [illegible]; dull; dry calf [illegible]; dull; dry deacons [illegible]; dull; wet salted [illegible]; dull; wet salted kips [illegible]; dull; wet salted calf [illegible]; dull; wet salted deacons [illegible]; dull; dry Mexican [illegible]; dull; dry Mexican kips [illegible]; dull; dry Mexican calf [illegible]; dull; dry Mexican deacons [illegible]; dull; dry Mexican [illegible]; dull; dry Mexican kips [illegible]; dull; dry Mexican calf [illegible]; dull; dry Mexican deacons [illegible]; dull.

WOOL—Quotable at [illegible] for Fall Fleece; [illegible] for Spring Fleece; [illegible] for Foothill; [illegible] for Mountain; [illegible] for Humboldt; [illegible] for Southern; [illegible] for Nevada; [illegible] for Oregon; [illegible] for Lambs; [illegible] for Burry and Cotted; [illegible] for Heavy and Coarse.

VALLEJO STREET—Quotable at $1 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible] per [illegible].

DAIRY PRODUCE.

BUTTER—California fresh pull, good to choice, 30 @ 32½c; fair to good, 27½@30c; pickled pail, 25@27½c.

CHEESE—California, 12½@13c; Eastern, 13@15c.

EGGS—California, 35@37½c; Eastern, 30@32½c.

CURED MEATS.

HAMS—California, 16@18c; Eastern, 17@18c.

BACON—California, 16@18c; Eastern, 18@19c.

DRIED BEEF—California, 18@20c; Eastern, 18@19c; do. in tins, 1581/2c; do in sacks, 18@19c; do. in cloths and pails, 19@20c.

FRESH MEATS.

BEEF—For first quality, 8@9½c; other grades, 6@8c.

VEAL—Large, 8@9c; small, 10@11c.

MUTTON—Wethers, 8@9c; Ewes, 7@8c.

PORK—Dressed, grain-fed, 8@9c; do fair, 7@8c; do poor, 6@7c.

POULTRY AND GAME.

POULTRY—Hens, large, $7 [illegible] 00; Broilers, $4 [illegible] 00 @ [illegible]; Roosters—Old, $5 [illegible]; Young, $4 [illegible]; Turkeys—Live, 20@22c; dressed, 24c; Ducks—Wild, $1 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible]; Tame, $2 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible]; Geese, $2 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible]; Pigeons, $1 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible]; Rabbits—Wild, $1 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible]; Tame, $1 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible]; Quail, $1 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible]; Snipe, $1 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible]; Plover, $1 [illegible] 50 @ [illegible]; Venison, 10@12½c.

GAME—Deer, [illegible]; Elk, [illegible]; Antelope, [illegible]; Bear, [illegible].

FISH—Salmon, 12½@15c; Halibut, 10@12½c; Flounders, 5@7½c; Rock Cod, 5@7½c; Perch, 5@7½c; Smelts, 5@7½c; Sturgeon, 5@7½c; Shad, 5@7½c; Mackerel, 5@7½c; Herring, 5@7½c; Sardines, 5@7½c; Catfish, 5@7½c; Bass, 5@7½c; Trout, 5@7½c; Tomcod, 5@7½c; Whitefish, 5@7½c; Pike, 5@7½c; Sole, 5@7½c; Flounders, 5@7½c; Rock Cod, 5@7½c; Perch, 5@7½c; Smelts, 5@7½c; Sturgeon, 5@7½c; Shad, 5@7½c; Mackerel, 5@7½c; Herring, 5@7½c; Sardines, 5@7½c; Catfish, 5@7½c; Bass, 5@7½c; Trout, 5@7½c; Tomcod, 5@7½c; Whitefish, 5@7½c; Pike, 5@7½c; Sole, 5@7½c.

REPRINTS
OF THE
BRITISH PERIODICALS.

THE POLITICAL FERMENT AMONG THE European nations, the strife between Church and State, the progress of Science, the discussions in Theology, and the constant production of new works in Literature, render it necessary that readers should turn to the leading foreign reviews during 1875. Nowhere can they find so much valuable matter fresh as may be demand from the facts and arguments necessary to form a correct and comprehensible opinion.

The Leonard Scott Publishing Co,
41 Barclay street, New York,

Combines the reprint of the four leading Reviews—

EDINBURGH REVIEW (Whig).
LONDON QUARTERLY REVIEW (Conservative).
WESTMINSTER REVIEW (Liberal).
BRITISH QUARTERLY REVIEW (Evangelical).

—AND—

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.

TERMS:
PAYABLE STRICTLY IN ADVANCE.

For any one Review ..... $ 4 00 per annum
For any two Reviews ..... 7 00 " "
For any three Reviews ..... 10 00 " "
For all four Reviews ..... 12 00 " "
For Blackwood and one Review ..... 7 00 " "
For Blackwood and two Reviews ..... 10 00 " "
For Blackwood and three Reviews ..... 13 00 " "
For Blackwood and the four Reviews ..... 15 00 " "

The Postage will be prepaid by the publishers, without charge to the subscribers, at the rates the law requires. Subscriptions must be paid invariably in advance at the commencement of each year.

CLUBS.

A discount of twenty per cent. will be allowed to clubs ordering four or more copies of any one Review or Magazine. A discount of twenty-five per cent. will be allowed to clubs ordering four or more copies of the Four Reviews or Four Reviews and Blackwood for $40, and so on.

Neither premiums nor discounts to clubs can be allowed unless the money is remitted direct to the publishers. No premium given to clubs unless ordered with former particulars may be had on application.

The Leonard Scott Publishing Co,
41 Barclay Street, New York.

WANTED—BY A RESPECTABLE AND RELIable Irish woman, a few engagements as help; monthly nurse, or would take care of an invalid lady or gentleman. Can be seen for a few days at 1013 Washington street, above Powell.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

THE ARCADE.
924, 926 AND 928
MARKET STREET.

THE PEOPLE'S VERDICT!
REVOLUTION
IN PRICES!
ASTONISHMENT!
A FRENCH SILK AT 75 CTS!

Our Patrons were Incredulous, but are now Convinced!

☞ The past week has developed an era in the Dry Goods trade of this city unprecedented. Monopoly stands aghast at the Pioneers of HONEST PRICES, and came with blank dismay at the wilderness of sinks arriving at

THE ARCADE.

We print with pride to the last dot date as a Chronicle of the wonderful, that we would RESPECTFULLY SOLICIT a continuance of the favors of the past, and assure from the path of honorable industry like low and unyielding forbearance of HIGH PRICES!

Today we fearlessly set the ladies of San Francisco, whether our words have been realized not in the letter of the

THEIR TRUEST VERDICT

Has been already given in the vast influx of visitors inspecting our superb stock. Our unswerving purpose in the future, as in the present, will be to place before the public the choicest and newest goods, at prices which we feel must

ULTIMATELY TRIUMPH.

It is to our interest to win the public's confidence by the closest adherence to TRUTH!

Our present prices are an earnest specimen of our ambition to prove to the people of the Pacific Coast that in the search of Excellence is progress.

The Arcade

shall stand alone as the symbol of ELEGANCE AND SPLENDOR and the CHAMPION OF IMPARTIAL AND LIBERAL PRICES.

☞ Samples sent free on application. Parcels promptly delivered. Out of town orders filled with all parts of America treated with the same attention as if the purchaser were present. Please find enclosure for the Domestic Department.

GROCERIES, WINES AND LIQUORS

STEVE McGILLAN,
241 Fourth Street, San Francisco,
GROCERIES AND LIQUORS
—AT—
Wholesale Rates

HOUSEKEEPERS CAN SAVE TWENTY PER cent. by purchasing from him, as they can select those rates by standing his goods and the prices. He guarantees to sell to customers at WHOLESALE RATES, besides delivering goods free of charge. [illegible]

JOHN FLANAGAN & CO,
Importers and Jobbers of
Fine Brandies, Wines, Liquors, Etc.
Wine-proof Store, 421 Front street,
Between Clay and Washington ..... San Francisco

Famous Liquors in bond. Fine Brandies, Holland (in Port, Claret, etc., sold in quantities to suit the purchaser. Agts. Cadet de Gascogne California Wines and Brandies.

J. H. KELLY ..... JOHN EGAN
Kelly & Egan
IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN FINE WINES AND LIQUORS
No. 604 Battery street,
San Francisco.

D. Commins & Co
(Successors to P. Riley & Co.)
WHOLESALE LIQUOR MERCHANT
No. 305 Front street.

JAMES SIMS ..... R. MCKEE
SIMS, BOCQUERAZ & McKEE,
IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS OF
WINES AND LIQUORS,
Sole Agents for
Golden and Tea Kettle Bourbon Whiskies.
Corner Front and Jackson streets,
SAN FRANCISCO.

F. & P. J. CASSIN,
Importers and Wholesale Dealers in
WINES AND LIQUORS,
NO. 543 FRONT STREET,
SAN FRANCISCO.

Sole agents for O. K. GOLDEN PLANTATION WHISKY.

C. LYMAN. ..... F. HAFFERTY. ..... D. MCGOLD

LYMAN, HAFFERTY & CO,
IMPORTERS AND
WHOLESALE LIQUOR DEALERS
316 BATTERY STREET,
Corner of Merchant. ..... San Francisco

LOUIS DUNNE. ..... R. J. O'BRIEN

DUNNE & O'BRIEN,
X10US SALOON,
133 THIRD STREET,
San Francisco

JOHN KENNY,
IMPORTER AND WHOLESALE DEALER IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC
WINES AND LIQUORS,
No. 313 FRONT STREET,
Between Washington and Jackson ..... San Francisco
CALIFORNIA WINES, bottled by white men only.

P. T. FLINN & SON,
DEALERS IN GROCERIES, PROVISIONS,
WINES AND LIQUORS,
Flour, Middlings, Barley, Oats, Hay, Etc.,
N. E. corner Mission and Eighth sts.,
AND
S. W. corner Howard and Eighth sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.

THE NEVADA SALOON,
(Formerly known as the Kremlin),
P. J. McMAHON ..... PROPRIETOR,
(Formerly of the Bon Homme).
426 Montgomery street, East side,
Between Post and Bush, ..... San Francisco
WILLIAM B. DOLAN,
133 Third Street ..... San Francisco
Importer and Dealer in Wholesale and Retail in French Wines and Brandies,
—AND—
Irish Whiskey,
Imported direct from Ireland.

HE HAS ALSO ON HAND A LARGE AS-sortment of Liquors of every description, which he will dispose of, in bulk or in case, to the trade on favorable terms.

All orders left at the store, 133 Third street, will be promptly attended to, and delivered free of charge in any part of the city. 1270

DUFFY BROS.' SALOON,
831 Merchant Street ..... San Francisco
Sole Agents for Hennessy's Pale Brandy.

J. H. DOUGHERTY,
Wines, Liquors and Cigars,
315 California street,
Above Montgomery ..... Near California Market.
1216

P. F. BRADY,
LA GRANDE EXCHANGE,
810 Market street and 11 Post street,
(Opposite Masonic Temple) ..... San Francisco

The reputation the Lacrande for the excellence of its Wines, Liquors and Cigars is unsurpassed.

"CELTIC CLUB HOUSE,"
1036 MARKET STREET,
Between Fifth and Sixth ..... San Francisco
T. F. BAINES. ..... PROPRIETOR

Always on hand an excellent stock of superior Brandies, Wines, Liquors and Cigars.

J. W. McDONALD,
DEALER IN Fine Wines, Liquors and Cigars
N. W. cor. Merchant and Sansome sts.,
And S. E. corner Fourteenth and Mission streets
Opposite Woodward's Gardens.

THOMAS McGUIRE'S SALOON,
411 Broadway, bet. Fifth and Sixth sts.
OAKLAND, CAL.
Only the best Wines, Liquors and Cigars. 1126

IMMENSE SACRIFICE
OF
BOOTS AND SHOES

CLOTHING AND GENT'S FURNISHING GOODS
AT THE AVENUE AUCTION STORE OF
JAMES O'HANLON,
735 Montgomery Street.
☞ GREAT CLEARANCE SALE FOR SIXTY DAYS ONLY.

A VISIT TO THE STORE WILL CONVINCE THE MOST SKEPTICAL THAT WE ARE selling goods cheaper than ever before offered in this city. Our present stock of Staple Goods is much below cost, having been purchased expressly for cash over trade and to sell for ready cash. Read our list of bargains:

500 pieces Men's tap sole Boots at..... $1 50
500 " Men's Calf Boots at..... 2 50
300 cases Factory Boots, full stock..... 3 00
500 cases Ship and Kip Boots..... 3 50
500 cases Calf Boots..... 4 00
100 cases Ladies' Kid Boots..... 2 50
100 cases Ladies' Leather Boots..... 2 00
100 cases Misses' Boots from [illegible]
100 cases Misses' Boots from [illegible]
Our own make and warranted.

Men's and Boy's Clothing at Greatly Reduced
1,000 Men's Cassimere Suits at.....
500 Men's Cheviot Suits.....
Extra Heavy Beaver Suits.....
A splendid and well-selected stock of Boys' and Youths' Clothing, very cheap—Boys' suits
from [illegible] to [illegible].
Youths' suits, $7 50—worth $10.

IMPORTATION DIRECT
M. SHORT
PIONEER TAILOR,
COMMERCIAL STREET, - - - Corner of Leidesd
☞ THE FINEST GOODS ever imported into this market, including
MEDIUMS, CASSIMERE,
CHEVIOTS, SATEEN,
OXFORDS, WITCHES,
BANGLANS, WEST TWILLS,
Etc., Etc., Etc.

A Large Assortment of Genuine Irish Frieses
Being the NEWEST FASHIONS, both in material and colors, which he now offers at prices which Cannot be touched by any other house in the city.

An Inspection of
THIS SPLENDID S is respectfully invited. E fect di guaranteed.

M. SHORT,
527 Commercial S
SAN FRANCISCO.

MORRIS SHE

JOHN & KENNY
KENNY & SHEAHA
MERCHANT TAILORS,
No. 34 Third stree
ARE PREPARED TO MAKE GENTLEMEN'S
BUSINESS SUITS TO ORDER,
FINE BEAVER SUITS,
FIRST-CLASS DRESS SUITS,
LATEST FASHIONABLE STY

GREAT BARGAINS
IN BOOTS AND SHOES,
AT HEALY'S
648 MARKET STREET (OPPOSITE FOURTH)
☞ PRICES TO DEFY COMPETITION.

GRAY'S
Music Stores and Music Pub lishing House,
842 and 845 Clay Street, San Francisco, and 101 First Street, Portland, O.
☞ The only Packing and Publishing House on the Pacific Coast.
STEINWAY PIANOS AND BEH
GILBERT, HALLET & CHICKERING
AND MINOR PIANOS.
CARL BERNINGHAUS, AGENT FOR ERNST GILBERT, AND A. GRAY Squares and Uprights.
☞ The Largest Stock of Music on the Pacific Coast.
Pianos for Rent at from $1 to $10 per month.
GRAY'S MUSIC STORES.

KENNY & VAN DUSEN,
Real Estate and General Business Agents,
Office—326 PEARNY STREET,
NEAR CALIFORNIA ..... SAN FRANCISCO
Houses, Lots, Farming Lands, Chattels, Dairy Hotels, Stores, etc.
AND
All Kinds of Business Interests For Sale.
Partnerships Negotiated on short Notice. Money to Loan on Approved Security.

SULLIVAN, KELLY & CO.,
Northwest corner Pine and Front Sts.
Where they offer for sale
THE LARGEST STOCK OF PAINTS,
OILS,
GLASS
ETC., ETC., ON THE PACIFIC COAST,
AT THE LOWEST MARKET RATES.
101, 103 and 105 FRONT STREET,
AND
110 PINE STREET.
THOMAS J. DONOHOE, 110 SECOND STREET, Manufacturer of Boots and Shoes. Repairing done neatly and cheap. Wines, Liquors and Cigars for sale. 1238

HARNE
AND SADDLE
F. C. FRAN
Harness Store ..... Santa C
Importer, Manufacturer and Wholesale
and
Retail Dealer in HARNESS, SADDLES, BRIDLES,
WHIPS, MATS, ROBES, ETC.
Which he offers at the lowest prices. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. 1230

STOCKTON ADVERTISEM
GARVIN & NUNA
Corner Main and Sutter Streets.
Dealers in Periodicals, M
Books, Pictures, Etc.
News Agents—Advertising
YOSEMITE HO
STOCKTON.
The only first class resort for those Southern Mines.
Conveniently situated in the business part of the city, connected with the Depot by a line of Omnibuses constantly running. Rates $2 per day. Free Omnibus to and from the house. Free coach to and from the office. [illegible]

THE MONITOR:
The Only Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
LYONS & BARRY, - - - - Publishers.
DENIS LYONS. JOHN T. BARRY.
RICHARD O'SULLIVAN ..... EDITOR.
DENIS LYONS ..... BUSINESS MANAGER.
OFFICE—ONE CLAY STREET, between Montgomery and Kearny sts. (Rooms 1, 2 and 3, up stairs.)
☞ All communications should be addressed to LYONS & BARRY.

TERMS (Payable in Advance):
Served by Carriers, per week ..... 10c
Mail subscribers, per year ..... $4 00
" months ..... 2 25
☞ Subscribers to Ireland or either of the British Provinces.
Per Annum ..... $ 5 00
Per Six Months ..... 2 75
☞ Postage in each case prepaid by publishers.

ADVERTISING RATES:
1 square, 1 month ..... $1 00 | 1 square, 6 months ..... $10 00
" 1 month ..... 6 00 | " 6 months ..... 12 00
" 2 months ..... 7 00 | " 6 months ..... 12 50
" 3 months ..... 9 00 | " 1 year ..... 24 00
☞ The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Job Printing Executed Neatly and Cheaply.

I WONDER WHY?

"I wonder which," said a farmer's wife,
If that couple ever will start in life;
I wonder much if that lovesick lad
Will need to mortgage his stock and farm
Why don't he wed her—I wonder why?"

"I wonder, indeed," said Parson Prim,
As he viewed the people through spectacles dim;
"I wonder if ever before I die
Shall be called on to join these forever and aye?
Why don't they hurry—I wonder why?"

"I wonder so much I was young!"
Said the old man, bending his hoary heads long
"I wonder if ever I shall be old
Would see their love with snarp sigh
They'll be sewer love tale by and by—
Last year will tell them the reason why."

"For the brave young squire is ready to wed
Sweet Mary, the flower of Strasker's Mead,
And the village gossips declare they'll say
She won't wed without his consent—that's why!
As yes, indeed, and that is the reason why!"

"But they plan a future when all will be right,
And Mary, my darling, will be my wife!
Will the squire's wife be forever and aye?
And these will all know the reason why—
Yes, they'll all know the reason why."

—The Monitor.

The Catholic Union of Ireland.

Faithful amid the faithless, constant amid wavering change, the Catholics of Ireland renewed, on January 20th, their pledge of devotion to their Church and of fealty to its visible head. A solemn memorial of such import and character is, in the days on which we have fallen, a spectacle as it is sublime and hopeful. There is on all sides a war, not of hostile beliefs, but rather of belief against unbelief. In Christian camp dissent has taken a form more odious and more pernicious than that of polemical controversy. The sects are willing, not to maintain or to vindicate by tenets, but for the advancement of material interests. To save these they put aside as worthless and obsolete the weapons of a blasphemous philosophy, and to the Catholic Church had to encounter more various or more virulent than Christ and her. All of this contrariety in one of the modern spiritual cultus, every one of the modern spiritual forces, the principle of private judgment, the pride and presumption of modern scientists, the unknown before, have sprung armed and bright and trained their fiercest fire on such as upon their natural antagonist. Such is the political and social indifferentism which, in one form or another, has begun grown out of the passions and ambitions of man in addition against the one power which offers an uncompromising opinion, and we can in some measure judge of the new immensities in the darkness of moral unfaithfulness which have sprung up around us. Nothing is more characteristic of this most elemental preservative.

Its proportion as her enemies increase in strength and in numbers, so does the action of the Catholic Church develop new forms of loyalty, endurance and resolve. The very malice of her foes but adds new weight to their devotion, for that great confession may well surprise the assembled Christendom of the assembled Benedictine—Rome, outside these all is chaos." Outside it is the old and angry world, and its alliance more compound and heterogeneous than the world had seen before.

Within is unity and confidence, a consciousness which was born with it. And in this consciousness the memorial of the Catholic Union met January 20th to use their own words, for the purpose of "opposing a New Era of spoiling Popery Father, of pledging to him once more their loyalty, and to defend children of Ireland's Holy Church on earth, of recognising him as the infallible interpreter of God's will in matters of faith and morals, and of submitting with his overwhelming and practical affections." As a matter of course such assurances from Irish Catholics in the days of Pius IX. would be new. But as a formal profession of love and loyalty it has a value to be properly estimated only by association with the circumstances of the hour. Every such declaration is a protest against the prevailing error and eloquence by the Mayor and Mr. D. F. Leahy, J.P., in front of two hundred millions of Catholics against the cruel treatment of the Vatican and man who has been styled the perfect accuracy "the prisoner of the Vatican."

It is a fact that the Pope is a prisoner in his dwelling, and the way in which they have been treated by the Italian Government is with the revolutionary band of infidel Italy, who, with the Mayhap injury may await the venerable Pontiff, but whose minds will remain with him when years, beyond the burden of these, for the voice or the blessing of

The primary resolution of the meeting was passed by others not less in interest or importance. The vigorous and well-sustained repudiation by Major O'Reilly, by Lord Emly, and by Sergeant Sherlock, M. P., of Mr. Gladstone's assertion that no Irish Catholic deserves of the Vatican. Comment was impossible in the face and practice of civil allegiance, was in itself a fitting conclusion to previous acts of the Council of the Union. Nothing to the same topic. A specially solemn by reason of the proceedings was the election of the Lord Bishop of Down and Connor, and Sergeant Sherlock, M. P., as lay members of the Irish Catholics, of vigilant and anti-social doctrines published in this country at the meeting of the Friendly Association in Belfast," and of sympathetic rejection" which these doctrines meeting received. The robbery and persecution of the Church upon the Continent and elsewhere were the subjects of eloquent denunciative speeches by Mr. J. G. Barry, M. P., and Mr. Thomas Pigot, J. P. A resolution avowing adhesion to the educational programme promulgated by the Irish Hierarchy was very ably submitted by Mr. O'Byrne, M. P., and the High Sheriff of Kildare, and the business of the meeting, earnest and enthusiastic in all its aspects, was concluded in a most appropriate tone by the observations of Messrs. P. J. Smyth, M. P., and Colonel Higgs, J. P., on the gratifying subject of extending organization of the Catholic Union. Our readers, fully prepared as are the aims and utterances of the meeting, do not require its exegesis here. Such assemblies tell their own story. They are the bonds and clasps of the system they defend; they include, in the community of sacrifice and counsel, divided millions. The Catholic Union is the combined voice of the Irish Church, and, speaking with no uncertain sound, it comforts and gladdens not only the Pope-King himself, but the humblest of the fold, who can feel, in these dark hours of trial and oppression, the worth of undying faith and fearless devotion.—Dublin Freeman, January 22.

Remember, my Friend is the Tobe.

The Pall Mall Gazette discusses what it calls a paper of very remarkable character on the character on the native press of India, which appeared in a late number of the Indian Economist, a Calcutta periodical. Our readers will be, perhaps, able to detect a certain significance in the article, taken in association with recent rumors of growing uneasiness in the great Asian dependency. It is, observes our contemporary, a new embarrassment added to the many which attend the British possession in the East that the vernacular native newspapers have been almost from their institution regularly pitching "treason!" To show that the serious epithet "treason!" is properly applicable to the writing of the native journals the Gazette quotes several extracts from their ordinary composition, among these passages the following will be sufficiently indicative: "We know full well the result of the present law; but, being in a playful mood, we will that we can say is considered a crime, and that it is a crime to say what is held to be just and true." "The English are not fools, but they are fools, and the English community is actually infected with a disease to benefit itself by the ruin of others." "The object of this conspiracy is the good of sending English officials to grave before the Parliamentary Committee? What else is the butcher Lawrence to be put on trial if the dying animal?" These newspapers are also very lively treated by the shops consider the people of India made to satisfy their appetites, just as the tiger looks upon the people of Bengal as his prey." "Nothing should any calamity such as a war with Russia befall India while her people and the English are at variance, no Englishman's queues will be tearful indeed." Lastly, a man is described as satisfied that the followers Wurz and Proctor protested against Materialism, and now Demas, the "living encyclopedia," as he is called, rises and protests in the name of all the sciences against the clamour and rage of those who scarcely know the A B C of science.

Our War.

It is lamented by many that there must and will soon be a war between the United States and Cuba, of which the "Virginius" affair will form the ostensible occasion, but American cupidity for Cuba the veritable cause. Americans, as a general thing, entertain the meanest opinion of Spain, and may even say, the full force of their language shall some day join her destiny with those of this country, willingly or unwillingly. And it appears that General Grant agrees in the Spanish contention realized during his administration. Such an event would give a great historical éclat to his presidency.

It is well, however, to look before leaping. To reach Cuba, water must be crossed. To cross the water ships are required. To travel through one of the finest navies in the world. Have the Americans weapons to do it with? Before a regiment could be landed on the soil of Cuba, the magnificent fleet of Spain would have to be defeated in open conflict on the high seas. It is evident then a considerable time must elapse and immense sums of money be expended, before our fleets could be put on a footing necessary to cope with Spain. The latter is a floating ground and greenbacks will get no issue of life.

There is but one thing, apparently, which can relieve the United States from such a position, and that is a general war in which some other powerful navy would be pitted against that of Spain so as to require its full attention. By improving such an opportunity the Cuban conquest could be effected with much greater facility. But would it pay?

In case of a general war, this country, by remaining neutral and peaceful, would become the common carrier for the world. Shipping from all countries would seek the protection of our flag; our factories would furnish arms and munitions of war for the belligerents, and, indeed, manufactures of every kind would flourish in this country as a natural result from the din and danger of war. Commerce, manufacture and agriculture would all receive an immense impetus, such as would soon carry our people to a pinnacle of prosperity hitherto unknown in history.

But they say that our glorious President is willing to forego all this, and seek the country with untold millions of debt besides, with the Spanish inflexibility exhibited by him in the matter of Louisiana's wrongs and ruin. He wants the offices for his friends, and what does he care for the cost so long as he can control the offices-holders are his party.—N. O. Morning Star.

ARCHBISHOP LEAHY.

O Casket of the Kings, thy harp is still—
Its soul of music hushed, its master dead!
For whom gentle woke the patriot thrill?
Wore the green Erin's fame immortal feed.

Yet hand shall touch that harp's mute chord again
With kindly magic of the tear and smile,
To fan pissed theme of Freedom's holy reign,
When saints and heroes graced the sacred isle!

Weep, Innisfail, for Leahy, thy pure son!
Had he the power, Christ hadst been great and free!
Of all thy cherished sons none more than he

IRISH LOCAL NEWS.

From the Dublin Nation of January 18.

Michael P. Hosty, Esq., has been elected town commissioner of Tuam, in room of Mr. Murphy, deceased.

The Sligo Harbor Commissioners, at their last meeting, signed a petition in favor of the bill for the closing of public houses on Sunday.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland was installed last week as Grand Master of the Masonic body in Ireland. The ceremony took place in the Masonic Hall, Molesworth street, Dublin.

At the general quarter sessions for Mullingar division of the county Westmeath the criminal business consisted of three cases.

At the Carlow quarter sessions a man named Denis Coady was sentenced to six months' imprisonment with hard labor for having obtained one half penny under false pretences.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. James Dooley, father of Very Rev. P. Dooley, P.P., V.G., Galway, which occurred on 8th January, at his residence, near Shrule.

At the Dundalk quarter sessions the chairman said there were only three cases to go before the Grand Jury. One of them was for an assault, and another was for receiving goods knowing them to have been stolen.

At the last meeting of the Cavan Town Commissioners, Mr. William Sharp (the chairman) and Mr. John Gannon were appointed as a deputation to attend the Conference on the Land Question, to be held in the Rotunda, Dublin.

The half-yearly sessions for the county of the town of Carrickfergus was held Jan. 9th. There was no criminal business to be disposed of, and the court, after being occupied for a few minutes, concluded the business.

Notwithstanding the exertions of the constabulary, assisted by the farmers and peasantry of all the countryside, nothing has been heard of Mr. Joseph Kelly, of Eglish, King's county, who has been missing from his home since Saturday night week.

A woman named Nancy Lee from the parish of Emly, died last week at the advanced age of 106 years. The old lady enjoyed good health throughout life, and for a period of forty-five years she was engaged carrying passengers to and from Emly to Tipperary.

The interest in a farm of sixty acres of land within three miles of Thurles, was sold by auction at Boyton's Hotel, Thurles, by Mr. O'Mara, auctioneer, for £645 with 5 per cent. commission. The yearly rent of the farm is £37, and is held from a very good landlord, Hev. G. Wall, Hollyrose.

At the Drogheda quarter sessions, the chairman said, although he could not on this occasion address to the Grand Jury the usual congratulations as to a blank calendar that he had no others, still there was nothing in the cases that would go before them to require special notice. There were four cases on the books.

At the Tyrone quarter sessions, the chairman, in addressing the grand jury, said their were several cases to go before them to be inquired into, but as far as he knew or the majority of them were of a trifling nature. [laughter] There was one felony charged with assault, one was charged with the person, one for rescue, and one for shooting at with intent.

His Grace the Archbishop of Tuam, as has been his unchanged custom for the lengthened period that has elapsed since his accession to the archiepiscopal see of Tuam, celebrated, without leaving the altar, the three first Masses in the Cathedral on Christmas Day. High Mass was subsequently celebrated at 12 o'clock, his Grace having also attended.

A woman named Bridget Noone, living near Naul, Galway, went out of her house for a short time a few days ago leaving her child an infant. When she returned she saw the child lying on the ground, and a pig busily eating it. The enraged mother facilitated fatality one of the child's hands, and almost eaten no end a portion of the head. The child is in a deplorable condition.

At the Castleblany quarter sessions, William Nesbitt Barron, Esq., chairman of the county Monaghan, congratulated the Grand Jury on the exceptional lightness of the calendar, there being only two cases on the Crown book—one for attempted pocket-picking and the other for aggravated assault.

A Lurgan correspondent states that three cases, whose names are unknown, entered the house of a woman named Mary Gallagher, of Aughnadoe, a few nights ago, and after speaking for and beating her daughter, compelled the latter to kneel down, and to repeat an oath after them to the effect that she would denominate "Hopping coal-pay with a certain young man." The parties then decamped.

Dr. Sullivan, President of the Queen's College, Cork, delivered a lecture last week before the Farmer's Club, on the cultivation of beet root. He entered carefully into the subject, and showed that beetroot sugar manufacture was a branch of industry well suited for the country, and capable of conferring numerous and signal advantages on the people.

On Sunday night, January 3d, the extensive flour mill fitted up some ten or twelve years ago by the late Mr. McLoughlin at Castlecoole with the newest and latest approved machinery, was totally consumed by fire. The rapidity of the conflagration was distinctively visible at a distance of seven or eight miles. The origin was, of course, unreal, but whether sufficiently so as to cover all the enormous loss we cannot say.

A meeting of the council of the Belfast Home Rule Association was held last week in Belfast, the President, J. G. Biggar, M. P., in the chair. There was a large attendance of members. After a lengthened and animated discussion, the following important resolutions were unanimously adopted: "That we cordially join with the people of Tipperary in declaring that an English Parliament has no right to make laws for the people of Ireland." "That we believe that an equitable and peaceful arrangement between Ireland and England can be made on a Federal basis."

Thomas Rice Henn, of Ballincally, Kildysart, county Clare, has received through the post a threatening letter, signed "Tipperary Boys," and telling him that death would be his fate before long, no matter how secure from the present residence he might be, or even at home. Mr. Henn communicated its contents to the constabulary and Mr. Biggar, M.P. Mr. Biggar, with a party of police, went to the house of one Delaney, a farmer, residing at Shanshee, and there arrested one John Behan.

The late storm has caused a great deal of injury in Clare, and especially in the neighborhood of Kilrush. A whole tract of country to the north of Black Wier Bridge, an arm of the Shannon, is an inland sea, from which the waters will not subside for some weeks. The Doonbeg river overflowed its banks in some places for fully half a mile on either side, and with such violence that many householders who lived in close proximity to it had to leave their houses.

Mr. Thomas Redington Roche, J.P., on Christmas Eve, at his residence, at Ryehill, according to his usual custom, caused to be distributed to his tenantry and the laborers employed on his estate a quantity of blankets, clothing and other necessaries. He also presented each with a sum of money with which to pay the Christmas dues to the Catholic clergymen of the parish, and ordered also that each plowman and carman in his employment be supplied with a pair of leggins.

At the quarter sessions for the Ballinsbill division of Queen's county, at Abbeyleix, before Joshua Clarke, his worship said there were only four cases to go before the Grand Jury, and none of them were of a serious character. There was one case of assault. Two cases of rescue from sheriff's bailiffs. He congratulated them on the peaceable condition of the county and the admirable harvest they had.

At a meeting held in Mullingar, to consider the best means of relieving the distress now prevailing in that town, Dr. Dillon Kelly in the chair, it was proposed by Rev. Mr. Morgan and carried—that a subscription list be opened for the purpose of raising a fund for the relief of the poor of the township. Collectors were appointed, and a subscription list opened, the three banks to be treasurers. Several subscriptions were handed in.

The last week's excessively heavy downpour of rain still continues, says the Enniscorthy correspondent of the Dublin Express. The entire lowlands of this part of the county are now completely submerged to the depth of many feet. The widow of the Slaney is sweeping over the lower part of this town. The Island of Enniscorthy is washed and a considerable quantity laid in place, at its north end, while southward the entire vale is a magnificent sheet of water dashing to the edge of the railway. If the rain continues it is feared that the line will be seriously injured. Much injury has been done both to crops and animal life.

The remains of the late Mr. Joseph Bernard Duffy, eldest son of the eminent publisher, the late Mr. James Duffy, J.P., were removed on Saturday morning, January 9, from No. 57 Harcourt street, and were followed by a numerous and respectable body of citizens, employés, and friends, to the church of St. Kevin, Harcourt street, where the Very Rev. Canon Murphy celebrated Mass for the repose of the soul of the deceased. After the ceremonies at St. Kevin's the remains were conveyed to the family vault at Glasnevin Cemetery, which was erected to the memory of the deceased's father a few years ago.

In the Recorder's Court Patrick Williamson of Dublin was convicted of getting possession of the sum of £115 from Elizabeth Devitt by false representations. The prisoner formed a dishonorable acquaintance with Miss Devitt last November, and passed himself off as a thriving horse dealer. On the prosecution that the prisoner's social conduction was what he represented it to be a marriage was arranged between them, and Miss Devitt sent the villain over £100 of that which he immediately decamped. It was then ascertained that all his statements were false and that he is a married man.

The Strokestown quarter sessions were commenced on TUESDAY morning. There were [illegible] cases for trial, and the majority of Miss Keogh, now about being sold in the Landed Estates Court, and they applied to have their improvements registered previous to the sale. In the first case Mr. Joseph Beckhouse claimed compensation for reclamation of land. In the second case Mr. William Boyd made a claim compensation for improvements, including the building of a new house in lieu of the old one. The chairman reserved his judgment.

At a meeting of the Kerry Farmers' Club the following resolution was proposed by Mr. P. B. O'Connell, and seconded by Mr. McMahon, and passed unanimously: "That our secretary be requested to communicate with our county members, Messrs. Sherry, H. A. Herbert and R. P. Blennerhassett, requesting them to submit the following motion to the Tenants' Defence Association, to be held in Dublin, not alone as our representatives, but also as members of the club." The chairman, Mr. F. H. Leahy, and others were appointed delegates to attend the conference also.

At the Listowel quarter sessions, the chairman of Kerry, Mr. Charles H. Hamphill, in addressing the grand jury, remarked that he was happy to say that they commenced the new year very well in North Kerry, and that their business on this occasion was of an extremely light and trivial character. This part of the county, at all events, was maintaining its reputation for being orderly and quiet. He was disposed to say that there was no part of the empire in which there was a greater security for life and property than in North Kerry. There was only four bills to be sent up for their consideration.

Of eighteen ejectment actions brought by the Earl of Darnley against his tenants in Louth, four have failed for the present, on points of law raised by the defence, and others have resulted in the granting of ejectment orders, with a stay of a month on execution. The Earl of Darnley, has the law entirely with him. It simply puts tie will to force. He wants his tenants to pay a higher rent; they are unwilling to do so, and he means to put them out. Should he persist, they are helpless. The Land Act gives them out of their land, and all they can do is to urge with might and main their claims for compensation and disturbance.

A claim under the Land Act by the Rev. R. McCutcheon, rector of Kennagh, against the Marquis of Landsowne, was tried before Mr. Hemphill, at Kildarney, last week. The Rev. Mr. McCutcheon claimed for the seventeen acres of land under the Marquis at Kennagh, which had been held by several of his predecessors in the rectory of Kildarney, after a lengthened and animated discussion, the following important resolutions were unanimously adopted: "That we cordially join with the people of Tipperary in declaring that an English Parliament has no right to make laws for the people of Ireland." "That we believe that an equitable and peaceful arrangement between Ireland and England can be made on a Federal basis."

At a meeting of the Kerry Farmers' Club the following resolution was proposed by Mr. P. B. O'Connell, and seconded by Mr. McMahon, and passed unanimously: "That our secretary be requested to communicate with our county members, Messrs. Sherry, H. A. Herbert and R. P. Blennerhassett, requesting them to submit the following motion to the Tenants' Defence Association, to be held in Dublin, not alone as our representatives, but also as members of the club." The chairman, Mr. F. H. Leahy, and others were appointed delegates to attend the conference also.

At the Listowe quarter sessions, the chairman of Kerry, Mr. Charles H. Hamphill, in addressing the grand jury, remarked that he was happy to say that they commenced the new year very well in North Kerry, and that their business on this occasion was of an extremely light and trivial character. This part of the county, at all events, was maintaining its reputation for being orderly and quiet. He was disposed to say that there was no part of the empire in which there was a greater security for life and property than in North Kerry. There was only four bills to be sent up for their consideration.

Of eighteen ejectment actions brought by the Earl of Darnley against his tenants in Louth, four have failed for the present, on points of law raised by the defence, and others have resulted in the granting of ejectment orders, with a stay of a month on execution. The Earl of Darnley, has the law entirely with him. It simply puts tie will to force. He wants his tenants to pay a higher rent; they are unwilling to do so, and he means to put them out. Should he persist, they are helpless. The Land Act gives them out of their land, and all they can do is to urge with might and main their claims for compensation and disturbance.

A claim under the Land Act by the Rev. R. McCutcheon, rector of Kennagh, against the Marquis of Landsowne, was tried before Mr. Hemphill, at Kildarney, last week. The Rev. Mr. McCutcheon claimed for the seventeen acres of land under the Marquis at Kennagh, which had been held by several of his predecessors in the rectory of Kildarney, after a lengthened and animated discussion, the following important resolutions were unanimously adopted: "That we cordially join with the people of Tipperary in declaring that an English Parliament has no right to make laws for the people of Ireland." "That we believe that an equitable and peaceful arrangement between Ireland and England can be made on a Federal basis."

At a preliminary meeting of the proprietors, interested in the drainage of the Suck was held on Friday January 8, in the Rosemount Inn, O'Connor Don, M. P., presided, and there were also present General Mitchell, Mr. T. G. W. Sandford, Athlumar; Rosebell, Mr. Holmes, Mr. Garnett, Mr. Ross Mahon, Mr. James Young and one or two others. The work of deepening the lower part of the river at Ballinlough to its junction with the Shannon, will be about one of the most important undertakings entered on by any drainage board, at least in this province. The meeting had a very large and influential attendance, and the engineer of [illegible] Mr. Hollinshead, C.E., of 4699 Parliament street, Westminster, attended and explained minutely the nature and extent of the proposed operations. General Mitchell and Mr. Holmes were appointed honorary secretaries.

The following gentlemen have been called to the bar this term: John Martley, B.A., Dublin University, second son of Henry Martley, one of the judges of the Landed Estates Court, deceased; William Dillon, Esq., second son of John Dillon, Q.C., of Dublin. Mr. Dillon obtained a special certificate of honor at the general examination held December last. Francis Blackburn Henn, Esq., A. B., University of Dublin, second son of Thomas Henn, Esq., of Paradise, in the county of Clare; James S. Gordon MacCullagh, A. B., University of Dublin, third son of James MacCullagh, late of Greenfield, in the county of Dublin, deceased. Alfred O'Brien, Esq., B.A., University of Dublin, second son of John Stackpoole O'Brien, of Taudrague, in the county of Limerick, Esq., J.P. Mr. O'Brien has been better fitted than he was in the city of Limerick. O'Connell was elected a member of the Irish Parliament without having received his wigs; for he was certain to have in them some token of his failing mind for him. When the health of the Liberator was waning, the wigs were made larger than usual in order to make room for the wearer to have the stroke a flannel cap. Southwell, who had frequent occasion to visit Derrynane, was proud of his having made wigs for the "Man of the People," and proud of telling a poor tenant in the long days of waiting his turn to be told off; and if any of them faltered in his mission, his own life was to be forfeited. Mr. Fitzgerald was present at Clifden and saw the Artillery Ground were to be seized, with where the Mansion House and Hall were to be delivered, and when the Mansion House and Hall were to be delivered, and when the Mansion House and Hall were to be delivered, and when

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEB. 27.
February
21—Sunday—Second Sunday in Lent.
22—Monday—St. Peter in Cathedra. Synod.
23—Tuesday—Vigil of St. Matthias. Conference of the Doctor of the Church. Vigil of St. Mathias.
24—Wednesday—St. Matthias. Apostle.
26—Thursday—Paris.
26—Friday—The Holy Lance and Nails.
27—Saturday—Paris.

Regulations for Lent in 1875,
For the Diocese of San Francisco.

1. All the week days of Lent, from Ash-Wednesday, February 24th, till Easter Sunday, are but days of precept, as one meal, with the allowance of a moderate collation.

2. The precept of fasting implies also that of abstinence from flesh meat, which is allowed in this diocese during Lent, except on the following days, to wit: the Wednesdays and Fridays, the Embor-days, and the Thursdays and Saturdays of Holy Week; on which days flesh meat is to have no such meal, except by dispensation from the respective pastors, which they are hereby authorized to grant in cases of necessity, to be judged by them. All Saturdays are also days of abstinence, but not of obligation.

3. The prominences one of fish and flesh meat at the same meal is forbidden in Lent, even on Sundays.

4. Some prayers, at option, are recommended to be said particularly on those days in which flesh meat is not allowed.

5. Lent being a penitential time, the pastors are requested to say before the Eucharistic Sacrament of Visitation mortification, and also the grievous oblivion of forgetting on Good Friday (which may be fulfilled from the 3rd Sunday of Lent); they will frequently and earnestly impress upon their respective flocks the necessity of attending, before all other things, to the salvation of their souls, and they will exhort them to the faithful discharge of all their duties, and to the avoiding of every thing that may lead the everlasting happiness of heaven. For the 1st Sunday of Lent, February 21st, they will recommend their flocks to visit some church, according to what their pastors may deem expedient.

✠ JOSEPH S. ALEMANY,
Archbishop of San Francisco.
SAN FRANCISCO, February 1, 1875.

THE MONITOR:
THE ONLY
Irish and Catholic Journal in California.
SATURDAY.....FEBRUARY 20, 1875.

NOTICE TO OUR READERS.

"The Monitor" and "The Guardian."

We beg leave to inform our readers that after this week The Guardian will be discontinued as a separate publication and will be incorporated with THE MONITOR. Further particulars will be announced next week.

THE "MASSACRE" AT ACAPULCO.

The Rev. Mr. HUTCHINSON, a Presbyterian "missionary" to the people of Mexico, arrived here by the Panama steamer towards the end of last week, and brought with him tidings of a dreadful "massacre" perpetrated at Acapulco. The story is to the effect that a number of Indians, incited by the preaching of a Catholic priest, broke into a building where a congregation formed by him were assembled for divine service, slew a number of the worshipers and totally wrecked the church.

Bigotry, intolerance, savagery and bloodthirstiness like this should be sufficient to [illegible] although the brazen of all Christians, and, indeed, of all men who love peace and good-will. No punishment that the civil power can possibly inflict, out on to be too severe for such offenders; and the Government that could be capable of letting them escape would be unworthy of toleration by civilized nations.

We say this, of course, on the supposition that Rev. Mr. HUTCHINSON's version of the outrage is correct. We are sorry to have to state, however, that we already find sufficient evidence to throw discredit upon his story in some important particulars. The correspondent of the Bulletin, writing from Acapulco, says that the Indians broke into the church; that no resistance was made to them; that they broke up the chairs and benches and thereupon the lives of many of the congregation; that subsequently the troops were called out to quell the disturbance, and that several rioters were lost before tranquility was restored.

This statement would seem to indicate that some of the congregation assembled in the church were killed, and that a few of the rioters took place in the conflict between the troops and the rioters. The telegraphic account of the affray given in the New York papers tallies exactly with the above statement, and can be reconciled with Mr. HUTCHINSON's highly-colored and melodramatic version of the outrage is an enigma which we declare our inability to solve, and we leave it to the intelligence of our readers and the general public. The most essential dime novel of the "NED BUNTLINE" series contains no scene comparable for tragic effect and thrilling interest to Mr. HUTCHINSON's description of the fight in the church and the gallant exploits of that Mexican woman!

While we call attention to these discrepancies in order to impugn Mr. HUTCHINSON's veracity, we do not pretend that they make the conduct of the Indians appear any better. For we hold that if these accusations, armed with knives and revolvers, broke into an assembly of people who were unconsciously worshiping Almighty God, and lopened them without experiencing resistance, they were just as much murderers, in all and intent, as if they massacred all in a place. They came to kill and for the purpose of killing, and the circumstance of their intended victims managed to escape no extenuating plea for them.

here is nothing whatever to show that the[illegible] at Acapulco was connected directly r indirectly with the outrage. Mr. HUTCHINSON alleges that a "rumor not confirmed" declared he incited the Indians to violence. The legal and equitable amount of evidence contained in a rumor not confirmed is so infinitesimal that it is too small a discussion; so we think the priest may up on any mind. But supposing he did [illegible] as missionaries and their doctrine, was he not perfectly justifiable in doing it? Would he have been doing his duty, as his flock if he neglected to do so? Futile, the thing upon its lowest possible level, and not this priest as much right to denounce Mr. HUTCHINSON and to denounce the Pope and Catholicity! We do not know whether he did so or not; but, if he did not, then we maintain he was unworthy of his position. Every man must stand upon his civil rights and be free in the exercise of them without being held responsible for the doings of other people.

It would be a nice state of affairs, indeed, if a clergyman dare not tell his congregation that certain people were trying to introduce false doctrine, and endeavoring to seduce souls from the true Church, lest some of those listening to him should take it into their heads to assault or wound those persons. He certainly must be at full liberty to take it for granted that he is addressing intelligent and responsible beings, not imbeciles, fools, or scoundrels. If the priest advised, suggested or encouraged violence, then he was worse than the Indians, and should be punished more severely. But he should at all events be permitted to discharge his duty to his flock and to his conscience.

JOHN MITCHEL IN TIPPERARY.

"Until we saw a telegram reporting the fact that Mr. JOHN MITCHEL had been returned unopposed as member of Parliament for the county of Tipperary, we were under the impression that he was quietly residing in New York. A copy of the Irish-American, just to hand, dated February 13th, contains an account of his departure from America on the preceding Saturday, 6th inst., and thus corrects our erroneous idea as to his whereabouts. Our New York contemporary states that his departure was very seldom, and unexpected even by his intimate friends. The veteran patriot had, it seems, given a promise to the gallant men of Tipperary, after the last election resulted in his defeat, that he would, notwithstanding, fight the battle over again on the occurrence of the next vacancy in the representation of the county. That vacancy was brought about a short time since by the resignation of the Hon. Colonel WHITE. Mr. MITCHEL's friends telegraphed to him to come to Ireland without delay, and he sailed on the day we have mentioned, and in the phrase of Shakespeare, "flew with what wings he might" to the old country. Consequently he must have been in Tipperary when the election came off.

It is very strange that he should have been returned unopposed, for one would imagine that the Conservatives, knowing that the convicted felon of '48 would not be allowed to take a seat in St. Stephen's, would put a candidate in the field, even if he were only to poll one vote. But, whatever the cause, the fact stands recorded that Mr. MITCHEL had no opponent. On Tuesday last the Conservatives began their attacks on the newly-elected member with the intention of driving him from the House of Commons. A Mr. WEARDIER—who can[illegible] be a very brilliant ingenuity, for we [illegible] before—moved for copies of the conviction of JOHN MITCHEL in 1848, of the official notification of his escape from Bermuda, and of the proclamation offering a reward for his recapture.

As if this was not enough, the Premier, Mr. DISRAELI, replying to this, in his place announced his intention of moving, on the 18th inst., a resolution to the effect that, inasmuch as the representative of Tipperary had been adjudged guilty of felony and sentenced to transportation for life, as he had neither endured the penalty nor received pardon, he was incapable of election to the House of Commons, and that a fresh writ be ordered for the county of Tipperary. Mr. WEARDIER's motion was carried by an overwhelming majority. The debate on the papers asked for by him and Mr. DISRAELI's resolution was fixed for the same day, Thursday, 18th inst.

We regret that the hour at which THE MONITOR goes to press will prevent us from having any account of the discussion—which is sure to be an interesting one—in our present issue. The Irish members have made up their minds to offer all the resistance in their power to this summary method of ousting honest John MITCHEL from the little passage of arms which took place on Tuesday, Mr. SULLIVAN, member for Louth, declared that the ablest legal authorities in Ireland had given an opinion that Mr. MITCHEL was perfectly eligible. Mr. NOLAN, member for Galway, wanted to know why, if Mr. MITCHEL was merely an escaped convict, he was not arrested; JOHN MARTIN, member for Meath, asked if the production of documents relating to Mr. MITCHEL's trial and conviction, with the evident intention of showing that the whole affair was nothing better than "a device, a mockery and a sham." The case, notwithstanding, fight the battle over again on the occurrence of the next vacancy in the representation of the county. That vacancy was brought about a short time since by the resignation of the Hon. Colonel WHITE. Mr. MITCHEL's friends telegraphed to him to come to Ireland without delay, and he sailed on the day we have mentioned, and in the phrase of Shakespeare, "flew with what wings he might" to the old country. Consequently he must have been in Tipperary when the election came off.

It is very strange that he should have been returned unopposed, for one would imagine that the Conservatives, knowing that the convicted felon of '48 would not be allowed to take a seat in St. Stephen's, would put a candidate in the field, even if he were only to poll one vote. But, whatever the cause, the fact stands recorded that Mr. MITCHEL had no opponent. On Tuesday last the Conservatives began their attacks on the newly-elected member with the intention of driving him from the House of Commons. A Mr. WEARDIER—who can[illegible] be a very brilliant ingenuity, for we [illegible] before—moved for copies of the conviction of JOHN MITCHEL in 1848, of the official notification of his escape from Bermuda, and of the proclamation offering a reward for his recapture.

At the tea store of Healy, 922 Market street, you can get tea caution for 75 cents; four pounds good coffee, six pounds prunes, one pound breakfast [illegible] for $1. Everything at 1st cost prices.

THE REV. JOHN HEMPHILL AGAIN.

The Rev. Mr. JOHN HEMPHILL has some points of resemblance to that kind of illomen popularly known as "Mother Carey's Chicken." One is that he usually attracts general attention in times of trouble and disturbance. When the Catholic Church happens to be suffering more than ordinary bitter persecution, his voice is heard loud in exultation; when opportunity occurs of specially defaming the Catholic Church his atrocious calumny and invective strikes shrilly upon the public ear.

Such being the nature of the man, it would be too much to expect of him that he should hold his tongue when a story like that of the "massacre" at Acapulco came in his way. We freely confess we did hope that when, some time ago, he achieved the object, for the gaining of which he strove to make himself notorious, he would become a wiser and better man, and settle down to live in peace and charity with his neighbors of all denominations. But we have been disappointed and have come to the conclusion that Mr. JOHN HEMPHILL will be Mr. JOHN HEMPHILL tel qu' il est to the end of the chapter.

It is, however, somewhat consoling to know that this obduracy will prove more unpleasant and inconvenient to himself than it can by any possibility be to the community at large. A person so deeply imbued with sectarian bitterness, who cherishes such rancor towards a numerous body of his fellow-creatures simply because they strive to worship their Creator in a fashion different from his own, in our country will never really know what a happy mind is. On the other hand, the people among whom he makes display of these feelings can either laugh at his absurdity, pity his weakness or despise his malignity, according as they feel disposed.

For our own part, we are inclined to believe that the idiosyncrasies of Mr. HEMPHILL are misfortunes brought upon him by WHYTE. Mr. MITCHEL's friends telegraphed to him to come to Ireland without delay, and he sailed on the day we have mentioned, and in the phrase of Shakespeare, "flew with what wings he might" to the old country. Consequently he must have been in Tipperary when the election came off.

It is very strange that he should have been returned unopposed, for one would imagine that the Conservatives, knowing that the convicted felon of '48 would not be allowed to take a seat in St. Stephen's, would put a candidate in the field, even if he were only to poll one vote. But, whatever the cause, the fact stands recorded that Mr. MITCHEL had no opponent. On Tuesday last the Conservatives began their attacks on the newly-elected member with the intention of driving him from the House of Commons. A Mr. WEARDIER—who can[illegible] be a very brilliant ingenuity, for we [illegible] before—moved for copies of the conviction of JOHN MITCHEL in 1848, of the official notification of his escape from Bermuda, and of the proclamation offering a reward for his recapture.

As if this was not enough, the Premier, Mr. DISRAELI, replying to this, in his place announced his intention of moving, on the 18th inst., a resolution to the effect that, inasmuch as the representative of Tipperary had been adjudged guilty of felony and sentenced to transportation for life, as he had neither endured the penalty nor received pardon, he was incapable of election to the House of Commons, and that a fresh writ be ordered for the county of Tipperary. Mr. WEARDIER's motion was carried by an overwhelming majority. The debate on the papers asked for by him and Mr. DISRAELI's resolution was fixed for the same day, Thursday, 18th inst.

We regret that the hour at which THE MONITOR goes to press will prevent us from having any account of the discussion—which is sure to be an interesting one—in our present issue. The Irish members have made up their minds to offer all the resistance in their power to this summary method of ousting honest John MITCHEL from the little passage of arms which took place on Tuesday, Mr. SULLIVAN, member for Louth, declared that the ablest legal authorities in Ireland had given an opinion that Mr. MITCHEL was perfectly eligible. Mr. NOLAN, member for Galway, wanted to know why, if Mr. MITCHEL was merely an escaped convict, he was not arrested; JOHN MARTIN, member for Meath, asked about the destruction of documents relating to Mr. MITCHEL's trial and conviction, with the evident intention of showing that the whole affair was nothing better than "a device, a mockery and a sham." The case, notwithstanding, fight the battle over again on the occurrence of the next vacancy in the representation of the county. That vacancy was brought about a short time since by the resignation of the Hon. Colonel WHIT

HOW TO WOO AND WIN.

"Would you play the manly lover?"
Read a grief-award to his ear;
"Lie, my lad, while I discover
How a maiden should be won.

"Woo her not with beautiful phrases,
Lest you teach her lip to sneer;
Still a sailor's sweetest praises
In his conduct should appear.

"Woo her not with senseless sighing—
Maidens love a laughing girl;
Tell her not that you are dying,
Lest she, laughing, bid you die.

"Woo her not with weakly whining
Over your poverty or pelf;
Less she answer by declining
Both your sorrow and yourself.

"Woo her with a manly voicing
Daring homage to Fate,
All the hearth-devotion showing
By his strength in work and toil.

"Woo her not with idle prattle
Whom you fain would make your wife,
But with proofs that in life's battle
You are equal to the strife.

"Like the knight whose simple song
Won the lady—says the tale—
When, despite the wordy wooing,
All the rest were found to fail.

"Lady,' quoth the bold knight-errant,
'Help the story I shall tell—
I would wed thee; here's the warrant
I shall love and keep thee well.'

"And, behold, his dexter fingers
Cruised a horseshoe there, 'tis said;
And within, her lap there lingers
All the gold the twain can hold."

JOAN G. BAER.

The Church of the Atocha at Madrid.

The telegrams of Saturday, January 16, informed the world that on Thursday the boy-King of Spain, Alfonso XII. rode in triumph into the capital of his new kingdom. From my told us that his first public action on his entry into the city was to go to the Convent of the Atocha and kiss the foot of the cherished Cross of the Virgin that forms one of the great glories of the venerable monastic pile.

The church of the Atocha dates back to the days of Charles V., and owes its erection to the munificence of Ursturiado de Mendoza, one of the most trusted and able of his advisers. It stands at the foot of a hill which looks down upon the splendor as well as the squalor of Madrid, and on one of whose slopes stretches out the Campo Santo, or God's Acre of the Spanish capital. The convent can reckon to-day an existence of more than three centuries and a half, and during all this lapse of years the pious generosity of each succeeding generation has almost exhausted itself in enriching it with costly gifts of arts—precious vessels for sacred ceremonies and rare treasures gathered in in many distant journeyings—but above prized than all the rest is its possession of the statue known as the statue of the Virgin of Atocha.

The history of this statue is almost lost in the wealth of popular tradition that has year attached to it, and some of the best of the Spanish poets have lavished the best efforts of their pious and poetic enthusiasm in chanting the marvels that are said to have been achieved through prayers offered at its feet. It is cherished through Spain as a national memory that the statue is one of those that were carved by the holy hands of St. Luke the Evangelist; that it passed through many vicissitudes; that it was at Epheseus long years after; was recognized as the image of Virgin from the hands of whose pencil it had received its first lineaments; how it took refuge in the house of Theodoric (God-bearer), whence came the name of Atocha; that it was honored and spent, and became a prized sacred object to the people. Others would have it that it was brought from Antioch, and therefore it was called Antiochena, abbreviated into Atocha. Whatever be its real history, and whatever be the symology of its name, it has had a long and honored reign in Spain, and from early in its Christian existence its kings and its people never failed in their dutiful homage to it. There is a tradition that so long ago as the seventh century St. Ildafonsus, the friend and disciple of St. Isidore of Seville, and one of the most renowned Archbishops of Toledo, paid homage to the Virgin of the Atocha, and gained as he prayed to her strength and grace for the performance of his saintly deeds.

Eight hundred years ago Alonso VI., an ancestor the new king, when he had won back Madrid from the enemies of his faith and of his throne, knelt at the feet of the Virgin of Atocha, and through her thanked God for the victory he had gained. Another ancestor of Alfonso XII., Ferdinand the VII., knelt publicly before it on two of the most memorable occasions of his checkered life, and on the second of them, took the ribbon of the Immaculate Conception from around his neck, and hung it as a votive offering at the shrine. Through all Christian Spanish history we find that the royal family, when in Madrid, made a prayer before it on each succeeding Sunday of the year; and the first act of the heir to the throne, when his time for reigning comes, is to go to the convent at the foot of the hill, and beg for himself and his kingdom the intercession of the Blessed Virgin of the Atocha. Therefore it was that Alfonso XII. went there recently, and assuredly whatever be our views as to the events that made him king, no Catholic will doubt that one of the best beginnings he could have made was to have gone for grace and strength to the temple of God, and to have implored for himself and for his kingdom the prayers of the Blessed Mother of God. The Church stands to-day on its olden site, but it has lost much of the rich treasury that formerly belonged to it. It was plundered during the wars of Napoleon by Napoleon's troops, but care was taken that the statue should be preserved unharmed, and it has come unwounded through all the changes and bloody struggles that have occurred in Madrid since then.

Twelve Ways to Commit Suicide.

The following twelve ways to commit suicide are enumerated in the American Medical Journal, and it is hoped that their perusal may serve as a caution to these loafers:

1. Wearing of thin shoes and cotton stockings on damp nights and in cold, rainy weather. Wearing insufficient clothing, and especially on the limbs and extremities.

2. Leading a life of enfeebling, stupid laziness, and keeping the mind in an unnatural state of excitement by reading trashy novels. Going to theaters, parties and balls in all sorts of weather in the thinnest possible dress. Dancing till in a complete perspiration, and then going home without sufficient over-garments through the cold damp air.

3. Sleeping on feather beds, in seven-by nine bed-rooms, without ventilation at the top of the windows, and especially with two or more persons in the same small, unventilated bed-room.

4. Surfeiting on hot and very stimulating dinners. Eating in a hurry without masticating your food, and eating heartily before going to bed every night, when the mind and body are exhausted by the toils of the day and excitement of the evening.

5. Beginning in childhood on tea and coffee, and going from one step to another through chewing and smoking tobacco and drinking intoxicating liquors, and physical and mental excess of every description.

6. Marrying in haste and getting an uncongenial companion, and living the remainder of life in mental dissatisfaction. Cultivating jealousies and domestic broils, and being always in a mental ferment.

7. Keeping children quiet by giving paregoric and quietals, by teaching them to suck candy, and by supplying them with raisins, nuts and rich cake. When they are sick, by humoring their whims, indulging their fancies, and pampering their appetites, with the mistaken notion of being extra kind to them.

8. Allowing the love of gain to absorb our minds, so as to have no time to attend to our health. Following an unhealthy occupation because money can be made by it.

9. Tempting the appetite with bitters and nicelies when the stomach says no, and by forcing food when nature does not demand it and even rejects it. Commanding between meals.

10. Contriving to keep in a continual worry about something or nothing. Giving way to fits and anger.

11. Being irregular in all our habits of sleeping and eating, going to bed at midnight and getting up at noon. Eating luncheon, too many kinds of food and that which is too highly seasoned.

12. Neglecting to take proper care of ourselves, and not applying early for medical advice when disease first appears. Taking patent nostrum quackeries in a degree of making a drug shop of the body.

Things in Italy.

The Italian journals still fill up vacant corners in their columns with the wildest rumors respecting the health of the Sovereign Pontiff. Some of them adopts a new method of insinuating their falsehoods. Thus: "The Pope is slightly better"—"The Pope is less ofine more to leave his chamber"—"The report that the Pontiff is seriously ill has not received confirmation." It is thus delicately intimated (without the ills direct) that the Pope is dead. Now, it is now about four years since the Piedmontese prose commenced this issuing of false health bulletins. It has grown into a habit, and seems to be a necessity of existence. It is naturally as treason and sacrilege.

The centre of this Papal hatred has been observed by the rabble from Savoy as a time for every excess.

The Italian judicial year commenced with a discourse from the Procurator-General (Ghisleri). This official, rather inauspiciously, announced the list of offenses during the past year. Will any of the admirers of Victor Emmanuel, or Italian liberalism, compare this number, given by the government officer, with that of any year when Rome was governed by its lawful king, and when the united States of the Peninsula enjoyed their freedom? We quote: "Crime, 16 515 criminals; Prosecuzione, 4,799; Verdicti, 4,799; Vindicti, 3,091; Civita Vecchia, 856."

In the hands of this brigand the "house of prayer" has become literally "a den of thieves." Rome is becoming gradually deserted. A thousand rumors of impending trouble drive away the visitors. Jacobs, the maker of macaroni, fills up his house in the Corso with the spoils of the Papal palaces. Another one of those who must pay for Victor Emmanuel's "liberation" is Torlonia, the richest banker of Rome. He has been one of the Pope's bankers and treasurers for years. Torlonia and Jacobs are two of the first victims of the new liberalism. Both are Catholics, and both are known as friends of the Pope. Both are rich. Both are liberals. Both are traitors in the past. They observed for the usurper, and therefore observed for the supreme Pontiff, they quaffed whole bumpers of sugar and water with Victor Emmanuel, and now they stand at the Vatican when there was no one to defend it. We cannot wish them worse than that they may get a touch part of what they have deserved.

Another humiliation for Garibaldi. Canini, Minister of the Interior, has issued a circular declaring the illegality and nullity of the vote of the municipal councils regarding the grants to the Montens runaway. Any such vote is formally declared to no agreed, all law. We notice Garibaldi's share of this when he so magnanimously refused the offering? The grapes, which he knew he never could reach, he pronounced to be sour. Wonderful moderation in the model patriot! However, he must have felt sour and therefore a series of calamities may be looked for.

M. Geoffroy, French Chinese Minister, has raised from Pesin to Paris, has stayed expressly for some days at Rome to consult with the Holy Father on the state of affairs in the far East. The Irish deputation presented to Pius IX. by the venerable Dr. Kirby was, it is needless to say, received in the most affectionate manner by the Pope. His Holiness requested the deputation to tell those from whom they came how deep and sincere was his love for that race, every one most faithful to the Church of God and the See of Peter.—London Universe.

Emigration from Ireland.

The Registrar-General has compiled the returns of the number of emigrants from Ireland during 1874, with comparisons of the proportions for that and former years from 1851. In the last mentioned year 152 000 persons emigrated from Ireland; in 1852 the total was 190,844, and the enormous aggregate of any year tabulated. In 1858 the numbers had fallen to 64 237, rose to 80,599 next year, and in 1860 fell to 66 568. Ten years after, in 1870, nearly 75 000 emigrants left Ireland; in 1871, 71,240; in 1873, 64,189; while the total for last year was 73,184. Thus, notwithstanding all that has been represented of the diminution of the Irish exodus caused by the American industrial crisis, more persons left Ireland last year than in 1871, and nearly as many as in 1872, both years when the inducements were greater and the general condition worse at home than the present condition where they were last year. The total decrease of emigrants for last year as compared with 1873 was 16 965. In all, the enormous total of 2 225 929 persons emigrated from Ireland in the period between 1851 and 1874.

In connection with this topic we notice that the authorities of the port of Liverpool have compiled a return of the emigration from that port during last year. It appears there sailed in vessels under the Act 91 909 persons to the United States; of these 50 619 were English, 14 856 Irish, 1,796 Scotch and 24 638 foreigners. There sailed to Canada 16 311, of whom 12,027 were English, 2,284 Irish, 96 Scotch and 4 004 foreigners; to Australia there sailed 366, of whom 197 were English, 101 Irish, 51 Scotch and 27 foreigners. This makes a total of persons who sailed under the Government Emigration Act of 111 117; of these 65 010 were English, 14,721 Irish, 1 835 Scotch and 29,531 foreigners. Besides there left in vessels not subject to the Act 10,817 persons, of whom 2,051 were English, 979 Irish, 189 Scotch, 1,127 foreigners and 4 971 whose nationality is unknown. The total emigration from the port of Liverpool for the past year shows the very large decrease of 67,463 emigrants as compared with the number of 1873.

CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

The magnificent altar lately executed by Mr. Huff has just been purchased by Rev. Father Landy, P.P., for his church at Carnlough, Ireland.

The Paulist Fathers celebrated their pastoral feast—the Conversion of St. Paul—on the 25th ult., by a solemn Mass and solemn Vespers. The Archbishop of New York and Dr. McGlynn assisted.

Miss Ryan, Limerick (in religion, Sister Mary Lucia Joseph), and Miss Stephenson (in religion, Sister Martina), were, on the 21 ult., received into the Presentation Convent, Thurles.

Most Rev. D. McDevitt, Bishop of Raphoe, acknowledges the donation of £100 from William A. Rose, J.P., of Belfast, towards the fund for the proposed Catholic Hall in Letterkenny.

Died, December 29th, at the Provincial Hotel, Dublin, the Rev. Patrick Dunne, P.P., Rathkenny, aged sixty years. His remains were removed to Tullamore, for interment in the family burial ground.

It is rumored that Right Rev. Louis Fink, Vicar Apostolic of Kansas, is to succeed in the See of the late Right Rev. Bishop O'Gorman. Bishop Fink was once a mitred Abbot belonging to the great Order of St. Benedict.

The Catholic archbishops and bishops of Ireland met on Tuesday and Wednesday, January 19 and 20, in Dublin, for the purpose of considering the Queen's Colleges Bill, and the latter in reference to the Catholic University.

Very Rev. E. F. McDonough, late Pastor of the Church of St. John the Baptist at Tuscaloosa, Ala., has been appointed to succeed Right Rev. A. D. Pellicer, D.D., as Vicar-General of the diocese of Mobile, and has removed to the Cathedral City.

Right Rev. John B. Miege, S.J., Bishop of Mesetta in partibus and Vicar Apostolic of Kansas, on the 15th ult. laid the foundation of his See and retired to his Order, the Society of Jesus. Mgr. Miege was born in Savoy on the 15th September, 1815.

Sir Augustine Fitzgerald, Bart., Carignac, has recently supplemented his free grant of a site and £100, for the building of the Roman Catholic Church at May, Milltownsaltry, by a donation of £50 towards the expenses incurred in the completion of that handsome edifice.

His Eminence Cardinal Hiario Sforza, Archbishop of Naples, has invited all persons possessing letters or writings of the venerable servant of God, Maria Christina of Savoy and Naples, to send them to the court so as to facilitate the process of the beatification of the holy queen. She was mother of the present ex-king of Naples and aunt of Victor Emmanuel II.

Most Rev. Dr. Dunne, Bishop of Dow and Connor, referred recently, at the confirmation of his sermon in Belfast, to the proposed erection of a new church for that district of the town. He explained to the congregation that the plan for the building had been selected, that the contract had been signed, and in a few days the work would be commenced at the foundation of the new edifice. It is expected that the work will be completed in about two year.

The conversion to the Catholic Church a few months ago of the Dowager Lady Ellesborough, whose other sisters preceded her in similar secession. A daughter of Sir George Jenkinson has followed the example of the Dowager Lady Ellesborough, and a few days ago was received into the Church by Father Bowden, of the Oratory. The ceremony was performed in the private chapel of the Oratory, Brompton, and was attended by a number of the friends of the lady who has taken this step. Father Bowden preached a sermon on the occasion.

A Countess Sent to Prison.—The Pris. on Tribunal of Correctional Police in Paris recently tried three women—one a peasant girl, and the others wives of men occupying a good social position, on charges of shoplifting at the Bon Marché drapery establishment. In each case fancy articles were stolen, with the intention of employing them as New Year's presents. One of the defendants, M. Caroline Archambeault, Countess du Chatel, did not appear to answer the charge, and was tried by default. After a visit by her to the shop of M. Neuge, not, confectioner, in the Rue du Bac, a small Japanese flask, worth fifty francs, was missed. She was in consequence followed, and, having gone to the Bon Marché, information was given to one of the assistants, and, being watched, she was detected secreting a lace handkerchief in her muff. She was given into custody, and the flask was also found on her. The other defendants were friends, and both respectably connected. An examination made at their residence brought to light in the apartment of one of them eleven jewel caskets, a crystal rice-powder box, a mother-of-pearl buckle for a waistbelt, two fans, an opera-glass, five combs, thirty-one cravats, with portemonnaies, napkin rings, scent bottles, lamp stands, etc.; and in that of the other were found cravats, portemonnaies, medallions, needle-cases, etc. The three defendants were each sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

Spain, overwhelmed with financial embarrassments, and with the revolutions on the throne, declared a civil list to Alfonso of $3,500,000 in gold. Isabella received but $1,700,000, and Amadeus $1,500,000.

The C. P. Kimball Carriage Company, of Boston, Mass., has suspended in consequence of the failure of their Boston selling agents. Liabilities, $100,000.

EDUCATIONAL.

CONVENT OF OUR LADY OF THE SACRED HEART,

OAKLAND.....CALIFORNIA.

Conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.

THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY SITUated between Webster street and Lake Merritt, commanding a beautiful view of the Bay. The building, recently erected, is supplied with all the modern improvements, and the grounds have been spared no pains to provide for the comfort of the inmates. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.

| | |
|---|---|
| Board and Tuition, per quarter | $ 30 00 |
| Half Boarders | 15 00 |
| Payments to be made strictly in advance. | |
| Pupils will be received at any time, the fee to commence from date of entrance. | |

TERMS.

Boarding pupils,
(Invariably half yearly in advance.)

| | |
|---|---|
| Board, tuition, bedding, washing, with use of bedding | $150 00 |
| Music, with use of instrument | 15 00 |
| Vocal Music | 10 00 |
| Drawing and Painting | 10 00 |
| Tuition spent at the Academy | 25 00 |

Terms per month (in advance.)

| | |
|---|---|
| Select Day Scholars—Primary, first and second classes | $ 5 00 |
| Third and fourth Grammar Classes | 7 00 |
| Fifth and sixth Classes | 10 00 |
| Private lessons, per month, throughout the year | 10 00 |
| Extra charge for French, Italian and Spanish, each | 5 00 |

For further particulars apply to the Superioress.
jal6tf

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE,

SNTA CLARA.....CALIFORNIA.

Under the management of the Fathers of the Society of Jesus.

THE SANTA CLARA COLLEGE WAS FOUNDED in 1851, and in 1855 was incorporated, with the privileges of a University. Students are admitted in its departments—the Classic and Scientific.

The College Library contains 8,000 well-selected volumes; extensive play grounds, with ten covered gymnasiums, a swimming pool, etc., afford every facility for healthful exercises.

The Philosophical Apparatus—very complete philosophical apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogical specimens, Geological, also, practical schools of Engraving, Photography and Telegraphy, have been established in connection with a thoroughly fitted chemical laboratory.

The Scholastic Year, which is divided into two sessions of five months each, commences in August, and closes towards the beginning of June.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually, in advance)

| | |
|---|---|
| Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once | $15 00 |
| Board, Tuition, Washing, and Mending | 250 00 |
| Use of Library, School Stationery, Medical Attendance and Physician's Medicines | 10 00 |
| Light per year | 15 00 |
| Graduating Course, Drawing and Music form extra charges. For Classing, Books, Payments, etc., see the Catalogue, to be had at the College, or of the Archbishop. Rules, etc., sent free by mail. | |

For further particulars, apply to
REV. J. NOBILI, S. J., President.
jal

FRANCISCAN COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THE EIGHTH SESSION OF THIS INSTITUtion, under the direction of the Friars Minor of Franca, will commence on the first Monday of August, 1874.

The object of the institution is to give a good Practical and Commercial Education, and to prepare students, at the lowest possible rate, for an advantageous entrance upon their literary or professional career.

TERMS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Insurance Fee (to be paid but once) | $15 00 |
| Board and Tuition, per session, (5 months) | 150 00 |
| Bed and Bedding | 15 00 |
| Washing, per month | 2 00 |
| Physician's fee, per session | 5 00 |
| Use of Library | 2 00 |
| Stationery, per session | 5 00 |
| Use of Philosophical Apparatus | 5 00 |
| Graduation Fee | 10 00 |
| Use of Bath, per month | 1 00 |

No extra charge for Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting.

For further information inquire of the Superiors of the Convents of Holy Name, San José, Santa Clara, or Mission Dolores. 1741

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

SAN JOSÉ, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORated according to the laws of the State and empowered to confer academical honors, will commence the Twenty-fifth Annual Session on MONDAY, August 16, 1874. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Entrance, to be paid but once | $15 00 |
| Board and Tuition, per quarter | 75 00 |
| Physician's fee | 5 00 |
| Payments to be made in advance, or satisfactorily secured. | |
| Pupils withdrawn before the expiration of the quarter will be charged from the time of entrance to the end of the quarter. | |
| Pupils are required to be present at the regular reopening of the classes. | |
| The scholastic year, comprising ten months, opens on the first Monday of August, and ends with the month of June. | |
| Pupils entering during the session, subject to rate of admission. | |
| Pupils will be received at any time, the fee to commence from date of entrance. | |

TERMS.

Per month (payable quarterly in advance):

| | |
|---|---|
| Board and Tuition | $23 00 |
| Washing | 4 00 |
| Those attending at the Academy during vacation will not be charged for. | |
| Drawing, Painting and Music extra charges. | |
| There is no extra charge for the French or Spanish language, nor for Needlework. | |
| All correspondence of the young ladies will be subject to the inspection of the Superioress. | |
| Letters of inquiry may be addressed to | |
| MOTHER SUPERIORESS. | |

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE,

Rohnerville, Humboldt County, Cala.

Conducted by the Priests of the Congregation of the Most Precious Blood.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR:
(Payable half yearly in advance.)

| | |
|---|---|
| For board, bedding, tuition, washing and mending | $225 00 |
| Entrance fee, to be paid only once | 40 00 |
| Studies in College | 40 00 |

DAY PUPILS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Senior class | $80 00 |
| Junior class | 60 00 |
| Vocal and instrumental music, drawing and modern languages will form extra charges. The two months of the scholastic year commencing on the 15th of August and the 15th of January. | |
| For further information apply to the Rev. THOS. F O'NEILL, | |
| Very Rev. P. HENNEBERY, Provincial. | |

CONVENT OF THE IMMACULATE HEART OF MARY

FOR THE.....

EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES

DILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.,

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS:

| | |
|---|---|
| Board, tuition, washing and mending, per session | $200 |
| Entrance fee, to be paid but once | 15 |
| Pillows on pleas, per session | 4 00 |
| Bed | 10 00 |
| No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language. | |

TERMS FOR DAY SCHOLARS:

| | |
|---|---|
| Primary, per session | $ 20 |
| Elementary and senior, per month | 2 00 |
| Drawing in Class | 2 00 |
| French | 2 00 |
| No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language. | |
| N. B. The above establishment is also the novitiate for the Order. | |
| For Prospectus and further particulars apply to | |
| SISTER RAYMUNDA UREMARELL, | |
| Superioress. | |

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME.

MARYSVILLE.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS INCORPORATED AUthorizing to the head of the State, and empowered to confer academical honors. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS PER HALF SESSION.
(Payable in advance)

| | |
|---|---|
| Board, Tuition, Washing | $120 00 |
| Music, with use of instrument | 20 00 |
| Drawing and Painting | 10 00 |

No charge for the French, Spanish and German languages, nor for Needlework. Spanish and Italian also taught.

TERMS
(Invariably half yearly in advance)

| | |
|---|---|
| Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per session | $200 00 |
| Piano, and use of instrument, per month | 1 50 |
| Harp, " " " " | 2 00 |

No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.

The academic year of ten months and a half commences August 16th, and terminates on the last Thursday in June.

For further particulars apply to
SISTER OF CHARITY,
Maria Baptista, Cal.
jal6-17

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

BENICIA.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED BY THE Sisters of Mercy, and is situated in the healthy and accessible town of Benicia. The locality has justly been considered one of the most favorable for the health of pupils. Every attention is given to the moral training of the young ladies committed to the care of the Institute, and the system of education pursued is calculated to develop the intellectual faculties, to form the manners, and to mature the judgment. Pupils are prepared for the duties of life, and for the enjoyment of refined society.

TERMS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Board, Tuition, Washing | $200 00 |
| Music, with use of instrument | 20 00 |
| Drawing and Painting | 10 00 |

No charge for the French, Spanish and German languages, nor for Needlework. Spanish and Italian also taught.

Every Catholic Family Should Have It.

Agents Wanted. Special Inducements During forming Clubs.

Terms per annum.....$ 4 00
Single copies.....10

Send a Postal Card with your address, and specimen copy of THE TABLET will be sent to you free of charge. Address
D. & J. SADLIER & CO.,
Publishers, New York

CATHOLIC BOOKS.

CATHOLIC BOOKS

FOR THE HOLIDAYS!

JUST RECEIVED FROM PARIS

A Large Assortment of Richly Bound

PRAYER BOOKS,

In FINE IVORY, SILK and MOROCCO Bindings, with SILVER MOUNTINGS, varying in price from $1 to $50. This is the most COMPLETE and ELEGANT assortment of

CATHOLIC PRAYER BOOKS

Ever offered to the Catholic public, suitable for CHRISTMAS

—AND—

NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

Superior Editions of the HOLY BIBLE, in all styles of Binding, at prices from $5 to $50.

THE LIVES AND TIMES OF THE ROMAN PONTIFFS, from St. Peter to PIUS IX., at $10 00 per vol.

New and Beautiful editions of THE LIFE OF CHRIST and the BLESSED VIRGIN MARY, at various prices. The cheapest and most complete edition published at $1 to $40.

Fine Illustrated editions of BUTLER'S LIVES OF THE SAINTS, 4 vols., etc., illustrated with Steel Engravings, Fine Engravings, Plain and Colored, with Author's Notes published.

THE GREAT NATIONAL HISTORY OF FRANCE, by Martin Gregorie and Michelet, illustrated with fifty fine Steel Engravings. This is the most complete edition published.

Complete Works of GERALD GRIFFIN, 10 vols., as prices varying from.....$15 to $30

CHISHOLM'S FAMILY.

BANIM'S WORKS.....$15 to $30

WILLIAM CARLETON.....

SAMUEL LOVER.....

LADY GEORGIANA FULLERTON. THE LIFE, LABOR, His Life and Times, Poetical, Social and Political, by Rev. A. A. Lambing, LL.D. 1 vol. 12mo. Magnificently illustrated, at prices from $2 to $5.

THE LIVES OF THE IRISH SAINTS AND MARTYRS. From Father Lanigan's Ecclesiastical History of Ireland. In 2 vols. 12mo. Illustrated. Price, $4 00 per vol.

NEW WORKING DESIGNS FOR CATHOLIC CHURCHES, with Specifications, Details, Estimates, applied constructions, etc., necessary in order to erect a church, by Rev. A. J. Schulte. Illustrated with 24 large plates. Price, $5 00 per vol. Pupils will be received at any time, the fee to commence from date of entrance.

TERMS.

Per month (payable quarterly in advance):

| | |
|---|---|
| Board and Tuition | $23 00 |
| Washing | 4 00 |
| Those attending at the Academy during vacation will not be charged for. | |
| Drawing, Painting and Music extra charges. | |
| There is no extra charge for the French or Spanish language, nor for Needlework. | |
| All correspondence of the young ladies will be subject to the inspection of the Superioress. | |
| Letters of inquiry may be addressed to | |
| MOTHER SUPERIOR. | |

ST. MARY'S ACADEMY,

SANTA CLARA.....CALIFORNIA.

THIS ACADEMY, CONDUCTED BY THE SISters of Notre Dame, is opened to afford an opportunity for a solid, Christian education, and for the cultivation of moral and useful education.

The Academic Year, which is divided into two sessions of five months each, commences in August, and closes towards the beginning of June.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually, in advance)

| | |
|---|---|
| Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once | $15 00 |
| Board, Tuition, Washing, and Mending | 250 00 |
| Use of Library, School Stationery, Medical Attendance and Physician's Medicines | 10 00 |
| Light per year | 15 00 |
| Graduating Course, Drawing and Music form extra charges. For Classing, Books, Payments, etc., see the Catalogue, to be had at the College, or of the Archbishop. Rules, etc., sent free by mail. | |

For further particulars, apply to
REV. J. NOBILI, S. J., President.
jal

THE SWISS MARRIAGE LAW.—The e.

ing that it is an ill wind which blows no body any good, seems to be exemplified in the case of the 'civil marriage law in Italy. So, at least, we gather from a fact which came out in the course or the debate in the Swiss Legislature over the passage of a similar law for Switzerland. The Government of the civil marriage is the only one that the State recognizes. In Italy, said one of the opponents of the Swiss bill, the tables were turned upon the State in this particular. The widows of the public officials draw a pension from the State, payable only as long as they remain widows. In many cases they are ladies, willing to remarry and yet unwilling to resign their pensions, have been married by the Church only, in which perfectly satisfied their consciences while leaving them still eligible to the special pension which could neither withdraw their pensions nor interfere with their matrimonial felicity. Mr. Wendell Phillips used, when discussing upon the rights of women, to tell a story of a Massachusetts man who married a young heiress, but died within a year, leaving a will by which he gave her possession of her own property only so long as she remained his widow. What a blessing a civil marriage law like this would have been to his distressed widow!—Catholic Review.

A silver chalice, a fragment of a cup white metal, and four brooches of silver gilt, were found, between six and seven years since, near Ardagh, in the county Limerick. These interesting objects of Irish art have now been presented by the Treasury Solicitor to the Royal Irish Academy, and added to its museum.

Gladstone at it Again.

On Saturday the new number of the Quarterly Review was in the hands of the public. It contains, we need scarcely say, one article of surpassing interest, namely—the review of "the Pope's Speeches," by the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone. The very fact that Mr. Gladstone found in the Quarterly Review a vehicle for his utterances is additional evidence of the justice of view in those who hold that, notwithstanding his vigorous efforts and his services, he has not abandoned one hour too soon the leadership of the Liberal party. The Quarterly Review has been for the last two generations the most consistently and the most virulent of the organs of Toryism. In its pages those survive the doctrines of Eldon, and the most frequent contributor to its columns is the solitary living man of genius who is opposed to all change—the "last of the Tories"—the Marquis of Salisbury. It is in this organ of opinion, then, that Mr. Gladstone contributes the third virulent attack which, in the course of a few months he has directed against millions of men who were at one time his admirers and adherents, whose votes helped to raise him a supreme power, and for six years made him the most powerful Minister who had ever ruled in Britain. The first volume of this we have to make on Mr. Gladstone's prose in the shape of a pamphlet. The first volume of the Pope's Speeches was published in 1873, in utterance of the Right Hon. was fully reported in the English journals, and Mr. Gladstone, even if these volumes had not fallen into his hands, must have been well aware of the general tenor of the Papal speeches. Nothing, then, that the last of these speeches were delivered in 1873, he came Mr. Gladstone to keep silent till 1875. The answer to the Education Bill of last year that these discoveries as to the spirit aspect of the Papacy flashed across the Gladstonian mind. The connection between cause and effect is too obvious to need argument, and when Mr. Gladstone rose to describe the Sovereign Pontiff as a man without that "stern discipline that governs human vanity," and without mercy over an indammable temper," he has placed himself in a character with a hasty and. Mr. Gladstone has, in fact, become the slave of his own disappointed ambition and the willing tool in the hands of Ignatius Dellinger, the greatest ecclesiastical enemy of the past three centuries. His latest production shows that Mr. Gladstone is becoming "subdued to what he works on."

The pamphlet may have been written by Mr. Newdegate. It does not contain a single genius of thought—not a line, not a No Papey abuse more worthy of some vague and obscure pamphleteer than of the Right Hon. Minister of England. Mr. Gladstone is, be it remembered, writing of a Pontiff who is the spiritual head of nigh upon two hundred millions of human beings—the spiritual head of the vast majority of the Queen's subjects in Ireland, in Lower Canada, and in other portions of her dominions. This great Pontiff is in the eighty-third year of his age. His very face attests the severity of his suffering, the multitude of his trials, the majestic awesome and magnificent tenacity so conspicuously mingled in that noble character. And yet Mr. Gladstone dares to assert that Pius IX. has borrowed none of his fortitude from Nero or Caligula, and that he has not been a courageous man in his unslightly and its fully. The language he falls into when describing the great personage against whom it is addressed, but it redounds to the shame and confusion of the man who is the author of that had been an honored career by a display of wild and reckless fury, which it is impossible to watch without sorrow, indignation and shame. The whole gravamen of Mr. Gladstone's charge against the Pope is simply that he has not hesitated to denounce the "latest King-don." We need scarcely say that that kingdom has been built up by spoliation, perjury, perfidy and violence; that it is the straw and not the glory of a noble people and a beautiful land. We need scarcely say that Pius IX. would be false to his duty to sit in the chair of Leo and Hildebrand had he failed to raise up his voice against the countless crimes perpetrated by the Robber King who now sits enthroned in the Quirinal against Religion, against Liberty, against Society and against Order. We shall not, therefore, attempt to defend the utterances of the Holy Father. They need no championship at our hands. Nor will we describe Mr. Gladstone's latest outrage in the language prompted by a just and natural indignation. The Pope's utterances have been denounced